Issue of Law Joined in Special Proceedings. — When an issue of law is joined in a special proceeding, it is the duty of the judge to decide the question thus presented, and to transmit his decision in writing to the clerk, who will then proceed with the special proceeding according to law. Jones v. Desern, 94 N.C. 32 (1886). But see § 1-276.

In appeals in cases in which the clerk does not act for the court, it is the duty of the judge to determine the questions of fact and law raised, and for this purpose, if the evidence accompanying the papers is not satisfactory, he can require the production of other evidence. The judge can decide the questions of fact in such cases himself, or if he sees fit, he can submit issues for his better information to the jury. Ex parte Spencer, 95 N.C. 271 (1886).

Nature of Controversy in Partition Proceedings, Generally. — The controversy involved in a special proceeding for the partition in a special proceeding for the partition of land, as to whether there shall be an actual partition or a sale for the purpose, is not an issue of fact which should be sent to a jury, but a question of fact to be decided by the clerk, or by the judge on appeal. Ledbetter v. Pinner, 120 N.C. 455, 27 S.E. 123 (1897).

Appeal from Clerk's Decision upon Commissioners' Report as to Allotment in Partition Proceedings. — In an ex parte proceeding for partition, an appeal by some of the parties from the decision of the clerk upon the report of commissioners, alleging inequality and unfairness in the allotment, involved questions of fact, properly determinable by the judge under former § 1-275. Ex parte Beckwith, 124 N.C. 111, 32 S.E. 393 (1899).

A proceeding to sell lands to make assets to pay debts of the deceased is appealable from the clerk of the superior court, and is open to revision and such further orders or decrees on the part of the judge as justice and the rights of the parties may require, and may be heard and decided by him on the same or such additional evidence as may aid him to a correct conclusion of the matter. Perry v. Perry, 179 N.C. 445, 102 S.E. 772 (1920).

Where clerk of superior court dismisses a proceeding for appointment of a trustee for want of jurisdiction, on appeal the judge of the superior court may make such appointment. Roseman v. Roseman, 127 N.C. 494, 37 S.E. 518 (1900).

Where Appeals May Be Heard. — Appeals from the clerk may be heard at chambers at any place in the district. Monroe v. Lewald, 107 N.E. 655, 12 S.E. 287 (1890).

Appeals from the clerk of the superior court and special proceedings to the judge residing or presiding in the district may be heard and judgment rendered outside of the county where the proceeding is pending, and within the district. Ledbetter v. Pinner, 120 N.C. 455, 27 S.E. 123 (1897).

Motion Pending Appeal from Clerk. — A motion for a receiver to take possession of a debtor's property, in supplemental proceedings, may be made before a judge pending an appeal to him from the ruling of the clerk upon other questions. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 92 N.C. 376 (1885).

What Evidence May Be Heard. — Upon an appeal from an order of the clerk to the judge, the latter may hear any evidence that would have been competent before the former, even though in fact it was not introduced. McAden v. Banister, 63 N.C. 478 (1869).

Notice Held Unreasonable. — Where notice of appeal from action by the clerk was served on the day before the hearing, the notice was not reasonable within this section. Byrd v. Nivens, 189 N.C. 621, 127 S.E. 673 (1925).

Presumption as to Propriety of Proceedings. — Where nothing in the record indicated that a judge who rendered a judgment on an appeal from the clerk of the superior court was requested in writing to fix a time for hearing and to give the parties notice, it would be presumed that the proceeding was rightly and regularly conducted. Ledbetter v. Pinner, 120 N.C. 455, 27 S.E. 123 (1897).

IV. JUDGE MAY DETERMINE ALL MATTERS IN CONTROVERSY.

A. In General.

History. — By passing this section in 1887, the legislature considerably widened the power of judges on appeal. This section was enacted to remedy the inconvenience caused by the decision in Brittain v. Mull, 91 N.C. 498 (1884). In that case it was held that when the appeal was taken from the clerk the judge should hear the appeal and decide the questions of law presented, and then remand the matter, including his decision, to the clerk.

Liberal Construction. — Because of its beneficial results former § 1-276 has always received a liberal interpretation. Williams v. Dunn, 158 N.C. 399, 74 S.E. 99 (1912).

Procedure Where Issue of Devisavit Vel Non Is Raised. — Under the statutes governing probate matters, the superior court, as a mere court of law and equity, has no jurisdiction to determine the issue of whether a disputed writing is the last will of a deceased person in an ordinary civil action. However, when an issue of devisavit vel non is raised, that necessitates the transfer of the cause to the civil issue docket for trial by jury, where the superior court in term has jurisdiction to determine the whole matter in controversy as well as the issue of devisavit vel non. Morris v. Morris, 245 N.C. 30, 95 S.E.2d 110 (1956).

Appointment and Removal of Administrators. — The jurisdiction of the superior court on appeal from an order of the clerk in removing an administrator and appointing a successor is solely derivative. In re Estate of Johnson, 232 N.C. 59, 59 S.E.2d 223 (1950).

A proceeding to remove an executor or administrator is neither a civil action nor a special proceeding. Therefore, this section, which provides that "whenever a civil action or special proceeding begun before the clerk of a superior court is for any ground whatever sent to the superior court before the judge, the judge has jurisdiction," has no application to probate matters. In re Estate of Lowther, 271 N.C. 345, 156 S.E.2d 693 (1967).

For case holding that on appeal of clerk's order appointing an administrator the superior court could reverse the order but should then remand the case, see In re Styers, 202 N.C. 715, 164 S.E. 123 (1932).

For case holding that upon appeal of clerk's order removing certain executors and administrators, c.t.a., and appointing others in their place, the superior court judge, in the exercise of his discretional powers, could retain the cause, reverse the order of the clerk and appoint other administrators or a receiver to administrate the estate subject to the orders of the court, the entire matter being before the superior court on appeal, see Wright v. Ball, 200 N.C. 620, 158 S.E. 192 (1931).

A proceeding to remove an executor is not a civil action or a special proceeding. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

Appointment and Removal of Guardians. — In the appointment and removal of guardians, the appellate jurisdiction of the superior court is derivative, and appeals present for review only errors of law committed by the clerk. In re Simmons, 266 N.C. 702, 147 S.E.2d 231 (1966).

Civil actions and special proceedings, as contemplated by the terms of this section, which originate before the clerk of court are heard de novo when appealed to the Superior Court. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

B. Scope of Court's Jurisdiction and Authority.

The superior court acquires jurisdiction of any special proceeding sent to it from the clerk on any ground whatever, with discretionary power to remand. Plemmons v. Cutshall, 230 N.C. 595, 55 S.E.2d 74 (1949).

Whenever a special proceeding begun before the clerk is, for any ground whatever, sent to the superior court, the judge has jurisdiction. Hudson v. Fox, 257 N.C. 789, 127 S.E.2d 556 (1962).

And Court's Jurisdiction Is Not Derivative. — Former § 1-276 meant that the clerk was really an arm of the superior court. When a proceeding was brought before the court, the court's jurisdiction was not appellate or derivative; it was original. Hassell v. Wilson, 301 N.C. 307, 272 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

The clerk is but a part of the superior court, and when a proceeding before the clerk in any manner is brought before the judge, the superior court's jurisdiction is not derivative; rather, the court has jurisdiction to hear and determine all matters in controversy in the proceeding. Perry v. Bassenger, 219 N.C. 838, 15 S.E.2d 365 (1941). See ex parte Wilson, 222 N.C. 99, 22 S.E.2d 262 (1942); Potts v. Howser, 267 N.C. 484, 148 S.E.2d 836 (1966); Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Necessity of Appeal by a Party Aggrieved. — The superior court does not acquire jurisdiction of a special proceeding before the clerk when there is no appeal from the order of the clerk by a party aggrieved. Becker County Sand & Gravel Co. v. Taylor, 269 N.C. 617, 153 S.E.2d 19 (1967).

Judge May Determine Entire Controversy. — Under former § 1-276, the judge now has final jurisdiction to determine the whole matter in controversy. Lictie v. Chappell, 111 N.C. 347, 16 S.E. 171 (1892); Faison v. Williams, 121 N.C. 152, 28 S.E. 188 (1897); Oldham v. Rieger, 145 N.C. 254, 58 S.E. 1091 (1907); Hall v. Artis, 186 N.C. 105, 118 S.E. 901 (1923); Sale v. State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 242 N.C. 612, 89 S.E.2d 290 (1955).

When plaintiff appeals from the clerk's order to the judge, the judge is not limited to a review of the action of the clerk, but is vested with jurisdiction "to hear and determine all matters in controversy in such action," and he may render such judgment or order, within the limits provided by law, as he deems proper under the circumstances. Hendrix v. Alsop, 278 N.C. 549, 180 S.E.2d 802 (1971).

As If It Were Originally Before Him. — When a civil action or special proceeding instituted before the clerk is "for any ground whatever sent to the superior court before the judge," he has the authority to consider and determine the matter as if it were originally before him. Langley v. Langley, 236 N.C. 184, 72 S.E.2d 235 (1952).

In cases that originate before the clerk and which are properly called "civil actions" or "special proceedings" as contemplated by the terms of this section, and when there is an appeal to superior court, the hearing is de novo in superior court. In re Estate of Swinson, 62 N.C. App. 412, 303 S.E.2d 361 (1983).

Even Where Clerk Exceeded Authority. — Where the clerk of the superior court exceeds his authority or is without jurisdiction to make the decree, if the cause comes within the general jurisdiction of the superior court and invokes the proper exercise of its power, by virtue of this section the judge upon appeal may proceed to consider and determine the matter as if it were originally before him. McDaniel v. Leggett, 224 N.C. 806, 32 S.E.2d 602 (1945).

When the clerk of the superior court erroneously hears a proceeding over which he does not have jurisdiction, an appeal to the superior court confers jurisdiction upon it to hear and determine the whole matter. Bradshaw v. Warren, 216 N.C. 354, 4 S.E.2d 883 (1939).

Although an order by the clerk was a nullity, when the matter came before the judge of the superior court by appeal the judge had jurisdiction to proceed to hear and determine all matters in controversy. In re Foreclosure of Deed of Trust, 20 N.C. App. 610, 202 S.E.2d 318 (1974).

When defendants made a motion to set aside clerk's entry of default and default judgment, the trial court was not limited to a review of the action of the clerk, but was vested with jurisdiction to hear and determine all matters in controversy and render a judgment or order within the limits provided by law, including default judgment, and that principle would apply even though the order by the clerk was a nullity. Webb v. James, 46 N.C. App. 551, 265 S.E.2d 642 (1980).

Or Where Proceedings Were Improperly Brought Before Clerk. — When a case which is properly cognizable in the superior court but which is erroneously brought before a clerk gets in the superior court on any ground, the judge has jurisdiction to retain and hear the cause as if it were originally instituted in the superior court. Robeson v. Hodges, 105 N.C. 49, 11 S.E. 263 (1890); Hall v. Artis, 186 N.C. 105, 118 S.E. 901 (1923). See also, Ryder v. Oates, 173 N.C. 569, 92 S.E. 508 (1917); Spence v. Granger, 207 N.C. 19, 175 S.E. 824 (1934).

Even when the proceeding originally had before the clerk is void for want of jurisdiction, the superior court may yet proceed in the matter. Hudson v. Fox, 257 N.C. 789, 127 S.E.2d 556 (1962).

Where a motion to quash an execution and sale of real estate was submitted to the clerk of the superior court who granted the relief, and an appeal was taken to the judge of the court, it was improper for the judge to refuse to hear the controversy on the ground that the clerk was without jurisdiction to entertain the motion. Williams v. Dunn, 158 N.C. 399, 74 S.E. 99 (1912).

Upon the failure or refusal of surviving partners to file the bond required by § 59-74 or the inventory required by § 59-76, the clerk of the superior court could not properly issue an order requiring the filing of bond and inventory, but upon appeal from such orders the superior court acquired jurisdiction of the entire proceeding and the appeal was erroneously dismissed in the superior court on the ground of want of jurisdiction. In re Estate of Johnson, 232 N.C. 59, 59 S.E.2d 223 (1950).

Or Where Proceeding Was Erroneously Transferred. — Although a proceeding to condemn property for urban renewal is erroneously transferred from the clerk to the superior court before the clerk has acted on the exceptions to the Commissioners' report, the judge of superior court has full power to consider and determine all matters in controversy as if the cause was originally before him. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Where the clerk of the superior court erroneously transferred proceedings in condemnation to the superior court on issue joined between the parties, and an appeal therefrom was taken to the superior court, the judge thereof acquired jurisdiction for the hearing and determination of the controversy under the provisions of this section, and could order other proper or necessary parties to be made for the further determination of the cause. Selma v. Nobles, 183 N.C. 322, 111 S.E. 543 (1922).

A motion in the superior court to dismiss for want of jurisdiction on the ground that the proceeding was erroneously transferred to the civil issue docket is untenable. Plemmons v. Cutshall, 230 N.C. 595, 55 S.E.2d 74 (1949).

Judge Need Not Remand Case to Clerk for Determination of Motion. — After a motion is made before the clerk, the judge is not required to remand the cause to the clerk for the determination of the motion made before him. Wynne v. Conrad, 220 N.C. 355, 17 S.E.2d 514 (1941).

When a motion to retax a bill of costs in a case which originated before the clerk but was appealed to the superior court was made at the next term after judgment was entered, it was error for the judge to hold that he had no power to entertain it. In re Smith, 105 N.C. 167, 10 S.E. 982 (1890).

The court has the right in its discretion to remand the cause to the clerk for further proceedings. York v. McCall, 160 N.C. 276, 76 S.E. 84 (1912).

Remand of Partition Proceedings Held Improper. — Where special partition proceedings were begun before the clerk, and he transferred the case to the judge in term, the judge was required to dispose of such case on the merits, and he had no power to merely reverse the clerk's action and remand the case to him, even though there may have been irregularities in the proceedings before the clerk. Little v. Duncan, 149 N.C. 84, 62 S.E. 770 (1908).

Trial judge has full power to deny motion to enlarge the time to file complaint and dismiss the action as to defendant. This discretionary ruling as to enlargement of time to file complaint, in effect, ends the action. Hendrix v. Alsop, 278 N.C. 549, 180 S.E.2d 802 (1971).

Power to Permit Untimely Answer to Remain of Record. — Upon appeal from denial by the clerk of a motion to set aside a default judgment on the ground that at the time of its rendition a duly filed answer appeared of record, the superior court acquired jurisdiction of the entire cause, and he had the power to permit the answer to remain of record, even though it was filed after time for answering had expired. Bailey v. Davis, 231 N.C. 86, 55 S.E.2d 919 (1949).

The judge has power to make amendments to give jurisdiction. Elliott v. Tyson, 117 N.C. 114, 23 S.E. 102 (1895); Ewbank v. Turner, 134 N.C. 77, 46 S.E. 508 (1903).

And he may strike out an answer that is irrelevant. Commissioners of Yancey County v. Piercy, 72 N.C. 181 (1875).

Judge May Add Issues. — The number and form of issues is in the discretion of the court, and if every phase of the contention could have been and was presented under the issues submitted they will be sustained on appeal; and when the judge accordingly adds other issues tending to elucidate the case after it has been submitted, in addition to the usual issue, it is not error, but in the line of his duty. In re Herring, 152 N.C. 258, 67 S.E. 570 (1910).

Judge May Set Aside Clerk's Order and Substitute His Own. — The superior court acquires jurisdiction of the entire controversy upon appeal from the clerk, and has the power to hear and determine all matters involved therein; the judge may set aside a previous order of the clerk and substitute therefor an order of his own without finding that the clerk abused his discretion or committed an error of law in signing the order, the clerk being but a part of the superior court. Bynum v. Fidelity Bank, 219 N.C. 109, 12 S.E.2d 898 (1941).

Judge May Set Aside Judgment. — The judge has power to set aside a judgment for newly discovered testimony and to permit an amendment in the complaint. Faison v. Williams, 121 N.C. 152, 28 S.E. 188 (1897).

Court's Conflicting Ruling Held Null and Void. — Where the superior court ruled that a clerk had no authority under former § 28-111 to appoint a referee to hear a claim against the estate of a deceased, a further ruling that the referee's report was binding on other grounds was a nullity, notwithstanding the broad jurisdiction of the superior court under this section. In re Shutt, 214 N.C. 684, 200 S.E. 372 (1939).

For discussion of reviewability on appeal of the exercise of the powers granted a clerk of superior court for revocation of letters of administration, see In re Estate of Swinson, 62 N.C. App. 412, 303 S.E.2d 361 (1983).

Authority Given District Court in Matter Relating to Exemptions. — Although no specific statute grants a district court authority, when a matter relating to exemptions is transferred, pursuant to § 1C-1603(e)(7), from the clerk to the district court, the district court must be given the same general authority granted to a superior court pursuant to this section. Bromhal v. Stott, 119 N.C. App. 428, 458 S.E.2d 724 (1995).

C. Illustrative Cases.

Question of Price of Land Sold Under Mortgage. — The discretion vested in the superior court judge on appeal from the clerk cannot confer jurisdiction on the judge to pass upon the reasonableness of the price of land sold under the power of sale in a mortgage, wherein the clerk has no authority to further pass thereon in the absence of an increased bid. In re Mortgage Sale of Ware Property, 187 N.C. 693, 122 S.E. 660 (1924).

Resale on Foreclosure of Mortgage. — Where a commissioner appointed to hold a foreclosure sale advertised and sold the property in conformity with the order, but reported that the last and highest bid was less than the value of the property and recommended a resale, and the clerk ordered a resale, the judge of the superior court, upon the appeal of one of the trustees from the order of the clerk, had jurisdiction to hear and determine the matter and order a resale at chambers while holding a criminal term of court in the county. Harriss v. Hughes, 220 N.C. 473, 17 S.E.2d 679 (1941).

A proceeding to sell lands to make assets to pay the debts of the deceased is appealable from the clerk of the superior court, and is open to revision and such further orders or decrees on the part of the judge as justice and the rights of the parties may require; it may be heard and decided by him on the same or such additional evidence as may aid him to a correct conclusion of the matter. Ledbetter v. Pinner, 120 N.C. 455, 27 S.E. 123 (1897); Perry v. Perry, 179 N.C. 445, 102 S.E. 772 (1920). See also, Harrington v. Hatton, 129 N.C. 146, 39 S.E. 780 (1901).

Partition Proceedings. — In a suit for partition of land, the jurisdiction acquired by appeal includes the right of the court to accept a private bid through its commissioner. When the bid is accepted, whether it was made at public or private sale, the court has jurisdiction over the purchaser for the purpose of enforcing compliance with it. Wooten v. Cunningham, 171 N.C. 123, 88 S.E. 1 (1916).

The clerk has authority and jurisdiction, initially to pass upon exceptions to the report of the commissioners in a special proceeding for partition. Allen v. Allen, 258 N.C. 305, 128 S.E.2d 385 (1962).

Clerk of the superior court, having no equity jurisdiction, cannot issue a writ of assistance to enforce its order in proceedings to partition lands among tenants in common, nor can jurisdiction be conferred on the superior court on appeal, the latter having no concurrent or original jurisdiction. Southern State Bank v. Leverette, 187 N.C. 743, 123 S.E. 68 (1924).

Proceedings to Subject Lands to Dower. — An ex parte proceeding by a widow to subject land in the hands of heirs to the payment of dower charges thereon, prior to abolition of dower, could not be had before the clerk and on appeal could be dismissed by the judge for want of jurisdiction. In re Hybart's Estate, 129 N.C. 130, 39 S.E. 779 (1901).

Drainage Assessment Proceedings. — Under this section, giving the superior court jurisdiction to hear and determine all matters in controversy upon appeal from the clerk in special proceedings, and § 156-29, providing that appeals from the clerk in drainage assessment proceedings should be the same as in special proceedings, an appeal may be taken from an order of the clerk to the superior court. Spence v. Granger, 207 N.C. 19, 175 S.E. 824 (1934).

Appointment of Receiver for Partnership. — While the clerk of the superior court had no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver for a partnership under § 59-77 when the surviving partners failed or refused to file the inventory required by § 59-76, the superior court on appeal from an order of the clerk in the proceeding acquired jurisdiction to appoint such receiver. In re Estate of Johnson, 232 N.C. 59, 59 S.E.2d 223 (1950).

Transfer of an action, seeking removal of a trustee, to civil issue docket by clerk of superior court was proper, where petitioner alleged breach of fiduciary duties by the trustee. Such an issue is a civil matter which is not "a part of" the administration of the estate, but rather "arises from" their administration. Freer v. Weinstein, 91 N.C. App. 138, 370 S.E.2d 860.

Default Set Aside. — Where counsel for defendant failed to file responsive pleadings within the allowable time limit and there was no evidence in the record that defendant was anything less than diligent in its pursuit of this matter, nor any allegations that plaintiff was prejudiced by the five-day delay between the expiration of the filing period and the date defendant filed its motion and proposed answer, justice would best be served by setting aside the entry of default. Automotive Equip. Distribs., Inc. v. Petroleum Equip. & Serv., Inc., 87 N.C. App. 606, 361 S.E.2d 895 (1987).

§ 1-301.2. Transfer or appeal of special proceedings; exceptions.

(a) Applicability. — This section applies to special proceedings heard by the clerk of superior court in the exercise of the judicial powers of that office. If this section conflicts with a specific provision of the General Statutes, that specific provision of the General Statutes controls.

(b) Transfer. — Except as provided in subsections (g) and (h) of this section, when an issue of fact, an equitable defense, or a request for equitable relief is raised in a pleading in a special proceeding or in a pleading or written motion in an adoption proceeding, the clerk shall transfer the proceeding to the appropriate court. In court, the proceeding is subject to the provisions in the General Statutes and to the rules that apply to actions initially filed in that court.

(c) Duty of Judge on Transfer. — Whenever a special proceeding is transferred to a court pursuant to subsection (b) of this section, the judge may hear and determine all matters in controversy in the special proceeding, unless it appears to the judge that justice would be more efficiently administered by the judge's disposing of only the matter leading to the transfer and remanding the special proceeding to the clerk.

(d) Clerk to Decide All Issues. — If a special proceeding is not transferred or is remanded to the clerk after an appeal or transfer, the clerk shall decide all matters in controversy to dispose of the proceeding.

(e) Appeal of Clerk's Decisions. — A party aggrieved by an order or judgment of a clerk that finally disposed of a special proceeding, may, within 10 days of entry of the order or judgment, appeal to the appropriate court for a hearing de novo. Notice of appeal shall be in writing and shall be filed with the clerk. The order or judgment of the clerk remains in effect until it is modified or replaced by an order or judgment of a judge. A judge of the court to which the appeal lies or the clerk may issue a stay of the order or judgment upon the appellant's posting of an appropriate bond set by the judge or clerk issuing the stay. Any matter previously transferred and determined by the court shall not be relitigated in a hearing de novo under this subsection.

(f) Service. — Notwithstanding the service requirement of G.S. 1A-1, Rule 58, orders of the clerk shall be served on other parties only if otherwise required by law.

(g) Exception for Incompetency and Foreclosure Proceedings. —

(1) Proceedings for adjudication of incompetency or restoration of competency under Chapter 35A of the General Statutes shall not be transferred even if an issue of fact, an equitable defense, or a request for equitable relief is raised. Appeals from orders entered in these proceedings are governed by Chapter 35A to the extent that the provisions of that Chapter conflict with this section.

(2) Foreclosure proceedings under Article 2A of Chapter 45 of the General Statutes shall not be transferred even if an issue of fact, an equitable defense, or a request for equitable relief is raised. Equitable issues may be raised only as provided in G.S. 45-21.34. Appeals from orders entered in these proceedings are governed by Article 2A of Chapter 45 to the extent that the provisions of that Article conflict with this section.

(h) Exception for Partition Proceedings. — Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (b) of this section, the issue whether to order the actual partition or the sale in lieu of partition of real property that is the subject of a partition proceeding shall not be transferred and shall be determined by the clerk. The clerk's order determining this issue, though not a final order, may be appealed pursuant to subsection (e) of this section. (C.C.P., c. 115; Code, s. 256; 1903, c. 566; Rev., ss. 588, 717; C.S., ss. 634, 758; 1971, c. 381, s. 12; 1995, c. 88, s. 2; 1999-216, s. 1.)

Cross References. — For case notes derived from cases decided under former § 1-174 and former §§ 1-272 to 1-276, see § 1-301.1.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-216, which added this Article, repealed former §§ 1-174, 1-272, 1-274, 1-275, 1-276, 1-399, and 36A-28 [see now § 1-301.3]. The historical citations for former §§ 1-273 and 1-399 have been carried under new § 1-301.2 at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes. The case notes below include decisions under former §§ 1-273 and 1-399.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The case notes below were decided under former §§ 1-273 and 1-399.

Transfer of Case Where Issues of Fact Are Raised. — Where issues of fact are joined before the clerk in the exercise of his special jurisdictional powers as a distinct tribunal, the issues must be transferred to the superior court to be tried. Brittain v. Mull, 91 N.C. 498 (1884).

When an issue of fact is joined in a special proceeding, or issues of both fact and law, it is the duty of the clerk to place the proceeding on the docket of the trial term for trial. Jones v. Desern, 94 N.C. 32 (1886).

If issues of fact are raised in special proceedings before the clerk, the cause is transferred to the civil issue docket, to be tried as in an ordinary civil action. In re Wallace, 267 N.C. 204, 147 S.E.2d 922 (1966).

Where an issue of fact is raised in a special proceeding, it must be determined by the court. The clerk is directed by former § 1-273 and former § 1-399 to transfer the action to the superior court docket for trial of the issues raised in the pleadings. In re Searle, 74 N.C. App. 61, 327 S.E.2d 315 (1985).

Probate Proceedings. — A clerk of the superior court may probate a will in solemn form, without the verdict of a jury, where interested parties are cited to appear or come in voluntarily and raise no issue of fact. But where an interested party intervenes in such proceeding and objects to the probate of the will, denying its validity, whether he files a formal caveat or not, it will raise the issue of devisavit vel non, which issue must be tried by a jury. Such procedure was required by former § 1-273. In re Will of Ellis, 235 N.C. 27, 69 S.E.2d 25 (1952).

Under a strict construction of former § 1-273 and former § 1-272 as they affect § 7A-251, in probate matters originally heard by the clerk, an appeal would lie directly to the judge of superior court in matters of law and legal inference; but in the hearing before the clerk if issues of fact, or both law and fact, were raised, the appeal would lie directly to the superior court for jury trial on the issues of fact. But this strict construction would ignore the "according to the practice and procedure provided by law" mandate of § 7A-241. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Proceedings for Partition. — In an ex parte proceeding for partition, an appeal by some of the parties from the decision of the clerk, upon the report of commissioners, alleging inequality and unfairness in the allotment, involves questions of fact, properly determinable by the judge, under former § 1-273 section. Ex parte Beckwith, 124 N.C. 111, 32 S.E. 393 (1899).

Legitimation Proceedings. — The procedural statutes that apply to special proceedings are designed to fully protect the rights of all persons interested in special proceedings, including legitimation proceedings. In re Locklear, 314 N.C. 412, 334 S.E.2d 46 (1985).

Dower Proceedings. — For case holding that former § 1-273 rather than former § 1-274 was applicable to an appeal from the judgment of the clerk in dower proceedings involving issues of law and of fact, prior to abolition of dower, see McLawhorn v. Smith, 211 N.C. 513, 191 S.E. 35 (1937).

Waiver. — In special proceedings, pending before clerks, the parties have the right to insist that any issue of fact raised by the pleadings shall be framed by the clerk and transmitted to the superior court in term for trial by jury, and where they fail, before an order appointing commissioners is made, to insist upon a verdict upon the controverted facts, they waive the right of trial by jury, even if it is conceded that the statute gives them the right to demand it. Chowan & S.R.R. v. Parker, 105 N.C. 246, 11 S.E. 328 (1890).

Clerk May Not Grant Affirmative Equitable Relief. — The clerk, in special proceedings, has no power to make any order granting affirmative equitable relief. Equitable defenses may be set up in the answer in such proceedings by way of avoidance, and when such equitable defenses exist they should be so pleaded; but when pleaded they amount to no more than defenses, and cannot be affirmatively administered. Vance v. Vance, 118 N.C. 864, 24 S.E. 768 (1896).

Clerk Must Transfer Case Where Equitable Defense Is Pleaded. — When a party pleads any equitable or other defense, or asks for any equitable or other relief in the pleadings, it is required that the clerk shall transfer the cause to the civil issue docket, for trial during term, upon all issues raised by the pleadings, and the judge may allow amendments to the pleadings for the purpose of a hearing of the case upon its merits. Little v. Duncan, 149 N.C. 84, 62 S.E. 770 (1908).

Mutual Mistake. — For case holding that defendant could plead the equitable relief of mutual mistake and that when this plea was filed the clerk properly transferred the cause to the civil issue docket, see Smith v. Johnson, 209 N.C. 729, 184 S.E. 486 (1936).

How Questions of Fact Are Decided. — Questions of fact are first determined by the clerk and on appeal they are subject to review by the judge. Vanderbilt v. Roberts, 162 N.C. 273, 78 S.E. 156 (1913).

Right to Jury Trial on Fact Issues. — In special proceedings, pending before clerks, the parties have the right to insist that any issue of fact raised by the pleadings shall be framed by the clerk and transmitted to the superior court in term for trial by jury. Chowan & S.R.R. v. Porter, 105 N.C. 246, 11 S.E. 328 (1890).

Jury Trial in Proceeding for Alimony Without Divorce. — When in special proceedings for alimony without divorce the pleadings raised the issues of the validity of the marriage, or whether the husband had abandoned the wife, or whether the husband was a drunkard or spendthrift, the right of trial by jury arose and the case should have been transferred by the judge to the civil issue docket for the purpose. Crews v. Crews, 175 N.C. 168, 95 S.E. 149 (1918).

Waiver of Right to Jury Trial. — When the parties fail, before an order appointing commissioners is made, to insist upon a verdict upon the controverted facts, they waive the right of trial by jury. Chowan & S.R.R. v. Porter, 105 N.C. 246, 11 S.E. 328 (1890).

Boundary Disputes. — Where in a special proceeding under Chapter 38 to establish a boundary line, the defendant, by his answer, denies the petitioner's title and pleads 20 years' adverse possession under § 1-40 as a defense, the proceeding is assimilated to an action to quiet title, and the clerk should transfer the cause to the civil issue docket for trial during term upon all issues raised by pleadings, in accordance with rules of practice applicable to such actions originally instituted in that court. Simmons v. Lee, 230 N.C. 216, 53 S.E.2d 79 (1949).

Where a special proceeding is begun to fix the location of the dividing line between two tracts of land, and defendant, by his answer, puts title to the disputed area in issue by alleging ownership, the proceeding in effect becomes an action to quiet. When the question of title is raised, the clerk should transfer the proceeding to the superior court in term. Bumgarner v. Corpening, 246 N.C. 40, 97 S.E.2d 427 (1957).

Where, in a special proceeding under § 38-1 to establish a boundary line, the defendant by his answer denies the petitioner's title and, as a defense, pleads seven years' adverse possession under color of title under § 1-38 or 20 years' adverse possession under § 1-40, the proceeding is assimilated to an action to quiet title. In such a case, the clerk shall transfer the cause to the civil issue docket for trial during term upon all issues raised by the pleadings. Lane v. Lane, 255 N.C. 444, 121 S.E.2d 893 (1961).

Partition. — While the clerk has original jurisdiction of special proceedings for the partition of land held by tenants in common, this jurisdiction is divested or suspended by a plea of non tenent insimul or of sole seizin. He is required to forthwith transfer the cause to the civil issue docket for trial as in case of other civil actions. Bailey v. Hayman, 222 N.C. 58, 22 S.E.2d 6 (1942).

When tenancy in common is denied and there is a plea of sole seizin, non tenent insimul, the proceeding in legal effect is converted into an action in ejectment and should be transferred to the civil issue docket for trial at term on issue of title, the burden being upon the petitioners to prove their title as in ejectment. Gibbs v. Higgins, 215 N.C. 201, 1 S.E.2d 554 (1939); Murphy v. Smith, 235 N.C. 455, 70 S.E.2d 697 (1952).

Effect of Judicial Admission Removing Defense as Issue. — Where defendants' answer to a petition for partition claimed sole seizin by virtue of an alleged contract under which the ancestor agreed upon a valid consideration to convey or devise the land to defendants, but upon the hearing defendants admitted that they had no writing to support the alleged agreement to convey or devise, but stated they intended suing for breach of the agreement, the judicial admission effectively removed the defense from the field of issuable matters, since the alleged agreement was void under the statute of frauds, and it was not required that the clerk transfer the issue to the civil docket. Clapp v. Clapp, 241 N.C. 281, 85 S.E.2d 153 (1954).

Rights of Putative Father in Adoption Proceeding. — When a termination of parental rights order, later held to be invalid for failure to use due diligence in ascertaining the putative father's address, is filed with an adoption petition in lieu of the affidavit required by § 48-13, a subsequently filed affidavit may not relate back to the original filing date of the petition so as to cut off the rights of a putative father who filed a legitimation petition pursuant to § 49-10 before the affidavit was filed. In re Clark, 327 N.C. 61, 393 S.E.2d 791 (1990).

As to power of superior court judge to allow amendments on appeal, see Sudderth v. McCombs, 67 N.C. 353 (1872).

Evidence Considered upon Appeal. — If there are issues of law or material questions of fact decided by the clerk, they may be reviewed by the judge at term or in chambers, on appeal properly taken; and in passing upon these questions of fact, the court may act on the evidence already received, or if this is not satisfactory, it may ordinarily require the production of other evidence as an aid in the proper dispositions of the question presented. Mills v. McDaniel, 161 N.C. 112, 76 S.E. 551 (1912).

§ 1-301.3. Appeal of estate matters determined by clerk.

(a) Applicability. — This section applies to matters arising in the administration of testamentary trusts and of estates of decedents, incompetents, and minors. G.S. 1-301.2 applies in the conduct of a special proceeding when a special proceeding is required in a matter relating to the administration of an estate.

(b) Clerk to Decide Estate Matters. — In matters covered by this section, the clerk shall determine all issues of fact and law. The clerk shall enter an order or judgment, as appropriate, containing findings of fact and conclusions of law supporting the order or judgment.

(c) Appeal to Superior Court. — A party aggrieved by an order or judgment of the clerk may appeal to the superior court by filing a written notice of the appeal with the clerk within 10 days of entry of the order or judgment. The notice of appeal shall specify the basis for the appeal. Unless otherwise provided by law, a judge of the superior court or the clerk may issue a stay of the order or judgment upon the appellant's posting an appropriate bond set by the judge or clerk issuing the stay. While the appeal is pending, the clerk retains authority to enter orders affecting the administration of the estate, subject to any order entered by a judge of the superior court limiting that authority.

(d) Duty of Judge on Appeal. — Upon appeal, the judge of the superior court shall review the order or judgment of the clerk for the purpose of determining only the following:

(1) Whether the findings of fact are supported by the evidence.
(2) Whether the conclusions of law are supported by the findings of facts.
(3) Whether the order or judgment is consistent with the conclusions of law and applicable law.

It is not necessary for a party to object to the admission or exclusion of evidence before the clerk in order to preserve the right to assign error on appeal to its admission or exclusion. If the judge finds prejudicial error in the admission or exclusion of evidence, the judge, in the judge's discretion, shall either remand the matter to the clerk for a subsequent hearing or resolve the matter on the basis of the record. If the record is insufficient, the judge may receive additional evidence on the evidentiary issue in question. The judge may continue the case if necessary to allow the parties time to prepare for a hearing to receive additional evidence.

(e) Remand After Disposition of Issue on Appeal. — The judge, upon determining the matter appealed from the clerk, shall remand the case to the clerk for such further action as is necessary to administer the estate.

(f) Recording of Estate Matters. — In the discretion of the clerk or upon request by a party, all hearings and other matters covered by this section shall be recorded by an electronic recording device. A transcript of the proceedings may be ordered by a party, by the clerk, or by the presiding judge. If a recordation is not made, the clerk shall submit to the superior court a summary of the evidence presented to the clerk. (1999-216, s. 1.)

SUBCHAPTER X. EXECUTION.

Execution.

§ 1-302. Judgment enforced by execution.

Where a judgment requires the payment of money or the delivery of real or personal property it may be enforced in those respects by execution, as provided in this Article. Where it requires the performance of any other act a certified copy of the judgment may be served upon the party against whom it is given, or upon the person or officer who is required thereby or by law to obey the same, and his obedience thereto enforced. If he refuses, he may be punished by the court as for contempt. (C.C.P., s. 257; Code, s. 441; Rev., s. 615; C.S., s. 663.)

Cross References. — As to contempt generally, see Chapter 5A. As to enforcement of judgments, and exemptions, see § 1C-1601 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Every execution presupposes a judgment, and the right to issue the one implies the existence of the other. Sheppard v. Bland, 87 N.C. 163 (1882).

Execution as Procedure for Enforcing Judgment. — A judgment creditor is entitled to have his judgment satisfied, if need be, by a sale of his debtor's property, except such parts thereof as may be exempt from execution. The ordinary process to enforce such a judgment is that of execution against the property of the debtor, and this process the creditor may have from time to time while the judgment continues in force, until it shall be discharged. Vegelahn v. Smith, 95 N.C. 254 (1886).

The issuance of an execution does not prolong the life of a lien, nor stop the running of the statute of limitation. Cheshire v. Drake, 223 N.C. 577, 27 S.E.2d 627 (1943).

No Execution Against Counties. — A plaintiff who has obtained a judgment against a county is not entitled to an execution against it. His remedy is by a writ of mandamus against the board of commissioners of the county to compel them to levy a tax for the satisfaction of the judgment. Gooch v. Gregory, 65 N.C. 142 (1871).

Remedy for Refusal of Clerk to Issue Execution. — Should the clerk refuse to issue the execution to which the plaintiff is entitled on his judgment, he has two remedies for enforcing his rights: (1) He may obtain a rule on the clerk as an officer of the court to compel him to perform his duty, or be subject to an attachment for a contempt; or (2) He may sue the clerk on his official bond. He is not entitled to a writ of mandamus against the clerk. Gooch v. Gregory, 65 N.C. 142 (1871); Post-Glover Elec. Co. v. McEntee-Peterson Eng'r Co., 128 N.C. 199, 38 S.E. 831 (1901).

An order taxing the costs of an action against a party is, in effect, a judgment, upon which an execution may be issued under this section. Sheppard v. Bland, 87 N.C. 163 (1882).

Where the land of a judgment debtor is subjected to a specific lien for its payment, the judgment creditor may proceed against the debtor in personam, may compel payment by proceeding in rem, or pursue both remedies at the same time. Boseman v. McGill, 184 N.C. 215, 114 S.E. 10 (1922).

Funds in Hands of Third Person. — Where it appears, in proceedings supplementary to execution, that a third person has funds of the defendant available for the judgment debt, etc., an order may be made by the court forbidding such third persons to dispose of the funds. Boseman v. McGill, 184 N.C. 215, 114 S.E. 10 (1922).

Applied in Floyd S. Pike Elec. Contractor v. Goodwill Missionary Baptist Church, 25 N.C. App. 563, 214 S.E.2d 276 (1975).

Cited in Broyles v. Young, 81 N.C. 315 (1879); Sawyers v. Sawyers, 93 N.C. 321 (1885); Williams v. Weaver, 94 N.C. 34 (1886); Lupton v. Edmundson, 220 N.C. 188, 16 S.E.2d 840 (1941); Safeco Ins. Co. of America v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 264 N.C. 749, 142 S.E.2d 694 (1965).

§ 1-303. Kinds of; signed by clerk; when sealed.

There are three kinds of execution: one against the property of the judgment debtor, another against his person, and the third for the delivery of the possession of real or personal property, or such delivery with damages for withholding the same. They shall be deemed the process of the court, and shall be subscribed by the clerk, and when to run out of his county, must be sealed with the seal of his court. (C.C.P., s. 258; Code, s. 442; Rev., s. 616; C.S., s. 664.)

Cross References. — As to forms of executions, see § 1-313. For execution against the person, see §§ 1-311 and 1-313.

CASE NOTES

Sealing of Execution Issued to Another County. — Sealing is necessary to the validity of all executions issuing to another county; and a sheriff, by acting under an unsealed writ, does not render it valid. Governor ex rel. Shackelford v. M'Rea, 10 N.C. 226 (1824); Shepherd v. Lane, 13 N.C. 148 (1828); Seawell v. Bank of Cape Fear, 14 N.C. 279 (1831); Finley v. Smith, 15 N.C. 95 (1833); Freeman v. Lewis, 27 N.C. 91 (1844); Taylor v. Taylor, 83 N.C. 116 (1880).

§ 1-304. Against married woman.

An execution may issue against a married woman, and it must direct the levy and collection of the amount of the judgment against her from her separate property, and not otherwise. (C.C.P., s. 259; Code, s. 443; Rev., s. 617; C.S., s. 665.)

Cross References. — As to the property rights of married persons, see N.C. Const., Art. X, § 4 and § 52-1.

CASE NOTES

Effect of Section. — Under this section execution can be levied on all the separate property owned by a married woman, with the same exceptions allowed to a man or an unmarried woman. Harvey v. Johnson, 133 N.C. 352, 45 S.E. 644 (1903).

As to effect of this section, see also McLeod v. Williams, 122 N.C. 451, 30 S.E. 129 (1898); Lipinsky v. Revell, 167 N.C. 508, 83 S.E. 820 (1914); Thrash v. Ould, 172 N.C. 728, 90 S.E. 915 (1916).

Applied in Dougherty v. Sprinkle, 88 N.C. 300 (1883); McLeod v. Williams, 122 N.C. 451, 30 S.E. 129 (1898); Harvey v. Johnson, 133 N.C. 352, 45 S.E. 644 (1903).

§ 1-305. Clerk to issue, in six weeks; penalty; limitations on issuance.

(a) Subject to the provisions of G.S. 1A-1 (Rule 62) and subsection (b) below, the clerk of superior court shall issue executions on all unsatisfied judgments rendered in his court, which are in full force and effect, upon the request of any party or person entitled thereto and upon payment of the necessary fees; provided, however, that the clerks of the superior court shall issue executions on all judgments rendered in their respective courts on forfeiture of bonds in criminal cases within six weeks of the rendition of the judgment, without any request or any advance payment of fees. Every clerk who fails to comply with the requirements of this section is liable to be amerced in the sum of one hundred dollars ($100.00) for the benefit of the party aggrieved, under the same rules that are provided by law for amercing sheriffs, and is further liable to the party injured by suit upon his bond.

(b) The clerk may not issue an execution unless

(1) The judgment debtor's exemptions have been designated, or

(2) The judgment debtor has waived his exemptions as provided in G.S. 1C-1601(c), or

(3) The clerk determines that the exemptions are inapplicable to the particular claim as authorized by G.S. 1C-1603(a)(3). (1850, c. 17, ss. 1, 2, 3; R.C., c. 45, s. 29; Code, s. 470; Rev., s. 618; C.S., s. 666; 1953, c. 470; 1959, c. 1295; 1973, c. 1070, s. 1; 1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1224, s. 15.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article analyzing North Carolina's exemptions law, see 18 Wake Forest L. Rev. 1025 (1982).

CASE NOTES

Duty of Clerk to Issue Execution. — It is the duty of the clerk, as a ministerial officer of the court, to issue execution. Gooch v. Gregory, 65 N.C. 142 (1871). See also, Spencer v. Hawkins, 39 N.C. 288 (1846).

The clerk of the superior court, not the judge, is the proper officer to issue execution. McKethan v. McNeill, 74 N.C. 663 (1876).

A deputy clerk has power to issue execution in the name of the clerk. Miller v. Miller, 89 N.C. 402 (1883).

The signature of the clerk is an absolute necessity to the validity of the writ, all the more so since the legislature has dispensed with the other indicium of the writ's authenticity, that is, a seal, when the writ is to be executed within the county in which it issued. Shepherd v. Lane, 13 N.C. 148 (1828).

A writ signed by an attorney under a verbal deputation of the clerk to all the members of the bar is a nullity, and the sheriff is not liable for not acting under it. Shepherd v. Lane, 13 N.C. 148 (1828).

As to endorsement on execution docket, see Bank of Cape Fear v. Stafford, 47 N.C. 98 (1854).

Delivery Necessary to Execution. — It is necessary for the issuance of an execution that it be actually or constructively delivered to the sheriff, and when it is made out, but not sent out of or issued from the clerk's office, and memorandum of "execution" is entered on the docket, it is not sufficient, under this section, and does not prevent the judgment from becoming dormant. McKeithen v. Blue, 149 N.C. 95, 62 S.E. 769 (1908).

A writ of execution is not issued, within the meaning of this section, until the clerk hands it to the sheriff, or to the party or his agent. The mere filing and retaining it, where it does not leave the office of the clerk, is not sufficient. State v. McLeod, 50 N.C. 318 (1858).

As to remedy for refusal of clerk to issue execution, see Gooch v. Gregory, 65 N.C. 142 (1871).

Payment of Fees as Condition of Clerk's Liability. — This section and § 138-2, providing that the clerk shall not be compelled to perform any services unless his fees are paid or tendered, must be construed together. It follows that clerks of the superior court will not incur the penalty prescribed by this section for failure to issue execution within six weeks unless the plaintiff pays or tenders him his fees for that service. Bank of Oxford v. Bobbitt, 111 N.C. 194, 16 S.E. 169 (1892). See Board of Educ. v. Gallop, 227 N.C. 599, 44 S.E.2d 44 (1947).

Issuance to One of Two Counties. — An allegation that the clerk failed to issue an execution to one county when he had an option to issue to one of two counties would not justify an amercement under this section. Bank of Cape Fear v. Stafford, 47 N.C. 98 (1854).

This section gives the penalty to the party aggrieved; hence the plaintiff must show himself to be the party aggrieved by the default of the clerk. Simpson v. Simpson, 63 N.C. 534 (1869).

As to suspension of the statute by the Ordinance of 1866, see Badham v. Jones, 64 N.C. 655 (1870); McIntyre v. Merritt, 65 N.C. 558 (1871); Richardson v. Wicken, 80 N.C. 172 (1879); Williamson v. Kerr, 88 N.C. 10 (1883).

Applied in Newberry v. Meadows Fertilizer Co., 206 N.C. 182, 173 S.E. 67 (1934).

Cited in McIntyre v. Merritt, 65 N.C. 558 (1871).

§ 1-306. Enforcement as of course.

The party in whose favor judgment is given, and in case of his death, his personal representatives duly appointed, may at any time after the entry of judgment proceed to enforce it by execution, as provided in this Article; provided, however, that no execution upon any judgment which requires the payment of money or the recovery of personal property may be issued at any time after ten years from the date of the rendition thereof; but this proviso shall not apply to any execution issued solely for the purpose of enforcing the lien of a judgment upon any homestead, which has or shall hereafter be allotted within the ten years from the date of rendition of judgment, or any judgment directing the payment of alimony. (C.C.P., s. 255; Code, s. 437; Rev., s. 619; C.S., s. 667; 1927, c. 24; 1935, c. 98.)

CASE NOTES

Construction with Federal Law. — Provision of Federal Debt Collection Procedure Act providing that a judgment in favor of the United States in a civil action creates a lien on all of the judgment debtor's real property, which lien is effective for 20 years and renewable, supersedes the limitations imposed on execution by North Carolina law but only applies to a judgment lien on real property. United States v. Pierce, 214 Bankr. 550 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1997).

Judgment Directing Payment of Alimony. — The statute of limitations does not apply to a judgment directing the payment of alimony. Morse v. Zatkiewiez, 5 N.C. App. 242, 168 S.E.2d 219 (1969).

A decree for periodic payments of alimony and support, in the absence of a provision in the decree itself which constitutes it a specific lien upon the property of the obligor, is not enforceable by execution until the arrears are reduced to judgment by a judicial determination of the amount then due. This is so because the decree for alimony and support may be modified as circumstances may justify. Lindsey v. Lindsey, 34 N.C. App. 201, 237 S.E.2d 561 (1977).

Enforcement of Certain Criminal Judgments by United States. — No limitation period, state or federal, bars the United States from enforcing a judgment on an unpaid criminal fine. United States v. Welborn, 495 F. Supp. 833 (M.D.N.C. 1980).

Sale Must Be Completed Within 10 Years. — This section and § 1-234 clearly manifest the legislative intent that the process to enforce the judgment lien and to render it effectual must be completed by a sale within the prescribed time. Hence, it follows that the lien upon lands of a docketed judgment is lost by the lapse of 10 years from the date of the docketing, and this notwithstanding execution was begun, but not completed, before the expiration of the 10 years. The only office of an execution is to enforce the lien of the judgment by a sale of the lands, and this must be done before the lien is lost. The execution adds nothing by way of prolongation to the life of the lien. McCullen v. Durham, 229 N.C. 418, 50 S.E.2d 511 (1948).

Expiration of Lien of Judgment When Docketed in Another County. — Where a judgment rendered in another county is docketed in the county in which the judgment debtor owns realty, the lien of the judgment expires at the end of 10 years from the date of rendition of the judgment and not the date of docketing. North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank v. Bland, 231 N.C. 26, 56 S.E.2d 30 (1949).

Allotment of homestead suspends the running of the statute of limitations. Cleve v. Adams, 222 N.C. 211, 22 S.E.2d 567 (1942).

A party may not enjoin execution until the statute has run and then plead the bar of the statute against the judgment. Holden v. Totten, 228 N.C. 204, 44 S.E.2d 874 (1947).

Procedure for Obtaining New Judgment. — Under the proviso in this section no execution upon any judgment for money may be issued after 10 years of the date of the rendition thereof; the only procedure whereby the owner of a judgment may obtain a new judgment for the amount is by an independent action upon the judgment, commenced by the issuance of summons, filing of complaint, service thereof, etc., as with any other action to recover a judgment on a debt, which action must, under § 1-47, be commenced within 10 years from the date of the rendition of the judgment. Reid v. Bristol, 241 N.C. 699, 86 S.E.2d 417 (1955).

The concept of a dormant judgment and scire facias for leave to issue execution thereon is now obsolete. Reid v. Bristol, 241 N.C. 699, 86 S.E.2d 417 (1955).

Twelve Year Old Judgment. — The United States was precluded by this section from executing on the debtor's insurance proceeds to collect its 12 year old judgment. United States v. Pierce, 214 Bankr. 550 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1997).

Cited in Williams v. Mullis, 87 N.C. 159 (1882); Exum v. Carolina R.R., 222 N.C. 222, 22 S.E.2d 424 (1942).

§ 1-307. Issued from and returned to court of rendition.

Executions and other process for the enforcement of judgments can issue only from the court in which the judgment for the enforcement of the execution or other final process was rendered; and the returns of executions or other final process shall be made to the court of the county from which it issued. In all cases prior to the first day of March, 1945, where a judgment has been rendered in the superior court of one county and the transcript thereof has been docketed in the office of the clerk of the superior court of some other county or counties, all executions heretofore issued on such docketed transcript of judgment and all homestead proceedings, execution sales, judicial sales and assignments related thereto and based thereon are hereby declared to be lawful, legal and binding upon all purchasers, judgment debtors, judgment creditors, assignors and assignees, and on all parties to the original action and on all parties to or affected by any proceedings related to or based upon such execution, and all such sales, purchases, proceedings and assignments are hereby validated. (1871-2, c. 74; 1881, c. 75; Code, s. 444; Rev., s. 623; C.S., s. 669; 1945, c. 773.)

CASE NOTES

This section and § 1-352 must be construed in pari materia with other statutes relating to the same matter. Essex Inv. Co. v. Pickelsimer, 210 N.C. 541, 187 S.E. 813 (1936).

Executions May Issue Only from Court Rendering Judgment. — Under the original Code, executions might be issued from any county where the judgments had been docketed, and were returnable to the court from which they issued; but since the act of 1871-72, ch. 74, § 1, executions shall issue only from the court in which the judgment was rendered. Hasty v. Simpon, 77 N.C. 69 (1877); Daniels v. Yelverton, 239 N.C. 54, 79 S.E.2d 311 (1953).

Under this section, only the clerk of the superior court in the county where a judgment is rendered may issue execution, even though the judgment is docketed in other counties. Hickory White Trucks, Inc. v. Greene, 34 N.C. App. 279, 237 S.E.2d 862 (1977).

Return to Another County Not Authorized. — Since the passage of the Act of 1870-71, ch. 42, the clerk of the superior court of one county cannot issue a summons returnable in the superior court of another. Howerton v. Tate, 66 N.C. 431 (1872).

Venue of a proceeding in the nature of a creditor's supplemental proceeding under this section, in which in order to issue an execution on the defendant's interest under his father's will, the trial judge was required to find only that defendant possessed some interest under his father's will, was governed by this section, not § 28A-3-1. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. C.P. Robinson Co., 319 N.C. 63, 352 S.E.2d 684 (1987).

Execution on Tax Certificate. — Where the Commissioner (now the Secretary) of Revenue had the clerk of a superior court docket his certificate setting forth the tax due by a resident of the county pursuant to § 105-242(c), execution on such judgment directed to the sheriff of the county had to be issued by the clerk of the superior court of the county, or in his name by a deputy or assistant clerk, and it could not be issued by the Commissioner. Daniels v. Yelverton, 239 N.C. 54, 79 S.E.2d 311 (1953).

§ 1-308. To what counties issued.

When the execution is against the property of the judgment debtor, it may be issued to the sheriff of any county where the judgment is docketed. No execution may issue from the superior court upon any judgment until such judgment shall be docketed in the county to which the execution is to be issued. When it requires the delivery of real or personal property, it must be issued to the sheriff of the county where the property, or some part thereof, is situated. Execution may be issued at the same time to different counties. (C.C.P., s. 259; 1871-2, c. 74; 1881, c. 75; Code, s. 443; 1905, c. 412; Rev., s. 622; C.S., s. 670; 1953, c. 884.)

CASE NOTES

Where a writ was issued against three defendants, and two of them were in one county while the other was in another county, in which the judgment was rendered, in the absence of special instructions, the clerk might issue an execution to either county. Bank of Cape Fear v. Stafford, 47 N.C. 98 (1854).

§ 1-309. Sale of land under execution.

Real property adjudged to be sold must be sold in the county where it lies, by the sheriff of the county or by a referee appointed by the court for that purpose; and thereupon the sheriff or referee must execute a conveyance to the purchaser, which conveyance shall be effectual to pass the rights and interests of the parties adjudged to be sold. (C.C.P., s. 259; Code, s. 443; Rev., s. 622; C.S., s. 671.)

CASE NOTES

Section Not Applicable to Foreclosure Sales. — The provisions of this section relative to judicial sales are intended to apply to proceedings in the nature of execution sales of property in the hands of others charged with the payment of the judgment, and have no application to foreclosure proceedings, which are left to be governed by the old equity practice. Kidder v. McIlhenny, 81 N.C. 123 (1879).

Sale by Successor in Office. — Where a fieri facias was levied by one sheriff before his death, his successor had no authority to sell the property under a venditioni exponas, since an execution is an entire thing and must be completed by the hand which commenced it. Sanderson v. Rogers, 14 N.C. 38 (1831).

Where a sheriff has levied on lands and goods, and gone out of office, a general venditioni may issue to the new sheriff, where the goods have been delivered over to him. Tarkinton v. Alexander, 19 N.C. 87 (1836), explaining and reconciling the cases of Holliday v. Eastwood, 12 N.C. 157 (1827), and Sanderson v. Rogers, 14 N.C. 38 (1831), with those of Barden v. M'Kinne, 11 N.C. 279 (1826), and Seawell v. Bank of Cape Fear, 14 N.C. 279 (1831), and approving them all.

A writ directed to the sheriff for the sale of land levied on by a sheriff who had gone out of office will not authorize a sale of land by the late sheriff. Tarkinton v. Alexander, 19 N.C. 87 (1936).

Cited in Weir v. Weir, 196 N.C. 268, 145 S.E. 281 (1928).

§ 1-310. When dated and returnable.

Executions shall be dated as of the day on which they were issued, and shall be returnable to the court from which they were issued not more than 90 days from said date, and no executions against property shall issue until 10 days after entry of judgment. (1870-1, c. 42, s. 7; 1873-4, c. 7; Code, s. 449; 1903, c. 544; Rev., s. 624; C.S., s. 672; 1927, c. 110; 1931, c. 172; 1953, c. 697; 1971, c. 381, s. 12; 1973, c. 1070, s. 2; 1977, c. 74, s. 1.)

By this statute the legislature has fixed the life of an execution. And while failure to follow the statute makes an execution irregular, the life of it as fixed by the statute is not affected. Gardner v. McDonald, 223 N.C. 555, 27 S.E.2d 522 (1943).

The term "return" implies that the process is taken back, with such endorsements as the law requires, to the place from when it originated. Brogden Prod. Co. v. Stanley, 267 N.C. 608, 148 S.E.2d 689 (1966).

Computation of Time for Return. — In computing the number of days within which the writ of execution must be returned, the day of the issuance of execution must be included and the day of its return must be excluded. This is by analogy to the rule applied to the return of a process. Taylor v. Harris, 82 N.C. 25 (1880).

As to directory effect of former requirement of attestation of the execution, see Bryan v. Hubbs, 69 N.C. 423 (1873); Williams v. Weaver, 94 N.C. 134 (1886).

Applied in Board of Educ. v. Gallop, 227 N.C. 599, 44 S.E.2d 44 (1947); North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank v. Bland, 231 N.C. 26, 56 S.E.2d 30 (1949).

§ 1-311. Against the person.

If the action is one in which the defendant might have been arrested, an execution against the person of the judgment debtor may be issued to any county within the State, after the return of an execution against his property wholly or partly unsatisfied. But no execution shall issue against the person of a judgment debtor, unless an order of arrest has been served, as provided in the Article Arrest and Bail, or unless the complaint contains a statement of facts showing one or more of the causes of arrest required by law, whether such statement of facts is necessary to the cause of action or not. Provided, that where the facts are found by a jury, the verdict shall contain a finding of facts establishing the right to execution against the person; and where jury trial is waived and the court finds the facts, the court shall find facts establishing the right to execution against the person. Such findings of fact shall include a finding that the defendant either (i) is about to flee the jurisdiction to avoid paying his creditors, (ii) has concealed or diverted assets in fraud of his creditors, or (iii) will do so unless immediately detained. If defendant appears at the hearing on the debt and the judge has reason to believe that the defendant is indigent, he shall inform the defendant that if he is an indigent person he is entitled to services of counsel under G.S. 7A-451, that he may petition for preliminary release on the basis of his indigency, that if he does so he will have an opportunity within 72 hours to suggest to a judge his indigency for purposes of appointment of counsel and provisional release, and that the judge will thereupon immediately appoint counsel for him if it is adjudged that he is unable to pay a lawyer. If defendant appears at the hearing on the debt and the judge provisionally concludes he is indigent, counsel should be appointed immediately. (C.C.P., s. 260; Code, s. 447; 1891, c. 541, s. 2; Rev., s. 625; C.S., s. 673; 1947, c. 781; 1977, c. 649, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — The reference in this section to "the Article Arrest and Bail" was apparently meant to refer to Article 34 of this Chapter, entitled "Arrest and Bail." See § 1-409 et seq.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1977 law on civil procedure, see 56 N.C.L. Rev. 874 (1978).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited below were decided prior to the 1977 amendment to this section, which added the last three sentences.

Constitutionality. — It is not irrational for the General Assembly to view execution against the body (which may issue only upon a judgment, an express finding of fraud and a writ of fieri facias returned nulla bona) as a step both necessary and reasonably calculated to compel disclosure of possibly hidden assets. Grimes v. Miller, 429 F. Supp. 1350 (M.D.N.C. 1977), aff'd, 434 U.S. 978, 98 S. Ct. 600, 54 L. Ed. 2d 473 (1977).

An equal protection attack against this section, as it read prior to the 1977 amendment thereto, was without merit because the thrust of this section is simply against all debtors who have defrauded or committed other torts under § 1-410, some of whom may later prove to be indigent and some of whom are well off and are concealing substantial assets. Grimes v. Miller, 429 F. Supp. 1350 (M.D.N.C. 1977), aff'd, 434 U.S. 978, 98 S. Ct. 600, 54 L. Ed. 2d 473 (1977).

In order for defendant to invoke his privilege against self-incrimination, there must be a threat of execution against the person. MacClements v. LaFone, 104 N.C. App. 179, 408 S.E.2d 878 (1991), cert. denied, 330 N.C. 613, 412 S.E.2d 87 (1992).

When Execution Against Person of Judgment Debtor May Issue. — Where the complaint alleges a cause of arrest, whether the same is necessary to the cause of action or not, an execution against the person of the debtor may issue upon a finding of the cause, after an unsatisfied execution under a judgment against his property has been returned. Ledford v. Emerson, 143 N.C. 527, 55 S.E. 969 (1906); Turlington v. Aman, 163 N.C. 555, 79 S.E. 1102 (1913).

If a judgment is rendered against a defendant for a cause of action specified in § 1-410(1), this section authorizes an execution against the person of the judgment debtor after the return of an execution against his property is wholly or partly unsatisfied. Allred v. Graves, 261 N.C. 31, 134 S.E.2d 186 (1964); Leonard v. Williams, 100 N.C. App. 512, 397 S.E.2d 321 (1990).

In 1977, the legislature amended this section, limiting execution against the person to cases where either the jury's verdict or the trial court's findings of fact include a finding that defendant is about to either (1) flee the jurisdiction to avoid paying creditors, or (2) has concealed or diverted assets in fraud of his creditors, or (3) will do so unless immediately detained. Leonard v. Williams, 100 N.C. App. 512, 397 S.E.2d 321 (1990).

Limitations of Execution Against a Person. — Due to an amendment of this section in 1977, execution against a person under this statute is limited to cases where either the jury's verdict or the trial court's findings of fact include a finding that the defendant is about to either (1) flee the jurisdiction to avoid paying his creditors, or (2) has concealed or diverted assets in fraud of his creditors, or (3) will do so unless immediately detained. And where there was no such finding, defendant had no basis to exercise his privilege against self-incrimination because of the threat of a punitive damages award. MacClements v. LaFone, 104 N.C. App. 179, 408 S.E.2d 878 (1991), cert. denied, 330 N.C. 613, 412 S.E.2d 87 (1992).

Two Alternative Conditions Prerequisite. — There are two alternative essential conditions upon which depends the issuance of an execution against the person of the defendant. They are: (a) A lawful arrest before judgment; or (b) A complaint averring such facts as would have justified an order for an arrest. H.M. Houston & Co. v. Walsh, 79 N.C. 35 (1878).

Three Classes of Cases Contemplated — In General. — This section, taken in connection with § 1-411, contemplates three classes of cases: (1) Where the cause of arrest is not set forth in the complaint; (2) Where the cause is set forth in the complaint, but only collateral and extrinsic to the plaintiff's cause of action; (3) Where the cause set forth in the complaint is essential to the plaintiff's claim. State ex rel. Peebles v. Foote, 83 N.C. 102 (1880).

This section contemplates three classes where execution may be had on the body: (1) Where the cause of arrest does not appear in the complaint, but appears by affidavit; (2) Where the cause of arrest is set forth in the complaint, but is based on facts which are collateral and extrinsic to plaintiff's cause of action; and (3) Where the facts showing the cause of arrest as set forth in the complaint are the same or essential to those on which plaintiff bases his cause of action. Nunn v. Smith, 270 N.C. 374, 154 S.E.2d 497 (1967).

Same — First Class. — In cases within the first class, the defendant can only be arrested by an order founded upon a sufficient affidavit setting forth the sources of information, when it is based upon information and belief. And in such cases no execution can be issued against the person without such order previously had and served. State ex rel. Peebles v. Foote, 83 N.C. 102 (1880).

Same — Second Class. — In cases of the second class, the statement of the cause of arrest in the complaint will answer in place of an affidavit, but the statement must be as explicit as if set forth in an affidavit and properly verified. In such cases there must be an order of arrest before execution against the person of the debtor. State ex rel. Peebles v. Foote, 83 N.C. 102 (1880).

Same — Third Class. — In the last class of cases, where the facts stated in the complaint as causes of arrest are essential to or constitute plaintiff's cause of action, no affidavit for the order of arrest is needed, and no such order is required before execution may be issued against the person of the defendant, provided the complaint has been duly verified. But a verification on information and belief will not answer, unless it gives the sources of information, etc. State ex rel. Peebles v. Foote, 83 N.C. 102 (1880).

As to an execution against the person upon a docketed judgment of a justice of the peace, see McAden v. Banister, 63 N.C. 478 (1869).

Necessity for Sufficient Allegations. — An essential prerequisite to plaintiff's right to body execution is that, where there has not already been a lawful arrest under § 1-410, the complaint or affidavit must allege such facts as would have justified an order for such arrest. Nunn v. Smith, 270 N.C. 374, 154 S.E.2d 497 (1967).

But an execution against the person cannot issue simply because of allegations in the complaint. The facts alleged entitling the plaintiff to such an execution must be passed upon and must enter into the judgment. Nunn v. Smith, 270 N.C. 374, 154 S.E.2d 497 (1967). See also, Stewart v. Bryan, 121 N.C. 46, 28 S.E. 18 (1897).

Cause Must Be Pleaded and Proved and Issue Determined. — In order to issue an execution against the person of the defendant in cases where it is permissible, the cause of arrest must be pleaded and proved, the issue affirmatively determined by the jury and judgment rendered. Turlington v. Aman, 163 N.C. 555, 79 S.E. 1102 (1913).

Where there is no order of arrest before judgment nor any complaint filed averring such facts as would have justified such order, a defendant cannot be arrested after judgment under an execution against the person under this section. H.M. Houston & Co. v. Walsh, 79 N.C. 35 (1878).

Allegation of Malice in Malpractice Action. — In an action to recover for malpractice of defendant, execution against the person of defendant may not issue in the absence of allegation and evidence of actual malice. Olinger v. Camp, 215 N.C. 340, 1 S.E.2d 870 (1939).

Where plaintiff suggests fraud in defendant's affidavit of insolvency, he must sufficiently allege and prove fraud or the proceeding will be dismissed. Hayes v. Lancaster, 202 N.C. 515, 163 S.E. 602 (1932).

Facts Must Enter into Judgment. — An execution against the person can issue only when the facts alleged entitling the plaintiff thereto have been passed upon and entered into the judgment. Doyle v. Bush, 171 N.C. 10, 86 S.E. 165 (1915).

What Must Be Embraced in Findings of Fact. — As a matter of procedural due process, the statutorily prescribed "finding of facts establishing the right to execution against the person" under this section embraces not only findings with respect to the wrong of the debtor upon his creditor, but in addition a finding of probable cause to believe that he has committed or will commit further wrongs in order to cheat his creditors. Grimes v. Miller, 429 F. Supp. 1350 (M.D.N.C. 1977), aff'd, 434 U.S. 978, 98 S. Ct. 600, 54 L. Ed. 2d 473 (1977).

Before a capias of execution against the body of a person may issue there must be findings of fact sufficient to support a conclusion of probable cause to believe that the debtor is about to flee the jurisdiction or has concealed or diverted assets or that unless he is immediately detained he will probably do so. Grimes v. Miller, 429 F. Supp. 1350 (M.D.N.C. 1977), aff'd, 434 U.S. 978, 98 S. Ct. 600, 54 L. Ed. 2d 473 (1977).

Execution for Conversion. — Under this section and § 1-410, providing that a defendant may be arrested when the action is for wrongfully taking, detaining or converting personal property, where the defendant, cotenant of a race horse, converted it by selling the horse while in his possession, such defendant was subject to execution against the person. Doyle v. Bush, 171 N.C. 10, 86 S.E. 165 (1915).

Under this section an affirmative answer to an issue establishing that defendant had retained and converted to his own use, in violation of the terms of the contract of assignment with plaintiff, property belonging to plaintiff, was sufficient to support a judgment that execution against the person of defendant issue upon application of plaintiff upon return of execution against the property unsatisfied, intent of defendant in doing the acts constituting a breach of trust being immaterial and a specific finding of fraud being unnecessary. East Coast Fertilizer Co. v. Hardee, 211 N.C. 653, 191 S.E. 725 (1937).

Execution for Injury Committed to Plaintiff's Person. — Where judgment was rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction against the defendant in a certain sum for an injury committed to the person of the plaintiff, who appealed without giving bond to stay execution, it was held that upon the return of execution against defendant's property unsatisfied an execution upon the person could issue, that filing an inventory of his property, etc., would not exempt the defendant from arrest, and that the execution could only be stayed by giving a bond securing the judgment. Howie v. Spittle, 156 N.C. 180, 72 S.E. 207 (1911).

Wilfully Inflicted Injury. — Where the pleadings, evidence and verdict were that an injury was wilfully inflicted, and order for execution against the person of the defendant upon the return of execution against his property unsatisfied was proper under this section and § 1-410. Foster v. Hyman, 197 N.C. 189, 148 S.E. 36 (1929).

Allegations and evidence tending to show that defendant, while drunk, drove his automobile on the wrong side of a city street where traffic was heavy at a rate of 45 or 50 miles an hour, under circumstances which should have convinced him, as a man of ordinary prudence, that he incurred the risk of imminent peril to human life, and that the plaintiff was injured thereby, were sufficient to sustain the jury's verdict that the injury was inflicted wilfully and wantonly, and an order for execution against the person of defendant upon return of execution against his property unsatisfied was proper under such sections. Foster v. Hyman, 197 N.C. 189, 148 S.E. 36 (1929).

Discharge of Person Under Execution. — The person arrested may be discharged, after judgment and without payment, only by surrendering all of his property in excess of $50.00. Raisin Fertilizer Co. v. Grubbs, 114 N.C. 470, 19 S.E. 597 (1894).

When a person is taken by authority of an execution against his person by virtue of the provisions of this section, he can be discharged from imprisonment only by payment or by giving notice and surrendering all his property in excess of $50.00 as provided in § 23-23 and §§ 23-30 through 23-38. The effect of an execution against the person is therefore to deprive the defendant in the execution entirely of his homestead exemption and of any personal property exemption over and above $50.00. Allred v. Graves, 261 N.C. 31, 134 S.E.2d 186 (1964).

Applicability of § 23-29. — The provisions of § 23-29(2) are broad and strong, and plainly extend to and embrace every person who may be arrested by virtue of an order of arrest issued pursuant to the provisions of § 1-410, and also extend to and embrace every person who has been seized by virtue of an execution against his person by authority of this section. Allred v. Graves, 261 N.C. 31, 134 S.E.2d 186 (1964).

Duty of Clerk. — It is the duty of the clerk of the court, upon the application of the plaintiff, to issue the execution against the person of the defendant in proper cases. Kinney v. Laughenour, 97 N.C. 325, 2 S.E. 43 (1887).

Motion Before Clerk and Appeal to Superior Court. — Where a personal execution against a debtor is allowed by the statute, it must be by motion before the clerk after an unsatisfied return of the execution against his property, and from any adverse ruling his decision is subject to review on appeal to the superior court; and if a judgment in the superior court may permit an execution against the person of the debtor, should the execution against his property thereafter be returned unsatisfied, the court is not required to order in the judgment that execution issue against the person of the debtor in anticipation of such a return on the execution. Turlington v. Aman, 163 N.C. 555, 79 S.E. 1102 (1913).

Defendant's Privilege Against Self-Incrimination Inapplicable Where Plaintiff Relinquishes Remedy Under This Section. — In an action for malicious assault, if plaintiff seeks merely compensatory damages, and relinquishes all claim to punish defendants by punitive damages and to arrest them by virtue of the provisions of § 1-410(1) and to issue an execution against their persons by virtue of the provisions of this section, defendants' claim of privilege against self-incrimination does not apply. Allred v. Graves, 261 N.C. 31, 134 S.E.2d 186 (1964).

In a wrongful death action, the defendant faced no peril being subject to execution against the person for not satisfying a judgment for punitive damages, as there was no allegation in the complaint that would support the required statutory findings under this section for execution against the person. Therefore, there was no basis for the defendant declining to answer interrogatories on the grounds of self-incrimination. Shaw v. Williamson, 75 N.C. App. 604, 331 S.E.2d 203, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 669, 335 S.E.2d 496 (1985).

Liability in Damages for Malicious Prosecution. — Where a trial court of competent jurisdiction regularly determined that the plaintiff in the action had the right to arrest the defendant on personal execution, and accordingly the defendant was taken into custody under this section, the plaintiff in said action would not be liable in damages in defendant's subsequent action for malicious prosecution, even if the verdict and finding of the jury or finding for plaintiff in the former suit was thereafter set aside or reversed on appeal or other ruling in the orderly progress of the cause. Overton v. Combs, 182 N.C. 4, 108 S.E. 357 (1921).

Award of Punitive Damages in Cause Under § 1-410 Not Sufficient. — Under the present language of this section, an award of punitive damages in a cause of action specified under § 1-410, alone, does not give rise to an execution against the person. Leonard v. Williams, 100 N.C. App. 512, 397 S.E.2d 321 (1990).

Applied in Windham Distrib. Co. v. Davis, 72 N.C. App. 179, 323 S.E.2d 506 (1984).

Cited in Rouse v. Wheeler, 17 N.C. App. 422, 194 S.E.2d 555 (1973).

§ 1-312. Rights against property of defendant dying in execution.

Parties at whose suit the body of a person is taken in execution for a judgment recovered, their executors or administrators, may after the death of the person so taken and dying in execution, have the same rights against the property of the person deceased, as they might have had if that person had never been in execution. (21 James I, s. 24; R.C., c. 45, s. 28; Code, s. 469; Rev., s. 626; C.S., s. 674.)

§ 1-313. Form of execution.

The execution must be directed to the sheriff, or to the coroner when the sheriff is a party to or interested in the action. In those counties where the office of coroner is abolished, or is vacant, and in which process is required to be executed on the sheriff, the authority to execute such process shall be vested in the clerk of court; however, the clerk of court is hereby empowered to designate and direct by appropriate order some person to act in his stead to execute the same. The execution must also be subscribed by the clerk of the court, and must refer to the judgment, stating the county where the judgment roll or transcript is filed, the names of the parties, the amount of the judgment, if it is for money, the amount actually due thereon, and the time of docketing in the county to which the execution is issued, and shall require the officer substantially as follows:

(1) Against Property — No Lien on Personal Property until Levy. — If it is against the property of the judgment debtor, it shall require the officer to satisfy the judgment out of his personal property; and if sufficient personal property cannot be found, out of the real property belonging to him on the day when the judgment was docketed in the county, or at any time thereafter; but no execution against the property of a judgment debtor is a lien on his personal property, as against any bona fide purchaser from him for value, or as against any other execution, except from the levy thereof.

(2) Against Property in Hands of Personal Representative. — If it is against real or personal property in the hands of personal representatives, heirs, devisees, legatees, tenants of real property or trustees it shall require the officer to satisfy the judgment out of such property.

(3) Against the Person. — If it is against the person of the judgment debtor, it shall require the officer to arrest him, and commit him to the jail of the county until he pays the judgment or is released or discharged according to law. The execution shall include a statement that if the defendant is an indigent person he is entitled to services of counsel, that he may petition for preliminary release on the basis of his indigency, that if he does so he will have an opportunity within 72 hours to suggest to a judge his indigency for purposes of appointment of counsel and provisional release, and that the judge will thereupon immediately appoint counsel for him if it is adjudged that he is unable to pay a lawyer.

(4) For Delivery of Specific Property. — If it is for the delivery of the possession of real or personal property, it shall require the officer to deliver the possession of the same, particularly describing it, to the party entitled thereto, and may at the same time require the officer to satisfy any costs, damages, rents, or profits recovered by the same judgment, out of the personal property of the party against whom it was rendered, and the value of the property for which the judgment was recovered, to be specified therein, if a delivery cannot be had; and if sufficient personal property cannot be found, then out of the real property belonging to him on the day when the judgment was docketed, or at any time thereafter, and in that respect is deemed an execution against property.

(5) For Purchase Money of Land. — If the answer in an action for recovery of a debt contracted for the purchase of land does not deny, or if the jury finds, that the debt was so contracted, it is the duty of the court to have embodied in the judgment that the debt sued on was contracted for the purchase money of the land, describing it briefly; and it is also the duty of the clerk to set forth in the execution that the said debt was contracted for the purchase of the land, the description of which must be set out briefly as in the complaint. (C.C.P., s. 261; 1868-9, c. 148; 1879, c. 217; Code, ss. 234-236, 448; Rev., s. 627; C.S., s. 675; 1971, c. 653, s. 2; 1977, c. 649, s. 2.)

Cross References. — As to subscription and sealing of the execution by the clerk, see § 1-303.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1977 law on civil procedure, see 56 N.C.L. Rev. 874 (1978).

CASE NOTES

Liens on Real Estate and Personalty Distinguished. — A judgment creditor acquires a lien on the judgment debtor's real estate by docketing; but he acquires no lien on the personalty until there has been a valid levy. Community Credit Co. v. Norwood, 257 N.C. 87, 125 S.E.2d 369 (1962).

There is no lien on personal property in North Carolina until levy. Wilmington Nursery Co. v. Burkert, 36 Bankr. 813 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984).

To make a valid levy, the officer must be armed with judicial process and he must act in conformity with the direction given him in the execution or other judicial order. Community Credit Co. v. Norwood, 257 N.C. 87, 125 S.E.2d 369 (1962).

Forcible Entry to Execute Process on Personalty. — An officer cannot break open an outer door or window of a dwelling against the consent of the owner for the purpose of making a levy on the goods of the owner. Red House Furn. Co. v. Smith, 310 N.C. 617, 313 S.E.2d 569 (1984).

While it is true that § 1-480 permits forcible entry where property subject to claim and delivery is concealed, no similar exception has been promulgated with respect to the execution of writs of possession pursuant to subdivision (4) of this section. Red House Furn. Co. v. Smith, 310 N.C. 617, 313 S.E.2d 569 (1984).

Date of Lien Against Personalty. — Under this section the lien of execution against the personal property of the defendant, as against bona fide purchasers, does not date from the date of such execution, but from the time of levy thereunder. Weinsenfield v. McLean, 96 N.C. 248, 2 S.E. 56 (1887).

Duty to Report Levy on Automobile. — When a levy has been made on an automobile pursuant to an execution, it is now the duty of the officer to report the levy to the Department (now Division) of Motor Vehicles in a form prescribed by it. The levy so reported is subordinate to all liens theretofore noted on the certificate. Community Credit Co. v. Norwood, 257 N.C. 87, 125 S.E.2d 369 (1962).

Waiver of Right to Have Personalty Taken First. — The judgment debtor waives or forfeits his right to have his personal property taken in preference to his land for the satisfaction of a judgment by requesting the sheriff to levy upon the land in the first instance, or by failing to disclose his personal property when the sheriff is about to make a levy. North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank v. Bland, 231 N.C. 26, 56 S.E.2d 30 (1949).

Refusal to Produce Personalty Warrants Sale of Realty. — The provision requiring that the officer satisfy the judgment first out of the personalty is solely for the debtor's benefit, and if the debtor refuses to produce his personalty, his lands may be sold. McCoy v. Beard, 9 N.C. 377 (1823).

Presumption as to Levy on Realty. — Where it was not made to appear that the judgment debtor possessed personalty, attack on a sale on the ground that the sheriff failed to satisfy the judgment out of the personalty was untenable, since it would be presumed that the sheriff levied on realty because he could not find any personalty. North Carolina Joint Stock

Land Bank v. Bland, 231 N.C. 26, 56 S.E.2d 30 (1949).

Sale of Realty Without Levy. — A sale of real estate under an execution issued on a judgment, which is a lien thereon, is valid without a levy. All that is essential to a valid sale of real estate under execution is that the requirements of the law be observed and that it be made fully known at the sale what property is being sold. Farrior v. Houston, 100 N.C. 369, 6 S.E. 72 (1888).

Who May Object If Sheriff Sells Land First. — The provisions that the personal property of a judgment debtor is to be exhausted before recourse is had to his realty for the satisfaction of a judgment is intended solely for the benefit of the judgment debtor, and nobody else can object if the sheriff levies on and sells land without first exhausting the judgment debtor's personalty. North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank v. Bland, 231 N.C. 26, 56 S.E.2d 30 (1949).

Form of Execution Against the Person. — An execution against the person is irregular if it does not run in the name of the State and convey its authority to the officers to arrest the defendant. H.M. Houston & Co. v. Walsh, 79 N.C. 35 (1878).

Execution against the person issued under this section should command the sheriff to arrest the defendant and commit him to the jail of the county from which it issued, until he should pay the judgment or be discharged according to law. Kinney v. Laughenour, 97 N.C. 325, 2 S.E. 43 (1887), decided prior to the 1977 amendment to subdivision (3).

Recital in Judgment as to Purpose of Debt Conclusive. — If the judgment of the court recites the fact that debt was contracted for the purchase of land, such recital is conclusive as between the parties to the record. Durham v. Wilson, 104 N.C. 595, 10 S.E. 683 (1889).

Reason for Recital as to Purpose of Debt. — The homestead interest of a defendant is subject to execution issued upon a judgment recovered for the purchase money of the land sold. Hence, the requirement that it shall be set forth in the judgment and execution that the debt sued on was contracted for the purchase money of land, so that the sheriff may sell the land without regard to the homestead. Toms v. Fite, 93 N.C. 274 (1885).

Validity of Execution Sale Absent Record Evidence of Purpose of Debt. — Land purchased but not yet paid for is not exempt from execution as a homestead under a judgment for the purchase money of such land. And the execution sale under which it is sold is valid even though there was no evidence of record that the judgment was for the purchase money of the land. Durham v. Bostick, 72 N.C. 353 (1875).

Action by Bankrupts Not Necessary. — An action by debtors to quiet whatever liability might arise from creditors' judgments under § 1-234 which might survive their discharge in bankruptcy and eventually impair any exemptable interests in real property they might acquire in the future is not necessary, as the comprehensive relief afforded by a Chapter 7 discharge protects the debtors' interests in property they acquire after bankruptcy and assures them a "fresh start" in their financial affairs. Clowney v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 19 Bankr. 349 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982).

Quoted in Halverson v. Halverson, 151 Bankr. 358 (M.D.N.C. 1993).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

As to manner of execution, see opinion of Attorney General to Mr. C.E. Drum, Jr., 42 N.C.A.G. 312 (1973).

§ 1-314. Variance between judgment and execution.

When property has been sold by an officer by virtue of an execution or other process commanding sale, no variance between the execution and the judgment whereon it was issued, in the sum due, in the manner in which it is due, or in the time when it is due, invalidates or affects the title of the purchaser of such property. (1848, c. 53; R.C., c. 44, s. 13; Code, s. 1347; Rev., s. 628; C.S., s. 676.)

This section is to be liberally construed. Wilson v. Taylor, 98 N.C. 275, 3 S.E. 492 (1887).

Execution for Lesser Amount Than Judgment. — The fact that an execution varied from the judgment in being for a lesser amount is expressly cured by this section. Maynard v. Moore, 76 N.C. 158 (1877).

Execution for Larger Amount Than Judgment. — Where the docket showed a judgment in favor of Hinton against Roach for $28.00, while the execution recited other judgments also and called for a larger sum than $28.00, the irregularity was cured by this section. Hinton v. Roach, 95 N.C. 106 (1886).

Variance Held Technical and Immaterial. — Where a judgment was rendered against H for $182.20 and against other defendants, separately mentioned, for various amounts, and an execution was issued reciting only the judgment against H for $182.20, commanding the sheriff to satisfy it out of H's property, it was held that the execution sufficiently conformed to the judgment and the variance was technical and immaterial. Marshburn v. Lashlie, 122 N.C. 237, 29 S.E. 371 (1898).

§ 1-315. Property liable to sale under execution; bill of sale.

(a) The following property of the judgment debtor, not exempted from sale under the Constitution and laws of this State, may be levied on and sold under execution:

(1) Goods, chattels, and real property belonging to him.
(2) Leasehold estates of three years duration or more owned by him.
(3) Equitable and legal rights of redemption in personal and real property pledged or mortgaged by him, or transferred to a trustee for security by him.
(4) Real property or goods and chattels of which any person is seized or possessed in trust for him.
(5) Choses in action represented by instruments which are indispensable to the chose in action.
(6) Choses in action represented by indispensable instruments, which are secured by any interest in property, together with the security interest in property.
(7) Interests as vendee under conditional sales contracts of personal property.

(b) Upon the sale under execution of any property or interest for which no provision is otherwise made under this article for the furnishing of a deed or other instrument of title, the officer holding the sale shall execute and deliver to the purchaser a bill of sale.

(c) No execution shall be levied on growing crops until they are matured. (5 Geo. II, c. 7, s. 4; 1777, c. 115, s. 29, P.R.; 1812, c. 830, ss. 1, 2, P.R.; 1822, c. 1172, P.R.; 1844, c. 35; R.C., c. 45, ss. 1-5, 11; Code, ss. 450, 453; Rev., ss. 629, 632; 1919, c. 30; C.S., s. 677; 1961, c. 81.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on installment land contracts in North Carolina, see 3 Campbell L. Rev. 29 (1981).

CASE NOTES

History. — As to the historical development of the legislation by which the lands of debtors became subject to execution, thus changing the common-law rule, see Jones v. Edmonds, 7 N.C. 43 (1819).

As to the common law, see Payne v. Hubbard, 4 N.C. 195 (1815); Rowland Hdwe. & Supply Co. v. Lewis, 173 N.C. 290, 92 S.E. 13 (1917).

Only property of the judgment debtor may be levied on and sold under execution. A levy made on property of a person other than the judgment debtor constitutes a trespass. Mica Indus., Inc. v. Penland, 249 N.C. 602, 107 S.E.2d 120 (1959).

Property Held by Resident Agent. — By authorizing resident to hold property as their agent, nonresident defendants, as principals, did not surrender their ownership interests in the property, and were thus subject to attachment against their ownership interest in the property. Vinson Realty Co. v. Honig, 88 N.C. App. 113, 362 S.E.2d 602 (1987).

Property held for necessary public uses and purposes, such as courthouses, jails, schoolhouses, etc., cannot be sold under execution. Gooch v. Gregory, 65 N.C. 142 (1871); Vaughan v. Commissioners of Forsyth County, 118 N.C. 636, 24 S.E. 425 (1896); Morganton Hdwe. Co. v. Morganton Graded Schools, 151 N.C. 507, 66 S.E. 583 (1909).

An equitable estate but not a mere right is subject to execution under this section. Nelson v. Hughes, 55 N.C. 33 (1854). But see, Deaton v. Gaines, 4 N.C. 424 (1816).

A "right" to have one declared a trustee is not subject to execution. Nelson v. Hughes, 55 N.C. 33 (1854).

This section was not intended to change the nature of trusts, the relation between the trustee and the cestui que trust, or the rights of the latter against the former. Its sole purpose was to render the interest of the cestui que trust liable at law, as it was before in equity, for the debts of the cestui que trust in certain cases, by transferring by a sale on execution against the cestui que trust the legal estate of the trustee, as well as the trust estate of the debtor. Rowland Hdwe. & Supply Co. v. Lewis, 173 N.C. 290, 92 S.E. 13 (1917).

Nature of Trustee's Interest as Affecting Salability Under Execution. — When land is conveyed to a trustee upon a declaration of trust, and there is no clause of defeasance in the deed, to sell for the payment of a debt or to discharge any other duty, in which persons other than the judgment debtor have an interest, or when for any other reason the judgment debtor may not call for an immediate transfer of the legal title, then the interest, estate or right of the judgment debtor, although subject to the lien of the docketed judgment, cannot be sold under execution. The lien can be enforced only by judgment rendered in a civil action. Mayo v. Staton, 137 N.C. 670, 50 S.E. 331 (1905).

Where the trust is passive, the property is subject to sale under execution against the judgment debtor. Fishel & Taylor v. Grifton United Methodist Church, 22 N.C. App. 647, 207 S.E.2d 330 (1974).

But Not Where Trust Is Active. — The provisions of subsection (a)(4) of this section and § 1-316 do not apply to an active trust. Cornelius v. Albertson, 244 N.C. 265, 93 S.E.2d 147 (1956).

Under this section an execution will not lie against the interest of a cestui que trust in real property held by trustee in active trust. Patrick v. Beatty, 202 N.C. 454, 163 S.E. 572 (1932).

This section does not apply when the trustee holds under a mixed trust, as where the instrument is existent and the debt it secures remains unpaid, but only where the naked title is outstanding, with the right of the cestui que trust to demand it as a matter of right under the Statute of Uses. It is a passive instead of an active trust, in which the trustee has nothing to do, or no duty to perform except to hold the legal title as already stated. It, therefore, excludes an equity of redemption, and a contract to convey land, where anything remains due upon the debt, because the trust is a mixed one in these cases, as a mortgagee in the one case and the vendor in the other holds in trust for the purpose of securing the money due, but when this is paid he holds nothing but the naked legal title. Rowland Hdwe. & Supply Co. v. Lewis, 173 N.C. 290, 92 S.E. 13 (1917).

Residue of Property Conveyed in Trust for Payment of Debts. — Where real estate is conveyed in trust for the payment of certain debts of the grantor, the interest of the grantor, after the payment of such debts, is subject to sale under execution against him. Harrison v. Battle, 16 N.C. 537 (1830); Pool v. Glover, 24 N.C. 129 (1841).

Supplemental Pleading to Bring in Trustee. — The common-law rule that only property of which the judgment debtor has legal title is subject to sale under execution has been enlarged by statute to include property held for the benefit of the judgment debtor in a passive trust, but even so, the trustee must be brought in by supplemental proceeding under § 1-360 et seq. Cornelius v. Albertson, 244 N.C. 265, 93 S.E.2d 147 (1956).

Liability of Equity of Redemption to Sale Under Execution. — An equity of redemption, whether created by a mortgage deed made to the creditor or to the third person, with or without power of sale, may be sold under execution. Whitesides v. Williams, 22 N.C. 153 (1838); Mayo v. Staton, 137 N.C. 670, 50 S.E. 331 (1905).

A sale of the equity of redemption under an execution at law, at the instance of the mortgagee, is not sanctioned by this section. The words of the section are general, but this exception arises necessarily out of the subject and the spirit of the section. Camp v. Coxe, 18 N.C. 52 (1834); McPeters v. English, 141 N.C. 491, 54 S.E. 417 (1906).

The interest of a vendee who holds a bond for the title to land cannot be subjected to sale under execution upon a judgment rendered for the purchase money. McPeters v. English, 141 N.C. 491, 54 S.E. 417 (1906).

Vested Remainders. — The vested remainder of a devisee in lands is subject to sale under execution during the term of the life tenant.

Ellwood v. Plummer, 78 N.C. 392 (1878); Bristol v. Hallyburton, 93 N.C. 384 (1885).

Contingent Remainders. — Contingent remainders are not subject to execution while they remain contingent. Watson v. Dodd, 68 N.C. 528 (1873), aff'd on rehearing, 72 N.C. 240 (1875). See also, Watson v. Watson, 56 N.C. 400 (1857); Bristol v. Hallyburton, 93 N.C. 384 (1885).

Life Estate Held in Trust. — Where a life estate was devised to the testator's son and changed by codicil to appoint a trustee to hold the title and to give him the full rights of enjoyment of a life tenant in the event a creditor should bring action against him for a debt, it was held that the condition upon which the title was to be held in trust was void and his title as tenant for life would continue for the duration of his life, and under this section could be sold under execution on a judgment against him. Mizell v. Bazemore, 194 N.C. 324, 139 S.E. 453 (1927).

Reversions. — A reversion in fee is liable to be taken and sold under execution. Murrell v. Roberts, 33 N.C. 424 (1850).

Standing matured crops are subject to execution. Shannon v. Jones, 34 N.C. 206 (1851).

Prior to 1884 and at common law, growing crops were the subject of levy and sale under execution as personal property, but now under this section, they are not subject to levy till matured. Kesler v. Cornelison, 98 N.C. 383, 3 S.E. 839 (1887).

Stated in Walker Mfg. Co. v. Dickerson, Inc., 510 F. Supp. 329 (W.D.N.C. 1980).

§ 1-316. Sale of trust estates; purchaser's title.

Upon the sale under execution of trust estates whereof the judgment debtor is beneficiary the sheriff shall execute a deed to the purchaser, and the purchaser thereof shall hold and enjoy the same freed and discharged from all encumbrances of the trustee. (1812, c. 830, P.R.; R.C., c. 45, s. 4; Code, s. 452; Rev., s. 630; C.S., s. 678.)

CASE NOTES

Application to Certain Trusts Only. — This section, as has been repeatedly decided, comprehends only those cases in which the whole beneficial estate is in the debtor and nothing remains in the trustee but a naked legal estate. Deaver v. Parker, 37 N.C. 40 (1841). See also, Mayo v. Staton, 137 N.C. 670, 50 S.E. 331 (1905); Chinnis v. Cobb, 210 N.C. 104, 185 S.E. 638 (1936); Cornelius v. Albertson, 244 N.C. 265, 93 S.E.2d 147 (1956).

§ 1-317. Sheriff's deed on sale of equity of redemption.

The sheriff selling equitable and legal rights of redemption shall set forth in the deed to the purchaser thereof that the said estates were under mortgage at the time of judgment, or levy in the case of personal property and sale. (1812, c. 830, s. 2, P.R.; 1822, c. 1172, P.R.; R.C., c. 45, s. 5; Code, s. 451; Rev., s. 631; C.S., s. 679.)

CASE NOTES

The provisions of this section are not mandatory. Mayo v. Staton, 137 N.C. 670, 50 S.E. 331 (1905).

§ 1-318. Forthcoming bond for personal property.

If a sheriff or other officer who has levied an execution or other process upon personal property permits it to remain with the possessor, the officer may take a bond, attested by a credible witness, for the forthcoming thereof to answer the execution or process; but the officer remains, nevertheless, in all respects liable as heretofore to the plaintiff's claim. (1807, c. 731, s. 3, P.R.; 1828, c. 12, s. 2; R.C., c. 45, s. 21; Code, s. 463; Rev., s. 633; C.S., s. 680.)

The obligation of a bond for the forthcoming of property is only that the property shall be delivered to the officer at the time designated, and not that the execution shall be satisfied. Gray v. Bowls, 18 N.C. 437 (1836).

Duty of Obligors. — Where a forthcoming bond is given for the delivery of property levied on by a constable, it is the duty of the obligors to put the officer in the quiet and peaceable possession of the property at the time and place specified; otherwise their bond will be forfeited. Poteet v. Bryson, 29 N.C. 337 (1847).

§ 1-319. Procedure on giving bond; subsequent levies.

When the forthcoming bond is taken the officer must specify therein the property levied upon and furnished to the surety a list of the property in writing under his hand, attested by at least one credible witness, and stating therein the day of sale. The property levied upon is deemed in the custody of the surety, as the bailee of the officer. All other executions thereafter levied on this property create a lien on the same from and after the respective levies, and shall be satisfied accordingly out of the proceeds of the sale of the property; but the officer thereafter levying shall not take the property out of the custody of the surety. But in all such cases sales of chattels shall take place within thirty days after the first levy; and if sale is not made within that time any other officer who has levied upon the property may seize and sell it. (1844, c. 34; 1846, c. 50; R.C., c. 45, s. 22; Code, s. 464; Rev., s. 634; C.S., s. 682.)

§ 1-320. Summary remedy on forthcoming bond.

If the condition of such bond be broken, the sheriff or other officer, on giving 10 days' previous notice in writing to any obligor therein, may on motion have judgment against him in a summary manner, before the superior court or before the district court, as the case may be, of the county in which the officer resides, for all damages which the officer has sustained, or may be adjudged liable to sustain, not exceeding the penalty of the bond, to be ascertained by a jury, under the direction of the court. (1822, c. 1141, P.R.; R.C., c. 45, s. 23; Code, s. 465; Rev., s. 635; C.S., s. 681; 1971, c. 268, s. 14.)

§ 1-321. Entry of returns on judgment docket; penalty.

When an execution is returned, the return of the sheriff or other officer must be noted by the clerk on the judgment docket; and when it is returned wholly or partially satisfied, it is the duty of the clerk of the court to which it is returned to send a copy of such last-mentioned return, under his hand, to the clerk of the superior court of each county in which such judgment is docketed, who must note such copy in his judgment docket, opposite the judgment, and file the copy with the transcript of the docket of the judgment in his office. A clerk failing to send a copy of the payments on the execution or judgment to the clerks of the superior court of the counties wherein a transcript of the judgment has been docketed, and a clerk failing to note said payment on the judgment docket of his court, shall, on motion, be fined one hundred dollars ($100.00) nisi, and the judgment shall be made absolute upon notice to show cause at the succeeding session of the superior court of his county. (1871-2, c. 74, s. 2; 1881, c. 75; Code, s. 445; Rev., s. 636; C.S., s. 683; 1971, c. 381, s. 12.)

CASE NOTES

Returned Execution Becomes Part of Record. — An execution returned into court with an entry of satisfaction endorsed, in whole or in part, extinguishes so much of the debt and becomes a part of the record in the case. Walters v. Moore, 90 N.C. 41 (1884).

Applied in Board of Educ. v. Gallop, 227 N.C. 599, 44 S.E.2d 44 (1947).

§ 1-322. Cost of keeping livestock; officer's account.

The court shall make a reasonable allowance to officers for keeping and maintaining horses, cattle, hogs, or sheep, and all other property taken into their custody under legal process, the keeping of which is chargeable to them; and this allowance may be retained by the officers out of the sales of the property, in preference to the satisfaction of the process under which the property was seized or sold. The officer must make out his account and, if required, give the debtor or his agent a copy of it, signed by his own hand, and must return the account with the execution or other process, under which the property has been seized or sold, to the court to whom the execution or process is returnable, and shall swear to the correctness of the several items set forth; otherwise he shall not be permitted to retain the allowance. (1807, c. 731, P.R.; R.C., c. 45, ss. 25, 26; Code, ss. 466, 467; Rev., ss. 637, 638; C.S., s. 684; 1971, c. 268, s. 15.)

§ 1-323. Purchaser of defective title; remedy against defendant.

Where real or personal property is sold on any execution or decree, by any officer authorized to make the sale, and the sale is made legally and in good faith, and the property did not belong to the person against whose estate the execution or decree was issued, by reason of which the purchaser has been deprived of the property, or been compelled to pay damages in lieu thereof to the owner, the purchaser, his executors or administrators, may sue the person against whom such execution or decree was issued, or the person legally representing him, in a civil action, and recover such sum as he may have paid for the property, with interest from the time of payment; but the property, if personal, must be present at the sale and actually delivered to the purchaser. (1807, c. 723, P.R.; R.C., c. 45, s. 27; Code, s. 468; Rev., s. 639; C.S., s. 685.)

CASE NOTES

This section authorizes a remedy upon an implied warranty of title to property sold under execution as belonging to a debtor, whose debt has been thereby discharged or reduced against such debtor, and authorizes a recovery of an equal amount from him for the reimbursement of the purchaser for such sums as he may have paid. Holliday v. McMillan, 83 N.C. 270 (1880).

Nature of Purchaser's Claim. — The claim which a purchaser at a sheriff's sale has against the defendant in an execution, on account of lack of title, is but a simple contract debt. Laws v. Thompson, 49 N.C. 104 (1856).

When Remedy Under This Section Is Available. — The remedy provided by this section is available only in cases where the judgment debtor, whose property is sold under the execution, has no title at all to the property sold. If the judgment debtor has any title at all, even if it is bare legal title, the equitable title being in some other person, or a defective title, the purchaser at the execution sale acquires the title of the judgment debtor, and has no relief against such debtor in case he suffers loss by reason of a defect in the title. Lewis v. McDowell, 88 N.C. 261 (1883).

Remedy of Judgment Creditor After Purchase at Execution Sale. — The judgment of an execution creditor, purchasing at the execution sale property which did not belong to the judgment debtor and which is recovered from him by its own true owner, is nonetheless satisfied, and the remedy of the creditor is under this section, not upon the judgment, but against the judgment debtor for reimbursement. Halcombe v. Loudermilk, 48 N.C. 491 (1856); Wall v. Fairley, 77 N.C. 105 (1877).

As to substitution or subrogation to the rights of the execution creditor, see Laws v. Thompson, 49 N.C. 104 (1856); Pemberton v. McRae, 75 N.C. 497 (1876).

§ 1-324: Repealed by Session Laws 1949, c. 719, s. 2.

§ 1-324.1. Judgment against corporation; property subject to execution.

If a judgment is rendered against a corporation, the plaintiff may sue out such executions against its property as is provided by law to be issued against the property of natural persons, which executions may be levied as well on the current money as on the goods, chattels, lands and tenements of such corporation. (1901, c. 2, s. 66; Rev., s. 1212; C.S., s. 1201; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 55-140. It was transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1955, c. 1371, s. 2, effective July 1, 1957.

§ 1-324.2. Agent must furnish information as to corporate officers and property.

Every agent or person having charge or control of any property of the corporation, on request of a public officer having for service a writ of execution against it, shall furnish to him the names of the directors and officers thereof, and a schedule of all its property, including debts due or to become due, so far as he has knowledge of the same. (1901, c. 2, s. 67; Rev., s. 1213; C.S., s. 1202; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 55-141. It was transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1955, c. 1371, s. 2, effective July 1, 1957.

§ 1-324.3. Shares subject to execution; agent must furnish information.

Any share or interest in any bank, insurance company, or other joint stock company, that is or may be incorporated under the authority of this State, or incorporated or established under the authority of the United States, belonging to the defendant in execution, may be taken and sold by virtue of such execution in the same manner as goods and chattels. The clerk, cashier, or other officer of such company who has at the time the custody of the books of the company shall, upon being shown the writ of execution, give to the officer having it a certificate of the number of shares or amount of the interest held by the defendant in the company; and if he neglects or refuses to do so, or if he willfully gives a false certificate, he shall be liable to the plaintiff for the amount due on the execution, with costs. (1901, c. 2, ss. 69, 70; Rev., ss. 1214, 1215; C.S., s. 1203; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 55-142. It was transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1955, c. 1371, s. 2, effective July 1, 1957.

§ 1-324.4. Debts due corporation subject to execution; duty, etc., of agent.

If an officer holding an execution is unable to find other property belonging to the corporation liable to execution, he or the judgment creditor may elect to satisfy such execution in whole or in part out of any debts due the corporation, and it is the duty of any agent or person having custody of any evidence of such debt to deliver it to the officer, for the use of the creditor and such delivery, with a transfer to the officer in writing, for the use of the creditor and notice to the debtor, shall be a valid assignment thereof, and the creditor may sue for and collect the same in the name of the corporation, subject to such equitable set-offs on the part of the debtor as in other assignments. Every agent or person who neglects or refuses to comply with the provisions of this section and G.S. 1-324.2 is liable to pay to the execution creditor the amount due on the execution, with costs. (1901, c. 2, s. 68; Rev., s. 1216; C.S., s. 1204; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 55-143. It was transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1955, c. 1371, s. 2, effective July 1, 1957.

The term "debts" is used in this section in a restricted sense. Any agent or person having custody must deliver any evidence of such debt to the officer with a transfer to the officer in writing, and notice to the creditor shall be a valid assignment thereof. Nothing in the statute gives authority to a creditor to maintain an action in the name of the corporation for the recovery of damages for tortious breach of trust by officers in their dealings with the corporation. Caldlaw, Inc. v. Caldwell, 248 N.C. 235, 102 S.E.2d 829 (1958), construing former § 55-143.

And Does Not Include Unliquidated Claim for Damages for Breach of Trust. — A judgment creditor of a corporation whose judgment is unsatisfied may bring suit in the name of the corporation only for the purpose of collecting a debt due the corporation for the satisfaction of his claim. An unliquidated claim against an officer of the corporation to recover damages for tortious breach of trust by such officer in his dealings with the corporation arises ex delicto and is an action in tort, and the statute does not authorize a judgment creditor to maintain such suit in the name of the corporation against such officer. Caldlaw, Inc. v. Caldwell, 248 N.C. 235, 102 S.E.2d 829 (1958), construing former § 55-143.

Cited in Transtector Sys. v. Electric Supply, Inc., 113 N.C. App. 148, 437 S.E.2d 699 (1993).

§ 1-324.5. Violations of three preceding sections misdemeanor.

If any agent or person having charge or control of any property of a corporation, or any clerk, cashier, or other officer of a corporation, who has at the time the custody of the books of the company, or if any agent or person having custody of any evidence of debt due to a corporation, shall, on request of a public officer having in his hands for service an execution against the said corporation, willfully refuse to give to such officer the names of the directors and officers thereof, and a schedule of all its property, including debts due or to become due, or shall willfully refuse to give to such officer a certificate of the number of shares, or amount of interest held by such corporation in any other corporation, or shall willfully refuse to deliver to such officer any evidence of indebtedness due or to become due to such corporation, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1901, c. 2, ss. 67, 68, 70; Rev., s. 3690; C.S., s. 1205; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2; 1993, c. 539, s. 1; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 55-144. It was transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1955, c. 1371, s. 2, effective July 1, 1957.

§ 1-324.6. Proceedings when custodian of corporate books is a nonresident.

When the clerk, cashier, or other officer of any corporation incorporated under the laws of this State, who has the custody of the stock-registry books, is a nonresident of the State, it is the duty of the sheriff receiving a writ of execution issued out of any court of this State against the goods and chattels of a defendant in execution holding stock in such company to send by mail a notice in writing, directed to the nonresident clerk, cashier, or other officer at the post office nearest his reputed place of residence, stating in the notice that he, the sheriff, holds the writ of execution, and out of what court, at whose suit, for what amount, and against whose goods and chattels the writ has been issued, and that by virtue of such writ he seizes and levies upon all the shares of stock of the company held by the defendant in execution on the day of the date of such written notice. It is also the duty of the sheriff on the day of mailing the notice to affix and set upon any office or place of business of such company, within his county, a like notice in writing, and on the same day to serve like notice in writing upon the president and directors of the company, or upon such of them as reside in his county, either personally or by leaving the same at their respective places of abode. The sending, setting up, and serving of such notices in the manner aforesaid constitute a valid levy of the writ upon all shares of stock in such company held by the defendant in execution, which have not at the time of the receipt of the notice by the clerk, cashier, or other officer, who has custody of the stock-registry books, been actually transferred by the defendant, and thereafter any transfer or sale of such shares by the defendant in execution is void as against the plaintiff in the execution, or any purchaser of such stock at any sale thereunder. (1901, c. 2, s. 71; Rev., s. 1217; C.S., s. 1206; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 55-145. It was transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1955, c. 1371, s. 2, effective July 1, 1957.

§ 1-324.7. Duty and liability of nonresident custodian.

The nonresident clerk, cashier, or other officer in such corporation, to whom notice in writing is sent as prescribed in G.S. 1-324.6, shall send forthwith to the officer having the writ, a statement of the time when he received the notice and a certificate of the number of shares held by the defendant in the corporation at the time of the receipt, not actually transferred on the books of the corporation, and the sheriff, or other officer, on receipt by him of this certificate, shall insert the number of shares in the inventory attached to the writ. If the clerk, cashier, or other officer in such corporation neglects to send the certificate as aforesaid or willfully sends a false one, he is liable to the plaintiff for double the amount of damages occasioned by his neglect, or false certificate, to be recovered in an action against him, but the neglect to send, or miscarriage of the certificate, does not impair the validity of the levy upon the stock. (1901, c. 2, s. 72; Rev., s. 1218; C.S., s. 1207; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 55-146. It was transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1955, c. 1371, s. 2, effective July 1, 1957.

ARTICLE 29A.

Part 1. General Provisions.

§ 1-339.1. Definitions.

(a) A judicial sale is a sale of property made pursuant to an order of a judge or clerk in an action or proceeding in the superior or district court, including a sale pursuant to an order made in an action in court to foreclose a mortgage or deed of trust, but is not

(1) A sale made pursuant to a power of sale
   a. Contained in a mortgage, deed of trust, or conditional sale contract, or
   b. Granted by statute with respect to a mortgage, deed of trust, or conditional sale contract, or
(2) A resale ordered with respect to any sale described in subsection (a)(1), where such original sale was not held under a court order, or
(3) An execution sale, or
(4) A sale ordered in a criminal action, or
(5) A tax foreclosure sale, or
(6) A sale made pursuant to Article 15 of Chapter 35A of the General Statutes, relating to sales of estates held by the entireties when one or both spouses are mentally incompetent, or
(7) A sale made in the course of liquidation of a bank pursuant to G.S. 53-20, or
(8) A sale made in the course of liquidation of an insurance company pursuant to Article 17A of Chapter 58 of the General Statutes, or
(8a) A lease, sale, or exchange made pursuant to G.S. 35A-1251(17) or G.S. 35A-1252(14), unless any order thereunder requires, or

(9) Any other sale the procedure for which is specially provided by any statute other than this Article.

(b) As hereafter used in this Article, "sale" means a judicial sale. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 16; 1987, c. 550, s. 12; 1989, c. 473, s. 10.)

Cross References. — As to execution sales, see §§ 1-339.41 through 1-339.71. As to sales under power of sale, see §§ 45-21.1 through 45-21.33. As to enforcement of judgments, and exemptions, see § 1C-1601 et seq.

Editor's Note. — Much of Article 17A of Chapter 58, referred to in this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1989, c. 452, which also enacted an Article 46 of Chapter 58, containing similar provisions to those contained in the repealed sections of Article 17A. Article 46 of Chapter 58 has been recodified as Article 30 of Chapter 58.

CASE NOTES

This Article and § 45-21.1 et seq. Provide Exclusive Means of Foreclosure. — Foreclosure may be by judicial sale pursuant to this Article or, if expressly provided in the deed or mortgage, by power of sale under § 45-21.1 et seq. These statutes provide the exclusive means for foreclosure in North Carolina and it was error for the trial court to provide for foreclosure in any other manner. Wolfe v. Wolfe, 64 N.C. App. 249, 307 S.E.2d 400 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 156, 311 S.E.2d 297 (1984).

§ 1-339.2. Application of Part 1.

The provisions of Part 1 of this Article apply to both public and private sales except where otherwise indicated. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.3. Application of Article to sale ordered by clerk; by judge; authority to fix procedural details.

(a) The procedure prescribed by this Article applies to all sales ordered by a clerk of the superior court.

(b) The procedure prescribed by this Article applies to all sales ordered by a judge of the superior or district court, except that the judge having jurisdiction may, upon a finding and a recital in the order of sale of the necessity or advisability thereof, vary the procedure from that herein prescribed, but not inconsistently with G.S. 1-339.6 restricting the place of sale of real property, and not inconsistently with G.S. 1-339.27(a) and G.S. 1-339.36 requiring that a resale be ordered when an upset bid is submitted.

(c) The judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction has authority to fix and determine all necessary procedural details with respect to sales in all instances in which this Article fails to make definite provisions as to such procedure. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, ss. 17, 18.)

CASE NOTES

No Power to Refuse to File Order of Confirmation. — The clerk is not authorized under this section or any other statute to refuse to file and maintain in her records a valid order of confirmation. In re Green, 27 N.C. App. 555, 219 S.E.2d 552 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 140, 220 S.E.2d 798 (1976).

§ 1-339.3A. Judge or clerk may order public or private sale.

The judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction has authority in his discretion to determine whether a sale of either real or personal property shall be a public or private sale and whether a public sale of timber shall be by auction or by sealed bid. Any private sale conducted under an order issued prior to July 1, 1955 by a judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction is hereby validated as to the order that the sale be a private sale. (1955, c. 74; 1971, c. 268, s. 18; 1997-83, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1997 amendment, effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to all judicial sales ordered on or after that date, substituted "sale and whether a public sale of timber shall be by auction or by sealed bid" for "sale" following "public or private", and substituted "the sale" for "such sale" following "the order that".

§ 1-339.4. Who may hold sale.

An order of sale may authorize the persons designated below to hold the sale:

(1) In any proceeding, a commissioner specially appointed therefor;
(2) In a proceeding to sell property of a decedent, the administrator, executor or collector of such decedent's estate;
(3) In a proceeding to sell property of a minor, the guardian of such minor's estate;
(4) In a proceeding to sell property of an incompetent, the guardian or trustee of such incompetent's estate;
(5) In a proceeding to sell property of an absent or missing person, the administrator, collector, conservator, or guardian of the estate of such absent or missing person;
(6) In a proceeding to foreclose a deed of trust, the trustee named in the deed of trust;
(7) In a receivership proceeding, the receiver;
(8) In a proceeding to sell property of a trust, the trustee.
(9) Repealed by Session Laws 1998-182, s. 13, effective December 1, 1998.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1997-379, s. 7, provides: "Sentencing for an offense committed before the effective date of this act is governed by the laws in effect at the time of the commission of the offense."

Effect of Amendments. — The 1997 amendment, effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, added subdivision (9).

The 1998 amendment, effective December 1, 1998, and applicable to offenses committed, contracts entered, and motor vehicles seized on or after that date, deleted subdivision (9) which read: "In a motor vehicle forfeiture proceeding pursuant to G.S. 20-28.5, the county school board or a person acting on its behalf," and made a stylistic change.

CASE NOTES

Sale as Official Act. — When an officer of the court, designated either by his official or individual name in the order, is commissioned to make a sale of real or personal estate, he acts in his official capacity, and his sureties undertake for the fidelity of his conduct. Kerr v. Brandon, 84 N.C. 128 (1881), decided under former statute relating to partition.

§ 1-339.5. Days on which sale may be held.

A sale may be held on any day except Sunday. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.6. Place of public sale.

(a) Every public sale of real property shall be held in the county where the property is situated unless the property consists of a single tract situated in two or more counties.

(b) A public sale of a single tract of real property situated in two or more counties may be held in any one of the counties in which any part of the tract is situated. For the purposes of this section, a "single tract" means any tract which has a continuous boundary, regardless of whether parts thereof may have been acquired at different times or from different persons, or whether it may have been subdivided into separate units or lots or whether it is sold as a whole or in parts.

(c) A public sale of personal property may be held at any place in the State designated in the order. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.7. Presence of personal property at public sale required.

The person holding a public sale of personal property shall have the property present at the place of sale unless the order of sale provides otherwise as authorized by G.S. 1-339.13(c). (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.8. Public sale of separate tracts in different counties.

(a) When an order of public sale directs the sales of separate tracts of real property situated in different counties, exclusive jurisdiction over the sale remains in the superior or district court of the county where the proceeding, in which the order of sale was issued, is pending, but there shall be a separate advertisement, sale and report of sale with respect to the property in each county. In any such sale proceeding, the clerk of the superior court of the county where the original order of sale was issued, has jurisdiction with respect to the resale of separate tracts of property situated in other counties as well as in the clerk's own county, and when the public sale is by auction an upset bid may be filed only with that clerk, except in those cases where the judge retains resale jurisdiction pursuant to G.S. 1-339.27.

(b) The report of sale with respect to all sales of separate tracts situated in different counties shall be filed with the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the order of sale was issued, and is not required to be filed in any other county.

(c) When the public sale is by auction, the sale and each subsequent resale of each separate tract shall be subject to a separate upset bid; and to the extent deemed necessary by the judge or clerk of court of the county where the original order of sale was issued, the sale of each tract, after an upset bid thereon, shall be treated as a separate sale for the purpose of determining the procedure applicable thereto.

(d) When real property is sold in a county other than the county where the proceeding, in which the sale was ordered, is pending, the person authorized to hold the sale shall cause a certified copy of the order of confirmation to be recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county where such property is situated, and it shall not be necessary for the clerk of court to probate said certified copy of the order of confirmation. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1965, c. 805; 1971, c. 268, ss. 18, 19; 1997-83, ss. 2, 3.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1997 amendment, effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to all judicial sales ordered on or after that date, added "when the public sale is by auction" following "own county, and" in the second sentence of subsection (a); substituted "When the public sale is by auction, the sale" for "The sale" in subsection (c); and made other stylistic changes.

§ 1-339.9. Sale as a whole or in parts.

(a) When real property to be sold consists of separate lots or other units or when personal property consists of more than one article, the judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction may direct specifically

(1) That it be sold as a whole, or

(2) That it be sold in designated parts, or

(3) That it be offered for sale by each method, and then sold by the method which produces the highest price.

(b) When real property to be sold has not been subdivided but is of such nature that it may be advantageously subdivided for sale, the judge or clerk having jurisdiction may authorize the subdivision thereof and the dedication to the public of such portions thereof as are necessary or advisable for public highways, streets, alleys, or other public purposes.

(c) When an order of sale of such real or personal property as is described in subsection (a) of this section makes no specific provision for the sale of the property as a whole or in parts, the person authorized to make the sale has authority in his discretion to sell the property by whichever method described in subsection (a) of this section he deems most advantageous. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 18.)

§ 1-339.10. Bond of person holding sale.

(a) Whenever a commissioner specially appointed or a trustee in a deed of trust is ordered to sell property, the judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction

(1) May in any case require the commissioner or trustee, before receiving the proceeds of the sale, to furnish bond to cover such proceeds, and

(2) Shall require the commissioner or trustee to furnish such bond when the commissioner or trustee is to hold the proceeds of the sale other than for immediate disbursement upon confirmation of the sale.

(b) Whenever any administrator or collector of a decedent's estate, or guardian or trustee of a minor's or incompetent's estate, or administrator, collector, conservator or guardian of an absent or missing person's estate, is ordered to sell property, the judge or clerk having jurisdiction shall require such fiduciary, before receiving the proceeds of the sale, to furnish bond or to increase his then existing bond, to cover such proceeds.

(c) Whenever an executor or trustee of a testamentary trust is ordered to sell real property, the judge or clerk having jurisdiction shall require such executor or trustee of a testamentary trust, before receiving the proceeds of the sale, to furnish bond to cover such proceeds, unless the will provides otherwise, in which case the judge or clerk may require such bond.

(d) Whenever a receiver is ordered to sell real property, the judge having jurisdiction may, when he deems it advisable, require the receiver to furnish bond, or to increase his then existing bond, to cover such proceeds.

(e) The bond required by this section need not be furnished when the property is to be sold by a duly authorized trust company acting as commissioner or fiduciary.

(f) The bond shall be executed by one or more sureties and shall be subject to the approval of the judge or clerk having jurisdiction.

(g) If the bond is to be executed by personal sureties, the amount of the bond shall be double the amount of the proceeds of the sale to be received by the commissioner or fiduciary, if such amount can be determined in advance, and, if not, such amount as the judge or clerk may determine to be approximately double the amount of the proceeds to be received. If the bond is to be executed by a duly authorized surety company, the amount of the bond shall be one and one-fourth times the amount of the proceeds determined as set out in this subsection.

(h) The bonds shall be payable to the State of North Carolina for the use of the parties in interest. A bond furnished by a commissioner or by a trustee in a deed of trust shall be conditioned that the principal in the bond shall comply with the orders of the court made in the proceeding with respect to the funds received and shall properly account for the proceeds of the sale received by him. A bond furnished by any other fiduciary shall be conditioned as required by law for the original bond required, or which might have been required, of such fiduciary at the time of his qualification.

(i) The premium on any bond furnished pursuant to this section is a part of the costs of the proceeding, to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 18; 1993, c. 377, s. 3.)

§ 1-339.11. Compensation of person holding sale.

(a) If the person holding a sale is a commissioner specially appointed or a trustee in a deed of trust, the judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction shall fix the amount of his compensation and order the payment thereof out of the proceeds of the sale.

(b) If the person holding a sale is any other person, the judge or clerk may, but is not required to, fix his compensation and order the payment thereof out of the proceeds of the sale; when compensation is not fixed in this manner, compensation may be fixed and paid in the usual manner provided with respect to such fiduciary for receiving and disbursing funds. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 18.)

§ 1-339.12. Clerk's authority to compel report or accounting; contempt proceeding.

Whenever any person fails to file any report or account, as provided by this Article, or files an incorrect or incomplete report or account, the clerk of the superior court, having jurisdiction, on his own motion or on motion of any interested party, may issue an order directing such person to file a correct and complete report or account within twenty days after service of the order on him. If such person fails to comply with the order, the clerk may issue an attachment against him for contempt, and may commit him to jail until he files such correct and complete report or account. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

Part 2. Procedure for Public Sales of Real and Personal Property.

§ 1-339.13. Public sale; order of sale.

(a) Whenever a public sale is ordered, the order of sale shall

(1) Designate the person authorized to hold the sale;

(2) Direct that the property be sold at public auction to the highest bidder or, in the case of a sale of timber, direct that the timber be sold to the highest bidder and specify whether the sale is to be by public auction or by sealed bid;
(3) Describe real property to be sold, by reference or otherwise, sufficiently to identify it;
(4) Describe personal property to be sold, by reference or otherwise, sufficiently to indicate its nature and quantity;
(5) Designate, consistently with G.S. 1-339.6, the county and the place therein at which the sale is to be held;
(6) Prescribe the terms of sale, specifying the amount of the cash deposit, if any, to be made by the highest bidder at the sale; and
(7) If the sale is to be a sale of timber by sealed bid, specify:
a. The minimum number of bids that must be submitted, which shall not be less than three, and
b. The time at which any cash deposit required of the highest bidder must be made, which shall not be more than three business days after the date on which the sealed bids are opened.

(b) The order of public sale may also, but is not required to
(1) State the method by which the property shall be sold, pursuant to G.S. 1-339.9;
(2) Direct any posting of the notice of sale or any advertisement of the sale, in addition to that required by G.S. 1-339.17 in the case of real property or G.S. 1-339.18 in the case of personal property, which the judge or clerk of the superior court deems advantageous; and
(3) Specify the number of appraisals to be obtained pursuant to G.S. 1-339.13A.

(c) The order of public sale may provide that personal property need not be present at the place of sale when the nature, condition or use of the property is such that the judge or clerk ordering the sale deems it impractical or inadvisable to require the presence of the property at the sale. In such event, the order shall provide that reasonable opportunity be afforded prospective bidders to inspect the property prior to the sale, and that notice as to the time and place for inspection shall be set out in the notice of sale. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1997-83, ss. 4, 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1997 amendment, effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to all judicial sales ordered on or after that date, in subdivision (a)(2) substituted the present language for "Direct that the property be sold at public auction to the highest bidder"; added subdivisions (a)(7) and (b)(3) and made related changes.

§ 1-339.13A. Public sale of timber by sealed bid; appraisal; bid procedure.

(a) When a sale of timber by sealed bid is ordered, the person holding the sale, before giving notice of the sale, shall:
(1) Obtain one or more appraisals of the timber to be sold;
(2) Determine the place at which and the manner and form in which sealed bids should be submitted;
(3) Determine the first date on which sealed bids will be accepted, which shall not be less than five days after the date on which the notice of sale is first published pursuant to G.S. 1-339.17; and
(4) Determine the date, time, and place at which sealed bids will be opened.

(b) Each appraisal obtained pursuant to subsection (a) of this section shall be made by a registered professional forester or other person qualified by training and experience to appraise the timber to be sold. Copies of all appraisals obtained pursuant to this section shall be included in the report required under G.S. 1-339.24. A person conducting an appraisal pursuant to this section, including a partnership, corporation, company, or other business of the appraiser, may not submit a bid on the timber which is the subject of the appraisal. An appraisal conducted pursuant to this section shall remain confidential until the appraisal is filed with the report of sale pursuant to G.S. 1-339.24. The contents of the appraisal shall not be divulged by the appraiser to any person other than the person holding the sale nor may the appraiser conduct an appraisal of the timber for any other person until after the sale is confirmed.

(c) All sealed bids received on or after the first date set for submitting bids and, at or before the time set for opening the bids, shall be opened publicly at that time at the place set for doing so. If the minimum number of bids is received and there is only one highest bid, that bid shall be announced at that time; the highest bidder is the purchaser, and all bidders shall immediately be notified of that fact. If the minimum number of bids is not received, or if two or more bids in the same amount are the highest bids, that fact shall be announced at that time, and all bidders shall immediately be notified of that fact; the person holding the sale shall then obtain a new order of sale. (1997-83, s. 6.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1997-83, s. 6, made this section effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to all judicial sales ordered on or after that date.

§ 1-339.14. Public sale; judge's approval of clerk's order of sale.

An order of public sale of personal property in which a minor or incompetent has an interest, which is made by a clerk of the superior court, shall not be effective, except in the case of perishable property as provided by G.S. 1-339.19, unless and until such order is approved by the resident judge or the judge regularly holding the courts of the district. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.17. Public sale; posting and publishing notice of sale of real property.

(a) The notice of public sale of real property shall
(1) Be posted, in the area designated by the clerk of superior court for the posting of notices in the county in which the property is situated, for thirty days immediately preceding the sale,
(2) And in addition thereto,

§ 1-339.18. Public sale; posting notice of sale of personal property.

(a) The notice of public sale of personal property, except in the case of perishable property as provided by G.S. 1-339.19, shall be posted, in the area designated by the clerk of superior court for the posting of notices, in the county in which the sale is to be held, for ten days immediately preceding the date of sale.

(b) In addition to the foregoing, the notice of public sale shall be otherwise advertised as may be required by the judge or clerk of court pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 1-339.13(b)(2). (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 18; 1997-83, s. 9.)

§ 1-339.19. Public sale; exception; perishable property.

If personal property to be sold at public sale is determined by the judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction to be perishable property because subject to rapid deterioration, he may order the sale thereof to be held at such time and place and upon such notice to be given in such manner and for such length of time as he deems advisable. The order of sale of such perishable property of a minor or incompetent when made by the clerk need not be approved by the judge. Confirmation of any sale of such perishable property is not necessary unless required by the order of sale. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 18.)

§ 1-339.20. Public sale; postponement of sale.

(a) A person authorized to hold a public sale by auction may postpone the sale to a day certain not later than six days, exclusive of Sunday, after the original date for the sale, and a person authorized to hold a public sale of timber by sealed bid may postpone the time for submitting and opening bids to a date, time, and place certain not later than six days, exclusive of Sunday, after the original date for the opening of bids:

(1) When there are no bidders, or
(2) When, in his judgment, the number of prospective bidders at the sale is substantially decreased by inclement weather or by any casualty, or
(3) When there are so many other sales advertised to be held at the same time and place as to make it inexpedient and impracticable, in his judgment, to hold the sale on that day, or
(4) When he is unable to hold the sale because of illness or for other good reason, or
(5) When other good cause exists.

(b) Upon postponement of public sale the person authorized to hold the sale shall personally, or through his agent or attorney

(1) At the time and place advertised for the sale or for the opening of sealed bids, publicly announce the postponement thereof;
(2) On the same day, attach to or enter on the original notice of sale or a copy thereof posted, as provided in G.S. 1-339.17 in the case of real property or G.S. 1-339.18 in the case of personal property, a notice of the postponement; and
(3) In the case of a public sale of timber by sealed bid, give notice of postponement to each person who submitted a bid.

(c) The notice of postponement shall:

(4) Be signed by the person authorized to hold the sale, or by his agent or attorney.

(d) If a public sale is not held at the time fixed therefor and is not postponed as provided by this section, or if a postponed sale is not held at the time fixed therefor, the person authorized to make the sale shall report the facts with respect thereto to the judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction, who shall thereupon make an order for the public sale of the property to be held at such time and place and upon such notice to be given in such manner and for such length of time as he deems advisable. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 18; 1997-83, ss. 10-12.)

§ 1-339.21. Public sale by auction; time of sale.

(a) A public sale by auction shall begin at the time designated in the notice of sale or as soon thereafter as practicable, but not later than one hour after the time fixed therefor unless it is delayed by other sales held at the same place.

(b) No public sale by auction shall commence before 10:00 o'clock A.M. or after 4:00 o'clock P.M.

(c) No public sale by auction shall continue after 4:00 o'clock P.M., except that in cities or towns of more than 5,000 inhabitants, as shown by the most recent federal census, sales of personal property may continue until 10:00 o'clock P.M. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1997-83, s. 13.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1997 amendment, effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to all judicial sales ordered on or after that date, in the catchline and in subsections (a), (b), and (c) added "by auction" following "public sale".

§ 1-339.22. Public sale by auction; continuance of uncompleted sale.

A public sale by auction commenced but not completed within the time allowed by G.S. 1-339.21 shall be continued by the person holding the sale to a designated time between 10:00 o'clock A.M. and 4:00 o'clock P.M. the next following day, other than Sunday. In case a continuance becomes necessary, the person holding the sale shall publicly announce the time to which the sale is continued. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1997-83, s. 14.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1997 amendment, effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to all judicial sales ordered on or after that date, in the catchline and text added "by auction" following "public sale"; and substituted "a" for "such" preceding "continuance becomes necessary".

§ 1-339.23. Public sale; when confirmation of sale of personal property necessary; delivery of property; bill of sale.

(a) When any person interested as a creditor, legatee, distributee, or otherwise, in the proceeds of a public sale of personal property, objects at the sale to the completion of the sale of any article of property on account of the insufficiency of the amount bid, title to such property shall not pass and possession of the property shall not be delivered until the sale of such property is reported and is confirmed by the judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction; but such objection to the completion of the sale of any article of property shall not prevent the completion of the sales of articles of property to which no objection is made where the same have been separately sold. When a judge or clerk having jurisdiction fails or refuses to confirm a sale of property which has thus been objected to, the procedure for a new sale of such property, including a new order of sale, shall be the same as if no such attempted sale has been held. This subsection shall not apply to perishable property sold pursuant to G.S. 1-339.19.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (a), the person holding a public sale of personal property shall deliver the property to the purchaser immediately upon compliance by the purchaser with the terms of the sale.

(c) The person holding a public sale may execute and deliver a bill of sale or other muniment of title for any personal property sold, and, upon application of the purchaser, shall do so when required by the judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 18.)

§ 1-339.24. Public sale; report of sale; when final as to personal property.

(a) The person holding a public sale shall, within five days after the date of the sale if the sale was by auction, or within five days after the date on which bids were opened if the sale was a sale of timber by sealed bid, file a report thereof with the clerk of the superior court of the county where the proceeding for the sale is pending.

(b) The report shall be signed by the person authorized to hold the sale, or by his agent or attorney and shall show

(1) The title of the action or proceeding;

(2) The authority under which the person making the sale acted;

(3) If the sale was by public auction, the date, hour and place of the sale;

(3a) If the sale was a sale of timber by sealed bid, the date, time, and place at which the sealed bids were opened, the number of bids received, and the amount of each bid;

(4) A description of real property sold, by reference or otherwise, sufficient to identify it, and, if sold in parts, a description of each part so sold; and

(5) A description of personal property sold, sufficient to indicate the nature and quantity of the property sold to each purchaser;

(6) The names of the purchasers;

(7) The price at which the property, or each part thereof, was sold and that this price was the highest bid therefor; and

(8) The date of the report.

(c) The report of sale of personal property, when confirmation of the sale is not required, may include such additional information as is required by G.S. 1-339.31 or G.S. 1-339.32, whichever is applicable, and when such additional information is included, the report shall constitute the final report of sale of personal property. If the report does not include the additional information required by G.S. 1-339.31 or G.S. 1-339.32, the final report required by those sections shall be subsequently filed.

(d) The report of a sale of timber by sealed bid shall include the information required by G.S. 1-339.13A(b) and G.S. 1-339.17(c1). (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1997-83, ss. 15-17.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1997 amendment, effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to all judicial sales ordered on or after that date, substituted "sale if the sale was by auction, or within five days after the date on which bids were opened if the sale was a sale of timber by sealed bid" for "sale" following "date of the" in subsection (a); in subdivision (b)(3) substituted the present language for "The date, hour and place of the sale"; added subdivision (b)(3a); in subdivision (b)(7) substituted "this price" or "such price" following "sold and that"; and added subsection (d).

§ 1-339.25. Public sale; upset bid on real property; compliance bond.

(a) An upset bid is an advanced, increased or raised bid in a public sale by auction whereby a person offers to purchase real property theretofore sold for an amount exceeding the reported sale price by a minimum of five percent (5%) thereof, but in any event with a minimum increase of seven hundred fifty dollars ($750.00). An upset bid shall be made by delivering to the clerk of superior court, with whom the report of the sale was filed, a deposit in cash or by certified check or cashier's check satisfactory to the clerk in an amount greater than or equal to five percent (5%) of the amount of the upset bid but in no event less than seven hundred fifty dollars ($750.00). The deposit required by this section shall be filed with the clerk of the superior court, with whom the report of sale was filed, by the close of normal business hours on the tenth day after the filing of the report of sale, and if the tenth day shall fall upon a Sunday or legal holiday or upon a day in which the office of the clerk is not open for the regular dispatch of its business, the deposit may be made on the day following when the office is open for the regular dispatch of its business. An upset bid need not be in writing, and the timely deposit with the clerk of the required amount, together with an indication to the clerk as to the sale to which it is applicable, is sufficient to constitute the upset bid, subject to the provisions of subsection (b) of this section.

(b) The clerk of the superior court may require a person submitting an upset bid also to deposit a cash bond, or, in lieu thereof at the option of the bidder, a surety bond, approved by the clerk, conditioned on compliance with the upset bid. The amount of such bond shall not exceed the amount of the upset bid less the amount of the required deposit.

(c) The clerk of the superior court may in the order of resale require the highest bidder at a resale had pursuant to an upset bid to deposit with the clerk a cash bond, or, in lieu thereof at the option of the bidder, a surety bond, approved by the clerk, conditioned on compliance with his bid. The bond shall be in such amount as the clerk deems adequate, but in no case greater than the amount of the bid of the person being required to furnish the bond.

(d) A compliance bond, such as is provided for by subsections (b) and (c), shall be payable to the State of North Carolina for the use of the parties in interest and shall be conditioned on the principal obligor's compliance with his bid.

(e) The provisions of this section do not apply to public sales of timber by sealed bid. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1963, c. 858; 1967, c. 979, s. 1; 1997-83, ss. 18, 19; 1997-119, s. 1; 1997-456, s. 28.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1967, c. 979, which inserted "or by certified check or cashier's check satisfactory to the said clerk" in the first sentence of subsection (a), provided in s. 4: "This act does not amend the Uniform Commercial Code as enacted in this State. The application of statutes herein included or amended insofar as they relate to transactions subject to the Uniform Commercial Code as enacted in this State shall be in accordance with Article 10 of Chapter 25, of the General Statutes."

Session Laws 1997-119, s. 3 provides that this act becomes effective January 1, 1998, and applies to judicial sales when the original order of sale was issued on or after that date and to execution sales when the execution was originally issued on or after that date. This act shall not apply to any judicial sale when the original order of sale has been issued prior to the effective date of this act or to any execution sale held pursuant to any execution originally issued prior to the effective date of this act.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1997-83, ss. 18, 19, effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to all judicial sales ordered on or after that date, in subsection (a) added "in a public sale by auction" following "or raised bid", substituted "the increase" for "such increase" following "increase of $25", substituted "the report; the deposit" for "such report; such deposit" following "the filing of", and added "of this section" at the end; and added subsection (e).

Session Laws, 1997-119, s. 1, effective January 1, 1998, rewrote the first sentence and added the second and third sentences of subsection (a). See editor's note for applicability.

Session Laws 1997-456, s. 28, effective January 1, 1998, in subsection (a) deleted "the the" at the beginning of the second sentence preceding "An upset", and substituted "the" for "said" preceding "office is open" near the end of the third sentence.

CASE NOTES

Upset Bid to Be in Amount Specified. — An upset bid in a private sale of real property shall be submitted to the court within 10 days after the filing of the report of sale, and shall be in an amount specified by this section. Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 260 N.C. 702, 133 S.E.2d 681 (1963).

Advance Bid Held Not to Meet Requirements of Section. — An advance bid entered by the owners of a minority interest in the land, and not supported by a cash deposit or bond, but only by the interest of the advance bidders in the land, which interests were subject to deeds of trust, judgments and tax liens in an undisclosed amount, did not meet, at least technically, the requirements of this section for an advance bid. Galloway v. Hester, 249 N.C. 275, 106 S.E.2d 241 (1958).

Superior court did not err in confirming the private sale to earlier bidder, and it properly exercised its discretion by not considering the later bid; neither later bidder's deposit with estate attorney nor estate attorney's telephone notice to the clerk amounted to an upset bid because it was not a timely deposit with the clerk of the required amount, together with an indication to the clerk as to the sale to which it was applicable. In re Estate of Kessinger, 94 N.C. App. 191, 379 S.E.2d 662 (1989).

Requiring Cash Bond in Full Amount of Bid Inhibits Maximum Bid Policy. — The general policy of the law favors maximum bidding at judicial sales; and requiring a cash bond in the full amount of the bid, rather than the 5% or so usually deposited under subsection (a) of this section, obviously tends to inhibit bidding when a substantial amount has already been bid. Bomer v. Campbell, 70 N.C. App. 137, 318 S.E.2d 841 (1984).

Discretion to Accept Cash Bid. — Whether to accept a cash bid or order another sale, thus releasing the cash bidder, calls for the exercise of judicial discretion. Galloway v. Hester, 249 N.C. 275, 106 S.E.2d 241 (1958).

Discretionary Power of Clerk to Require Cash Bond of Highest Bidder. — Implicit in the authority that subsection (c) of this section gives clerks of the superior court to require the highest bidder at a resale of property to deposit a cash bond is the requirement that there be some justifiable basis for such an order; otherwise, the discretionary power that the statute gives clerks in such matters would be unbridled and subject to neither legal review nor remedy. Bomer v. Campbell, 70 N.C. App. 137, 318 S.E.2d 841 (1984).

Refusal of court to order another sale upon an upset bid of owners of the minority interest in the land, secured not by cash or bond, but only by their interest in the land, which was subject to liens in an undisclosed amount, would be affirmed as a proper exercise of judicial discretion by the court. Galloway v. Hester, 249 N.C. 275, 106 S.E.2d 241 (1958).

After the time provided by this section for the placing of an upset bid has expired and after the order of confirmation has been signed by the clerk and approved by a superior court judge, the clerk has no authority to accept an upset bid, and in the absence of findings of fraud, mistake or collusion a superior court judge has no authority to set aside the order of confirmation and to order a resale of the property. In re Green, 27 N.C. App. 555, 219 S.E.2d 552 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 140, 220 S.E.2d 798 (1976).

§ 1-339.26. Public sale by auction; separate upset bids when real property sold in parts; subsequent procedure.

When real property is sold at public sale by auction in parts, as provided by G.S. 1-339.9, the sale, and each subsequent resale, of any part shall be subject to a separate upset bid; and, to the extent the judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction deems advisable, the sale of each part shall thereafter be treated as a separate sale for the purpose of determining the procedure applicable thereto. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 18; 1997-83, s. 20.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1997 amendment, effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to all judicial sales ordered on or after that date, added "by auction" following "public sale" in the catchline and text, and deleted "such" twice preceding "part shall".

§ 1-339.27. Public sale by auction; resale of real property; jurisdiction; procedure.

(a) When in a public sale by auction an upset bid is submitted to the clerk of the superior court, together with a compliance bond if one is required, a resale shall be ordered.

(b) In any case in which a judge has jurisdiction of the original public sale by auction, he may provide by order that jurisdiction is retained for resale purposes, and in that case when an upset bid is submitted, the judge having jurisdiction shall make the order of resale. In all cases where the judge does not retain jurisdiction of a public sale by auction for resale purposes, and in all cases where a public sale by auction is originally ordered by a clerk, the clerk shall make the order of resale and shall have jurisdiction of the proceeding for resale purposes. Whenever the original order of public sale by auction is made by the judge, the terms of any resale ordered by the clerk shall be consistent with terms of the original order, and the final order of confirmation shall be made by the judge having jurisdiction of the proceeding.

(c) Notice of any resale to be held because of an upset bid shall:

(1) Be posted, in the area designated by the clerk of superior court for the posting of notices in the county in which the property is situated, for fifteen days immediately preceding the sale,

(2) And in addition thereto,

a. If a newspaper qualified for legal advertising is published in the county, the notice shall be published in such a newspaper once a week for at least two successive weeks, but

b. If no newspaper qualified for legal advertising is published in the county, the notice shall be posted at three other public places in the county for fifteen days immediately preceding the sale.

(d) When the notice of resale is published in a newspaper,

(1) The period from the date of the first publication to the date of the last publication, both dates inclusive, shall not be less than eight days, including Sunday, and

(2) The date of the last publication shall not be more than seven days preceding the date of sale.

(e) When the real property to be resold is situated in more than one county, the provisions of subsection (c) of this section shall be complied with in each county in which any part of the property is situated.

(f) The person making a resale shall report the resale in the same manner as required by G.S. 1-339.24.

(g) When there is no bid at a resale other than the upset bid resulting in such resale, the person who made the upset bid is deemed the highest bidder at the resale. Such sale remains subject to a further upset bid and resale pursuant to this Article.

(h) Resales may be had as often as upset bids are submitted in compliance with this Article.

(i) Except as otherwise provided in this section, all the provisions of this Article applicable to an original sale are applicable to resales.

(j) The provisions of this section do not apply to public sales of timber by sealed bid. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1997-83, ss. 21-25.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1997 amendment, effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to all judicial sales ordered on or after that date, substituted "sale by auction" for "sale" in the section catchline; inserted "in a public sale by auction" near the beginning of subsection (a); in subsection (b) substituted "public sale by auction" for "sale" following "of the original", and substituted "that case" for "such case" following "purposes, and in", and substituted "a public sale by auction for" for "a sale for" throughout the subsection; in subsection (c) added a colon at the end; in subdivision (c)(1) substituted "in the area designated by the clerk of superior court for the posting of notices" for "at the courthouse door" preceding "in the county", and in subdivision (c)(2)b. substituted "If no newspaper qualified for legal advertising" for "If no such newspaper" at the beginning; and added subsection (j).

Upon the filing of an upset bid under § 1-339.36(a), this section applies, and to all intents and purposes the sale thereafter becomes a public sale and is subject to the statutory requirements of resale. Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 260 N.C. 702, 133 S.E.2d 681 (1963).

When an upset bid in a private sale is submitted to the court, a resale shall be ordered; a notice of the resale shall be posted at the courthouse door for 15 days immediately preceding the sale and published in a newspaper once a week for two successive weeks. Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 260 N.C. 702, 133 S.E.2d 681 (1963).

§ 1-339.28. Public sale; confirmation of sale.

(a) No public sale of real property may be consummated until confirmed as follows:

(1) If a public sale is ordered by a judge of the Superior Court Division, it may thereafter be confirmed by a resident superior court judge of the district or a superior court judge regularly holding the courts of the district.

(2) If a public sale is ordered by a judge of the District Court Division, it may thereafter be confirmed by the judge so ordering, the chief district judge, or any district judge authorized by the chief judge to hear motions and enter interlocutory orders.

(3) If a public sale is ordered by a clerk of court, it may thereafter be confirmed by the clerk of court so ordering.

(b) No public sale of real property of a minor or incompetent originally ordered by a clerk may be consummated until confirmed both by the clerk and by a resident superior court judge of, or a judge regularly holding the courts of, the district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a).

(c) No public sale of real property sold at public auction may be confirmed until the time for submitting an upset bid, pursuant to G.S. 1-339.25, has expired.

(d) Confirmation of the public sale of personal property is necessary only in the case set out in G.S. 1-339.23(a), or when the order of sale provides for such confirmation.

(e) No public sale of timber sold by sealed bid shall be confirmed until the court determines that the highest bid is an adequate price for the timber sold and that sale to the highest bidder is in the best interest of the person or estate for whom the timber is being sold. In so doing, the court may consider any of the following factors:

(1) The appraisals obtained by the person who conducted the sale;

(2) The number and amounts of the other bids received;

(3) Comparable sales of similar timber within the relevant time period;

(4) Short-term market factors that depressed the price at the time of the sale;

(5) The likelihood of significantly increasing the price through another sale;
(6) The additional cost of conducting another sale;
(7) The effect on the person or estate for whom the timber is being sold of the delay that would result from conducting another sale; and
(8) Any other factors in evidence that the court considers relevant. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 20; 1997-83, ss. 26-28.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1997 amendment, effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to all judicial sales ordered on or after that date, substituted "a resident superior court judge of, or a judge regularly holding the courts of, the district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a)" for "the resident judge of the district or the judge regularly holding the courts of the district" at the end of subsection (b); added "sold at public auction" following "of real property" in subsection (c); and added subsection (e).

CASE NOTES

Power of Court to Reject Bid. — The court in exercising its sound discretion may reject a bid at any time before confirmation. In re Green, 27 N.C. App. 555, 219 S.E.2d 552 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 140, 220 S.E.2d 798 (1976).

Before confirmation, the prospective purchaser has no vested interest in the property. His bid is but an offer subject to the approval of the court. In re Green, 27 N.C. App. 555, 219 S.E.2d 552 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 140, 220 S.E.2d 798 (1976).

Upon confirmation, the sale becomes final, and the vested interest of the purchaser is not lightly to be put aside. In re Green, 27 N.C. App. 555, 219 S.E.2d 552 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 140, 220 S.E.2d 798 (1976).

When Sale May Be Set Aside After Confirmation. — After confirmation of a judicial sale, the purchaser becomes the equitable owner of the property, and the sale may then be set aside only for mistake, fraud or collusion. In re Green, 27 N.C. App. 555, 219 S.E.2d 552 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 140, 220 S.E.2d 798 (1976).

The power of a guardian to make disposition of his ward's estate is very carefully regulated, and the sale is not allowed except by order of court, which order must have the supervision, approval and confirmation of the resident judge of the district or the judge regularly holding the courts of the district. Pike v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 274 N.C. 1, 161 S.E.2d 453 (1968).

When a guardian of an incompetent person sells real property under order of court, he is merely an agent of the court, and the sale is not consummated until it is confirmed by the resident judge or the judge regularly holding courts in the district. When the sale is originally ordered by the clerk, his confirmation is also required. This confirmation represents the consent of the court and is granted or refused in the discretion of the court. Pike v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 274 N.C. 1, 161 S.E.2d 453 (1968).

Subdivision (a)(3) gives the clerk of court original jurisdiction over public sales ordered by such clerk. Brown v. Miller, 63 N.C. App. 694, 306 S.E.2d 502 (1983), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 310 N.C. 476, 312 S.E.2d 882 (1984).

As to confirmation under former statutes, see Thompson v. Cox, 53 N.C. 311 (1860); Evans v. Singletary, 63 N.C. 205 (1869); Shearin v. Hunter, 72 N.C. 493 (1875); Foushee v. ## § 1-339.29. Public sale; real property; deed; order for possession.

(a) Upon confirmation of a public sale of real property, the person authorized to hold the sale, or such other person as may be designated by the judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction, shall prepare and tender to the purchaser a duly executed deed for the property sold and, upon compliance by the purchaser with the terms of sale, shall deliver the deed to the purchaser.

(b) A person executing a deed to real property being conveyed pursuant to a public sale may recite in the deed, in addition to the usual provisions, substantially as follows

(1) The authority for making the sale,
(2) The title of the action or proceeding in which the sale was had,
(3) The name of the person authorized to make the sale,
(4) The fact that the sale was duly advertised,
(5) The date of the sale,
(6) The name of the highest bidder and the price bid,
(7) That the sale has been confirmed,
(8) That the terms of the sale have been complied with, and
(9) That the person executing the deed has been authorized to execute it.

(c) The judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction of the proceeding in which the property is sold may grant an order for possession of real property so sold and conveyed, as against all persons in possession who are parties to the proceeding.

(d) An order for possession granted pursuant to the preceding subsection shall be directed to the sheriff, shall authorize him to remove the party or parties in possession, and their personal property, from the premises and to put the purchaser in possession, and shall be executed in accordance with the procedure for executing a writ or order for possession in a summary ejectment proceeding under G.S. 42-36.2. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 18; 1987, c. 627, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.30. Public sale; failure of bidder to make cash deposit or to comply with bid; resale.

(a) If an order of public sale by auction requires the highest bidder to make a cash deposit at the sale, and he fails to make the required deposit, the person holding the sale shall at the same time and place again offer the property for sale.

(a1) If an order of public sale of timber by sealed bid requires the highest bidder to make a cash deposit and the bidder fails to make the required deposit within the time specified in the order, the judge or clerk having jurisdiction may direct that the timber be sold to the person who submitted the next highest bid or may order a resale. The procedure for a resale is the same in every respect as is provided by this Article in the case of an original public sale.

(b) When the highest bidder at a public sale of personal property not required to be confirmed fails to make the cash payment, if any, required by the terms of the sale, the person holding the sale shall at the same time and place again offer the property for sale. In the event no other bid is received, a new sale may be advertised in the regular manner provided by this Article for an original sale.

(c) When the highest bidder at a public sale of personal property required to be confirmed fails to comply with his bid within ten days after notice given by the person holding the sale or after a bona fide attempt to give such notice that the sale has been confirmed, the judge or clerk having jurisdiction may order a resale. The procedure for such resale is the same in every respect as is provided by this Article in the case of an original public sale of personal property.

(d) When the highest bidder at a public sale or resale of real property by auction fails to comply with his bid within ten days after the tender to him of a deed for the property or after a bona fide attempt to tender the deed, the judge or clerk having jurisdiction may order a resale. The procedure for a resale of real property is the same in every respect as is provided by this Article in the case of an original public sale of real property except that the provisions of G.S. 1-339.27 (c), (d) and (e) apply with respect to the posting and publishing of the notice of the resale.

(d1) When the highest bidder at a public sale or resale of timber by sealed bid fails to comply with his bid within 10 days after the tender to him of a deed for the timber or after a bona fide attempt to tender a timber deed, the judge or clerk having jurisdiction may direct that the timber be sold to the person who submitted the next highest bid or may order a resale. The procedure for a resale is the same in every respect as is provided by this Article in the case of an original public sale.

(e) A defaulting bidder at any sale or resale is liable on his bid, and in case a resale is had because of his default, he shall remain liable to the extent that the final sale price is less than his bid, and for all costs of the resale or resales.

(f) Nothing in this section deprives any person of any other remedy against the defaulting bidder. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1997-83, ss. 29-33.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1997 amendment, effective December 1, 1997, and applicable to all judicial sales ordered on or after that date, in subsection (a) substituted "by auction" following "of public sale"; added subsections (a1) and (d1); in subsection (d) inserted "by auction" following "of real property"; in subsection (e) substituted "bid, and for all costs of the" for "bid plus all costs of such"; and made stylistic changes in subsections (a), (d), and (e).

CASE NOTES

The doctrine of caveat emptor applies to a judicial sale, and while the court has equity jurisdiction to protect a purchaser from imposition because of fraud or mistake, where the evidence disclosed that the parties had equal opportunity to discover the facts, that the description set out in the petition for sale was of record for more than a year prior to the bid, and that the purchaser was familiar with the property and did not ask for a survey, such purchaser could not seek relief from his bid on the ground of shortage in acreage or lack of access to the property. Walton v. Cagle, 269 N.C. 177, 152 S.E.2d 312 (1967).

The commissioner is required by this section to tender a deed for the property or to make a bona fide attempt to tender such deed. Walton v. Cagle, 269 N.C. 177, 152 S.E.2d 312 (1967).

Tender Held Sufficient. — Where the highest bidder was served with notice on 27 June 1966 that the commissioner would move on 12 July 1966 that the highest bidder comply with the terms of sale, this indicated that the commissioner, who was under order of court to convey upon receipt of the purchase price, stood ready, willing and able to comply with the terms of the order. No further tender was necessary when the bidder failed to comply, since the law does not require the doing of a vain thing. Walton v. Cagle, 269 N.C. 177, 152 S.E.2d 312 (1967).

Order Held Not a Void Conditional Judgment. — Order issued in a judicial sale proceeding, to the effect that upon refusal of the last and highest bidder to comply with his bid the land would be resold and that the defaulting bidder would be held liable for the costs and for any difference between the final sale price and his bid, was not a void conditional judgment, since it was unequivocal and the determination of the liability was a simple matter of arithmetic and an administrative duty; such order was a final judgment deciding the matter on its merits without need for further direction of the court. Walton v. Cagle, 269 N.C. 177, 152 S.E.2d 312 (1967).

Prejudgment Interest on Bid. — Executor, after a series of resales arising from defendant's failure to comply with his bid at a judicial sale under this section, was entitled to prejudgment interest on defendant's full $125,000.00 bid. Parker v. Lippard, 87 N.C. App. 487, 361 S.E.2d 395 (1987).

Award of Attorneys' Fees Held Improper. — Given the statute's apparent purpose to assess a defaulting bidder with resale "expenses," defendant's liability for "costs of resale" under subsection (e) did not entitle the court to award the executor attorneys' fees incurred after defendant's default. Parker v. Lippard, 87 N.C. App. 43, 359 S.E.2d 492, modified and aff'd on rehearing, 87 N.C. App. 487, 361 S.E.2d 395 (1987).

For cases decided under former statutes relating to partition sales and sales of lands of decedents' estates, see Burgin v. Burgin, 82 N.C. 196 (1880); Hudson v. Coble, 97 N.C. 260, 1 S.E. 688 (1887); Wooten v. Cunningham, 171 N.C. 123, 88 S.E. 1 (1916); Lyman v. Southern Coal Co., 183 N.C. 581, 112 S.E. 242 (1922).

§ 1-339.31. Public sale; report of commissioner or trustee in deed of trust.

(a) A commissioner or a trustee in a deed of trust, authorized pursuant to G.S. 1-339.4 to hold a public sale of property, shall, in addition to all other reports required by this Article, file with the clerk of the superior court an account of his receipts and disbursements as follows:

(1) When the sale is for cash, a final report shall be filed within thirty days after receipt of the proceeds of the sale;

(2) When the sale is wholly or partly on time and the commissioner or trustee is not required to collect deferred payments, a final report shall be filed within thirty days after receipt of the cash payment, if any is required, and the receipt of all securities for the purchase price;

(3) When the commissioner or trustee is required to collect deferred payments,

a. He shall file a preliminary report within thirty days after receipt of the cash payment, if any is required, and the receipt of all securities for the purchase price, and

b. If the period of time during which he is required to collect deferred payments extends over more than one year, he shall file an annual report of his receipts and disbursements, and

c. After collecting all deferred payments, he shall file a final report.

(b) The clerk shall audit and record the reports and accounts required to be filed pursuant to this section. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

As to effect of failure of commissioner to file a report under former statute relating to partition sales, see Peal v. Martin, 207 N.C. 106, 176 S.E. 282 (1934).

§ 1-339.32. Public sale; final report of person, other than commissioner or trustee in deed of trust.

An administrator, executor or collector of a decedent's estate, or a receiver, or a guardian or trustee of a minor's or incompetent's estate, or an administrator, collector, conservator or guardian of an absent or missing person's estate, is not required to file a special account of his receipts and disbursements for property sold at public sale pursuant to this Article unless so directed by the judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction of the sale proceeding, but shall include in his next following account or report, either annual or final, an account of such receipts and disbursements. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 18.)

Part 3. Procedure for Private Sales of Real and Personal Property.

§ 1-339.33. Private sale; order of sale.

Whenever a private sale is ordered, the order of sale shall

(1) Designate the person authorized to make the sale;

(2) Describe real property to be sold, by reference or otherwise, sufficiently to identify it;

(3) Describe personal property to be sold, by reference or otherwise, sufficiently to indicate its nature and quantity; and

(4) Prescribe such terms of sale as the judge or clerk of court ordering the sale deems advisable. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 18.)

CASE NOTES

This section does not specify conditions under which a private sale may be ordered. Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 260 N.C. 702, 133 S.E.2d 681 (1963).

Court May Lay Down Guidelines and Give Directions. — There is nothing in this section which restricts the court in laying down guidelines and giving directions for the making of a private sale in the first instance. Indeed, it is the duty of the court to give directions to the commissioner. Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 260 N.C. 702, 133 S.E.2d 681 (1963).

Discretion of Court Where Minors Are Interested. — Under the former statute, the court having jurisdiction might, in the exercise of its discretion, order a sale of land where minors were interested and represented by guardian ad litem, either at public or private sale. The court has similar discretion under this section. Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 260 N.C. 702, 133 S.E.2d 681 (1963).

Private Sale of Timber. — In the sale of large bodies of timber, a commissioner, if permitted to sell privately, has freedom to canvass prospective buyers, give time for viewing and estimating the timber, and negotiate directly with prospects, without being restricted by the formal requirements of a public sale. Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 260 N.C. 702, 133 S.E.2d 681 (1963).

As to discretion of court under former statute governing partition sales, see Thompson v. Rospigliosi, 162 N.C. 145, 77 S.E. 113 (1913); Wooten v. Cunningham, 171 N.C. 123, 88 S.E. 1 (1916); Ryder v. Oates, 173 N.C. 569, 92 S.E. 508 (1917).

§ 1-339.34. Private sale; exception; certain personal property.

(a) Notwithstanding any provisions of this Article, property described below may be sold at private sale at the current market price after first obtaining an order of sale:

(1) Property consisting of stocks, bonds or other securities the current market value of which is established by sales on any stock or securities exchange supervised or regulated by the United States government or any other of its agencies or departments, or

(2) Property consisting of stocks, bonds or other securities which are not sold on any stock or securities exchange supervised or regulated by the United States government or any other of its agencies or departments, but which are found by the judge or clerk having jurisdiction to have a known or readily ascertainable market value, or

(3) Property consisting of cattle, hogs, or other livestock, or cotton, corn, tobacco, peanuts or other farm commodities or produce, found by the judge or clerk having jurisdiction to have a known or readily ascertainable market value.

(b) Property determined by the judge or clerk having jurisdiction to be perishable property because subject to rapid deterioration may be sold at private sale after first obtaining an order of sale.

(c) Any sale made pursuant to this section is not subject to an upset bid, and is not required to be confirmed, but such sale is final. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.35. Private sale; report of sale.

(a) The person holding a private sale shall, within five days after the date of the sale, file a report with the clerk of the superior court of the county where the proceeding for the sale is pending.

(b) The report shall be signed and shall show

(1) The title of the action or proceeding;

(2) The authority under which the person making the sale acted;

(3) A description of real property sold, by reference or otherwise, sufficient to identify it, and, if sold in parts, a description of each part so sold;

(4) A description of personal property sold, sufficient to indicate the nature and quantity of the property sold to each purchaser;

(5) The name or names of the person or persons to whom the property was sold;

(6) The price at which the property, or each part thereof, was sold, and the terms of the sale; and

(7) The date of the report. (1947, c. 719, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose for Report of Sale of Incompetent's Property. — The report of sale of an incompetent's property required by this section was intended not just to give record notice of the fact of sale but also to operate with §§ 1-339.25 and 1-339.36 to ensure that the price received should be greater by facilitating the practice of upset bidding by providing a clear-cut starting point for the time period during which upset bids might be filed. Masters v. Cole, 49 N.C. App. 322, 271 S.E.2d 590 (1980).

Legal Test in Determining If Guardian's Letter Was Report of Sale. — In determining whether a guardian's letter to the clerk of court constituted a report of sale of an incompetent's property within the meaning of this section, even though it did not comply with all the technical requirements thereof, the proper legal test was whether its partial compliance had fully attained the objective of the statute. Masters v. Cole, 49 N.C. App. 322, 271 S.E.2d 590 (1980).

Guardian's Letter Held Insufficient. — A guardian's letter to the clerk of court did not constitute a valid report of sale of an incompetent's property where it failed to set out the title of the action and failed to specify the terms of sale as required by subdivisions (b)(1) and (b)(6) of this section, since a potential upset bidder could not look at the letter and know with certainty whether it was a report of sale. Masters v. Cole, 49 N.C. App. 322, 271 S.E.2d 590 (1980).

§ 1-339.36. Private sale; upset bid; subsequent procedure.

(a) Every private sale of real or personal property, except a sale of personal property as provided by G.S. 1-339.34, is subject to an upset bid on the same conditions and in the same manner as is provided by G.S. 1-339.25.

(b) When an upset bid is made for property sold at private sale, subsequent procedure with respect thereto shall be the same as for the public sale of real property for which an upset bid has been submitted, except that the notice of resale of personal property need not be published in a newspaper, but shall be posted as provided by G.S. 1-339.17. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Every Private Sale Is Subject to Upset Bids. — Every private sale of real property under order of the court is subject to upset bids. Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 260 N.C. 702, 133 S.E.2d 681 (1963).

Applicability of § 1-339.25. — An upset bid in a private sale of real property shall be submitted to the court within ten days after the filing of the report of sale, and shall be in an amount specified by § 1-339.25. Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 260 N.C. 702, 133 S.E.2d 681 (1963).

Applicability of § 1-339.27. — Upon the filing of an upset bid under subsection (a) of this section, § 1-339.27 (a) applies, and to all intents and purposes the sale thereafter becomes a public sale and is subject to the statutory requirements of resale. Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 260 N.C. 702, 133 S.E.2d 681 (1963).

When an upset bid in a private sale is submitted to the court, a resale shall be ordered, a notice of which resale shall be posted at the courthouse door for 15 days immediately preceding the sale and published in a newspaper once a week for two successive weeks. Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 260 N.C. 702, 133 S.E.2d 681 (1963).

§ 1-339.37. Private sale; confirmation.

If no upset bid for property sold at private sale is submitted within ten days after the report of sale is filed, the sale may then be confirmed, and the provisions of G.S. 1-339.28(a) and (b) are applicable to such confirmation whether the property sold is real or personal. Unless otherwise provided in the order of sale, no confirmation is required of any sale held as provided by G.S. 1-339.34. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

As to superior court's jurisdiction in a partition action under former statute to confirm a private sale, see McAfee v. Green, 143 N.C. 411, 55 S.E. 828 (1906); Thompson v. Rospigliosi, 162 N.C. 145, 77 S.E. 113 (1913).

§ 1-339.38. Private sale; real property; deed; order for possession.

(a) Upon confirmation of a private sale of real property, the person authorized to hold the sale, or such other person as may be designated by the judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction, shall prepare and tender to the purchaser a duly executed deed for the property sold and, upon compliance by the purchaser with the terms of the sale, shall deliver the deed to the purchaser.

(b) The judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction of the proceeding in which the property is sold may grant an order for possession of real property so sold and conveyed, as against all persons in possession who are parties to the proceeding. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 18.)

§ 1-339.39. Private sale; personal property; delivery; bill of sale.

Upon compliance by the purchaser with the terms of a private sale of personal property, and upon confirmation of the sale when confirmation is required by G.S. 1-339.37, the person authorized to hold the sale, or such other person as may be designated by the judge or clerk of court having jurisdiction, shall deliver the property to the purchaser, and may execute and deliver a bill of sale or other muniment of title, and, upon application of the purchaser, shall do so when required by the judge or clerk having jurisdiction. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 18.)

§ 1-339.40. Private sale; final report.

(a) A commissioner or a trustee in a deed of trust authorized pursuant to G.S. 1-339.4 to hold a private sale of property shall make such a final report as is specified in G.S. 1-339.31.

(b) Any other person authorized pursuant to G.S. 1-339.4 to hold a private sale of property shall make such a final report as is specified in G.S. 1-339.32. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

(b) As used in this article,

(1) "Sale" means an execution sale;

(2) "Sheriff" means a sheriff or any officer authorized to hold an execution sale. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For a brief discussion of this article, see 27 N.C.L. Rev. 479 (1949).

CASE NOTES

Execution sale authorized by § 105-375 is analogous to an execution sale conducted under the authority of this section. Henderson County v. Osteen, 28 N.C. App. 542, 221 S.E.2d 903, rev'd on other grounds, 292 N.C. 692, 235 S.E.2d 166 (1977).

§ 1-339.42. Clerk's authority to fix procedural details.

The clerk of the superior court who issues an execution has authority to fix and determine all necessary procedural details with respect to sales in all instances in which this Article fails to make definite provisions as to such procedure. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.43. Days on which sale may be held.

A sale may be held on any day except Sunday. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

Cross References. — For validation of certain sales, see § 1-339.72 et seq.

§ 1-339.44. Place of sale.

(a) Every sale of real property shall be held at the courthouse door in the county where the property is situated unless the property consists of a single tract situated in two or more counties.

(b) A sale of a single tract of real property situated in two or more counties may be held at the courthouse door in any one of the counties in which any part of the tract is situated, but no sheriff shall hold any sale outside his own county. As used in this section, a "single tract" means any tract which has a continuous boundary, regardless of whether parts thereof may have been acquired at different times or from different persons or whether it may have been subdivided into other units or lots, or whether it is sold as a whole or in parts.

(c) A sale of personal property may be held at any place in his county designated by the sheriff in the notice of sale. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.45. Presence of personal property at sale required.

A sheriff holding a sale of personal property shall have the property present at the place of sale. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.46. Sale as a whole or in parts.

When real property to be sold consists of separate lots or other units or when personal property consists of more than one article, the sheriff may sell such real or personal property as a whole or in designated parts, or may offer the property for sale by each method, and then sell the property by the method which produces the highest price; but regardless of which method is followed, the sheriff shall not sell more property than is reasonably necessary to satisfy the judgment together with the costs of the execution and the sale. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.47. Sale to be made for cash.

Every sale shall be made for cash. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.48. Life of execution.

If an execution is issued on a judgment, within the time provided by G.S. 1-306, and a sale, by authority of that execution, is commenced within the time provided by G.S. 1-310, the sale, including any resale, may be had and completed even though such sales, resales or other procedure are had after the time when the execution is required to be returned by G.S. 1-310, or after the time within which an execution could be issued with respect to such judgment pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 1-306. For the purpose of this section, a sale is commenced when the notice of sale is first published in the case of real property as required by G.S. 1-339.52, or first posted in the case of personal property as required by G.S. 1-339.53. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.49. Penalty for selling contrary to law.

A sheriff or other officer who makes any sale contrary to the true intent and meaning of this Article shall forfeit two hundred dollars to any person suing for it, one half for his own use and the other half to the use of the county where the offense is committed. (1820, c. 1066, s. 2, P.R.; 1822, c. 1153, s. 3, P.R.; R.C., c. 45, s. 18; Code, s. 461; Rev., s. 649; C.S., s. 696; 1949, c. 719, s. 2.)

Cross References. — As to liability on sheriff's bond, see §§ 162-8 and 162-18.

§ 1-339.50. Officer's return of no sale for want of bidders; penalty.

When a sheriff or other officer returns upon an execution that he has made no sale for want of bidders, he must state in his return the several places he has advertised and offered for sale the property levied on; and an officer failing to make such statement is on motion subject to a fine of forty dollars, for the use and benefit of the plaintiff in the execution; for which, on motion of the plaintiff, judgment shall be granted by the court to which, or by justice to whom, the execution shall be returned. Nothing in, nor any recovery under, this section is a bar to any action for a false return against the sheriff or other officer. (1815, c. 887, P.R.; R.C., c. 45, s. 19; Code, s. 462; Rev., s. 650; C.S., s. 697; 1949, c. 719, s. 2; 1995, c. 379, s. 14(a).)

Part 2. Procedure for Sale.

§ 1-339.51. Contents of notice of sale.

The notice of sale shall

(1) Refer to the execution authorizing the sale;
(2) Designate the date, hour and place of sale;
(3) Describe real property to be sold, by reference or otherwise, sufficiently to identify it, and may add such further description as will acquaint bidders with the nature and location of the property;
(4) Describe personal property to be sold sufficiently to indicate its nature and quantity, and may add such further description as will acquaint bidders with the nature of the property; and
(5) State that the sale will be made to the highest bidder for cash. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Statutes Contemplate Sale at Fair Value. — The statutes regulating execution sales contemplate a sale at which the thing sold will bring its fair value. Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. v. Forbes, 258 N.C. 426, 128 S.E.2d 875 (1963).

Cited in Myers v. H. McBride Realty, Inc., 93 N.C. App. 689, 379 S.E.2d 70 (1989).

§ 1-339.52. Posting and publishing notice of sale of real property.

(a) The notice of sale of real property shall

(1) Be posted, at the courthouse door in the county in which the property is situated, for thirty days immediately preceding the sale,

(2) And in addition thereto,

a. If a newspaper qualified for legal advertising is published in the county, the notice shall be published in such a newspaper once a week for at least four successive weeks; but

b. If no such newspaper is published in the county, then notice shall be published once a week for at least four successive weeks in a newspaper having general circulation in the county.

(b) When the notice of sale is published in a newspaper,

(1) The period from the date of the first publication to the date of the last publication, both dates inclusive, shall not be less than twenty-two days, including Sundays, and

(2) The date of the last publication shall be not more than 10 days preceding the date of the sale.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1967, c. 979, which rewrote paragraph (a)(2)b and substituted "be not more than 10" for "not be more than seven" in subdivision (b)(2), provided in s. 4: "This act does not amend the Uniform Commercial Code as enacted in this State. The application of statutes herein included or amended insofar as they relate to transactions subject to the Uniform Commercial Code as enacted in this State shall be in accordance with Article 10 of Chapter 25, of the General Statutes."

§ 1-339.53. Posting notice of sale of personal property.

The notice of sale of personal property, except in the case of perishable property as specified in G.S. 1-339.56, shall be posted, at the courthouse door in the county in which the sale is to be held, for ten days immediately preceding the date of sale. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Purchaser with Notice of Lack of Advertisement. — A purchaser at an execution sale of personalty, who had full knowledge of such irregularities as absence of advertisement, etc., as required by former § 1-336, was not an innocent purchaser, and the rule that a purchaser at a sheriff's sale is not bound to look further than to see that he is an officer who sells, empowered to do so by a valid execution, was not applicable, for the rule presupposes that the purchaser is a bona fide purchaser. Phillips v. Hyatt, 167 N.C. 570, 83 S.E. 804 (1914).

§ 1-339.54. Notice to judgment debtor of sale of real property.

In addition to complying with G.S. 1-339.52, relating to posting and publishing the notice of sale, the sheriff shall, at least ten days before the sale of real property,

(1) If the judgment debtor is found in the county, serve a copy of the notice of sale on him personally, or

(2) If the judgment debtor is not found in the county,

a. Send a copy of the notice of sale by registered mail to the judgment debtor at his last address known to the sheriff, and

b. Serve a copy of the notice of sale on the judgment debtor's agent, if there is in the county a person known to the sheriff to be an agent who has custody or management of, or who exercises control over, any property in the county belonging to the judgment debtor. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Statutory requirements for notice of an execution sale were met where the deputy sheriff attempted to locate the plaintiff by running his name through the computer of the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) (see now Division of Motor Vehicles), where the phone book was checked and no one with plaintiff's name was listed, where the deputy went to the address listed on the execution notice and to an address where plaintiff owned real property and the deputy could not locate plaintiff, and where plaintiff was served by certified mail at his last known address. Myers v. H. McBride Realty, Inc., 93 N.C. App. 689, 379 S.E.2d 70 (1989).

Effect of Noncompliance with This Section. — A failure to comply with this section, which is directory, will not render the sale void as against a stranger without notice of the irregularity, nor can such sale be assailed collaterally, but in such a case the defendant may, on motion or by direct proceeding, have the sale vacated. Walston v. W.H. Applewhite & Co., 237 N.C. 419, 75 S.E.2d 138 (1953).

§ 1-339.55. Notification of Governor and Attorney General.

When the State is a stockholder in any corporation whose property is to be sold under execution, notice in writing shall be given by the sheriff by registered mail to the Governor and the Attorney General at least thirty days before the sale, stating the time and place of the sale and including a copy of the process under the authority of which such sale is to be made. Any sale held without complying with the provisions of this section is invalid with respect to the State. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.56. Exception; perishable property.

If, in the opinion of the sheriff, any personal property levied on under execution is perishable because subject to rapid deterioration, he shall forthwith report such levy, together with a description of the property, to the clerk of the superior court, and request instructions as to the sale of such property. If the clerk then determines that the property is such perishable property, he shall thereupon order a sale thereof to be held at such time and place and upon such notice to be given in such manner and for such length of time as he deems advisable. If the clerk determines that the property is not perishable, he shall order it to be sold in the same manner as other nonperishable property. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.57. Satisfaction of judgment before sale completed.

If, prior to the time fixed for a sale, or prior to the expiration of the time allowed for submitting any upset bid, payment is made or tendered to the sheriff of the judgment and costs with respect to which the execution was issued, and the sheriff's fees, commissions and expenses which have accrued, together with any expenses incurred on account of the sale or proposed sale including costs incurred in caring for the property levied on, then any right to effect a sale pursuant to the execution ceases. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.58. Postponement of sale.

(a) The sheriff may postpone the sale to a day certain not later than six days, exclusive of Sunday, after the original date for the sale

(1) When there are no bidders, or

(2) When, in his judgment, the number of prospective bidders at the sale is substantially decreased by inclement weather or by any casualty, or

(3) When there are so many other sales advertised to be held at the same time and place as to make it inexpedient and impracticable, in his judgment, to hold the sale on that day, or

(4) When he is unable to hold the sale because of illness or for other good reason, or

(5) When other good cause exists.

(b) Upon postponement of a sale, the sheriff shall

(1) At the time and place advertised for the sale, publicly announce the postponement thereof, and

(2) On the same day, attach to or enter on the original notice of sale or a copy thereof, posted at the courthouse door, as provided by G.S. 1-339.52 in the case of real property or G.S. 1-339.53 in the case of personal property, a notice of the postponement.

(c) The posted notice of postponement shall

(1) State that the sale is postponed,

(2) State the hour and date to which the sale is postponed,

(3) State the reason for the postponement, and

(4) Be signed by the sheriff.

(d) If a sale is not held at the time fixed therefor and is not postponed as provided by this section, or if a postponed sale is not held at the time fixed therefor, the sheriff shall report the facts with respect thereto to the clerk of the superior court, who shall thereupon make an order for the sale of the property to be held at such time and place and upon such notice to be given in such manner and for such length of time as he deems advisable, but nothing herein contained shall be deemed to relieve the sheriff of liability for the nonperformance of his official duty. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.59. Procedure upon dissolution of order restraining or enjoining sale.

(a) When, before the date fixed for a sale, a judge dissolves an order restraining or enjoining the sale, he may, if the required notice of sale has been given, provide by order that the sale shall be held without additional notice at the time and place originally fixed therefor, or he may, in his discretion, make an order with respect thereto as provided in subsection (b).

(b) When, after the date fixed for a sale, a judge dissolves an order restraining or enjoining the sale, he shall by order fix the time and place for the sale to be held upon notice to be given in such manner and for such length of time as he deems advisable. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.60. Time of sale.

(a) A sale shall begin at the time designated in the notice of sale or as soon thereafter as practicable, but not later than one hour after the time fixed therefor unless it is delayed by other sales held at the same place.

(b) No sale shall commence before 10:00 o'clock A.M. or after 4:00 o'clock P.M.

(c) No sale shall continue after 4:00 o'clock P.M., except that in cities or towns of more than 5,000 inhabitants, as shown by the most recent federal census, sales of personal property may continue until 10:00 o'clock P.M. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.61. Continuance of uncompleted sale.

A sale commenced but not completed within the time allowed by G.S. 1-339.60 shall be continued by the sheriff to a designated time between 10:00 o'clock A.M. and 4:00 o'clock P.M. the next following day, other than Sunday. In case such continuance becomes necessary, the sheriff shall publicly announce the time to which the sale is continued. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.62. Delivery of personal property; bill of sale.

A sheriff holding a sale of personal property shall deliver the property to the purchaser immediately upon receipt of the purchase price. The sheriff may also execute and deliver a bill of sale or other muniment of title for any personal property sold, and, upon application of the purchaser, shall do so when required by the clerk of the superior court of the county where the property is sold. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.63. Report of sale.

(a) The sheriff shall, within five days after the date of the sale, file a report thereof with the clerk of the superior court.

(b) The report shall be signed and shall show

(1) The title of the action or proceeding;
(2) The authority under which the sheriff acted;
(3) The date, hour and place of the sale;
(4) A description of real property sold, by reference or otherwise, sufficient to identify it, and, if sold in parts, a description of each part so sold;
(5) A description of personal property sold, sufficient to indicate the nature and quantity of the property sold to each purchaser;
(6) The name or names of the person or persons to whom the property was sold;
(7) The price at which the property, or each part thereof, was sold and that such price was the highest bid therefor; and
(8) The date of the report. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

§ 1-339.64. Upset bid on real property; compliance bond.

(a) An upset bid is an advanced, increased or raised bid whereby a person offers to purchase real property theretofore sold for an amount exceeding the reported sale price by a minimum of five percent (5%) thereof, but in any event with a minimum increase of seven hundred fifty dollars ($750.00). An upset bid shall be made by delivering to the clerk of superior court, with whom the report of sale was filed, a deposit in cash or by certified check or cashier's check satisfactory to the clerk in an amount greater than or equal to five percent (5%) of the amount of the upset bid but in no event less than seven hundred fifty dollars ($750.00). The deposit required by this section shall be filed with the clerk of the superior court, with whom the report of sale was filed, by the close of normal business hours on the tenth day after the filing of the report of sale, and if the tenth day shall fall upon a Sunday or legal holiday or upon a day in which the office of the clerk is not open for the regular dispatch of its business, the deposit may be made and the upset bid filed on the day following when said office is open for the regular dispatch of its business. An upset bid need not be in writing, and the timely deposit with the clerk of the required amount, together with an indication to the clerk as to the sale to which it is applicable, is sufficient to constitute the upset bid, subject to the provisions of subsection (b).

(b) The clerk of the superior court may require the person submitting an upset bid also to deposit a cash bond, or, in lieu thereof at the option of the bidder, a surety bond, approved by the clerk, conditioned on compliance with the upset bid. The amount of such bond shall not exceed the amount of the upset bid less the amount of the required deposit.

(c) The clerk of the superior court may in the order of resale require the highest bidder at a resale had pursuant to an upset bid to deposit with the clerk a cash bond, or, in lieu thereof at the option of the bidder, a surety bond, approved by the clerk, conditioned on compliance with his bid. The bond shall be in such amount as the clerk deems adequate but in no case greater than the amount of the bid of the person being required to furnish the bond.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1967, c. 979, which inserted "or by certified check or cashier's check satisfactory to the said clerk" in the first sentence in subsection (a) and added at the end of that sentence the language following the semicolon, provided in s. 4: "This act does not amend the Uniform Commercial Code as enacted in this State. The application of statutes herein included or amended insofar as they relate to transactions subject to the Uniform Commercial Code as enacted in this State shall be in accordance with Article 10 of Chapter 25, of the General Statutes."

Session Laws 1997-119, s. 3 provides that this act becomes effective January 1, 1998, and applies to judicial sales when the original order of sale was issued on or after that date and to execution sales when the execution was originally issued on or after that date. This act shall not apply to any judicial sale when the original order of sale has been issued prior to the effective date of this act or to any execution sale held pursuant to any execution originally issued prior to the effective date of this act.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1997 amendment, effective January 1, 1998, rewrote the first sentence and added the second and third sentences of subsection (a). See editor's note for applicability.

§ 1-339.65. Separate upset bids when real property sold in parts; subsequent procedure.

When real property is sold in parts, as provided by G.S. 1-339.46, the sale, and each subsequent resale, of any such part shall be subject to a separate upset bid; and to the extent the clerk of the superior court having jurisdiction deems advisable, the sale of each such part shall thereafter be treated as a separate sale for the purpose of determining the procedure applicable thereto. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.66. Resale of real property; jurisdiction; procedure.

(a) When an upset bid on real property is submitted to the clerk of the superior court, together with a compliance bond if one is required, the clerk shall order a resale.

(b) Notice of any resale to be held because of an upset bid shall

(1) Be posted, at the courthouse door in the county in which the property is situated, for fifteen days immediately preceding the sale,

(2) And in addition thereto,

a. If a newspaper qualified for legal advertising is published in the county, the notice shall be published in such a newspaper once a week for at least two successive weeks; but

b. If no such newspaper is published in the county, the notice shall be posted at three other public places in the county for fifteen days immediately preceding the sale.

(c) When the notice of resale is published in a newspaper,

(1) The period from the date of the first publication to the date of the last publication, both dates inclusive, shall not be less than eight days, including Sunday, and

(2) The date of the last publication shall not be more than seven days preceding the date of sale.

(d) When the real property to be resold is situated in more than one county, the provisions of subsections (b) and (c) shall be complied with in each county in which any part of the property is situated.

(e) The sheriff shall report the resale in the same manner as required by G.S. 1-339.63.

(f) When there is no bid at a resale other than the upset bid resulting in such resale, the person who made the upset bid is deemed the highest bidder at the resale. Such sale remains subject to a further upset bid and resale pursuant to this article.

(g) Resales may be had as often as upset bids are submitted in compliance with this Article.

(h) Except as otherwise provided in this section, all the provisions of this Article applicable to an original sale are applicable to resale. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

For case holding that successive orders for resale did not prolong the statutory life of the judgment lien, decided under former statute, see Cheshire v. Drake, 223 N.C. 577, 27 S.E.2d 627 (1943).

§ 1-339.67. Confirmation of sale of real property.

No sale of real property may be consummated until the sale is confirmed by the clerk of the superior court. No order of confirmation may be made until the time for submitting an upset bid, pursuant to G.S. 1-339.64, has expired. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1967, c. 979, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1967, c. 979, which substituted "G.S. 1-339.64" for "G.S. 1-339.65," provided in s. 4: "This act does not amend the Uniform Commercial Code as enacted in this State. The application of statutes herein included or amended insofar as they relate to transactions subject to the Uniform Commercial Code as enacted in this State shall be in accordance with Article 10 of Chapter 25, of the General Statutes."

CASE NOTES

Application of Doctrine of Caveat Emptor. — While the doctrine of caveat emptor applies to purchasers at execution sales, it does not tie the hands of the court to prevent a manifest injustice not due to the fault or neglect of the purchaser. Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. v. Forbes, 258 N.C. 426, 128 S.E.2d 875 (1963).

When Clerk May Decline to Confirm Sale. — If competitive bidding is stifled, resulting in a bid less than the fair value of the property sold, the clerk may decline to confirm the sale. Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. v. Forbes, 258 N.C. 426, 128 S.E.2d 875 (1963).

The high bidder acquires no right until his bid is accepted and the sale is confirmed. Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. v. Forbes, 258 N.C. 426, 128 S.E.2d 875 (1963).

Applied in Priddy v. Kernersville Lumber Co., 258 N.C. 653, 129 S.E.2d 256 (1963); North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Sharpe, 49 N.C. App. 687, 272 S.E.2d 368 (1980).

Quoted in Spalding Div. of Questor Corp. v. DuBose, 46 N.C. App. 612, 265 S.E.2d 501 (1980).

§ 1-339.68. Deed for real property sold; property subject to liens; orders for possession.

(a) Upon confirmation of a sale of real property, the sheriff, upon order of the clerk of the superior court, shall prepare and tender to the purchaser a duly executed deed for the property sold and, upon compliance by the purchaser with the terms of the sale, shall deliver the deed to the purchaser.

(b) Any real property sold under execution remains subject to all liens which became effective prior to the lien of the judgment pursuant to which the sale is held, in the same manner and to the same extent as if no such sale had been held.

(c) Orders for possession of real property sold pursuant to this Article, in favor of the purchaser and against any party or parties in possession at the time of the sale who remain in possession at the time of application therefor, may be issued by the clerk of the superior court of the county in which such property is sold, when:

(1) The purchaser is entitled to possession, and
(2) The purchase price has been paid, and
(3) The sale or resale has been confirmed, and
(4) Ten days' notice has been given to the party or parties in possession at the time of the sale or resale who remain in possession at the time application is made, and
(5) Application is made to such clerk by the purchaser of the property.

(d) An order for possession issued pursuant to the preceding subsection shall be directed to the sheriff, shall authorize him to remove the party or parties in possession, and their personal property, from the premises and to put the purchaser in possession, and shall be executed in accordance with the procedure for executing a writ or order for possession in a summary ejectment proceeding under G.S. 42-36.2. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1967, c. 979, s. 2; 1987, c. 627, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1967, c. 979, which added subsection (c), provided in s. 4: "This act does not amend the Uniform Commercial Code as enacted in this State. The application of statutes herein included or amended insofar as they relate to transactions subject to the Uniform Commercial Code as enacted in this State shall be in accordance with Article 10 of Chapter 25, of the General Statutes."

CASE NOTES

What Rights and Estate May Be Sold. — A sheriff, acting pursuant to an execution, can only sell the rights and estate of the judgment debtor as they existed when the lien pursuant to which he acts became effective. Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. v. Forbes, 258 N.C. 426, 128 S.E.2d 875 (1963).

Compelling Sheriff to Make Title. — A motion in the cause, and not a distinct action, is the proper means of compelling the sheriff to make title to the purchaser at the execution sale. Fox v. Kline, 85 N.C. 173 (1881), decided under former statute relating to execution sales.

Effect of Recitals in Sheriff's Deed. — Recitals in a sheriff's deed are prima facie evidence of an execution sale, notwithstanding the fact that the return upon the execution may be imperfect. The fact that there was a sale may also be proved by parol. Miller v. Miller, 89 N.C. 402 (1883), decided under former statute relating to execution sales.

The recital of execution and sale in a sheriff's deed is prima facie evidence thereof. Wainwright v. Bobbitt, 127 N.C. 274, 37 S.E. 336 (1900), rehearing denied, 129 N.C. 46, 39 S.E. 725 (1901), decided under former statute relating to deeds in execution sales.

Necessity of Seal. — A deed of a sheriff without a seal attached is not competent evidence in ejectment to show title, and a sheriff will not be allowed to affix his seal to a deed, having omitted it by mistake, unless such equity is set up in the complaint. Fisher v. Owens, 132 N.C. 686, 44 S.E. 369 (1903), decided under former statute relating to execution sales.

§ 1-339.69. Failure of bidder to comply with bid; resale.

(a) When the highest bidder at a sale of personal property fails to pay the amount of his bid, the sheriff shall at the same time and place immediately resell the property. In the event no other bid is received, a new sale may be advertised in the regular manner provided by this Article for an original sale.

(b) When the highest bidder at a sale or resale of real property fails to comply with his bid within ten days after the tender to him of a deed for the property or after a bona fide attempt to tender such deed, the clerk of the superior court who issued the execution may order a resale. The procedure for such resale is the same in every respect as is provided by this Article in the case of an original sale of real property except that the provisions of G.S. 1-339.66(b), (c) and (d) apply with respect to the posting and publishing of the notice of such resale.

(c) A defaulting bidder at any sale or resale is liable on his bid, and in case a resale is had because of such default, he shall remain liable to the extent that the final sale price is less than his bid plus all costs of such resale or resales.

(d) Nothing in this section deprives any person of any other remedy against the defaulting bidder. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

An action in superior court to declare an execution sale and sheriff's deed void because defendants did not pay their bid in cash but merely cancelled judgments against the property owner constituted an impermissible collateral attack upon the order of confirmation of the execution sale by the clerk of court; plaintiffs' remedy was to proceed directly either by motion in the cause or appeal. Spalding Div. of Questor Corp. v. DuBose, 46 N.C. App. 612, 265 S.E.2d 501, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 375, 267 S.E.2d 678 (1980).

When Action by Execution Debtor against Defaulting Bidder Is Not Authorized. — If the amount bid is less than the amount of the debt, so that the execution debtor is entitled to no part of the price, the execution debtor is not entitled to bring an action to enforce the bid against a defaulting bidder, notwithstanding subsection (d) of this section, and the action is properly brought by the sheriff. Daniels v. Yelverton, 239 N.C. 54, 79 S.E.2d 311 (1953).

For case holding that the sheriff was not obliged to resell immediately, but might give the purchaser time in which to pay the purchase money, if neither party to the execution objected or complained, decided under former law, see Maynard v. Moore, 76 N.C. 158 (1877). See also, McKee v. Lineberger, 69 N.C. 217 (1873).

§ 1-339.70. Disposition of proceeds of sale.

(a) After deducting all sums due him on account of the sale, including the expenses incurred in caring for the property so long as his responsibility for such care continued, the sheriff shall pay the proceeds of the sale to the clerk of the superior court who issued the execution, and the clerk shall furnish the sheriff a receipt therefor.

(b) The clerk shall apply the proceeds of the sale so received to the payment of the judgment upon which the execution was issued.

(c) Any surplus shall be paid by the clerk to the person legally entitled thereto if the clerk knows who such person is. If the clerk is in doubt as to who is entitled to the surplus, or if adverse claims are asserted thereto, the clerk shall hold such surplus until rights thereto are established in a special proceeding pursuant to G.S. 1-339.71. (1949, c. 719, s. 1.)

§ 1-339.71. Special proceeding to determine ownership of surplus.

(a) A special proceeding may be instituted before the clerk of the superior court by any person claiming any money, or part thereof, paid into the clerk's office under G.S. 1-339.70 or G.S. 105-374(q)(6), to determine who is entitled thereto.

(b) All other persons who have filed with the clerk notice of their claim to the money or any part thereof, or who, as far as the petitioner or petitioners know, assert any claim to the money or any part thereof, shall be made defendants in the proceeding.

(c) If any answer is filed raising issues of fact as to the ownership of the money, the proceedings shall be transferred to the civil issue docket of the superior court for trial. When a proceeding is so transferred, the clerk may require any party to the proceeding who asserts a claim to the fund by petition or answer to furnish a bond for costs in the amount of $200.00, or otherwise comply with the provisions of G.S. 1-109.

(d) The court may, in its discretion, allow a reasonable attorney's fee for any attorney appearing in behalf of the party or parties who prevail, to be paid out of the funds in controversy, and shall tax all costs against the losing party or parties who asserted a claim to the fund by petition or answer. (1949, c. 719, s. 1; 1967, c. 705, s. 2; 1973, c. 1446, s. 19.)

§ 1-339.76. Validation of sales when payment deferred more than two years.

All sales of land conducted prior to February 10, 1927, under authority of G.S. 28-93, in which the deferred payments were extended over a period longer than two years, are hereby validated. (1917, c. 127, s. 2; C.S., s. 86; 1927, c. 16; 1949, c. 719, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — Section 28-93, referred to in this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 1329, s. 1.

§ 1-339.77. Validation of certain sales confirmed prior to time prescribed by law.

From and after June 1, 1953 no action shall be brought to contest the validity of a decree filed on or before December 31, 1950, confirming the sale of real or personal property in any special proceeding on the grounds that the decree of confirmation was entered prior to the expiration of the period of time as required by law following the report of sale. (1953, c. 1089.)

Betterments.

§ 1-340. Petition by claimant; execution suspended; issues found.

A defendant against whom a judgment is rendered for land may, at any time before execution, present a petition to the court rendering the judgment, stating that he, or those under whom he claims, while holding the premises under a color of title believed to be good, have made permanent improvements thereon, and praying that he may be allowed for the improvements, over and above the value of the use and occupation of the land. The court may, if satisfied of the probable truth of the allegation, suspend the execution of the judgment and impanel a jury to assess the damages of the plaintiff and the allowance to the defendant for the improvements. In any such action this inquiry and assessment may be made upon the trial of the cause. (1871-2, c. 147; Code, s. 473; Rev., s. 652; C.S., s. 699.)

CASE NOTES

Effect of Article. — This Article permits those who in good faith and under colorable title enter into possession of land under a mistaken belief that their title is good and who are subsequently ejected by the true owners to petition the court for compensation for the improvements they placed on the land. Jenkins v. Richmond County, 99 N.C. App. 717, 394 S.E.2d 258 (1990), cert. denied, 328 N.C. 572, 403 S.E.2d 512 (1991).

Constitutionality. — This section contravenes no part of the organic law, federal or State. Barker v. Owen, 93 N.C. 198 (1885).

The right of recovery, where the occupant in good faith believes himself to be the owner, is declared to stand upon a principle of natural justice and equity, and such laws are held not to be unconstitutional as impairing vested rights, since they adjust the equities of the parties as nearly as possible according to natural justice. Searl v. School Dist. No. 2, 133 U.S. 553, 10 S. Ct. 374, 33 L. Ed. 740 (1890).

Basis of Right to Betterments. — The right to betterments is a doctrine that gradually grew up in the courts of equity. It was recognized that the owner of land, who recovers it, had no just and equitable claim to anything but the land itself, and a fair compensation for being kept out of possession. If the land was enhanced in value by improvements, made under the belief that one was the owner, the true owner ought not to take the increased value. It is now an established equitable principle that whenever a plaintiff seeks aid in a court of equity, against such a person, aid will be given him, only upon the terms that he shall make due compensation to such innocent person, being based upon the principle that he who seeks equity must do equity. As there are now no separate courts in which the rule can be enforced, all relief must be sought in one tribunal. The legislature has embodied the principle in the form of law, and made it operative when land is sought to be recovered by action without regard to former distinction. Wharton v. Moore, 84 N.C. 479 (1881); Barker v. Owen, 93 N.C. 198 (1885).

The right to betterments is based upon the obvious principle of justice that the owner of land has no just claim to anything but the land itself, and fair compensation for damage and loss of rent. If the claimant, acting under an erroneous but honest and reasonable belief that he is the owner, makes valuable and permanent improvements, the true owner should not take them without compensation. This section undertakes to declare and establish the equities between them. Sweeten v. King, 29 N.C. App. 672, 225 S.E.2d 598, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 667, 228 S.E.2d 458 (1976).

Betterments claim is not a claim of title to land. It is, instead, a claim demanding payment for permanent improvements to the land over and above the value of the use and occupation of the land. State v. Taylor, 322 N.C. 433, 368 S.E.2d 601 (1988).

Betterments Statutes Do Not Create Right Against State. — Sovereign immunity is a common law doctrine to which the existing exceptions or waivers have been mandated by the legislature, and statutes which waive the benefits of the doctrine of sovereign immunity are to be strictly construed. Thus, the phrase "claim of title to land" contained in § 41-10.1 cannot be broadened to include a claim for betterments under this section. The betterments statutes do not, by its terms, create a right against the State. State v. Taylor, 322 N.C. 433, 368 S.E.2d 601, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 838, 371 S.E.2d 284 (1988).

State May Not Be Sued for Betterments. — Construing § 41-10.1 strictly, a claim for betterments is not a claim of title to land. The State therefore has not consented to be sued for betterments and is entitled to the full protection of its sovereign immunity. State v. Taylor, 322 N.C. 433, 368 S.E.2d 601 (1988).

Right to Compensation for Improvements. — One who, in good faith under colorable title, enters into possession of land under a mistaken belief that his title is good, and who is subsequently ejected by the true owner, is entitled to compensation for the enhanced value of the land due to improvements placed on the land by him. Rogers v. Timberlake, 223 N.C. 59, 25 S.E.2d 167 (1943).

Under this section, one making permanent improvements on lands he holds under color of title, reasonably believed by him, in good faith, to be good, though with knowledge of an adverse claim, is entitled to recover for betterments in an action by the true owner to recover the lands. Pritchard v. Williams, 176 N.C. 108, 96 S.E. 733 (1918), rehearing denied, 178 N.C. 444, 101 S.E. 85 (1919).

A defendant in possession of land under the belief that he has a good title has the right to show in evidence in an action to recover the land that he has in good faith made permanent improvements after his estate had expired and their value to the extent of the rents and profits claimed by the plaintiff. Merritt v. Scott, 81 N.C. 385 (1879).

Plaintiff is not confined to a common-law action for improvements, if indeed such right may be enforced by independent action. Rhyne v. Sheppard, 224 N.C. 734, 32 S.E.2d 316 (1944).

An action under this section is not the same as an action for unjust enrichment. Beacon Homes, Inc. v. Holt, 266 N.C. 467, 146 S.E.2d 434 (1966).

This section creates no independent cause of action. It merely declares that the owner of land who recovers it has no just claim to anything but the land itself and a fair compensation for being kept out of possession, and if it has been enhanced in value by improvements made by another, under the belief that he was the owner, the true owner ought not to take the increased value without some compensation to the other. Board of Comm'rs v. Bumpass, 237 N.C. 143, 74 S.E.2d 436 (1953).

This section does not create an independent cause of action. Rather, it embodies only a defensive right, declaring that an owner of land who seeks and obtains the aid of the court to enforce his right to possession has no just claim to anything but the land itself and a fair compensation for being kept out of possession. Clontz v. Clontz, 44 N.C. App. 573, 261 S.E.2d 695, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 195, 269 S.E.2d 622 (1980).

It Accrues When Owner Seeks to Enforce Right to Possession. — The right under this section accrues when an owner of the land seeks and obtains the aid of the court to enforce his right to possession. Beacon Homes, Inc. v. Holt, 266 N.C. 467, 146 S.E.2d 434 (1966).

The claim accrues when the owner seeks and obtains the aid of the court to enforce his right of possession. The law awards to the owner the land and his rents and to the occupant the value of his improvements. Board of Comm'rs v. Bumpass, 237 N.C. 143, 74 S.E.2d 436 (1953).

Owner Must Have Obtained Judgment Entitling Him to Eject Occupant. — The wording of this section clearly limits its application to possessory actions or actions in which the final judgment may be enforced by execution in the nature of a writ of possession or writ of assistance. And the right to claim compensation does not arise until the owner of a superior title asserts his right of possession and obtains a judgment which entitles him to eject the occupant, though the last sentence of this section would seem to permit the defendant to assert his claim in his answer and have an issue directed thereto submitted to the jury on the trial of the main issue. Board of Comm'rs v. Bumpass, 237 N.C. 143, 74 S.E.2d 436 (1953).

A claim for betterments, under this section, cannot be set up on the trial to resist the plaintiff's recovery, but by petition filed after a judgment declaring the plaintiff the owner of the land. Wood v. Tinsley, 138 N.C. 507, 51 S.E. 59 (1905). See also, Rumbough v. Young, 119 N.C. 567, 26 S.E. 143 (1896); Board of Comm'rs v. Bumpass, 237 N.C. 143, 74 S.E.2d 436 (1953).

No Claim Against Remainderman Until Falling in of Life Estate. — Where remainderman had a tax foreclosure set aside to the extent that the tax deed purported to convey the remainder, but the conveyance of the life estate by the tax foreclosure was not affected, persons in possession under the tax foreclosure were not entitled to file claim for betterments against the remainderman until the falling in of the life estate and the assertion of the right to immediate possession by the remainderman. Board of Comm'rs v. Bumpass, 237 N.C. 143, 74 S.E.2d 436 (1953).

What Claimant Must Show. — This section has been interpreted to impose on claimant the burden of establishing: (1) That he made permanent improvements; (2) Bona fide belief of good title when the improvements were made; and (3) Reasonable grounds for such belief. Pamlico County v. Davis, 249 N.C. 648, 107 S.E.2d 306 (1959).

To be entitled to compensation for betterments under this section, defendant must show that he made permanent improvements on the property under a bona fide, reasonable belief of good title. Hackett v. Hackett, 31 N.C. App. 217, 228 S.E.2d 758, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 448, 230 S.E.2d 765 (1976).

Necessity of Color of Title. — This section applies only where the improvement was constructed by one who was in possession of the land under color of title and who, in good faith, reasonably believed he had good title to the land. Beacon Homes, Inc. v. Holt, 266 N.C. 467, 146 S.E.2d 434 (1966).

The good faith which will entitle a claimant to compensation for betterments means simply an honest belief of the occupant in his right or title, and the fact that diligence might have shown him that he had no title does not necessarily negative good faith in his occupancy. Sweeten v. King, 29 N.C. App. 672, 225 S.E.2d 598, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 667, 228 S.E.2d 458 (1976).

Reasonable Belief in Validity of Title. — The petitioner must show not only an honest and bona fide belief in his title, but he must satisfy the jury, also, that he had reasonable grounds for such belief. Pritchard v. Williams, 176 N.C. 108, 96 S.E. 733 (1918), rehearing denied, 178 N.C. 444, 101 S.E. 85 (1919); Rogers v. Timberlake, 223 N.C. 59, 25 S.E.2d 167 (1943).

The basis upon which betterments may be claimed is the finding by the jury that the person in possession, or those under whom he claims, believed at the time of making the improvements and had reason to believe the title good under which he and they were holding the premises. Board of Comm'rs v. Bumpass, 237 N.C. 143, 74 S.E.2d 436 (1953).

There must be shown not only an honest and bona fide belief in petitioner's title, but he must satisfy the jury, also, that he had good reason for such belief; and it is for the jury to judge of the reasonableness of such belief, based upon the entire evidence. Sweeten v. King, 29 N.C. App. 672, 225 S.E.2d 598, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 667, 228 S.E.2d 458 (1976).

A deed issued at a tax foreclosure is color of title for the purpose of asserting betterments. Jenkins v. Richmond County, 99 N.C. App. 717, 394 S.E.2d 258 (1990), cert. denied, 328 N.C. 572, 403 S.E.2d 512 (1991).

What Notice Will Bar Compensation. — Notice sufficient to bar the right to compensation is not a constructive notice, or such a notice as the petitioner might have acquired by a diligent scrutiny of the title, but such facts and circumstances as might reasonably suggest to the ordinary citizen serious defects in his own title. Carolina Cent. R.R. v. McCaskill, 98 N.C. 526, 4 S.E. 468 (1887).

Constructive notice from the record of the existence of a paramount title or interest does not deprive an occupying claimant of the right to be reimbursed for his improvements on being ejected from the premises. Sweeten v. King, 29 N.C. App. 672, 225 S.E.2d 598, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 667, 228 S.E.2d 458 (1976).

Evidence Held Sufficient to Show "Permanent Improvements". — Evidence that the land in question was farmland which had been abandoned and had become a piece of wasteland, and that claimant, by ditching, clearing, building roads and similar work, made it again susceptible of profitable cultivation, was sufficient to show "permanent improvements" within the purview of this section.

Pamlico County v. Davis, 249 N.C. 648, 107 S.E.2d 306 (1959).

Liability of Vendor Under Parol Contract for Value of Improvements. — A vendor in possession, who repudiates a parol contract to convey land, is liable to the vendee for the value of the improvements. Albea v. Griffin, 22 N.C. 9 (1838); Hedgepeth v. Rose, 95 N.C. 41 (1886); Luton v. Badham, 127 N.C. 96, 37 S.E. 143 (1900).

The vendor in a parol contract to convey land will not be permitted to evict a vendee who has entered and made improvements, until the latter has been repaid the purchase money and compensated for betterments. Vann v. Newsom, 110 N.C. 122, 14 S.E. 519 (1892).

One who was induced to enter on and improve land by a parol promise that it would be settled on him as an advancement or gratuity will not be evicted until compensation has been made for improvements which he has erected on the property. Hedgepeth v. Rose, 95 N.C. 41 (1886).

Recovery After Rescission for Fraudulent Misrepresentations. — Where, by fraudulent misrepresentations as to area by the vendor, a vendee is induced to purchase land, on a rescission of the contract he is entitled to reimbursements for improvements put on the land. Hill v. Brower, 76 N.C. 124 (1877).

One holding under a tenant for life, who makes substantial and permanent improvements on the lands, under facts and circumstances affording him a well grounded and reasonable belief that he had by his deed acquired the fee, is entitled to recover for the betterments he has thus made. Harriett v. Harriett, 181 N.C. 75, 106 S.E. 221 (1921).

Where grantee knows that his grantor has only a life estate in the lands and nevertheless accepts a deed in form sufficient to convey fee simple title, and makes improvements upon the land, he may not recover for such betterments as against a remainderman, since they were not made under the belief that his color of title to the interest of the remainderman was good. Lovett v. Stone, 239 N.C. 206, 79 S.E.2d 479 (1954).

Agreement to Hold in Trust and Reconvey. — Where defendant acquired the legal title to certain lands, originally belonging to plaintiff, at a foreclosure sale and subject to an agreement to hold the land in trust for the plaintiff and to reconvey to plaintiff upon the payment of a sum certain on or before a given date, defendant was not entitled to the value of improvements placed upon the land by him while holding same upon such trust. Rogers v. Timberlake, 223 N.C. 59, 25 S.E.2d 167 (1943).

An individual who purchased land at a sale by his own assignee in bankruptcy, with fraudulent purpose of defeating the rights of his wife and children under a prior deed which he had made to them with intent to defraud his creditors, was not a bona fide holder of the premises under a color of title believed by him to be good, and was therefore not entitled to the value of improvements placed thereon by him. Hallyburton v. Slagle, 132 N.C. 957, 44 S.E. 659 (1903).

This section does not apply to tenants in common. Pope v. Whitehead, 68 N.C. 191 (1873).

Allotment of Improved Part to Cotenant on Partition. — While this and the following sections of this Article do not apply to tenants in common or mortgagors and mortgagees, yet upon equitable principles a tenant in common placing improvements upon the property is entitled to have the part so improved allotted to him in partition and its value assessed as if no improvements had been made, if this can be done without prejudice to the interests of his cotentants; but this equitable principle does not apply as between mortgagor and mortgagee. Layton v. Byrd, 198 N.C. 466, 152 S.E. 161 (1930). See also, Jenkins v. Strickland, 214 N.C. 441, 199 S.E. 612 (1938).

Priority of Grantor's Judgment Creditors over Grantee Under Unregistered Deed. — One who has improved land held by him under an unregistered deed is not entitled to the value of the betterments as against judgment creditors of his grantor. Eaton v. Dorib, 190 N.C. 14, 128 S.E. 494 (1925).

Filing of Separate Claims by Each Group of Interveners. — This Article requires that a claim for betterments be filed in the action in which judgment for land has been rendered. Proper pleading would require each group of interveners to file a separate and distinct claim uncomplicated by reference to the claim of the other. Board of Comm'rs v. Bumpass, 237 N.C. 143, 74 S.E.2d 436 (1953).

Court Must Be Satisfied of Probable Truth. — The trial court must be satisfied of the probable truth of the allegations in a petition for betterments before it is required to impanel a jury to ascertain the value of the betterments. Hallyburton v. Slagle, 132 N.C. 957, 44 S.E. 659 (1903).

Either Party Entitled to Jury Assessment. — Either party is entitled to have the issue as to the value of betterments assessed by the jury, if he so desires. Fortesque v. Crawford, 105 N.C. 29, 10 S.E. 910 (1890).

Sheriff's Return of Writ as Execution of Judgment. — The sheriff's return of a writ of possession with the endorsement thereon is an execution of the judgment as contemplated by the section, notwithstanding the fact that the judgment is not satisfied. Boyer v. Garner, 116 N.C. 125, 21 S.E. 180 (1895).

Writ of Ouster Not to Issue Until Judgment for Betterments Is Satisfied. — The plaintiff who establishes a superior title is entitled to judgment for the land, but no writ of ouster should issue until defendant's judgment for betterments is satisfied. Board of Comm'rs v. Bumpass, 237 N.C. 143, 74 S.E.2d 436 (1953).

Cited in Scott v. Battle, 85 N.C. 184 (1881); Justice v. Baxter, 93 N.C. 405 (1885); Greenleaf v. Bartlett, 146 N.C. 495, 60 S.E. 419 (1908); Gann v. Spencer, 167 N.C. 429, 83 S.E. 620 (1914); Harris v. Ashley, 38 N.C. App. 494, 248 S.E.2d 393 (1978); McCoy v. Peach, 40 N.C. App. 6, 251 S.E.2d 881 (1979); Etheridge v. Etheridge, 41 N.C. App. 44, 255 S.E.2d 729 (1979); Britt v. Britt, 82 N.C. App. 303, 346 S.E.2d 259 (1986).

§ 1-341. Annual value of land and waste charged against defendant.

The jury, in assessing the damages, shall estimate against the defendant the clear annual value of the premises during the time he was in possession, exclusive of the use of the improvements thereon made by himself or those under whom he claims, and also the damages for waste or other injury to the premises committed by the defendant. The defendant is not liable for the annual value or for damages for waste or other injury for any longer time than three years before the suit, unless he claims for improvements. (1871-2, c. 147, ss. 2-3; Code, ss. 474, 475; Rev., ss. 653, 654; C.S., s. 700.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment, "Taking Without Compensation: Measure of Permanent Damages Modified by Application of Limitation of Actions for Trespass," see 20 Wake Forest L. Rev. 671 (1984).

CASE NOTES

Generally the owner of the land at the time of its recovery also owns the rents, and as the law gives to each what belongs to him, it awards to the owner the land and his rents, and to the occupant the value of his improvements. Harriett v. Harriett, 181 N.C. 75, 106 S.E. 221 (1921).

When Remaindermen May Not Recover Rents. — When one holding under a tenant for life by deed apparently conveying the lands in fee after her death is entitled to betterments, and he or the life tenant has received the rents and profits until that time, the remaindermen, after the death of the tenant for life, are not entitled to and may not recover such rents and profits, or have them credited on the value of the betterments, the ordinary rule to the contrary being inapplicable. Harriett v. Harriett, 181 N.C. 75, 106 S.E. 221 (1921).

Rents and rental values of the lands, which were obtained by defendants solely by reason of improvements put on the lands by themselves, could not be used to offset compensation to defendants for these improvements. Harrison v. Darden, 223 N.C. 364, 26 S.E.2d 860 (1943).

Where defendants disclaim all right and title to a part of the locus in an action of ejectment, plaintiffs are entitled to recover the reasonable rental value of that part for the three years next preceding the institution of the action. Hughes v. Oliver, 228 N.C. 680, 47 S.E.2d 6 (1948).

When Three-Year Limitation Inapplicable. — Where one in possession of lands is entitled to recover against the true owner for betterments he has placed thereon, he will be charged with the use and occupation of the land, without regard to the three-year statute of limitation. Whitfield v. Boyd, 158 N.C. 451, 74 S.E. 452 (1912); Pritchard v. Williams, 176 N.C. 108, 96 S.E. 733 (1918), rehearing denied, 178 N.C. 444, 101 S.E. 85 (1919).

Options of Rightful Owners. — Rightful owners of lot must compensate defendants who purchased said property by quitclaim deed at a foreclosure sale for improvements. However, as this alternative may be impractical, rightful owners may opt to relinquish their estate to defendants, who in turn must pay rightful owners the value of the property in its unimproved condition; rightful owners are also entitled to the rents and profits from the property in its unimproved condition for the period of defendants' possession. If rightful owners fail to exercise one of these options, the value of the improvements becomes a lien, and if not paid, a sale of the premises will be ordered. Jenkins v. Richmond County, 99 N.C. App. 717, 394 S.E.2d 258 (1990), cert. denied, 328 N.C. 572, 403 S.E.2d 512 (1991).

Erroneous Instruction. — Under this section, it is error for the court to give a charge which fails to instruct the jury that in making the assessment the use of the improvements made on the premises by the defendant should be excluded. Edwards v. Edwards, 235 N.C. 93, 68 S.E.2d 822 (1952).

§ 1-342. Value of improvements estimated.

If the jury is satisfied that the defendant, or those under whom he claims, made on the premises, at a time when there was reason to believe the title good under which he or they were holding the premises, permanent and valuable improvements, they shall estimate in his favor the value of the improvements made before notice, in writing, of the title under which the plaintiff claims, not exceeding the amount actually expended in making them and not exceeding the amount to which the value of the premises is actually increased thereby at the time of the assessment. (1871-2, c. 147, s. 4; Code, s. 476; Rev., s. 655; C.S., s. 701.)

CASE NOTES

"Permanent" Defined. — The statute does not permit a recovery except for improvements that are permanent and valuable. The word "permanent" is defined in the Century Dictionary as "lasting, or intended to last indefinitely," "fixed or enduring," "abiding," and the like. Pritchard v. Williams, 181 N.C. 46, 106 S.E. 144 (1921).

Value of Property Permanently Enhanced as Sole Matter for Consideration. — The sole matter for consideration is embraced in one proposition: How much was the value of the property permanently enhanced, estimated as of the time of the recovery of the same, by the betterments put thereon by the labor and expenditure of the bona fide holder of the same? Pritchard v. Williams, 181 N.C. 46, 106 S.E. 144 (1921).

Measure of Value of Betterments. — The measure of the value of the betterments is not the actual cost of their erection, but the enhanced value they impart to the land, without reference to the fact that they were not desired by the true owner, or could profitably be used by him in the prosecution of his business. Carolina Cent. R.R. v. McCaskill, 98 N.C. 526, 4 S.E. 468 (1887).

If unsuitable improvements are put upon the premises, no matter what the cost, the jury can find that there was no enhancement to the property thereby, so if the improvements were unnecessary or injudiciously made, the jury would consider the same. But it is not essential that they be useful to the plaintiff. Pritchard v. Williams, 181 N.C. 46, 106 S.E. 144 (1921).

Question for the Jury. — It is a matter of fact for the jury, rather than one of law, to estimate upon the evidence whether improvements have added permanent enhanced value to the realty. Pritchard v. Williams, 181 N.C. 46, 106 S.E. 144 (1921).

Recovery by Trustee in Bankruptcy. — The trustee of one who has been adjudged a bankrupt and has theretofore paid money for improvements put upon the lands of another by his consent, in fraud of the rights of his creditors, may recover as for betterments the value of the improvements to the land, but not a greater amount so expended. Garland v. Arrowood, 179 N.C. 697, 103 S.E. 2 (1920).

Cited in Wetherell v. German, 74 N.C. 603 (1876); Daniel v. Crumpler, 75 N.C. 184 (1876); Barrett v. Williams, 220 N.C. 32, 16 S.E.2d 405 (1941).

§ 1-343. Improvements to balance rents.

If the sum estimated for the improvements exceeds the damages estimated against the defendant as aforesaid, the jury shall then estimate against him for any time before the said three years the rents and profits accrued against or damages for waste or other injury done by him, or those under whom he claims, so far as is necessary to balance his claim for improvements; but the defendant in such case shall not be liable for the excess, if any, of such rents, profits, or damages beyond the value of improvements. (1871-2, c. 147, s. 5; Code, s. 477; Rev., s. 656; C.S., s. 702.)

CASE NOTES

If the betterments exceed in value the rental and damages for waste, the rents and profits accruing prior to the three years may be assessed so far as to balance the improvements, but no further. Barker v. Owen, 93 N.C. 198 (1885); Whitfield v. Boyd, 158 N.C. 451, 74 S.E. 452 (1912).

§ 1-344. Verdict, judgment, and lien.

After offsetting the damages assessed for the plaintiff, and the allowances to the defendant for any improvements, the jury shall find a verdict for the balance for the plaintiff or defendant, as the case may be, and judgment shall be entered therefor according to the verdict. Any such balance due to the defendant is a lien upon the land recovered by the plaintiff until it is paid. (1871-2, c. 147, ss. 6, 7; Code, ss. 478, 479; Rev., ss. 657, 658; C.S., s. 703.)

CASE NOTES

The sum adjudged the defendant constitutes a lien upon the land, and this can only be made effectual and enforced, if not paid, by a sale of the premises. Barker v. Owen, 93 N.C. 198 (1885).

In ejectment a writ of ouster should not issue until judgment for betterments has been paid. Bond v. Wilson, 129 N.C. 325, 40 S.E. 179 (1901).

§ 1-345. Life tenant recovers from remainderman.

If the plaintiff claims only an estate for life in the land recovered and pays any sum allowed to the defendant for improvements, he or his personal representative may recover at the determination of his estate from the remainderman or reversioner, the value of the said improvements as they then exist, not exceeding the amount as paid by him, and he has a lien therefor on the premises as if they had been mortgaged for the payment thereof, and may keep possession of said premises until it is paid. (1871-2, c. 147, s. 8; Code, s. 480; Rev., s. 659; C.S., s. 704.)

CASE NOTES

It is the general rule that a life tenant is not entitled to compensation from the remainderman for the enhancement of the property by reason of his improvements. Harriett v. Harriett, 181 N.C. 75, 106 S.E. 221 (1921).

A devise of lands for life with limitation over does not entitle the life tenant to compensation for betterments he has placed on the land during his tenancy. Northcott v. Northcott, 175 N.C. 148, 95 S.E. 104 (1918).

Mistaken Belief as to Rights Under Contract. — The section did not apply to a situation where the tenant made improvements upon land during his occupation, as lessee, where he believed he was entitled to the possession for the lessor's life, when under the contract he was not; nor did the fact that the lessor silently acquiesced in the putting up of the improvements change the situation. Dunn v. Bagby, 88 N.C. 91 (1883).

§ 1-346. Value of premises without improvements.

When the defendant claims allowance for improvements, the plaintiff may by entry on the record require that the value of his estate in the premises without the improvements shall also be ascertained. The value of the premises in such cases shall be estimated as it would have been at the time of the inquiry, if no such improvements had been made by the tenant or any person under whom he claims, and shall be ascertained in the manner hereinbefore provided for estimating the value of improvements. (1871-2, c. 147, ss. 10-11; Code, ss. 482, 483; Rev., ss. 661, 662; C.S., s. 705.)

CASE NOTES

Betterments Ignored in Assessing Rents. — The rents should be assessed upon the basis of the property without the betterments. Barker v. Owen, 93 N.C. 198 (1885); Whitfield v. Boyd, 158 N.C. 451, 74 S.E. 452 (1912).

The sole question is: How much was the value of the property permanently enhanced, estimated as of the time of the recovery of the same, by the betterments put thereon by the labor and expenditure of the bona fide holder of the same. Board of Comm'rs v. Bumpass, 237 N.C. 143, 74 S.E.2d 436 (1953).

§ 1-347. Plaintiff's election that defendant take premises.

The plaintiff in such case, if judgment is rendered for him, may, at any time during the same term, or before judgment is rendered on the assessment of the value of the improvements, in person or by his attorney in the cause, enter on the record his election to relinquish his estate in the premises to the defendant at the value as ascertained, and the defendant shall thenceforth hold all the estate that the plaintiff had therein at the commencement of the suit, if he pays therefor the said value with interest in the manner ordered by the court. (1871-2, c. 147, s. 12; Code, s. 484; Rev., s. 663; C.S., s. 706.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Mistaken Improvers of Real Estate," see 64 N.C.L. Rev. 37 (1985).

CASE NOTES

If the enhanced value is greatly disproportionate to the value of the land unimproved, so that it might almost be said that the owner is "improved out of his property," he has an election to let the land go, relinquishing his estate, upon payment by the defendant of its value as unimproved. Barker v. Owen, 93 N.C. 198 (1885).

Options of Rightful Owners. — Rightful owners of lot must compensate defendants who purchased said property by quitclaim deed at a foreclosure sale for improvements. However, as this alternative may be impractical, rightful owners may opt to relinquish their estate to defendants, who in turn must pay rightful owners the value of the property in its unimproved condition; rightful owners are also entitled to the rents and profits from the property in its unimproved condition for the period of defendants' possession. If rightful owners fail to exercise one of these options, the value of the improvements becomes a lien, and if not paid, a sale of the premises will be ordered. Jenkins v. Richmond County, 99 N.C. App. 717, 394 S.E.2d 258 (1990), cert. denied, 328 N.C. 572, 403 S.E.2d 512 (1991).

§ 1-348. Payment made to court; land sold on default.

The payment must be made to the plaintiff, or into court for his use, and the land is bound therefor, and if the defendant fails to make the payment within or at the times limited therefor, the court may order the land sold and the proceeds applied to the payment of said value and interest, and any surplus to be paid to the defendant; but if the net proceeds are insufficient to satisfy the said value and interest, the defendant is not bound for the deficiency. (1871-2, c. 147, s. 13; Code, s. 485; Rev., s. 664; C.S., s. 707.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Mistaken Improvers of Real Estate," see 64 N.C.L. Rev. 37 (1985).

CASE NOTES

If payment is not made to the plaintiff or into court for his use within a time to be fixed by the court, a sale may be ordered, and therefrom the sum due the plaintiff taken, and the residue, if any, paid to defendant. Barker v. Owen, 93 N.C. 198 (1885).

§ 1-349. Procedure where plaintiff is under disability.

If the party by or for whom the land is claimed in the suit is a minor or insane person, such value is deemed to be real estate, and shall be disposed of as the court considers proper for the benefit of the persons interested therein. (1871-2, c. 147, s. 14; Code, s. 486; Rev., s. 665; C.S., s. 708; 1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 742, s. 2.)

§ 1-350. Defendant evicted, may recover from plaintiff.

If the defendant, his heirs or assigns, after the premises are so relinquished to him, is evicted by force of a better title than that of the original plaintiff, the person so evicted may recover from the plaintiff or his representatives the amount paid for the premises, as so much money had and received by the plaintiff in his lifetime for the use of such person, with lawful interest thereon from the time of the payment. (1871-2, c. 147, s. 15; Code, s. 487; Rev., s. 666; C.S., s. 709.)

§ 1-351. Not applicable to suit by mortgagee.

Nothing in this Article applies to any suit brought by a mortgagee or his heirs or assigns against a mortgagor or his heirs or assigns for the recovery of the mortgaged premises. (1871-2, c. 147, s. 9; Code, s. 481; Rev., s. 660; C.S., s. 710.)

CASE NOTES

As to legislative intent, see Wharton v. Moore, 84 N.C. 479 (1881).

Where the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee is terminated by foreclosure prior to claimant's possession under mesne conveyances from the mortgagor, this section does not apply. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Allen, 208 N.C. 13, 179 S.E. 15 (1935).

Supplemental Proceedings.

§ 1-352. Execution unsatisfied, debtor ordered to answer.

When an execution against property of a judgment debtor, or any one of several debtors in the same judgment, issued to the sheriff of the county where he resides or has a place of business, or if he does not reside in the State, to the sheriff of the county where a judgment roll or a transcript of a judgment is filed, is returned wholly or partially unsatisfied, the judgment creditor at any time after the return, and within three years from the time of issuing the execution, is entitled to an order from the court to which the execution is returned or from the judge thereof, requiring such debtor to appear and answer concerning his property before such court or judge, at a time and place specified in the order, within the county to which the execution was issued. (C.C.P., s. 264; 1868-9, c. 95, s. 2; Code, s. 488, subsec. 1; Rev., s. 667; C.S., s. 711; 1971, c. 268, s. 21.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on supplemental proceedings or creditor's bill in North Carolina, see 35 N.C.L. Rev. 414 (1957).

CASE NOTES

Supplemental Proceedings as Substitute for Creditor's Bill. — Supplemental proceedings were intended to supply the place of proceedings in equity, where relief was given after a creditor had ascertained his debt by a judgment at law, and was unable to obtain satisfaction by process of law. Such proceedings are held to be a substitute for the former creditor's bill, and are governed by the principles established under the former practice in administering this species of relief in behalf of judgment creditors. Rand v. Rand, 78 N.C. 12 (1878). See also, Carson v. Oates, 64 N.C. 115 (1870); Dillard v. Walker, 204 N.C. 67, 167 S.E. 632 (1933).

The proceeding is intended to perfect the creditors' remedy in the same action and to supersede that which in a divided jurisdiction was attainable before by a bill of equity. Bronson v. Wilmington N.C. Life Ins. Co., 85 N.C. 411 (1881).

Supplemental proceedings differ from the old creditor's bill, however, in that the latter operated for the benefit of all creditors who chose to come in, while the former are only beneficial to the particular creditors who institute them. Righton v. Pruden, 73 N.C. 61 (1875).

Proceedings supplementary to execution are but a prolongation of the action necessary to the final discharge of the judgment, the purpose being that all matters affecting the complete satisfaction and determination of the action shall be settled in the same action, instead of by a multiplicity of suits. Rand v. Rand, 78 N.C. 12 (1878).

Such proceedings are in the nature of an equitable execution, and are intended to discover and reach the property of the debtor, of every nature and kind, and apply the same according to law, to the payment of the judgment. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 92 N.C. 376 (1885); Vegelahn v. Smith, 95 N.C. 254 (1886).

The proceedings under this section are in the nature of equitable proceedings. Johnson Cotton Co. v. Reaves, 225 N.C. 436, 35 S.E.2d 408 (1945).

And Are in the Nature of a Final Process. — Supplemental proceedings under this section are in the nature of a final process, when viewed either as a substitute for a creditor's bill to enforce the payment of a judgment at law or as a proceeding having the essential qualities of an equitable fieri facias. Goodwin v. Claytor, 137 N.C. 224, 49 S.E. 173 (1904).

Finality of Judgment. — A judgment, whether just or unjust, if regularly taken in a court of competent jurisdiction, may be enforced by proceedings supplementary thereto, and the judgment cannot be attacked by any member of the defendant corporation, or its creditors, except for fraud or collusion. Heggie v. People's Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 107 N.C. 581, 12 S.E. 275 (1890).

Supreme Court Not Empowered to Act. — The provisions respecting supplemental proceedings are not applicable to the Supreme Court, and no power has been given it to issue an attachment in such case. Phillips v. Trezevant, 70 N.C. 176 (1874).

When Proceedings Authorized. — To authorize the grant of an order of examination, these three facts must be made to appear, by affidavit or otherwise: (1) The want of known property liable to execution, which is provided by the sheriff's return of "unsatisfied"; (2) The nonexistence of any equitable estates in land within the lien of the judgment; and (3) The existence of property, choses in action and things of value unaffected by any lien and incapable of levy. A.A. McKeithan & Sons v. Walker, 66 N.C. 95 (1872); Hutchison v. Symons, 67 N.C. 156 (1872); Hinsdale v. Sinclair, 83 N.C. 338 (1880).

Federal Proceedings. — The requirement of this section that discovery take place before a court official is unsubstantial surplusage, not necessary to be replicated in a federal proceeding. Travelers Indem. Co. v. Hash Mgt., Inc., 173 F.R.D. 150 (M.D.N.C. 1997).

Execution Must Have Been Issued Within Past Three Years. — Supplemental proceedings are based upon an execution and may not be instituted against a defendant when there has been no execution issued within three years from the institution of such supplemental proceedings. International Harvester Co. of Am. v. Brockwell, 202 N.C. 805, 164 S.E. 322 (1932).

Where the ordinary execution is returned unsatisfied in whole or part, the judgment creditor, at any time after such return, within three years from the time the execution is issued, is entitled to an order of the court, requiring the debtor to appear and answer respecting his property. Vegelahn v. Smith, 95 N.C. 254 (1886).

Personal Demand on Debtor Unnecessary. — A personal demand on the debtor that he apply his property to the satisfaction of the creditor's claim, is not necessary to authorize supplemental proceedings. The prosecution of the suit to judgment and execution is a sufficient demand. Weiller & Co. v. Lawrence, 81 N.C. 65 (1879).

Who Are Entitled to Benefits. — Only those creditors who bring themselves within the provisions of the statute by instituting supplementary proceedings are entitled to the benefit thereof. Righton v. Pruden, 73 N.C. 61 (1875).

Interpleader Held Improper. — The owner of orders for the payment of shares of stock in a corporation could not be allowed to interplead in supplementary proceedings by plaintiff judgment creditor who had obtained his judgment. Heggie v. People's Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 107 N.C. 581, 12 S.E. 275 (1890).

As to the availability of supplemental proceedings against mentally incompetent defendants, see Blake v. Respass, 77 N.C. 193 (1877).

Proceedings Lie Against Private Corporations. — Proceedings supplemental to execution lie against a private corporation created by a special act of the legislature and organized for the purposes of private gain for its shareholders. La'Fountain v. Southern Underwriters' Ass'n, 79 N.C. 514 (1878).

The court has the power to order production of proper papers pertinent to the issue to be tried, and in possession of the opposite party. Johnson Cotton Co. v. Reaves, 225 N.C. 436, 35 S.E.2d 408 (1945).

Where the examination of the debtor in supplementary proceedings shows that his books of accounts contain evidence material to the investigation, he should be required to produce them. Johnson Cotton Co. v. Reaves, 225 N.C. 436, 35 S.E.2d 408 (1945).

Accounting of Partnership Affairs. — In order to ascertain if there are any assets of the partnership remaining, a full accounting of the partnership affairs is appropriate, and should be had. Johnson Cotton Co. v. Reaves, 225 N.C. 436, 35 S.E.2d 408 (1945).

Authority of Clerk. — This section confers upon the clerk of the superior court, acting for and in the place of the court, authority to hear and allow or disallow the motion of the plaintiffs for an order requiring the defendants to "appear and answer" concerning their property as therein allowed. Farmers Nat'l Bank v. Burns, 107 N.C. 465, 12 S.E. 252 (1890).

Where the defendant was ordered to appear before the clerk to be examined in a supplementary proceeding, and the clerk was properly informed that a similar proceeding was then pending before the judge, the clerk should have refused to proceed, and when he failed to do so, the judge had the power to order that he desist from further action. Ledford v. Emerson, 143 N.C. 527, 55 S.E. 969 (1906).

Appeal from Clerk's Order. — From an order requiring the debtor to appear, made by the clerk, an appeal lay at once to the judge as a matter of right, and the clerk could not allow or disallow it. Farmers Nat'l Bank v. Burns, 107 N.C. 465, 12 S.E. 252 (1890).

Choses in Action. — In proceedings supplemental to execution, notes owned and held by the judgment debtor, or hypothecated as collateral to his own notes made to a bank, are choses in action, and the bank may apply them to the payment of its own claims against the judgment debtor, in accordance with the terms of hypothecation, when the same have matured, and when not matured it has an equitable right of setoff when the debtor is insolvent, to the extent necessary to protect its own interest, and, also, the right of application according to any contract it may hold, which specifically affects the property. McIntosh Grocery Co. v. Newman, 184 N.C. 370, 114 S.E. 535 (1922).

Choses in action cannot be reached by execution. They are subjected to the satisfaction of a judgment under the practice prevailing in this State by supplemental proceedings under this section which are in the nature of an equitable fieri facias or creditor's bill. Newberry v. Davison Chem. Co., 65 F.2d 724 (4th Cir. 1933), cert. denied, 290 U.S. 660, 54 S. Ct. 75, 78 L. Ed. 571 (1933).

Bank Deposits. — A bank may apply the deposits of its customer to the payment of his note after maturity, by way of setoff, unless some other creditor has in the meantime acquired a superior right thereof in some way recognized by the law; and a mere notice to the bank in proceedings supplemental to execution is insufficient to deprive the bank of this right. McIntosh Grocery Co. v. Newman, 184 N.C. 370, 114 S.E. 535 (1922).

No Right to Attach Part of Judgment Owned by Person Other Than Defendant. — Where at the time of the rendition of a judgment another person was the equitable owner of a stipulated part thereof, defendant had no legal or equitable interest in such part, and plaintiff was not entitled to attach such part in the supplemental proceedings instituted by it against defendant. Armour Fertilizer Works v. Newbern, 210 N.C. 9, 185 S.E. 471 (1936).

Property held by the entirety is not subject to execution to satisfy judgments against one spouse. Hodge v. Hodge, 12 N.C. App. 574, 183 S.E.2d 800, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 884 (1971).

But Proceeds of Entirety Property May Be Applied Against Debts of One Spouse. — Proceeds of entirety property were the property of the husband as against the wife, and such proceeds could be applied against debts of the husband alone. Hodge v. Hodge, 12 N.C. App. 574, 183 S.E.2d 800, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 884 (1971).

The income from rental property held by the entirety was not protected from attachment to satisfy the debts of the husband merely because it was derived from entirety property. Hodge v. Hodge, 12 N.C. App. 574, 183 S.E.2d 800, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 884 (1971).

Notice Required. — If jurisdiction has never been acquired over the principal defendant, so that a personal judgment can be rendered against him, notice, either actual or constructive, must be given him of any proceedings to reach his property, or by which his rights are to be determined, whether the suit be by garnishment or otherwise, for the reason that no one's rights may be concluded by any proceeding until he has had his day in court. But in all cases in which he has been personally served with process, or has appeared, so that jurisdiction is acquired by the court to render a personal judgment against him, no notice need be given him of any proceedings by garnishment, instituted in aid of such action, or to collect the judgment rendered therein, unless such notice is required by some provision of the statute under which the garnishment suit is conducted. Wright v. Railroad, 141 N.C. 164, 53 S.E. 831 (1906).

Time and Place of Examination in Discretion of Court. — The requirement of 10 days' notice of motions generally has no reference to the examination of judgment debtors under supplementary proceedings, but such cases are governed by this section, which refers the time and place of examination to the discretion of the court or judge. Weiller & Co. v. Lawrence, 81 N.C. 65 (1879).

Suit Held New and Independent. — Where a judgment creditor of a corporation caused an execution to issue, which was returned unsatisfied, and then brought a suit for himself and all other creditors against the corporation and its stockholders, demanding an accounting to ascertain the amount due upon unpaid stock, to pay the debt of the corporation, such suit was a new and independent action, and was not demurrable on the ground that his remedy was by proceeding supplementary to execution. Bronson v. Wilmington N.C. Life Ins. Co., 85 N.C. 411 (1881).

Order Held Sufficient to Bring Board Before Court. — Order of the court in the supplemental proceeding, directing the chairman of the board of trustees of the judgment-debtor church to appear and answer, was sufficient to being the board of trustees before the court and make the board of trustees subject to its jurisdiction. Fishel & Taylor v. Grifton United Methodist Church, 22 N.C. App. 647, 207 S.E.2d 330 (1974).

Applied in Underwood v. Stafford, 270 N.C. 700, 155 S.E.2d 211 (1967); Atlantic Purchasers, Inc. v. Aircraft Sales, Inc., 101 F.R.D. 779 (W.D.N.C. 1984).

Stated in FDIC v. British-American Corp., 726 F. Supp. 622 (E.D.N.C. 1989).

Garrett, 260 N.C. 118, 131 S.E.2d 675 (1963); Wilson v. Crab Orchard Dev. Co., 276 N.C. 198, 171 S.E.2d 873 (1970); Sampson County Child Support Enforcement Agency ex rel. Bolton v. Bolton, 93 N.C. App. 134, 377 S.E.2d 88 (1989).

§ 1-352.1. Interrogatories to discover assets.

As an additional method of discovering assets of a judgment debtor, the judgment creditor may prepare and serve on the judgment debtor written interrogatories concerning his property, at any time the judgment remains unsatisfied, and within three years from the time of issuing an execution. Such written interrogatories shall be fully answered under oath by the judgment debtor within 30 days of service on the judgment debtor, and the answer shall be filed by the judgment debtor with the clerk of the superior court wherein the original judgment is docketed. Copy of said answer shall be served upon the party submitting said written interrogatories, in the manner provided by the Rules of Civil Procedure.

Interrogatories may relate to any matters which can be inquired into under G.S. 1-352, and the debtor may object to any interrogatories that are deemed improper, but the making of objections shall not delay the answering of interrogatories to which objection is not made. If the objections are overruled, the court shall fix the time for answering the interrogatories. The number of interrogatories or sets of interrogatories to be served is not limited except as justice requires to protect the party from annoyance, expense, embarrassment or oppression.

Upon failure of the judgment debtor to answer fully the written interrogatories, the judgment creditor may petition the court for an order requiring the judgment debtor to answer fully, which order shall be served upon the judgment debtor in the same manner as a summons is served pursuant to the Rules of Civil Procedure, fixing the time within which the judgment debtor can answer the interrogatives. In addition, the order shall provide, as an alternative, that the judgment debtor may mail the judgment creditor, by certified mail, within five days of the date of service of the order, a specific request for a hearing before a court or judge to answer oral questions concerning his property rather than answering the written interrogatories. Upon timely receipt of this request, the judgment creditor shall request the court to calendar the hearing.

Any person who disobeys an order of the court may be punished by the judge as for a contempt under the provisions of G.S. 1-368. (1971, c. 529, s. 1; 1979, c. 648.)

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

CASE NOTES

Refusal to Answer Not Justified. — The mere fact that an amendment to defendant's tax returns was selected for examination by the IRS was insufficient to justify defendant's refusal to answer interrogatories under this section, as there was insufficient evidence that his answers to the interrogatories could be used against defendant in a subsequent criminal action so as to create a real danger of self-incrimination. J.M. Heinike Assocs. v. Vesce, 86 N.C. App. 376, 357 S.E.2d 409, appeal dismissed, 320 N.C. 793, 361 S.E.2d 77 (1987).

§ 1-352.2. Additional method of discovering assets.

In addition to the other provisions of this Article and as an additional method of discovering assets of a judgment debtor the clerk of the court or a judge of the court in the county wherein the original judgment is docketed, at any time the judgment remains unsatisfied, and within three years from the time of issuing an execution, upon motion of the judgment creditor showing good cause therefor, may:

(1) Order the judgment debtor, his agent or anyone having possession or control of property or records of or pertaining to the judgment debtor, to produce and permit the inspection and copying or photographing, by or on behalf of the moving party, of any designated documents, papers, books, accounts, all tax records, letters, objects or tangible things, not privileged, constituting property, or being evidence of property, of the judgment debtor and which are in his possession and custody, or subject to his control; or

(2) Order the judgment debtor or anyone acting for or on his behalf to permit entry upon designated land or other property, real or personal, in his possession or control or subject to his control for the purpose of inspecting, measuring, surveying, appraising, copying, or photographing the property of the judgment debtor.

(3) Prior notice of the motion, together with a copy thereof, shall be served on the judgment debtor as provided by the Rules of Civil Procedure. Upon the hearing, the order entered shall specify the time, place, and manner for compliance therewith and may prescribe such terms and conditions as are just.

(4) Any person who shall fail to comply with an order entered pursuant to this section may be punished as for a contempt under the provisions of G.S. 1-368. (1971, c. 711, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

CASE NOTES

Applied in Atlantic Purchasers, Inc. v. Aircraft Sales, Inc., 101 F.R.D. 779 (W.D.N.C. 1984).

§ 1-353. Property withheld from execution; proceedings.

After the issuing of an execution against property, and upon proof by affidavit of a party, his agent or attorney, to the satisfaction of the court or a judge thereof, that any judgment debtor residing in the district court district as defined in G.S. 7A-133 or superior court district as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1, as the case may be, where such judge or sheriff resides has property which he unjustly refuses to apply toward the satisfaction of the judgment, such court or judge may, by order, require the judgment debtor to appear at a specified time and place, to answer concerning the same; and proceedings may thereupon be had for the application of the property of the judgment debtor towards the satisfaction of the judgment as provided upon the return of an execution, and the judgment creditor is entitled to the order of examination under this section and G.S. 1-352 although the judgment debtor has an equitable estate in land subject to the lien of the judgment, or choses in action, or other things of value unaffected by the lien of the judgment and incapable of levy. (C.C.P., s. 264; 1868-9, c. 95, s. 2; Code, s. 488, subsec. 2; Rev., s. 688; C.S., s. 712; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 39.)

Affidavit Required. — Extraordinary proceedings will not be ordered unless necessity therefor is made to appear by an affidavit that the debtor has no property which can be reached by the execution, and that he has property or choses in action or things of value "which he unjustly refuses to apply to the satisfaction of the judgment." Hutchison v. Symons, 67 N.C. 156 (1872). See also, First & Citizens Nat'l Bank v. Hinton, 213 N.C. 162, 195 S.E. 359 (1938).

Affidavit Must Negative Existence of Property Liable to Execution. — An affidavit is insufficient to warrant examination of the judgment debtor if it does not negative property in the defendant liable to execution and the existence of equitable interests which may be subjected by sale in the nature of an execution; but the omission of such negative averments may be remedied by amendment at the hearing. Weiller & Co. v. Lawrence, 81 N.C. 65 (1879); Hackney v. Arrington, 99 N.C. 110, 5 S.E. 747 (1888).

Affidavit Held Sufficient. — An affidavit by a judgment creditor, his agent or attorney, that an execution had been issued upon his judgment, though it had not been returned, and that the defendant had not sufficient property "subject to execution" to satisfy the judgment, but has property "not exempted from execution" which he unjustly refused to apply to its satisfaction, was sufficient to support an order for the examination of the debtor and persons alleged to be indebted to him. Farmers & Mechanics Nat'l Bank v. Burns, 109 N.C. 105, 13 S.E. 871 (1891).

Clerk's Finding of Fact Held Sufficient. — Where, upon the plaintiff's affidavit, the clerk found as a fact that execution under the judgment had been issued, in proceedings supplementary to execution, this was sufficient to sustain his order in that respect for the examination of the defendant and others, etc., which the lack of the return of execution did not affect. Boseman v. McGill, 184 N.C. 215, 114 S.E. 10 (1922).

The fact that the sheriff has an alias execution in his hands unreturned, which was issued on the same judgment on which supplemental proceedings have been taken, it no bar to such proceedings, and no ground on which they can be dismissed. Vegelahn v. Smith, 95 N.C. 254 (1886).

Sufficient Service of Order to Appear. — Leaving a copy of an order on a judgment debtor to appear and answer in supplemental proceedings with the debtor's wife was a sufficient notice. Turner v. Holden, 109 N.C. 182, 13 S.E. 731 (1891).

Court to Apply Property to Judgment. — The section intends that when the debtor refuses to apply property to the satisfaction of the judgment, he must, when duly required, answer concerning the same, to the end that the court, in a proper way, may so apply the property to which the debtor may direct attention. Farmers & Mechanics Nat'l Bank v. Burns, 109 N.C. 105, 13 S.E. 871 (1891).

Plaintiff need not proceed under this section before he can apply for a receiver under § 1-363. Massey v. Cates, 2 N.C. App. 162, 162 S.E.2d 589 (1968).

Applied in Richard Couture, Inc. v. Rowe, 263 N.C. 234, 139 S.E.2d 241 (1964).

Cited in Farmers & Mechanics Nat'l Bank v. Burns, 109 N.C. 105, 13 S.E. 871 (1891); Boseman v. McGill, 184 N.C. 215, 114 S.E. 10 (1922).

§ 1-354. Proceedings against joint debtors.

Proceedings supplemental to execution may be taken upon the return of an execution unsatisfied, issued upon a judgment recovered in an action against joint debtors, in which some of the defendants have not been served with the summons by which the action was commenced, so far as relates to the joint property of such debtors; and all actions by creditors to obtain satisfaction of judgments out of the property of joint debtors are maintainable in like manner and to the like effect. These provisions apply to all proceedings and actions pending and to those terminated by final decree or judgment. (C.C.P., s. 266; 1869-70, c. 79, s. 2; 1870-1, c. 245; Code, s. 490; Rev., s. 669; C.S., s. 713.)

CASE NOTES

Joint as well as single debtors may be examined after the issuance of an execution, and before its return. Weiller & Co. v. Lawrence, 81 N.C. 65 (1879).

§ 1-355. Debtor leaving State, or concealing himself, arrested; bond.

Instead of the order requiring the attendance of the judgment debtor, the court or judge may, upon proof by affidavit or otherwise to his satisfaction that there is danger of the debtor leaving the State or concealing himself, and that there is reason to believe that he has property which he unjustly refuses to apply to the judgment, issue a warrant requiring the sheriff of any county where such debtor is to arrest him and bring him before the court or judge. Upon being brought before the court or judge, the debtor may be examined on oath, and, if it appears that there is danger of his leaving the State, and that he has property which he has unjustly refused to apply to the judgment, he shall be ordered to enter into an undertaking, with one or more sureties, that he will, from time to time, attend before the court or judge as directed, and that he will not, during the pendency of the proceedings, dispose of any property not exempt from execution. In default of entering into such undertaking, he may be committed to prison by warrant of the court or judge, as for contempt. (1868-9, c. 148, s. 4; c. 277, s. 8; Code, s. 488, subsec. 4; Rev., s. 671; C.S., s. 714.)

CASE NOTES

§ 1-356. Examination of parties and witnesses.

On examination under this Article either party may examine witnesses in his behalf, and the judgment debtor may be examined in the same manner as a witness; and the party or witnesses may be required to appear before the court or judge, or a referee appointed by either, and testify on any proceedings under this Article in the same manner as upon the trial of an issue. If before a referee, the examination shall be taken by the referee, and certified to the court or judge. All examinations and answers before a court or judge or referee under this Article must be on oath, except that when a corporation answers, the answer shall be on the oath of an officer thereof. (C.C.P., ss. 264, 267, 268; 1868-9, c. 95, s. 2; 1871-2, c. 245; Code, ss. 488 [subsec. 2], 491, 492; Rev., ss. 670, 676; C.S., s. 715.)

CASE NOTES

Cross-Examination. — Where the judgment debtor is examined, the creditor does not make him his witness, but may cross-examine and contradict him. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 92 N.C. 376 (1885).

Evidence to Be Taken Down in Writing. — In supplemental proceedings the evidence should be taken down in writing. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 92 N.C. 376 (1885).

Production of Documents. — Where, on examination of a debtor, it appears that his account books are material to the investigation, the court may require him to produce them. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 92 N.C. 376 (1885).

§ 1-357. Incriminating answers not privileged; not used in criminal proceedings.

No person, on examination pursuant to this Article, is excused from answering any question on the ground that it will tend to convict him of the commission of a crime or that he has, before the examination, executed any conveyance, assignment or transfer of his property for any purpose, but his answer shall not be used as evidence against him in any criminal proceeding or prosecution. (C.C.P., s. 264; 1868-9, c. 95, s. 2; Code, s. 488, subsec. 5; Rev., s. 672; C.S., s. 716.)

CASE NOTES

Witness Must Answer Questions. — A witness must answer the questions, and he cannot shield himself behind his declaration that they involve self-incrimination. LaFontaine v. Southern Underwriters Ass'n, 83 N.C. 132 (1880).

When called to testify as to his dealings in behalf of a defunct corporation, of which he was an officer, a witness could not excuse himself on the ground that the evidence thus elicited might be used on the trial of indictments pending against him and others for conspiring to cheat and defraud others in the management of the affairs of such corporation. LaFontaine v. Southern Underwriters Ass'n, 83 N.C. 132 (1880).

Facts Divulged Are Not Available for Criminal Proceedings. — Facts developed on the examination of the defendants in supplemental proceedings are forbidden to be used in evidence against them in any criminal proceeding or prosecution. State v. Mallett, 125 N.C. 718, 34 S.E. 651 (1899), aff'd, 181 U.S. 589, 21 S. Ct. 730, 45 L. Ed. 1015 (1901).

§ 1-358. Disposition of property forbidden.

The court or judge may, by order, forbid a transfer or other disposition of, or any interference with, the property of the judgment debtor not exempt from execution. (C.C.P., s. 264; 1868-9, c. 95, s. 2; Code, ss. 488 [subsec. 6], 494; Rev., s. 673; C.S., s. 717.)

CASE NOTES

What Property Is Covered by This Section. — When this section and § 1-360 are read either singly or as a component part of this Article, it is plain that a supplemental proceeding against a third person is designed to reach and apply to the satisfaction of the judgment property of the judgment debtor in the hands of the third person or debts due to the judgment debtor by the third person at the time of the issuance and service of the order for the examination of the third person. Motor Fin. Co. v. Putnam, 229 N.C. 555, 50 S.E.2d 670 (1948).

Prospective Earnings Are Neither Property Nor Debt. — Prospective earnings of the judgment debtor are neither property nor a debt, and may not be reached in supplemental proceedings against the employer of the judgment debtor. Motor Fin. Co. v. Putnam, 229 N.C. 555, 50 S.E.2d 670 (1948).

Only Parties May Be Restrained. — In supplemental proceedings, the court cannot restrain the transfer of property owned by one who is not a party to the action. Farmers & Mechanics Nat'l Bank v. Burns, 109 N.C. 105, 13 S.E. 871 (1891).

Where it is alleged that a third person has property of the judgment debtor, it is error to restrain such third person from disposing of such property until the receiver can bring an action for its recovery, unless such person has been made a party in some way to the proceeding. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 94 N.C. 174 (1886).

§ 1-359. Debtors of judgment debtor may satisfy execution.

After the issuing of an execution against property, all persons indebted to the judgment debtor, or to any one of several debtors in the same judgment, may pay to the sheriff the amount of their debt, or as much thereof as is necessary to satisfy the execution; and the sheriff's receipt is a sufficient discharge for the amount paid. (C.C.P., s. 265; Code, s. 489; Rev., s. 674; C.S., s. 718.)

CASE NOTES

Protection Furnished to Debtors of Judgment Debtor. — The section furnishes an easily secured and safe protection to the debtors of the judgment debtor, who are called upon to satisfy the execution. Parks v. Adams, 113 N.C. 473, 18 S.E. 665 (1893).

Authority of Sheriff. — A sheriff is authorized by this section to receive from debtors of the defendant in the execution in his hands the debts due him, but he is not thereby invested with the power to apply the proceeds of one execution in satisfaction of another. Smith v. McMillan, 84 N.C. 593 (1881).

Payment by Bank of Amount in Debtor's Account. — Under this section, if it chooses, a bank may voluntarily pay to the sheriff the amount in a judgment debtor's bank account when it is notified that there is an outstanding writ of execution against its depositor. Faught v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 53 N.C. App. 132, 280 S.E.2d 26 (1981).

§ 1-360. Debtors of judgment debtor may be summoned.

Upon the issuing or return of an execution against property of the judgment debtor, or of any one of several debtors in the same judgment, and upon affidavit that any person or corporation has property of said judgment debtor, or is indebted to him in an amount exceeding ten dollars ($10.00), the court or judge may, by order, require such person or corporation, or any officer or members thereof, to appear at a specified time and place, and answer concerning the same; provided, however, that such inquiries may, in the discretion of the court, be answered by such person or corporation, or any officers or members thereof, by verified answers to interrogatories. The court or judge may also, in its or his discretion, require notice of the proceeding to be given to any party to the action, in such manner as seems proper. (C.C.P., s. 266; 1869-70, c. 79, s. 2; 1870-1, c. 245; Code, s. 490; Rev., s. 675; C.S., s. 719; 1989, c. 683; 1991, c. 426, s. 1; 1995, c. 257, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Supplemental Proceeding Against Third Persons. — When this section and § 1-362 are read singly or as an integral part of this Article, it is manifest that a supplemental proceeding against a third person is designed to reach and apply to the satisfaction of the judgment property of the judgment debtor in the hands of the third person at the time of the issuance and service of the order for the examination of the third person, which could not be reached by an execution at law. Cornelius v. Albertson, 244 N.C. 265, 93 S.E.2d 147 (1956).

Procedure When Third Person Claims Property. — The section expressly prescribes that persons having property of the judgment debtor may be examined in respect to the same, and mere notice is sufficient to bring them before the courts and make them subject to its jurisdiction for the purpose of securing the debtor's property, but not for the purpose of contesting any right of such persons having the same. If they claim an interest in the property, or that the same belongs to them, they may properly suggest so. Farmers & Mechanics Nat'l Bank v. Burns, 109 N.C. 105, 13 S.E. 871 (1891); Boseman v. McGill, 184 N.C. 215, 114 S.E. 10 (1922); Cornelius v. Albertson, 244 N.C. 265, 93 S.E.2d 147 (1956).

Where one who is charged in supplemental proceedings as holding property belonging to a judgment debtor claims such property as his own, the question cannot be decided in the course of such proceedings, but must be settled by an independent action. Carson v. Oates, 64 N.C. 115 (1870).

To What Property and Debts Section Applies. — When this section and § 1-358 are read either singly or as a component part of this Article, it is plain that a supplemental proceeding against a third person is designed to reach and apply to the satisfaction of the judgment property of the judgment debtor in the hands of the third person or debts due to the judgment debtor by the third person at the time of the issuance and service of the order for the examination of the third person. Motor Fin. Co. v. Putnam, 229 N.C. 555, 50 S.E.2d 670 (1948).

Prospective Earnings Are Neither Property Nor Debt. — Prospective earnings of the judgment debtor are neither property nor a debt, and may not be reached in supplemental proceedings against the employer of the judgment debtor. Motor Fin. Co. v. Putnam, 229 N.C. 555, 50 S.E.2d 670 (1948).

When Proceedings May Commence. — Proceedings under this section may be commenced before the sale of the property levied on, at the presentation of an affidavit or other proof of its insufficient value. A.A. McKeithan & Sons v. Walker, 66 N.C. 95 (1872).

Purpose of Appearance and Answer. — The purpose of the appearance and answer is to determine whether the sum alleged, or any part thereof, is due the judgment debtor. Rice v. Jones, 103 N.C. 226, 9 S.E. 571 (1889).

Assignee May Be Examined. — An order for examination may issue against the defendant's assignee. Bruce v. Crabtree, 116 N.C. 528, 21 S.E. 194 (1895).

Notice to Defendant. — Notice to the defendant is not required, though the court may, in its discretion, order notice to be given. City of Wilmington v. Sprunt, 114 N.C. 310, 19 S.E. 348 (1894); Wright v. Railroad, 141 N.C. 164, 53 S.E. 831 (1906).

Applied in Marx v. Maddrey, 106 F. Supp. 535 (E.D.N.C. 1952).

Quoted in FDIC v. British-American Corp., 726 F. Supp. 622 (E.D.N.C. 1989).

§ 1-360.1. Execution on the property of debtors of judgment debtor.

After the clerk of superior court determines to the clerk's satisfaction that the debtor of the judgment debtor acknowledged at a proceeding conducted pursuant to G.S. 1-360 that he is in possession of unencumbered property of such judgment debtor or is indebted to him in an amount exceeding ten dollars ($10.00), an execution shall issue against the property or debt of the judgment debtor that the debtor of the judgment debtor acknowledged he holds. (1991, c. 426, s. 2; 1995, c. 257, s. 2.)

§ 1-361. Where proceedings instituted and defendant examined.

Proceedings supplemental to execution must be instituted in the county in which the judgment was rendered; but the place designated where the defendant must appear and answer must be within the county where he resides. (Rev., s. 677; C.S., s. 720.)

CASE NOTES

History. — This section is a substantial enactment of the rule laid down Hasty v. Simpson, 77 N.C. 69 (1877). In In Hutchinson v. Symons, 67 N.C. 156 (1872), it was held that proceedings supplementary should be instituted in the county in which the action was pending; that is, where the judgment was rendered. Hasty v. Simpson, above, quoted and approved this holding, but in addition, held that the place designated for the appearance and answer of the defendant should be in the county of his residence.

Property Subject to Sale. — The court may order any property of the judgment debtor that is not exempt from execution, in the hands either of the judgment debtor or any other person, or due to the judgment debtor, to be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment. Rand v. Rand, 78 N.C. 12 (1878).

If it appears that a third person is indebted to the judgment debtor, the court may order such indebtedness, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment against the judgment debtor. Rice v. Jones, 103 N.C. 226, 9 S.E. 571 (1889).

Gratuitous Services. — While creditors may subject, in a supplementary proceeding, the debtor's choses in action, including a claim for compensation due for service rendered under an express or implied contract, they have no lien on his skill or attainments, and cannot compel him to exact compensation for managing his wife's property, or for services rendered to any person with the understanding that it was gratuitous. Osborne v. Wilkes, 108 N.C. 651, 13 S.E. 285 (1891).

Salaries of Public Officers and Employees. — For reasons of public policy, the salaries of officers and the pay of employees of the State cannot be reached by creditors by proceedings supplementary to execution. Swepson v. Turner, 76 N.C. 115 (1877).

Sale Required. — Where it appeared from an examination under supplementary proceedings that the judgment debtor held a claim against a third party, to be discharged by the delivery of corn at a stipulated price per bushel, it was error for the court to order such third person to deliver to the creditor a sufficient quantity of the corn, at the agreed price, to satisfy the debt. The proper order was to sell the corn and apply the proceeds to the debt. In re Davis, 81 N.C. 72 (1879).

Order for Condemnation of Debtor's Property. — In proceedings supplemental to execution, an order for the condemnation made by the clerk against land was within the scope of this section. Boseman v. McGill, 184 N.C. 215, 114 S.E. 10 (1922).

When Final Order May Be Made. — No final order may be made appropriating to the creditor any property discovered under § 1-360 until the property previously levied on is exhausted, for until that is done it cannot be known whether anything is still owing. A.A. McKeithan & Sons v. Walker, 66 N.C. 95 (1872).

Where supplemental proceedings were instituted upon return of execution unsatisfied on a judgment against a husband and wife, and it appeared that the husband was totally and permanently disabled and had no property upon which execution could be levied, but was receiving the sum of $300.00 a month under disability insurance, the judgment debtor was entitled, under his personal property exemption, to the $300.00 each month if such amount was necessary for the support of himself and his wife. Commissioner of Banks ex rel. Goldsboro Sav. & Trust Co. v. Yelverton, 204 N.C. 441, 168 S.E. 505 (1933).

§ 1-362. Debtor's property ordered sold.

The court or judge may order any property, whether subject or not to be sold under execution (except the homestead and personal property exemptions of the judgment debtor), in the hands of the judgment debtor or of any other person, or due to the judgment debtor, to be applied towards the satisfaction of the judgment; except that the earnings of the debtor for his personal services, at any time within 60 days next preceding the order, cannot be so applied when it appears, by the debtor's affidavit or otherwise, that these earnings are necessary for the use of a family supported wholly or partly by his labor. (C.C.P., s. 269; 1870-1, c. 245; Code, s. 493; Rev., s. 678; C.S., s. 721.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on protection of debtor's rights, see 48 N.C.L. Rev. 164 (1969).

For article analyzing North Carolina's exemptions law, see 18 Wake Forest L. Rev. 1025 (1982).

CASE NOTES

Construction of Section. — The language of this section is explicit and is to be given a liberal construction favorable to the exemption. Elmwood v. Elmwood, 295 N.C. 168, 244 S.E.2d 668 (1978).

The general rule is that North Carolina's exemption laws are to be liberally construed in favor of the exemption. In re Laues, 90 Bankr. 158 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

Applicability of Earnings Exemption. — The exemption of earnings for 60 days allowed to a judgment debtor under the section applies only as to proceedings on judgments for private debts and not for taxes due. City of Wilmington v. Sprunt, 114 N.C. 310, 19 S.E. 348 (1894).

The earnings of a nonresident for personal services for the 60 days next preceding are exempt from seizure in garnishment. Goodwin v. Claytor, 137 N.C. 224, 49 S.E. 173 (1904); Wierse v. Thomas, 145 N.C. 261, 59 S.E. 58 (1907).

As to garnishment of military retirement pay, see Elmwood v. Elmwood, 295 N.C. 168, 244 S.E.2d 668 (1978). As to garnishment for enforcement of child support, see § 110-136.

Protection of Wage-Earner's Second Family Against Alimony Claims of First Family. — While it would seem reasonable to suppose that what the legislature of 1870-71 had in mind, in enacting this exemption, was to protect the wage-earner's family from want as against claims of his other creditors, and that it was not contemplated that the needs of a wage-earner's second family should be supplied at the expense of the legitimate alimony claims of his first family, defendant's accumulated unpaid military retirement pay was exempt under this section from garnishment to enforce an alimony order where it plainly appeared from the defendant's affidavit that his retirement pay was necessary for the support of his second family, since this section is to be given a liberal construction favorable to the exemption. Elmwood v. Elmwood, 295 N.C. 168, 244 S.E.2d 668 (1978). As to garnishment to enforce child support, see § 110-136.

The State assumes the status of judgment lien creditor against the assets of an indigent defendant who has accepted court-appointed counsel and been found guilty of the offense. The lien is not valid unless the indigent defendant was given both notice of the State claim and the opportunity to resist its perfection in a hearing before the trial court. Alexander v. Johnson, 742 F.2d 117 (4th Cir. 1984).

North Carolina is not barred from structuring a program to collect the amount it is owed from a financially able defendant through reasonable and fairly administered procedures. The State's initiatives in this area naturally must be narrowly drawn to avoid either chilling the indigent's exercise of the right to counsel, or creating discriminating terms of repayment based solely on the defendant's poverty. Beyond these threshold requirements, however, the State has wide latitude to shape its attorneys' fees recoupment or restitution program along the lines it deems most appropriate for achieving lawful State objectives. Alexander v. Johnson, 742 F.2d 117 (4th Cir. 1984).

The developing jurisprudence does not require the state to absorb the expenses of providing court-appointed counsel when the defendant has acquired the financial ability to pay. Alexander v. Johnson, 742 F.2d 117 (4th Cir. 1984).

An indigent receiving court-appointed counsel will never be required to repay the State unless he becomes financially able. Alexander v. Johnson, 742 F.2d 117 (4th Cir. 1984).

The statutes and court decisions that regulate North Carolina's ability to recover costs of court-appointed counsel meet constitutional requirements. The indigent defendant's fundamental right to counsel is preserved under the system; he is given ample opportunity to challenge the decision to require repayment at all critical stages; and he is protected against heightened civil or criminal penalties based solely on his inability to pay. Alexander v. Johnson, 742 F.2d 117 (4th Cir. 1984).

The North Carolina statutes relating to the repayment of attorneys' fees by restitution embody all the required features of a constitutionally acceptable approach. The indigent defendant's fundamental right to counsel is preserved under the North Carolina statute and no preconditions are placed on the exercise of that right beyond a reasonable and minimally intrusive procedure designed to establish the fact of indigency. Alexander v. Johnson, 742 F.2d 117 (4th Cir. 1984).

North Carolina's procedures for imposing the reimbursement of court-appointed counsel fees as a condition of parole are narrowly drawn to avoid unfairness and discriminatory effects. Alexander v. Johnson, 742 F.2d 117 (4th Cir. 1984).

This statute has been expanded by the state courts to preclude execution on any future earnings to satisfy a judgment. Harris v. Hinson, 87 N.C. App. 148, 360 S.E.2d 118 (1987).

Future Rental Payments. — Since North Carolina has exempted future earnings from the definition of property due a judgment debtor for purposes of this section, future rental payments should be exempt as well. Jacobi-Lewis Co. v. Charco Enters., Inc., 121 N.C. App. 500, 466 S.E.2d 338 (1996).

The courts in this State cannot, through supplemental proceedings on execution, order a receiver to receive a person's wages in order to satisfy a judgment rendered in this State. Harris v. Hinson, 87 N.C. App. 148, 360 S.E.2d 118 (1987).

Judgment Debtor Is Free to Dispose of His Earnings. — Under the law as it now stands in this State, a judgment debtor can receive his salary and dispose of it in any manner he chooses, regardless of whether it contains an amount of funds in excess of what is required to satisfy his and his family's reasonable living expenses. If the debtor elects to accumulate no property other than that which is exempt from execution, even if he squanders his excess funds with the express intent of avoiding paying a judgment that by all the laws of principle and fairness he should be made to satisfy, the judgment creditor is, in this State, helpless to collect his judgment. Harris v. Hinson, 87 N.C. App. 148, 360 S.E.2d 118 (1987).

Broad Language in Loan Documents No Waiver of Debtor's Right to Exemption. — Where a credit union contended that it had a valid security interest in the debtor's account by virtue of broad language in loan documents by which the debtors pledged to the credit union all deposits in their checking account with the credit union as security for an automobile loan, and the debtors filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy action, the language of the loan documents did not constitute a waiver of debtors' right to exempt the account balance under either § 1C-1601 or this section. In re Laues, 90 Bankr. 158 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

§ 1-363. Receiver appointed.

The court or judge having jurisdiction over the appointment of receivers may also by order in like manner, and with like authority, appoint a receiver in proceedings under this Article of the property of the judgment debtor, whether subject or not to be sold under execution, except the homestead and personal property exemptions. But before the appointment of the receiver, the court or judge shall ascertain if practicable, by the oath of the party or otherwise, whether any other supplementary proceedings are pending against the judgment debtor, and if so, the plaintiff therein shall have notice to appear before him, and shall likewise have notice of all subsequent proceedings in relation to the receivership. No more than one receiver of the property of a judgment debtor shall be appointed. The title of the receiver relates back to the service of the restraining order, herein provided for. (C.C.P., s. 270; 1870-1, c. 245; 1876-7, c. 223; 1879, c. 63; 1881, c. 51; Code, s. 494; Rev., s. 679; C.S., s. 722.)

Cross References. — As to duties of receiver generally, see §§ 1-501 through 1-504.

CASE NOTES

Plaintiff need not proceed under § 1-353 before he can apply for a receiver under this section. Massey v. Cates, 2 N.C. App. 162, 162 S.E.2d 589 (1968).

In a race of diligence between creditors under supplementary proceedings, the earliest applicant is presumed to be entitled to the earliest appointment. Parks v. Sprinkle, 64 N.C. 637 (1870).

This section prescribes that there shall be only one receiver of the property of a judgment debtor, to prevent a conflict of authority between the courts having a concurrent jurisdiction over the subject. Corbin v. Berry &

McGowan, 83 N.C. 27 (1880).

Consolidation of Several Proceedings. — Where several supplemental proceedings are pending, and the same property is sought to be subjected, or where, in either of such proceedings, a receiver is appointed of property which is the subject of the other proceedings, the court should, in proper cases, order that the same be consolidated, preserving the priorities acquired by the superior diligence of the various litigants. Monroe Bros. v. Lewald, 107 N.C. 655, 12 S.E. 287 (1890).

Motion Pending Appeal. — The motion for appointment of a receiver may be made before the judge, pending an appeal to him from the ruling of the clerk upon other questions. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 92 N.C. 376 (1885).

Supporting Evidence and Affidavits. — The application for a receiver shall be made as in other cases, that is, the motion shall be supported by affidavits and other written or documentary evidence. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 92 N.C. 376 (1885).

Verified pleadings essentially operate as affidavits under this section and should be construed accordingly. Doxol Gas of Angier, Inc. v. Howard, 28 N.C. App. 132, 220 S.E.2d 203 (1975).

Grounds for Appointing Receiver. — A receiver is appointed almost as a matter of course where it appears that the judgment debtor has, or probably has, property that ought to be subjected to the satisfaction of the judgment, after the return of the execution unsatisfied. Massey v. Cates, 2 N.C. App. 162, 162 S.E.2d 589 (1968).

To warrant the appointment of a receiver, it need not appear, certainly or conclusively, that the defendant has property that he ought to apply to the judgment. If there is evidence tending in a reasonable degree to show that he probably has such property, or if it appears probable that he has made a fraudulent conveyance of his property as to his creditors, this is sufficient. Massey v. Cates, 2 N.C. App. 162, 162 S.E.2d 589 (1968).

It is sufficient for the appointment of a receiver if there is reasonable ground to believe that the judgment debtor has property which ought to be applied to the payment of the judgment. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 92 N.C. 376 (1885).

Judge's Action Subject to Review. — The appointment of a receiver in these proceedings does not rest solely in the discretion of the judge, and his action in appointing or refusing to appoint is subject to review. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 92 N.C. 376 (1885).

Effect of Judge's Failure to Ascertain If Other Proceedings Are Pending. — While it is the duty of a judge appointing a receiver under this section to ascertain if other supplemental proceedings are pending against the judgment debtor, and if so, to notify the plaintiffs therein of all proceedings before him, yet a failure to do so does not require the reversal of an order appointing a receiver, where some of the creditors actually appear and make themselves parties, and all have an opportunity to interpose before the final distribution of the fund. Corbin v. Berry & McGowan, 83 N.C. 27 (1880).

Appointment of Receiver Held Erroneous. — Where supplemental proceedings had discovered that the defendant held a specific fund which had been adjudged to belong to the plaintiff, and the clerk directed the defendant to pay over the same to the plaintiff, it was error in the judge on appeal to appoint a receiver to take charge of the fund until the plaintiff should institute an action to recover the specific fund. Ross v. Ross, 119 N.C. 109, 25 S.E. 792 (1896).

The receivership operates and reaches out in every direction as an equitable execution, and it is the business of the receiver, under the superintendence of the court, to make it effectual by all proper means. Massey v. Cates, 2 N.C. App. 162, 162 S.E.2d 589 (1968).

§ 1-364. Filing and record of appointment; property vests in receiver.

When the court or a judge grants an order for the appointment of a receiver of the property of the judgment debtor, it shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county where the judgment roll in the action or transcript of judgment, upon which the proceedings are taken, is filed; and the clerk shall record the order in a book to be kept for that purpose in his office, to be called Book of Orders Appointing Receivers of Judgment Debtors, and shall note the time of its filing therein. A certified copy of the order shall be delivered to the receiver named therein, and he is vested with the property and effects of the judgment debtor from the time of the service of the restraining order, if such restraining order has been made, and if not, from the time of the filing and recording of the order for the appointment of a receiver. The receiver of the judgment debtor is subject to the direction and control of the court in which the judgment was obtained upon which the proceedings are founded. (C.C.P., s. 270; 1870-1, c. 245; Code, s. 495; Rev., s. 680; C.S., s. 723; 1971, c. 268, s. 22.)

CASE NOTES

The general principles of law applicable to receivers apply to those appointed in supplemental proceedings. It is the duty of such receivers to take possession of the property of the debtor at once, and to bring actions to recover any property belonging to him which may be in the hands of third persons. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 92 N.C. 376 (1885).

Authority of Receiver. — While the court may exercise very great control over the receiver, and may direct, in appropriate cases, that he shall or shall not do particular things, yet, ordinarily, when he is invested with full power as a receiver, he will have authority to bring appropriate, necessary actions without special leave or direction of the court. Weill v. First Nat'l Bank, 106 N.C. 1, 11 S.E. 277 (1890).

A receiver may be appointed who is invested with all the property and effects of the debtor, and he may collect, preserve and pay out the property and estate of the debtor, or their proceeds, under the direction of the court. Rand v. Rand, 78 N.C. 12 (1878).

A receiver, in supplemental proceedings, may bring actions to recover the judgment debtor's property, without special leave or direction of the court. Weill v. First Nat'l Bank, 106 N.C. 1, 11 S.E. 277 (1890). See also, Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 92 N.C. 376 (1885).

When Property Vests in Receiver. — The receiver, by virtue of his appointment, becomes the legal assignee of the judgment, and is vested with the property therein. Turner v. Holden, 94 N.C. 70 (1886).

In proceedings supplementary to execution, if the debtor dies before the appointment of a receiver, or before the order of such appointment is filed in the office of the clerk of the superior court, the property and effects of such judgment debtor do not vest in the receiver. Rankin v. Minor, 72 N.C. 424 (1875).

Remedy of Debtor When Receiver Is Negligent. — If the receiver is negligent in the performance of his duty, the remedy of the judgment debtor might be in the removal of the receiver and appointment of a successor, or in seeking compensation in damages for the losses due to such negligence, and, if necessary, upon his bond to secure a faithful discharge of duty; but he cannot interfere with the receiver's collection and control of the property. Turner v. Holden, 94 N.C. 70 (1886).

§ 1-365. Where order of appointment recorded.

Before the receiver is vested with any real property of the judgment debtor, a certified copy of the order of appointment must be filed and recorded on the execution docket, in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county in which any real estate of the judgment debtor is situated, and also in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the debtor resides. (C.C.P., s. 270; Code, s. 496; Rev., s. 681; C.S., s. 724.)

CASE NOTES

Death of Judgment Debtor Before Order of Appointment Is Filed. — When the judgment debtor dies before the filing in the clerk's office of an order appointing a receiver, the judgment creditor has no lien on his property as against the administrator of the debtor. Rankin v. Minor, 72 N.C. 424 (1875).

Cited in Nobles v. Roberson, 212 N.C. 334, 193 S.E. 420 (1937).

§ 1-366. Receiver to sue debtors of judgment debtor.

If it appears that a person or corporation alleged to have property of the judgment debtor, or indebted to him, claims an interest in the property adverse to him, or denies the debt, such interest or debt is recoverable only in an action against such person or corporation by the receiver; but the court or judge may, by order, forbid a transfer or other disposition of such property or interest till a sufficient opportunity is given to the receiver to commence and prosecute the action to judgment and execution, but such order may at any time be modified or dissolved by the court or judge having jurisdiction on such security as he directs. (C.C.P., s. 271; 1870-1, c. 245; Code, s. 497; Rev., s. 682; C.S., s. 725.)

CASE NOTES

Court May Restrain Transfer of Property. — Under this section, when it is found that a third person, not a party to the action, claims an interest in the property or denies the debt which is sought by the plaintiff to be applied to his judgment as belonging to the judgment debtor, the court may, by an order in the cause, restrain the transfer of such property till the receiver can bring an action to recover it, but such is brought by the receiver as the agent of the court. Ross v. Ross, 119 N.C. 109, 25 S.E. 792 (1896).

Notice of Order Restraining Transfer. — This section cannot be construed as implying that the order forbidding "the transfer or other disposition of such property or interest" may be made without notice to the party to be affected by it. Such an interpretation would produce an effect that would contravene natural justice, as well as fundamental right. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 94 N.C. 174 (1886).

Interpleader by Claimants to Fund. — Where in supplemental proceedings it was adjudged that the fund in question belonged to the judgment debtor, and an order was made that the fund should be paid into court, and afterwards, upon claim made by another, the clerk refused to pay the money to him, and appointed a receiver, who brought an action against the judgment debtor to try the question of title to the fund, it was held that defendants, claimants to the fund, should have been allowed to interplead in the supplementary proceedings. Wilson v. Chichester, 107 N.C. 386, 12 S.E. 139 (1890).

Power of Receiver to Sue to Set Aside Fraudulent Transactions of Debtor. — A receiver is not the representative of the debtor alone, and can maintain an action to set aside fraudulent transactions of such debtor. Pender v. Mallett, 123 N.C. 57, 31 S.E. 351 (1898).

§ 1-367. Reference.

The court or judge may, in his discretion, order a reference to the referee agreed upon by the parties, or appointed by him, to report the evidence or the facts. The appointment of the referee may be made in the first order or at any time. (C.C.P., s. 272; Code, s. 498; Rev., s. 683; C.S., s. 726.)

Cross References. — As to examination before referee, see § 1-356. As to disobedience of orders of referee, see § 1-368.

CASE NOTES

The evidence taken before a referee must accompany his report if there are any exceptions to which it is applicable, or perhaps any adverse rulings made in the progress of the inquiry which the evidence would tend to elucidate or explain. Vestal v. Sloan, 83 N.C. 555 (1880).

§ 1-368. Disobedience of orders punished as for contempt.

Any person, party or witness, who disobeys an order of the court or judge or referee, duly served, may be punished by the judge as for a contempt. In all cases of commitment under this Article the person committed may, in case of inability to perform the act required, or to endure the imprisonment, be discharged from imprisonment by the judge committing him, or the judge having jurisdiction, on such terms as are just. (C.C.P., s. 274; 1869-70, c. 79, s. 3; Code, s. 500; Rev., s. 684; C.S., s. 727.)

Cross References. — As to contempt generally, see Chapter 5A.

Legal Periodicals. — As to whether the violation of a void order of a court constitutes contempt, see note in 12 N.C.L. Rev. 260 (1934).

CASE NOTES

Power of Court to Enforce Its Lawful Orders. — It is an essential attribute of a court to enforce by proper process its lawful orders; without this its essential functions would be paralyzed or destroyed. Pain v. Pain, 80 N.C. 322 (1879); LaFontaine v. Southern Underwriters Ass'n, 83 N.C. 132 (1880).

Duty of Judge to Pass on Inability to Comply. — Where a party to an action, having been directed to perform an order of the court or otherwise to be in contempt, applied, after notice, to have the order discharged, and offered to produce affidavits showing his inability to comply with the order, it was the duty of the judge to hear and pass on the affidavits. Childs v. Wiseman, 119 N.C. 497, 26 S.E. 126 (1896).

Contempt of Witness Being Examined by Referee. — When, in the course of proceedings supplementary to the execution, a witness is examined by a referee, a contempt, in refusing to answer the questions, must be punished by the court making the reference. LaFontaine v. Southern Underwriters Ass'n, 83 N.C. 132 (1880).

Paying Salary Accruing After Issuance of Order. — An employer cannot be held in contempt for paying salary accruing to a judgment debtor after issuance and service on the employer of an order in proceedings supplemental to execution, since the order, properly construed, speaks as of the date of its issuance, and since in law the order could not apply to prospective earnings of the judgment debtor. Motor Fin. Co. v. Putnam, 229 N.C. 555, 50 S.E.2d 670 (1948).

SUBCHAPTER XI. HOMESTEAD AND EXEMPTIONS.

ARTICLE 32.

Property Exempt from Execution.

§§ 1-369 through 1-392: Repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 490.

Cross References. — As to exempt property, see now § 1C-1601 et seq.

Editor's Note. — These sections were repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 490, which enacted Chapter 1C, Article 16, § 1C-1601 et seq., covering the same subject matter. The repeal and the new Article were originally made effective Oct. 1, 1981. Session Laws 1981, c. 1001, ratified Oct. 9, 1981, and effective on ratification, postponed the effective date of Session Laws 1981, c. 490, to Jan. 1, 1982. The repeal and the new Article were therefore in effect from Oct. 1, 1981, through Oct. 8, 1981, and became permanently effective Jan. 1, 1982.

Session Laws 1981, c. 1001, s. 1, provided in part: "G.S. 1-369 through G.S. 1-392, as repealed by Chapter 490 of the 1981 Session Laws, are revived effective upon ratification of this act. This act does not affect exemptions that have been set aside by a court order entered on and after October 1, 1981, but before the effective date of this act. This act does not affect bankruptcy petitions filed on and after October 1, 1981, but before the effective date of this act."

Session Laws 1981, c. 490, s. 3, as amended by Session Laws 1981, c. 1001, s. 1, provides: "Sec. 3. This act shall become effective January 1, 1982, and applies to all actions and proceedings initiated before and after that date. If a proceeding has been initiated prior to that date the court may enter appropriate transitional orders."

SUBCHAPTER XII. SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS.

ARTICLE 33.

Special Proceedings.

§ 1-393. Chapter and Rules of Civil Procedure applicable to special proceedings.

The Rules of Civil Procedure and the provisions of this Chapter on civil procedure are applicable to special proceedings, except as otherwise provided. (Code, s. 278; Rev., s. 710; C.S., s. 752; 1967, c. 954, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

CASE NOTES

Special Proceedings. — Even where an action is a special proceeding, the Rules of Civil Procedure are made applicable by this section, which provides that the Rules of Civil Procedure and the provisions of this chapter are applicable to special proceedings, except as otherwise provided. VEPCO v. Tillett, 316 N.C. 73, 340 S.E.2d 62 (1986).

Private Condemnation Proceedings. — Section 40A-12, together with this section, gives trial courts clear authority to apply the Rules of Civil Procedure in private condemnation proceedings, at least to the extent that those rules do not directly conflict with procedures specifically mandated by Chapter 40A. VEPCO v. Tillett, 316 N.C. 73, 340 S.E.2d 62 (1986).

Legitimation Proceedings. — The procedural statutes that apply to special proceedings are designed to fully protect the rights of all persons interested in special proceedings, including legitimation proceedings. In re Locklear, 314 N.C. 412, 334 S.E.2d 46 (1985).

Adoption Proceedings. — The Rules of Civil Procedure and the provisions of this Article apply to adoption proceedings. In re Clark, 95 N.C. App. 1, 381 S.E.2d 835 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 327 N.C. 61, 393 S.E.2d 791 (1990).

Supp. 1097 (W.D.N.C. 1986).

§ 1-394. Contested special proceedings; commencement; summons.

Special proceedings against adverse parties shall be commenced as is prescribed for civil actions. The summons shall notify the defendant or defendants to appear and answer the complaint, or petition, of the plaintiff within 10 days after its service upon the defendant or defendants, and must contain a notice stating in substance that if the defendant or defendants fail to answer the complaint, or petition, within the time specified, plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in the complaint, or petition. The summons must run in the name of the State, and be dated and signed by the clerk, assistant clerk or deputy clerk of the superior court having jurisdiction in the special proceeding, and be directed to the defendant or defendants, and be delivered for service to some proper person, as defined by Rule 4(a) of the Rules of Civil Procedure. The clerk shall indicate on the summons by appropriate words that the summons is issued in a special proceeding and not in a civil action. The manner of service shall be as is prescribed for summons in civil actions by Rule 4 of the Rules of Civil Procedure: Provided, where the defendant is an agency of the federal government, or an agency of the State, or a local government, or an agency of a local government, the time for filing answer or other plea shall be within 30 days after the date of service of summons or after the final determination of any motion required to be made prior to the filing of an answer. ### CASE NOTES

Some form of action or special proceeding is essential to the rendition of a judgment and in this State it must always be commenced by summons or attachment. Morris v. House, 125 N.C. 550, 34 S.E. 712 (1899).

Where a summons in a special proceeding was improperly made returnable to the superior court in term, it was proper for the judge to remand the proceeding, with directions that the summons be amended so as to make it returnable before the clerk on a day certain. Simmons v. Norfolk & Baltimore Steamboat Co., 113 N.C. 147, 18 S.E. 117 (1893).

A judgment under a service of less than 10 days, although irregular, is valid until reversed or vacated by a direct action, and cannot be collaterally attacked. Nall v. McConnell, 211 N.C. 258, 190 S.E. 210 (1937).

Allowance of Additional Time for Defendant to Appear. — When the time between service and return day of the summons is less than the time allowed by statute, the clerk is not bound to dismiss the action, but should allow further time to the defendant for an appearance. Stafford v. Gallops, 123 N.C. 19, 31 S.E. 265 (1898).

§ 1-394.1. Special proceedings to determine authority to transfer structured settlement payment rights.

When a special proceeding is commenced to obtain authorization for the transfer of structured settlement payment rights pursuant to Article 44B of this Chapter, the provisions of this Article apply except that the interested parties shall have 30 days to appear and answer the petition, and all hearings on such petitions must be conducted before a superior court judge and all final orders on such petitions must be entered by a superior court judge. (1999-367, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-367, s. 3, made this section effective October 1, 1999, and applicable to any transfer of structured settlement payment rights under a transfer agreement entered into on or after that date, provided that this act shall not apply to any transfer of structured settlement payment rights under a structured settlement agreement entered into or effective prior to that date where the transfer does not contravene the terms of the structured settlement. Further, s. 3 states that nothing contained herein shall imply that any transfer under a transfer agreement reached prior to October 1, 1999, is effective.

§ 1-395. Return of summons.

The person to whom the summons is delivered for service shall note on it the day of its delivery to him, and, if required by the plaintiff, shall execute it immediately. When executed, he shall immediately return the summons with the date and manner of its execution, by mail or otherwise, to the clerk of the court issuing it. (C.C.P., s. 75; Code, s. 280; Rev., s. 713; C.S., s. 754; 1967, c. 954, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Before Whom Summons Is Returnable. — The summons in special proceedings is returnable before the clerk. Tate v. Powe, 64 N.C. 644 (1870).

The failure of the clerk to note the summons the day it was received is irregular but does not render the summons void. Strayhorn v. Blalock, 92 N.C. 292 (1885).

Sheriff's Return Prima Facie Sufficient. — When the sheriff returns that he has "served" the summons, this is prima facie sufficient and implies that he has served it as the statute directs, until the contrary is made to appear in some proper way. Strayhorn v. Blalock, 92 N.C. 292 (1885).

Failure of Sheriff to Make Return. — While a sheriff is not required to execute process until his fees are paid or tendered by the person at whose instance the service is to be rendered, this does not excuse him for failure to make a return of the process. A writ of summons is a mandate of the court and must be obeyed by its officer, and if he has any valid excuse for not executing the writ, he must state it in his return. Jones v. Gupton, 65 N.C. 48 (1871); Johnson v. Kenneday, 70 N.C. 435 (1874).

§ 1-396. When complaint filed.

The complaint or petition of the plaintiff must be filed in the clerk's office at or before the time of the issuance of the summons, unless time for filing said complaint or petition is extended as provided by G.S. 1-398. (C.C.P., s. 76; 1876-7, c. 241, s. 4; Code, s. 281; Rev., s. 714; C.S., s. 755; 1943, c. 543.)

§ 1-397: Repealed by Session Laws 1943, c. 543.

§ 1-398. Filing time enlarged.

The time for filing the complaint, petition, or any pleading may be enlarged by the court for good cause shown by affidavit, but may not be enlarged by more than 10 additional days, nor more than once, unless the default was occasioned by accident over which the party applying had no control, or by the fraud of the opposing party. (C.C.P., s. 79; Code, s. 283; Rev., s. 716; C.S., s. 757.)

CASE NOTES

Power of Clerk After Remand. — Where an application was filed to remove an administrator, and no answer had been filed, the clerk refused the motion, and when on appeal the judge reversed the order and remanded the case, the clerk had the power to allow an answer to be filed. Patterson v. Wadsworth, 94 N.C. 538 (1886).

Cited in Pipkin v. Lassiter, 37 N.C. App. 36, 245 S.E.2d 105 (1978).

§ 1-399: Repealed by Session Laws 1999-216, s. 2, effective January 1, 2000.

Cross References. — As to appeals and transfers from the clerk of superior court to the trial courts, see § 1-301.1 et seq.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-216, s. 23, makes the repeal effective January 1, 2000, and applicable to all orders or judgments subject to the act that are entered on or after that date.

§ 1-400. Ex parte; commenced by petition.

If all the parties in interest join in the proceeding and ask the same relief, the commencement of the proceedings shall be by petition, setting forth the facts entitling the petitioners to relief, and the nature of the relief demanded. (1868-9, c. 93; Code, s. 284; Rev., s. 718, C.S., s. 759.)

CASE NOTES

Judgment Creditors May Become Parties. — Where executor filed a proper petition for the sale of realty to pay debts, the judgment creditors interested in the surplus, desiring to contest one of the debts set out in the petition for fraud, if not made parties, could make themselves parties and proceed therein accordingly, the procedure being ex parte on the part of the executor, and an independent action by them would not lie for fraud until after final judgment in the proceedings. Wadford v. Davis, 192 N.C. 484, 135 S.E. 353 (1926).

Petition Need Not Be Verified. — It is not necessary for a petition in an ex parte proceeding to be verified. Gillikin v. Gillikin, 252 N.C. 1, 113 S.E.2d 38 (1960).

§ 1-401. Clerk acts summarily; signing by petitioners; authorization to attorney.

In cases under G.S. 1-400, if all persons to be affected by the decree or their attorney have signed the petition and are of full age, the clerk of the superior court has power to hear and decide the petition summarily. All of the petitioners must sign the petition, or must sign written application to clerk of court to be made petitioners and file same with the clerk or must sign a written authorization to the attorney which authorization must be filed with the clerk before he may make any order or decree to prejudice their rights. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 2; Code, s. 285; Rev., s. 719; C.S., s. 760; 1953, c. 246.)

CASE NOTES

All Persons Affected Must Present Ex Parte Proceeding to Clerk. — This section applies only when all persons to be affected present an ex parte proceeding to the clerk and he acts summarily. In that event, all parties must sign the petition or must sign and file with the clerk a written application to be made petitioners or a written authorization to the attorney, before the clerk may make any order or decree prejudicing their rights. In re Johnson, 9 N.C. App. 102, 176 S.E.2d 31 (1970), aff'd, 277 N.C. 688, 178 S.E.2d 470 (1971).

Effect of Failure To Join All Interested Parties. — When, in a special proceeding under which certain timber interests were sold by a commissioner, it appeared upon the face of the record that certain persons of age were not made parties or had not appeared as such in person or by attorney, and they had in no way waived their rights, they were not bound by a judgment rendered therein, and as to them the entire proceeding was void upon its face. Moore v. Rowland Lumber Co., 150 N.C. 261, 63 S.E. 953 (1909).

Written Authorization Required Only When Attorney Signs for Petitioner. — This section only requires written authorization when the attorney signs for a petitioner in the original petition. It does not apply where the original petition is signed by the parties themselves. In re Johnson, 277 N.C. 688, 178 S.E.2d 470 (1971).

§ 1-402. Judge approves when petitioner is infant.

If any petitioner is an infant, or the guardian of an infant, acting for him, no final order or judgment of the clerk, affecting the merits of the case and capable of being prejudicial to the infant, is valid, unless submitted to and approved by the judge resident or holding court in the district. (C.C.P., s. 420; 1868-9, c. 93, s. 3; Code, s. 286; 1887, c. 61; Rev., s. 720; C.S., s. 761.)

CASE NOTES

In an ex parte proceeding to sell land for assets, infant heirs are represented by a guardian or next friend, and the order must be approved by the judge. Harris v. Brown, 123 N.C. 419, 31 S.E. 877 (1897).

Administrator Acting as Guardian. — While it is irregular for the administrator to represent a minor heir as guardian, yet, where there is no suggestion of any unfair advantage having been taken in the sale, confirmation or elsewhere in the proceeding, such irregularity will not vitiate the title of purchaser. Harris v. Brown, 123 N.C. 419, 31 S.E. 877 (1898).

One who joins as infant in a petition is bound by the judgment, even though it is not approved by the judge of the court. Lindsay v. Beaman, 128 N.C. 189, 38 S.E. 811 (1901).

Court Presumed to Have Protected Interests of Infants. — Where the lands of infants are sold under an order of the superior court upon an ex parte petition, and the infants have been represented by next friends, it will be presumed that the court protected their interests and was careful to see that they suffered no prejudice. Tyson v. Belcher, 102 N.C. 112, 9 S.E. 634 (1889).

Effect of Irregularities on Judgment. — A judgment rendered in an ex parte proceeding approving the compromise and settlement of claims for personal injuries suffered by an infant is not void but only voidable, regardless of how irregular the proceedings may have been. It is binding until set aside by motion in the cause and is not subject to collateral attack. Gillikin v. Gillikin, 252 N.C. 1, 113 S.E.2d 38 (1960).

§ 1-403. Orders signed by judge.

Every order or judgment in a special proceeding required to be made by a judge of the superior court, in or out of session, must be authenticated by his signature. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 5; 1872-3, c. 100; Code, s. 288; Rev., s. 722; C.S., s. 762; 1971, c. 381, s. 12.)

CASE NOTES

Effect of Judgment Not Signed by Judge. — There is a plain provision in North Carolina statute law requiring every judgment granted by a judge to be signed by him. But while this statute, apparently mandatory, should always be observed, still it is held to be only directory, and a judgment passed in open court and filed with the papers as a part of the judgment roll is a valid judgment, though not signed by the judge. Rollins v. Henry, 78 N.C. 342 (1878); Matthews v. Joyce, 85 N.C. 258 (1881); Keener v. Goodson, 89 N.C. 273 (1883); Spencer v. Credle, 102 N.C. 68, 8 S.E. 901 (1889); Bond v. Wool, 113 N.C. 20, 18 S.E. 77 (1893); Wrought Iron Range Co. v. Carver, 118 N.C. 328, 24 S.E. 352 (1896).

§ 1-404. Reports of commissioners and jurors.

Every order or judgment in a special proceeding imposing a duty on commissioners or jurors must prescribe the time within which the duty must be performed, except in cases where the time is prescribed by statute. The commissioners or jurors shall within 20 days after the performance of the duty file their report with the clerk of the superior court, and if no exception is filed to it within 10 days, the court may proceed to confirm the same on motion of any party and without special notice to the other parties. (1893, c. 209; Rev., s. 723; C.S., s. 763; 1945, c. 778.)

CASE NOTES

The provisions of this section are not applicable to a condemnation proceeding, because the statutes bearing directly upon such proceeding prescribe different periods of time for the performance of the several acts enumerated. Collins v. North Carolina State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 237 N.C. 277, 74 S.E.2d 709 (1953).

The notice provision of this section does not apply to the commissioners' report, but to the clerk's confirmation order, which should be confirmed as a matter of law if exceptions are not filed in apt time. Macon v. Edinger, 49 N.C. App. 624, 272 S.E.2d 411 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 303 N.C. 274, 278 S.E.2d 256 (1981).

Confirmation Ordinarily Discretionary with Court. — The confirmation by the court, if no timely exception is filed to the report, lies within the discretion of the court. Ex parte Garrett, 174 N.C. 343, 93 S.E. 838 (1917).

But in partition proceedings it is obligatory for the court to confirm the same. Ex parte Garrett, 174 N.C. 343, 93 S.E. 838 (1917).

Appealability of Proceedings to Sell Land to Pay Debts of Decedent. — A proceeding to sell lands to make assets to pay the debts of the deceased, under this section, is appealable from the clerk of the superior court, and open to revision and such further orders or decrees on the part of the judge as justice and the rights of the parties may require, and is to be heard and decided by him on the same or such additional evidence as may aid him to a correct conclusion of the matter. Perry v. Perry, 179 N.C. 445, 102 S.E. 772 (1920).

Jurisdiction of Judge on Appeal. — The fact that the commissioner appointed to sell lands to make assets to pay the debts of a deceased person sold them several times under resales ordered by the clerk of the superior court, and that the clerk granted the purchaser's motion to confirm the sale after the lapse of more than 20 days from the last sale, without an advance bid until after the expiration of that time, did not affect the jurisdiction of the judge on appeal to examine into the matter and order resale upon being satisfied that justice and the rights of the parties required it. Perry v. Perry, 179 N.C. 445, 102 S.W. 772 (1920).

Power of Clerk. — The clerk has no power to confirm a sale reported by a commissioner until the expiration of 20 (now 10) days from the date on which the report was filed. Vance v. Vance, 203 N.C. 667, 166 S.E. 901 (1932).

Applied in County of Buncombe v. Arbogast, 205 N.C. 745, 172 S.E. 364 (1934).

§ 1-405. No report set aside for trivial defect.

No report or return made by any commissioners may be set aside and sent back to them or others for a new report because of any defect or omission not affecting the substantial rights of the parties, but the defect or omission may be amended by the court, or by the commissioners with permission of the court. (1868-9, c. 93, s. 7; Code, s. 289; Rev., s. 724; C.S., s. 764.)

CASE NOTES

Report Conclusive Until Set Aside. — The report of commissioners appointed to condemn lands and assess damages for the purpose of drainage is, like the verdict of a jury, conclusive of the facts therein ascertained, until set aside. Norfolk S.R.R. v. Ely, 101 N.C. 8, 7 S.E. 476 (1888).

Description of Land Unnecessary. — A report of the commissioners is not invalid because it does not contain a description. Hanes v. North Carolina R.R., 109 N.C. 490, 13 S.E. 896 (1891).

Nor is it mandatory that such report be under seal. Hanes v. North Carolina R.R., 109 N.C. 490, 13 S.E. 896 (1891).

Partition Report Set Aside. — Where commissioners' report in a partition proceeding failed to state affirmatively that the allotments in their opinion were equal in value, this omission affected the substantial rights of the parties, and the clerk or judge could set aside the report with directions, either that the commissioners make a reallotment or that others be appointed to do so. Skinner v. Carter, 108 N.C. 106, 12 S.E. 908 (1891).

§ 1-406. Commissioner of sale to account in sixty days.

In all actions or special proceedings when a person is appointed commissioner to sell real or personal property, he shall, within 60 days after the maturity of the note or bond for the balance of the purchase money of said property, or the payment of the amount of the bid when the sale is for cash, file with the clerk of the superior court a final account of his receipts and disbursements on account of the sale; and the clerk must audit the account and record it in the book in which the final settlements of executors and administrators are recorded. If any commissioner appointed in any action or special proceedings before the clerk fails, refuses or omits to file a final account as prescribed in this section, or renders an insufficient or unsatisfactory account, the clerk of the superior court shall forthwith order such commissioner to render a full and true account, as required by law, within 20 days after service of the order. Upon return of the order, duly served, if such commissioner shall fail to appear or refuse to exhibit such account, the clerk of the superior court may issue an attachment against said commissioner for a contempt and commit him till he exhibits such account, or files a bond for the amount held or unaccounted for as is prescribed by law for administrators, the premium for which is to be deducted from the commissioner's fee, earned by said commissioner in said action or special proceeding. (1901, c. 614, ss. 1, 2; Rev., s. 725; C.S., s. 765; 1933, c. 98.)

§ 1-407. Commissioner holding proceeds of land sold for reinvestment to give bond.

Whenever in any cause of special proceeding there is a sale of real estate for the purpose of a reinvestment of the money arising from such sale, and the proceeds of such sale are held by a commissioner or other officer designated by the court to receive such money for purposes of reinvestment, the commissioner or officer so receiving same shall execute a good and sufficient bond, to be approved by the court, in an amount at least equal to the corpus of the fund, and payable to the State of North Carolina for the protection of the fund and the parties interested therein, and conditioned that such custodian of the money shall faithfully comply with all the orders of the court made or to be thereafter made concerning the handling and reinvestment of said funds and for the faithful and final accounting of the same to the parties interested. (1919, c. 259; C.S., s. 766; 1935, c. 45; 1957, c. 80.)

Local Modification. — Duplin: 1935, c. 45.

CASE NOTES

Where the court decrees a sale of trust property for reinvestment, the trustee should be required to give bond, or other legal provision should be made to assure the safety of the funds arising from the sale, notwithstanding that the will provides that the trustee should not be required to give bond in administering the trust, since in acting under the decree of the court the trustees act as commissioners of the court and not necessarily as trustees under the will. Blades v. Spitzer, 252 N.C. 207, 113 S.E.2d 315 (1960).

Where an order is made for the sale of timber growing upon lands affected with contingent interests, the court should also require its commissioner appointed for the sale to give bond for the preservation and proper application of the proceeds of sale, etc.; but this provision does not affect the title of the purchaser, who is not required to see to the application of the funds, and the proper order in this respect may be supplied by amendment or supplementary decree. Midyette v. Lycoming Timber & Lumber Co., 185 N.C. 423, 117 S.E. 386 (1923). See also, Poole & Blue, Inc. v. Thompson, 183 N.C. 588, 112 S.E. 323 (1922).

Applied in Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Johnson, 269 N.C. 701, 153 S.E.2d 449 (1967).

§ 1-407.1. Bond required to protect interest of infant or incompetent.

In the case of any sale of real estate, the court may, in its discretion, require a good and sufficient bond to protect the interests of any infant or incompetent. (1957, c. 80.)

§ 1-407.2. When court may waive bond; premium paid from fund protected.

The court, in its discretion, may waive the requirement of such bond in those cases in which the court requires the funds or proceeds from such sale to be paid by the purchaser or purchasers directly to the court. The premium for any such bond shall be paid from the corpus of the fund intended to be thereby protected. (1957, c. 80.)

§ 1-408. Action in which clerk may allow fees of commissioners; fees taxed as costs.

In a civil action or special proceeding commenced in the superior court in which a commissioner or commissioners are appointed under an order or judgment entered by the clerk of the superior court, the clerk may fix a reasonable fee for the services of the commissioner or commissioners performed under the order or judgment. The fee shall be taxed as part of the costs in the action or proceeding. Any aggrieved party has the right to appeal as provided in Article 27A of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes. (1923, c. 66; s. 1; C.S., s. 766(a); 1999-216, s. 4.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-216, s. 4, effective January 1, 2000, and applicable to all orders or judgments subject to this act that are entered on or after that date, rewrote the section.

CASE NOTES

This section sets out the proper procedure for determination of fees to be allowed court-appointed commissioners. Becker County Sand & Gravel Co. v. Taylor, 269 N.C. 617, 153 S.E.2d 19 (1967).

In What Matters Commissioner or Receiver May Seek Redress. — A special commissioner in a chancery cause or a receiver of the court is simply an officer of the court, and as such he has no right to intermeddle in questions affecting the rights of the parties or the disposition of the property in his hands. He cannot interfere in the litigation or ask for the revision of any order or decree affecting the rights of the parties. But when his own accounts or his personal rights are affected, he has the same means of redress that any other party so affected would have. Becker County Sand & Gravel Co. v. Taylor, 269 N.C. 617, 153 S.E.2d 19 (1967).

Right of Commissioner to Review of Order Fixing Compensation. — Since the commissioner is an agent of the court and is accountable to it for his actions in connection with the discharge of his duties as commissioner, and since he is entitled to have his compensation fixed as provided by law and taxed as a part of the costs of the proceeding, he is entitled to have an order reviewed which in his opinion has fixed his compensation at less than he in good faith believes his services to be worth. Welch v. Kearns, 259 N.C. 367, 130 S.E.2d 634 (1963).

Effect of Former § 28-170. — Former § 28-170 did not divest the clerk of the superior court of the powers and duties expressly committed to him by this section with respect to the fees of commissioners appointed for the sale of land as provided therein. Welch v. Kearns, 259 N.C. 367, 130 S.E.2d 634 (1963).

Applied in Welch v. Kearns, 261 N.C. 171, 134 S.E.2d 155 (1964).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

As to allowance of commissioners' fee by clerk of superior court, see opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Jacob C. Taylor, Clerk of Superior Court, Halifax, N.C., January 6, 1970.

§ 1-408.1. Clerk may order surveys in civil actions and special proceedings involving sale of land.

In civil actions and special proceedings commenced in the superior court before the clerk where real property is to be sold to make assets to pay debts, or to be sold for division, or to be partitioned, the clerk may, if all parties to the action or proceedings will benefit by a survey, order a survey of the land involved, appoint a surveyor for this purpose, and fix a reasonable fee for the services of the surveyor. The fee and other costs of the survey shall be taxed as a part of the costs in the action or proceedings. Any aggrieved party has the right to appeal as provided in Article 27A of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes. (1955, c. 373; 1999-216, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-216, s. 5, effective January 1, 2000, and applicable to all orders or judgments subject to this act that are entered on or after that date, rewrote the section.

CASE NOTES

Definition of Boundaries in Judicial Sale of Land. — The commissioner appointed by the court to conduct a judicial sale is empowered only to sell the land and distribute the proceeds and has only such powers as may be necessary to execute the decree of the court. He therefore is not under a duty to show the boundaries of the land or the means of ingress and egress to the property, the remedy of a prospective purchaser if he wishes a survey being by motion under this section. Walton v. Cagle, 269 N.C. 177, 152 S.E.2d 312 (1967).

SUBCHAPTER XIII. PROVISIONAL REMEDIES.

ARTICLE 34.

Arrest and Bail.

§ 1-409. Arrest only as herein prescribed.

No person may be arrested in a civil action except as prescribed by this Article, but this provision shall not apply to proceedings for contempt. (C.C.P., s. 148; Code, s. 290; Rev., s. 726; C.S., s. 767.)

Cross References. — For constitutional provision prohibiting imprisonment for debt, except in cases of fraud, see N.C. Const., Art. I, § 28. As to execution against the person, see § 1-311. As to arrest in criminal actions, see § 15A-401 et seq. As to persons taken in arrest and bail proceedings being entitled to insolvent debtor's oath, see § 23-29.

CASE NOTES

The constitutional provision prohibiting imprisonment for debt in this State except for fraud (see now N.C. Const., Art. I, § 28) has no application to actions of tort but is confined to actions arising ex contractu. Long v. McLean, 88 N.C. 3 (1883).

The words "except in cases of fraud" are very broad, and they comprehend not only fraud in attempting to delay and defeat the collection of a debt by concealing property or other fraudulent devices, but also fraud in making the contract, such as false representations, and fraud in increasing the liabilities, such as when an administrator applies the funds of the estate of his own use, paying his own debts, and the like. Powers v. Davenport, 101 N.C. 286, 7 S.E. 747 (1888). See also, Melvin v. Melvin, 72 N.C. 384 (1875).

Purpose of Section. — In order to avoid a violation of the section of the Constitution prohibiting imprisonment for debt except for fraud (see now N.C. Const., Art. I, § 28) and at the same time to protect debtors, it devolved upon the legislature, in cases of fraud, to enact such laws as were necessary, in its discretion, for arrest and imprisonment in proper cases, and to provide for all necessary proceedings in relation thereto. This was done in this and the following sections. Preiss v. Cohen, 117 N.C. 54, 23 S.E. 162 (1895).

Applicability of § 23-13. — Parties arrested and in custody pursuant to the provisions contained in this and the following sections, if the order of arrest is not vacated "on motion," must seek their discharge in the mode prescribed in § 23-13. Wingo v. Watson, 98 N.C. 482, 4 S.E. 463 (1887); Preiss v. Cohen, 117 N.C. 54, 23 S.E. 162 (1895).

Where a partnership has terminated and all debts have been paid and the partnership affairs have been otherwise adjusted, or where the partnership was for a single venture or special purpose which has been closed, and nothing remains but to pay over the amount due, in either case an action will lie in favor of one partner against the other, and if the facts bring the claim within the provisions of this Article on arrest and bail, the plaintiff is entitled to this ancillary remedy. Ledford v. Emerson, 140 N.C. 288, 52 S.E. 641 (1905).

Renewal of Motion Where Judgment of Nonsuit Reversed. — Where there was a motion for an order of arrest and bail under this section, and a judgment of nonsuit was reversed, the motion could be renewed. Hensley v. Helvenston, 189 N.C. 636, 127 S.E. 625 (1925).

For definition of arrest, see Journey v. Sharpe, 49 N.C. 165 (1856); State ex rel. Lawrence v. Buxton, 102 N.C. 129, 8 S.E. 774 (1889); Hadley v. Tinnin, 170 N.C. 84, 86 S.E. 1017 (1915).

§ 1-410. In what cases arrest allowed.

The defendant may be arrested, as hereinafter prescribed, in the following cases:

(1) In an action for the recovery of damages on a cause of action not arising out of contract where the action is for willful, wanton, or malicious injury to person or character or for willfully, wantonly or maliciously injuring, taking, detaining, or converting real or personal property.

(2) In an action for a fine or penalty, for seduction, for money received, for property embezzled or fraudulently misapplied by a public officer, attorney, solicitor, or officer or agent of a corporation or banking association in the course of his employment, or by any factor, agent, broker or other person in a fiduciary capacity, or for any misconduct or neglect in office, or in a professional employment.

(3) In an action to recover the possession of personal property, unjustly detained, where all or any part of the property has been concealed, removed, or disposed of, so that it cannot be found or taken by the sheriff and with the intent that it should not be so found or taken, or with the intent to deprive the plaintiff of the benefit thereof.

(4) When the defendant has been guilty of a fraud in contracting the debt or incurring the obligation for which the action is brought, in concealing or disposing of the property for the taking, detention or conversion of which the action is brought, or when the action is brought to recover damages for fraud or deceit.

(5) When the defendant has removed, or disposed of his property, or is about to do so, with intent to defraud his creditors. The term "creditors" shall include, but not by way of limitation, a dependent spouse who claims alimony. The term "creditors" shall include, but not by way of limitation, a minor child entitled to an order for support. (1777, c. 118, s. 6, P.R.; R.C., c. 31, s. 54; C.C.P., s. 149; 1869-70, c. 79; Code, s. 291; 1891, c. 541; Rev., s. 737; C.S., s. 768; 1943, c. 543; 1961, c. 82; 1967, c. 1153, ss. 4, 6.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — This section is plain and very comprehensive in its terms and purpose. It is intended to embrace all cases where the relation of trust and confidence in respect to money received by or personal property in the possession of one party for the benefit of another is raised and exists between such parties by reason of their mutual contract, express or implied. The purpose is to give the more efficient remedy where the cause of action involves a breach of trust on the part of the defendant sustaining a fiduciary relation to the plaintiff. Chemical Co. v. Johnson, 98 N.C. 123, 3 S.E. 723 (1887); Powers v. Davenport, 101 N.C. 286, 7 S.E. 747 (1888); Travers v. Deaton, 107 N.C. 500, 12 S.E. 373 (1890); Boykin, Carmer & Co. v. W.J. Maddrey & Son, 114 N.C. 89, 19 S.E. 106 (1894).

Remedy of Arrest and Bail. — The section gives to a plaintiff whose money or property has been put beyond his reach by his agent or trustee by an act in violation of his duty the remedy of arrest and bail, so that he may the better compel his unfaithful agent or trustee to make amends for his unfaithfulness. And it "turns a deaf ear" to one who would excuse himself by asserting that he did not mean to do wrong when consciously doing that which was breach of the trust reposed in him, or by alleging that he honestly believed that he would be able to replace the misapplied funds, so that no loss would eventually come to the plaintiff. Boykin, Carmer & Co. v. W.J. Maddrey & Son, 114 N.C. 89, 19 S.E. 106 (1894).

Effect on Right to Execution Against Person. — An essential prerequisite to plaintiff's right to body execution is that, where there has not already been a lawful arrest under this section, the complaint or affidavit must allege such facts as would have justified an order for such arrest. Nunn v. Smith, 270 N.C. 374, 154 S.E.2d 497 (1967).

Execution Against Person for Cause Specified in Subdivision (1). — Where a judgment is rendered against a defendant for a cause of action specified in subdivision (1) of this section, § 1-311 authorizes an execution against the person of the judgment debtor after the return of an execution against his property wholly or partly unsatisfied. Allred v. Graves, 261 N.C. 31, 134 S.E.2d 186 (1964); Leonard v. Williams, 100 N.C. App. 512, 397 S.E.2d 321 (1990).

Applicability of § 23-29. — The provisions of § 23-29(2) are broad and strong, and plainly extend to and embrace every person who may be arrested by virtue of an order of arrest issued pursuant to the provisions of this section, and also extend to and embrace every person who has been seized by virtue of an execution against his person by authority of the provisions of § 1-311. Allred v. Graves, 261 N.C. 31, 134 S.E.2d 186 (1964).

Punitive Damages. — For acts under subdivision (1) of this section when a cause of action is properly alleged and proved and at least nominal damages are recovered by the plaintiff, a jury in its discretion can award punitive damages. Allred v. Graves, 261 N.C. 31, 134 S.E.2d 186 (1964).

Award of Punitive Damages Not Sufficient. — Under the present language of § 1-311, an award of punitive damages in a cause of action specified under this section, alone, does not give rise to execution against the person. Leonard v. Williams, 100 N.C. App. 512, 397 S.E.2d 321 (1990).

When Actual Intent Unnecessary for Arrest for "Willful Injury". — For the arrest of a woman under the provisions of this section for "willful injury," etc., an actual intent is not necessary if the defendant's negligence is so gross as to manifest a reckless indifference to the rights of others. Weathers v. Baldwin, 183 N.C. 276, 183 N.C. 279, 111 S.E. 183, 111 S.E. 183 (1922).

Mere Negligence Insufficient to Authorize Execution Against Person. — A judgment that execution issue against the person of the defendant cannot be sustained upon the mere finding that the defendant negligently injured the plaintiff's property; in order to justify such execution under this section and § 1-311, the injury must have been intentionally or maliciously inflicted, i.e., with some element of violence, fraud or criminality.

Oakley v. Lasater, 172 N.C. 96, 89 S.E. 1063 (1916).

Necessity of Allegation of Actual Malice in Malpractice Action. — In an action to recover for malpractice of defendant, execution against the person of defendant may not issue in the absence of allegation and evidence of actual malice. Olinger v. Camp, 215 N.C. 340, 1 S.E.2d 870 (1939).

Fraud Necessary for Arrest Under This Section. — A defendant cannot be arrested under this section unless he has been guilty of fraud in contracting the debt for which the action is brought. McNeely v. Haynes, 76 N.C. 122 (1877).

Application of Section to Subsequent Fraud. — A person may be arrested and held to bail for a fraud committed after the contracting of the debt, e.g., by concealing property or other devices for the purpose of defeating his creditor. Powers v. Davenport, 101 N.C. 286, 7 S.E. 747 (1888).

Act Held to Constitute Fraud. — A party's activities in adding "payment in full" language to a check after it had been cashed by another party, and then attempting to use the check to defeat the other party's claim, constituted fraud within the intent of subdivision (4) of this section and within N.C. Const. Art. I, § 28, the North Carolina constitutional exception permitting imprisonment in case of fraud. Koury v. Meyer, 44 N.C. App. 392, 261 S.E.2d 217, cert. denied, 299 N.C. 736, 267 S.E.2d 662 (1980).

Allegation in Complaint of Facts Necessary to Support Provisional Remedy. — In an action for assault and battery, in which the provisional remedy of arrest and bail was invoked, it was appropriate for plaintiff to allege in the complaint the facts necessary to support the provisional remedy of arrest and bail, notwithstanding that such facts were also set out in the affidavit filed as a basis for the provisional remedy. Long v. Love, 230 N.C. 535, 53 S.E.2d 661 (1949).

One who fraudulently conveys property held by him as trustee can be legally arrested under this section. Durham Fertilizer Co. v. L.M. Little & Co., 118 N.C. 808, 24 S.E. 664 (1896).

An agent in an action for money received or property fraudulently misapplied, may be arrested under the provisions of this section. Gossler v. Wood, 120 N.C. 69, 27 S.E. 33 (1897).

Wrongful Conversion by Cotenant. — Where a cotenant wrongfully converted a race horse, by selling it while in his possession, he was liable to arrest under this section. Doyle v. Bush, 171 N.C. 10, 86 S.E. 165 (1915).

Fraudulent Misapplication of Funds. — An insolvent defendant may be arrested in a civil action for money received and fraudulently misapplied. Carroll v. Montgomery, 128 N.C. 278, 38 S.E. 874 (1901).

Where a firm of merchants gave to manufacturers of fertilizer its note for a consignment of goods, agreeing to hold such goods or the proceeds of the sale thereof or the notes of farmers given therefor in trust for the manufacturers, a fiduciary relation was established, and a violation of the contract was a breach of trust for which, upon proper affidavits and the required undertaking, an order of arrest could be obtained. Boykin, Carmer & Co. v. W.J. Maddrey & Son, 114 N.C. 89, 19 S.E. 106 (1894).

One who fraudulently conveys his real estate with intent to defeat his creditors can be legally arrested under this section. Durham Fertilizer, Co. v. L.M. Little & Co., 118 N.C. 808, 24 S.E. 664 (1896).

Libel. — An arrest in an action for libel is not within the provisions of the Constitution prohibiting imprisonment for debt. Moore v. Green, 73 N.C. 394 (1875).

Seduction. — The seduction of a daughter, being an infringement of the father's relative rights of persons, is an injury to his person within the meaning of this section, and a sufficient ground for the arrest of the defendant in an action for such tort. Hoover v. Palmer, 80 N.C. 313 (1879). See also, Kinney v. Laughenour, 97 N.C. 325, 2 S.E. 43 (1887); Hood v. Sudderth, 111 N.C. 215, 16 S.E. 397 (1892).

An action for seduction may be brought under this section by the woman seduced, and an order for the arrest of the defendant may be granted in such action. Hood v. Sudderth, 111 N.C. 215, 16 S.E. 397 (1892).

Alienation of Affections. — This section applies to arrest for alienating the affections of a wife. Edwards v. Sorrell, 150 N.C. 712, 64 S.E. 898 (1909).

Liability for Acts of Partner. — Where members of a firm assume a fiduciary relation as to property committed to them, and a misappropriation is made by one partner with the knowledge, connivance or assent of the other, the intent of the latter to commit a breach of trust is conclusively presumed, from such knowledge and acts for all the purposes of arrest and bail. Boykin, Carmer & Co. v. W.J. Maddrey & Son, 114 N.C. 89, 19 S.E. 106 (1894).

One partner cannot be arrested for the fraud of his copartner of which he had no knowledge and in which he in nowise connived. McNeely v. Haynes, 76 N.C. 122 (1877); Boykin, Carmer & Co. v. W.J. Maddrey & Son, 114 N.C. 89, 19 S.E. 106 (1894).

Fraud Committed in Another State. — The fact that the fraud for which the defendant was arrested was committed in another state is no ground for immunity from arrest under this section. Powers v. Davenport, 101 N.C. 286, 7 S.E. 747 (1888).

Liability of Nonresident. — A nonresident of this State may be arrested and held to bail for fraud under this section. Powers v. Davenport, 101 N.C. 286, 7 S.E. 747 (1888).

As to applicability to real estate of the words "removed, or disposed of," see Durham Fertilizer Co. v. L.M. Little & Co., 118 N.C. 808, 24 S.E. 664 (1896).

Arrest Held Impermissible Where No Action Was Pending. — Where plaintiff brought an action against defendant, setting out two causes of action, one on a note and the other for embezzlement, and judgment was rendered on the note by default but no judgment was entered upon the other cause, and it was removed from the docket, no order of arrest was permissible under this section, since there was no action pending wherein the allegations of fraud in the complaint, used as an affidavit, could authorize a warrant of arrest. Stewart v. Bryant, 121 N.C. 46, 28 S.E. 18 (1897).

Nature of Contract Action Not Affected. — Where, in an action on contract, the plaintiff alleges fraud and deceit on the part of the defendant and sues out the ancillary process of arrest and bail, this does not change the nature of the contract action. Copeland v. Fowler, 151 N.C. 353, 66 S.E. 215 (1909).

Arrest on Sunday. — For case holding that there can be no arrest on Sunday, see White v. Morris, 107 N.C. 92, 12 S.E. 80 (1890).

Privilege Against Self-Incrimination Inapplicable Where Remedy Under This Section Is Relinquished. — In an action for malicious assault, if plaintiff seeks merely compensatory damages, and relinquishes all claim to punish defendants by punitive damages and to arrest them by virtue of subdivision (1) of this section and to issue an execution against their persons by virtue of the provisions of § 1-311, defendants' claim of privilege against self-incrimination does not apply. Allred v. Graves, 261 N.C. 31, 134 S.E.2d 186 (1964).

Applied in Edwards v. Jenkins, 247 N.C. 565, 101 S.E.2d 410 (1958); Smith v. McClure, 25 N.C. App. 280, 212 S.E.2d 702 (1975); Windham Distrib. Co. v. Davis, 72 N.C. App. 179, 323 S.E.2d 506 (1984).

Cited in Sneeden v. Harris, 109 N.C. 349, 13 S.E. 920 (1891); Howie v. Spittle, 156 N.C. 180, 72 S.E. 207 (1911); Michael v. Leach, 166 N.C. 223, 81 S.E. 760 (1914); In re Holt, 1 N.C. App. 108, 160 S.E.2d 90 (1968); Rouse v. Wheeler, 17 N.C. App. 422, 194 S.E.2d 555 (1973); Grimes v. Miller, 429 F. Supp. 1350 (M.D.N.C. 1977); Gunn v. Hess, 90 N.C. App. 131, 367 S.E.2d 399 (1988).

§ 1-411. Order and affidavit.

An order for the arrest of the defendant must be obtained from the court in which the action is brought or a judge thereof, and may be made where it appears to the court or judge, by affidavit of the plaintiff or of any other person, that a sufficient cause of action exists and that the case is one of those provided for in this Article. (C.C.P., ss. 150, 151; Code, ss. 292, 293; Rev., ss. 728, 729; C.S., s. 769.)

CASE NOTES

An order of arrest under this section is a judicial and not ministerial proceeding, in the issuance of which the judge and the clerk have concurrent jurisdiction. Bryan v. Stewart, 123 N.C. 92, 31 S.E. 286 (1898).

From What Court Order of Arrest Must Proceed. — The order of arrest must proceed from the court in which the action is brought or from a judge thereof. H.M. Houston & Co. v. Walsh, 79 N.C. 35 (1878).

An order of arrest granted by a court having jurisdiction is not void. It may be erroneous if issued upon an insufficient affidavit. Tucker v. Davis, 77 N.C. 330 (1877).

The grounds for arrest are usually set forth in an affidavit by the plaintiff, or any other person, that a sufficient cause of action exists, and that the case is one of those mentioned in § 1-410. Roulhac v. Brown, 87 N.C. 1 (1882).

But the cause of arrest may be stated in the complaint; however, the statement must be as explicit as if set forth in an affidavit and properly verified. Peebles v. Foote, 83 N.C. 102 (1880).

Positive Statement of Facts Desirable. — The affidavit should state the facts positively, when this can be done. Peebles v. Foote, 83 N.C. 102 (1880); Harriss v. Sneeden, 101 N.C. 273, 7 S.E. 801 (1888).

Grounds of Belief Should Be Stated. — If the affidavit states certain things which the party believes are about to be done, then the grounds of belief must be stated in order that the court may judge of the reasonableness thereof. Peebles v. Foote, 83 N.C. 102 (1880).

General Rumor Not Enough. — Mere general rumor that a person indebted has removed to another state is not sufficient to justify his creditor in suing out a warrant for his arrest. There should be such evidence as would induce a reasonable man to believe that the facts existed upon which he based his application. Tucker v. Wilkins, 105 N.C. 272, 11 S.E. 575 (1890).

Court Must Be Convinced. — It is not sufficient that the cause of action may exist; this must not be left to conjecture or bare probability. The court must be satisfied from the evidence before it that a cause does exist. Harriss v. Sneeden, 101 N.C. 273, 7 S.E. 801 (1888).

Sufficiency of Affidavit as Question of Law. — The question of the sufficiency of the affidavit is one of law, addressed to the court alone. Wood v. Harrell, 74 N.C. 338 (1876).

Affidavit Held Sufficient. — In an action for arrest and bail, where the affidavit of the plaintiff alleged the existence of a cause of action and the fraud committed by defendants in contracting the debt, and, upon information and belief, that they had fraudulently removed and disposed of their property, this was sufficient to justify the order of arrest. Paige v. Price, 78 N.C. 10 (1878).

Where the affidavit upon which an order of arrest and attachment was obtained was as follows: "That the said P. has disposed of and secreted his property with intent to defraud his creditors," this was held to be sufficient. Hughes v. Person, 63 N.C. 548 (1869).

Insufficient Affidavit. — An affidavit for arrest of an administrator who has been charged with assets to a certain amount is not sufficient if it does not show fraud in the misapplication of the funds by an administrator. Melvin v. Melvin, 72 N.C. 384 (1875).

Refusal to allow a second affidavit to be filed is an exercise of discretion, which cannot be reviewed upon appeal; the plaintiff might have filed a second sufficient affidavit immediately, and obtained a second warrant of arrest. Wilson v. Barnhill, 64 N.C. 121 (1870).

§ 1-412. Undertaking before order.

Before making the order the court or judge shall require a written undertaking on the part of the plaintiff of at least one hundred dollars ($100.00), with sufficient surety, payable to the defendant, to the effect that if the defendant recovers judgment the plaintiff will pay all damages which he sustains by reason of the arrest, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking. (C.C.P., s. 152; 1868-9, c. 277, s. 7; Code, s. 294; Rev., s. 730; C.S., s. 770.)

Cross References. — As to giving the bond of a surety company as surety, see § 58-73-5.

CASE NOTES

Application to Suits in Forma Pauperis. — A plaintiff who is allowed to sue in forma pauperis has no right to an order of arrest, without first filing the undertaking required by this section. Rowark v. Homesley, 68 N.C. 91 (1873).

Power to Increase or Diminish Bond. — The trial court has the power to increase or diminish the bond, and an order increasing the bond cannot be questioned unless an abuse of discretion is shown. Fayetteville Light & Power Co. v. Lessem Co., 174 N.C. 358, 93 S.E. 836 (1917).

Amount of Bond Not Subject to Review. — The discretion of the court in fixing the amount of the bond is not subject to review. Fayetteville Light & Power Co. v. Lessem Co., 174 N.C. 358, 93 S.E. 836 (1917).

§ 1-413. Issuance and form of order.

The order may be made to accompany the summons, or to issue at any time afterwards, before judgment. It shall require the sheriff of the county where the defendant may be found forthwith to arrest him and hold him to bail in a specified sum, and to return the order at a place and time therein mentioned to the clerk of the court in which the action is brought. Notice of the return must be served on the plaintiff or his attorney as prescribed by law for the service of other notices. The order shall include a statement that if the person arrested is an indigent person he is entitled to services of counsel under G.S. 7A-451, that he may petition for preliminary release on the basis of his indigency, that if he does so he will have an opportunity within 72 hours to suggest to a judge his indigency for purposes of appointment of counsel and preliminary release, and that the judge will thereupon immediately appoint counsel for him if it is adjudged that he is unable to pay a lawyer. (C.C.P., s. 153; Code, s. 295; Rev., s. 731; C.S., s. 771; 1977, c. 649, s. 3.)

Cross References. — As to execution against the person of a debtor after judgment, see § 1-311.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1977 law on civil procedure, see 56 N.C.L. Rev. 874 (1978).

CASE NOTES

The words "before judgment," as used in this section, mean "final judgment" upon the matters put in issue by the pleadings. Hence, the judgment rendered for the debt simply, in an action in which there are allegations of fraud, does not interfere with the rights of the parties in the matters in dispute on the question of fraud, if properly prosecuted. H.M. Houston & Co. v. Walsh, 79 N.C. 35 (1878); Preiss v. Cohen, 117 N.C. 54, 23 S.E. 162 (1895).

Exemption of Suitor Attending Court. — The principle of the common law that a suitor, while going to, remaining at and returning home from court, is exempted from arrest is in force in this State. Hammerskold v. Rose, 52 N.C. 629 (1860).

Exemption of Nonresident Attending as Witness. — A citizen of another state, while voluntarily attending court as a witness, is privileged from arrest in a civil case. Ballinger v. Elliott, 72 N.C. 596 (1875).

No Exemption of Defendant Under Criminal Process. — A defendant who has been brought into court on criminal process and discharged from arrest under the same on bail is not privileged from being arrested on civil process immediately afterwards, during the sitting of the court and before he leaves the courtroom. Moore v. Green, 73 N.C. 394 (1875).

The exemption of witnesses and jurors from civil arrest and of nonresident parties and witnesses voluntarily attending court here, on grounds of public policy, does not apply to parties arrested in criminal proceeding. White v. Underwood, 125 N.C. 25, 34 S.E. 104 (1899).

Service of Process on Prisoner in Jail. — The sheriff can serve process anywhere in his county. The jail possesses no "privilege of sanctuary" and service of process under a prisoner there is valid. White v. Underwood, 125 N.C. 25, 34 S.E. 104 (1899).

Written Warrant Necessary. — For the benefit of the citizen, that he may at all times be able to call upon the officers to produce authority, and to see precisely what it was, the law established the necessity of a written warrant. Lutterloh v. Powell, 2 N.C. 395 (1796).

§ 1-414. Copies of affidavit and order to defendant.

The affidavit and order of arrest shall be delivered to the sheriff, who, upon arresting the defendant, shall deliver him a copy thereof. (C.C.P., s. 154; Code, s. 296; Rev., s. 732; C.S., s. 772.)

§ 1-415. Execution of order.

The sheriff shall execute the order by arresting the defendant and keeping him in custody until discharged by law. The sheriff may call the power of the county to his aid in the execution of the arrest. (C.C.P., s. 155; Code, s. 297; Rev., s. 733; C.S., s. 773.)

§ 1-416. Vacation of order for failure to serve.

The order of arrest is of no avail, and shall be vacated or set aside on motion, unless it is served upon the defendant, as provided by law, before the docketing of any judgment in the action. (C.C.P., s. 153; Code, s. 295; Rev., s. 734; C.S., s. 774.)

CASE NOTES

An order of arrest issued after final judgment is illegal and void. H.M. Houston & Co. v. Walsh, 79 N.C. 35 (1878).

§ 1-417. Motion to vacate order; jury trial.

A defendant arrested may at any time before judgment apply on motion to vacate the order of arrest or to reduce the amount of bail. He may deny upon oath the facts alleged in the affidavit of the plaintiff on which the order of arrest was granted, and demand that the issue so raised by the plaintiff's affidavit and the defendant's denial be submitted to the jury and tried in the same manner as other issues. If the issues are found by the jury in favor of the defendant, judgment shall be rendered discharging him from arrest and vacating the order of arrest, and he shall recover of the plaintiff all costs of the proceeding in such arrest incurred by him in defending the action. (C.C.P., s. 174; Code, s. 316; 1889, c. 497; Rev., s. 735; C.S., s. 775.)

CASE NOTES

Construction of Sections Together. — This section and §§ 1-419 and 23-29 et seq., prescribing the methods by which a prisoner may be discharged in certain instances before final judgment, should be construed together; and, when so construed, the remedies given in § 23-29 et seq. are in addition to those given in this section and § 1-419. Edward v. Sorrell, 150 N.C. 712, 64 S.E. 898 (1909).

Surety on bail has no standing to object to the arrest or summary judgment against the defendant. Smith v. McClure, 25 N.C. App. 280, 212 S.E.2d 702, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 466, 215 S.E.2d 625 (1975).

Motion to Vacate Must Be Made Before Judgment. — A motion to vacate the order of arrest can only be made before judgment. And where such a motion has been once refused, and no appeal is taken, the matter is res adjudicata and a similar motion will not be entertained. Roulhac v. Brown, 87 N.C. 1 (1882).

Where Motion May Be Heard. — A motion to vacate an order of arrest may be heard by a judge out of court anywhere within the district that his duties require him to be during the time in which he is assigned to the district. Parker v. McPhail, 112 N.C. 502, 16 S.E. 848 (1893). See also, Ledbetter v. Pinner, 120 N.C. 455, 27 S.E. 123 (1897).

Clerk May Hear Motion. — It is perfectly regular to move to vacate before the clerk and appeal from his ruling to the judge. Roulhac v. Brown, 87 N.C. 1 (1882).

But Party May Elect to Apply to Judge. — As the clerk might be dilatory in acting, the party has his election to proceed more summarily by applying in the first instance to the judge. Parker v. McPhail, 112 N.C. 502, 16 S.E. 848 (1893).

New Matter Not to Be Considered. — The validity of an order of arrest and warrant of attachment is determined upon facts alleged in the original affidavit and existing at the time when the proceeding was instituted, and not upon new matter which may have afterwards transpired. Wm. Devries & Co. v. Summit, 86 N.C. 126 (1882).

A party under arrest in a civil action, moving to vacate the order upon affidavits submitted to the court, is not entitled to a trial by jury upon the questions of fact raised. Wingo v. Watson, 98 N.C. 482, 4 S.E. 463 (1887).

Remand for Jury Trial. — If the defendant demanded the jury trial permitted by this section, the judge would have been compelled to remand the motion to vacate to the county where the action was pending, that the issues so arising might be tried at the first term of court. Parker v. McPhail, 112 N.C. 502, 16 S.E. 848 (1893).

Irregular or False Order Will Be Vacated. — An order of arrest will be vacated by a judge without any undertaking by the defendant if on its face it appears to have been issued irregularly or for a cause insufficient in law or false in fact. Bear v. Cohen, 65 N.C. 511 (1871).

Vacation of Order Held Erroneous. — Where an order of arrest was made upon an invalid affidavit, and a counter affidavit was filed by the defendant, and a supplemental affidavit was filed by the plaintiff, which was duly verified, it was held that the judge below erred in vacating the order. Benedict, Hall & Co. v. Hall, 76 N.C. 113 (1877).

Rendition of judgment prior to hearing is not reversible error. Allison v. Maddrey, 114 N.C. 421, 19 S.E. 646 (1894).

Effect of Prior Acquittal in Another

State. — It is no ground for vacating an order of arrest that the defendant had been indicted, tried and acquitted by the courts of another state upon the same charge. Powers v. Davenport, 101 N.C. 286, 7 S.E. 747 (1888).

Right to Appeal Order Vacating Order of Arrest. — An order vacating an order of arrest "affect a substantial right claimed," and hence an appeal from such order lies. Raisin Fertilizer Co. v. Grubbs, 114 N.C. 470, 19 S.E. 597 (1894).

Effect of Pending Appeal on Order of Arrest. — An appeal from the judgment of a justice of the peace discharging one who has been arrested in a civil action vacates the judgment, and the order of arrest continues in force pending the appeal. Patton v. Gash, 99 N.C. 280, 6 S.E. 193 (1888).

Finality of Lower Court's Findings of Fact. — In arrest and bail proceedings, where a motion is made by the defendant to vacate the order of arrest and the court finds that the facts are sufficient to sustain the order, the findings of fact by the court below are final, and will not be reviewed unless it is objected properly that there was no evidence to support them. Harriss v. Sneeden, 101 N.C. 273, 7 S.E. 801 (1888); Travers v. Deaton, 107 N.C. 500, 12 S.E. 373 (1890); Parker v. McPhail, 112 N.C. 502, 16 S.E. 848 (1893).

Where, in the hearing of a motion to vacate an order of arrest, the judge finds as a fact that the act upon which it was based was not committed, the finding is final and cannot be reviewed. Parker v. McPhail, 112 N.C. 502, 16 S.E. 848 (1893).

Procuring Reduction of Bail Held to Constitute General Appearance. — When a consent order authorizing the reduction of bail, as authorized in this section, was signed, defendants invoked the power of the court in their behalf and for their benefit, which constituted a general appearance and waived any defect in connection with the service of process. Reverie Lingerie, Inc. v. McCain, 258 N.C. 353, 128 S.E.2d 835 (1963).

§ 1-418. Counter affidavits by plaintiff.

If the motion is made upon affidavits on the part of the defendant, but not otherwise, the plaintiff may oppose the same by affidavits, or other proof, in addition to those on which the order of arrest was made. (C.C.P., s. 175; Code, s. 317; Rev., s. 736; C.S., s. 776.)

CASE NOTES

Simple Denial Insufficient. — If the order was properly granted, it ought not to be vacated upon simple denial of the alleged cause of action; but where the answer or counter affidavits meet the allegations of the plaintiff fully and in detail, and furnish convincing evidence of their truth, the order should be vacated. Harriss v. Sneeden, 101 N.C. 273, 7 S.E. 801 (1888).

Facts Must Be Fully Controverted. — When one who has been arrested moves to vacate the order of arrest upon counter affidavits, purporting to meet the facts alleged against him, he should do so fully and clearly; otherwise, the order of arrest will be continued. Powers v. Davenport, 101 N.C. 286, 7 S.E. 747 (1888).

Additional Evidence. — Where the defendant moves to vacate the order upon the ground that it was irregularly or improvidently granted, the plaintiff will not be allowed to offer additional evidence in support of his application; but if the defendant moves to vacate upon counter proofs, the plaintiff may produce further evidence. Harriss v. Sneeden, 101 N.C. 273, 7 S.E. 801 (1888).

§ 1-419. How defendant discharged.

The defendant, at any time before execution, shall be discharged from the arrest, either upon giving bail or upon depositing the amount mentioned in the order of arrest, as provided in this article. (C.C.P., s. 156; Code, s. 298; Rev., s. 737; C.S., s. 777.)

CASE NOTES

Applicability of §§ 23-29 Through 23-42 to Nonresidents. — Where nonresidents are arrested under the provisions of this Article, they are entitled to the benefit of §§ 23-29 through 23-42, relating to insolvent debtors, in securing their discharge. Burgwyn v. Hall, 108 N.C. 489, 13 S.E. 222 (1891).

§ 1-420. Defendant's undertaking.

The defendant may give bail by causing a written undertaking, payable to the plaintiff, to be executed by sufficient surety to the effect that the defendant shall at all times render himself amendable to the process of the court, during the pendency of the action, and to such as may be issued to enforce the judgment therein, or if he is arrested in an action to recover the possession of personal property unjustly claimed, an undertaking to the same effect as that provided by law to be given by defendant for the retention of property, under the Article entitled Claim and Delivery. (C.C.P., s. 157; Code, s. 299; Rev., s. 738; C.S., s. 778.)

Editor's Note. — The reference in this section to "the Article entitled Claim and Delivery" was apparently meant to refer to Article 36 of this Chapter. See § 1-472 et seq.

CASE NOTES

The word "amenable," as used in this section, means "answerable" or "responsive" to the process of the court having jurisdiction; hence, when execution is issued against the person of the debtor, it is his duty to surrender himself, or of the obligors on the bond to do so, and a failure constitutes a breach of the obligation. Pickelsimer v. Glazener, 173 N.C. 630, 92 S.E. 700 (1917).

Voluntary Appearance. — The condition of the undertaking that the defendant shall, at all times during the pendency of the action, render himself amenable to the process of the court is met when the defendant voluntarily appears in court upon the hearing of the motion against his surety. Stepp v. Robinson, 203 N.C. 803, 167 S.E. 147 (1933).

§ 1-421. Defendant's undertaking delivered to clerk; exception.

Within the time limited for that purpose, the sheriff shall deliver the order of arrest to the clerk of the court in which the suit is brought, with his return endorsed, and a certified copy of the undertaking of the bail, and notify the plaintiff or his attorney thereof. The plaintiff, within 10 days thereafter, may serve upon the sheriff a notice that he does not accept the bail, or he is deemed to have accepted it and the sheriff is exonerated from the liability. (C.C.P., s. 162; Code, s. 304; Rev., s. 739; C.S., s. 779.)

§ 1-422. Notice of justification; new bail.

On the receipt of notice of exception to the bail, the sheriff or defendant may, within 10 days thereafter, give to the plaintiff or his attorney notice of the justification of the same or other bondsmen (specifying the places of residence and occupation of the latter) before the court or judge, at a specified time and place; the time to be not less than five nor more than 10 days thereafter. In case other bondsmen are given, there must be a new bond, in the form hereinbefore prescribed. (C.C.P., s. 163; Code, s. 305; Rev., s. 741; C.S., s. 780; 1971, c. 268, s. 26.)

§ 1-423. Qualifications of bail.

The qualifications of bail must be as follows:

(1) Each of them must be a resident and freeholder within the State

(2) They must each be worth the amount specified in the order of arrest, exclusive of property exempt from execution; but the judge, on justification, may allow more than two bail to justify severally in amounts less than that expressed in the order, if the whole justification is equivalent to that of two sufficient bail. (C.C.P., s. 164; Code, s. 306; Rev., s. 740; C.S., s. 781.)

CASE NOTES

Establishment of Facts. — A bail bond should show on its face that the surety is a resident and freeholder within the State, or his justification should establish these facts. Howell v. Jones, 113 N.C. 429, 18 S.E. 672 (1893).

§ 1-424. Justification of bail.

For the purpose of justification, each of the bail shall attend before the court or judge, at the time and place mentioned in the notice, and may be examined on oath, on the part of the plaintiff, touching his sufficiency, in such manner as the court, or judge, in his discretion, may think proper. The examination must be reduced to writing and subscribed by the bail, if required by the plaintiff. (C.C.P., s. 165; Code, s. 307; Rev., s. 742; C.S., s. 782; 1971, c. 268, s. 27.)

§ 1-425. Allowance of bail.

If the court or judge finds the bail sufficient, he shall annex the examination to the undertaking, endorse his allowance thereon, and cause them to be filed with the clerk. The sheriff is then exonerated from liability. (C.C.P., s. 166; Code, s. 308; Rev., s. 743; C.S., s. 783; 1971, c. 268, s. 28.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Bail. — The main object of a bail bond taken to release the prisoner from custody in arrest and bail is to secure his presence to answer the process of the court, and for this purpose, to keep him within its jurisdiction, and not merely to obtain money upon his default. Pickelsimer v. Glazener, 173 N.C. 630, 92 S.E. 700 (1917).

§ 1-426. Deposit in lieu of bail.

The defendant may, at the time of his arrest, instead of giving bail, deposit with the sheriff the amount mentioned in the order. The sheriff shall then give a certificate of the deposit to the defendant, who shall be discharged from custody. (C.C.P., s. 167; Code, s. 309; Rev., s. 744; C.S., s. 784.)

§ 1-427. Deposit paid into court; liability on sheriff's bond.

Within four days after the deposit the sheriff must pay it into court, and take from the officer receiving it two certificates of such payment, one of which he must deliver to the plaintiff, and the other to the defendant. For any default in making such payment, the same proceedings may be had on the official bond of the sheriff, to collect the sum deposited, as in other cases of delinquency. (C.C.P., s. 168; Code, s. 310; Rev., s. 745; C.S., s. 785.)

Cross References. — As to payment by sheriff of money collected on execution, see § 162-18.

§ 1-428. Bail substituted for deposit.

If money is deposited, as provided in G.S. 1-426 and 1-427, bail may be given and justified upon notice according to law at any time before judgment. Thereupon the court or judge shall direct, in the order of allowance, that the money deposited be refunded by the sheriff or other officer to the defendant, and it shall be refunded accordingly. (C.C.P., s. 169; Code, s. 311; Rev., s. 746; C.S., s. 786; 1971, c. 268, s. 29.)

§ 1-429. Deposit applied to plaintiff's judgment.

When money has been deposited, and remains on deposit at the time of an order or judgment for the payment of money to the plaintiff, the clerk or other officer shall, under the direction of the court, apply the same in satisfaction thereof, and after satisfying the judgment shall refund any surplus to the defendant. If the judgment is in favor of the defendant the clerk or other officer shall refund to him the whole sum deposited and remaining unapplied. (C.C.P., s. 170; Code, s. 312; Rev., s. 747; C.S., s. 787.)

§ 1-430. Defendant in jail, sheriff may take bail.

If a person for want of bail is lawfully committed to jail, at any time before final judgment, the sheriff, or other officer having him in custody, may take bail and discharge him; and the bail bond shall be regarded in every respect as other bail bonds, and shall be returned and sued on in like manner; and the officer taking it shall make special return thereof, with the bond, at the first court which is held after it is taken. (R.C., c. 11; s. 8; Code, s. 318; Rev., s. 748; C.S., s. 788.)

§ 1-431. When sheriff liable as bail.

If, after arrest, the defendant escapes, or is rescued, or bail is not given or justified, or a deposit is not made instead thereof, the sheriff is himself liable as bail. But he may discharge himself from such liability by the giving and justification of bail at any time before process against the person of the defendant to enforce an order or judgment in the action. (C.C.P., s. 171; Code, s. 313; Rev., s. 749; C.S., s. 789.)

CASE NOTES

Liability of Sheriff as Special Bail. — A sheriff who accepts an insufficient undertaking in arrest and bail proceedings, or who, after exceptions filed thereto by the plaintiff, fails to give notice of the time when and the place where the bail will justify, is liable as special bail to the plaintiff, and he will not be exonerated from liability by the fact that he acted in good faith in taking the insufficient bond, or by the fact that the plaintiff was nearby and knew what was going on when an alleged justification was being made by the surety. Howell v. Jones, 113 N.C. 429, 18 S.E. 672 (1893).

Liability for Escape of Prisoner. — A sheriff who permitted one arrested by him upon mesne process in a civil action to go into an adjoining room, from which he escaped, subjected himself to the liability as bail. Winborne & Bro. v. Mitchell, 111 N.C. 13, 15 S.E. 882 (1892).

Defendant's Insolvency Immaterial. — When the sheriff is sued as bail, he cannot give in evidence, in mitigation of damages, the defendant's insolvency. Winborne & Bro. v. Mitchell, 111 N.C. 13, 15 S.E. 882 (1892).

Defective Bond Does Not Satisfy Section. — A paper intended as a bail bond, which is so defective and imperfect as to be adjudged not to be such, cannot be regarded as the taking of bail. Adams v. Jones, 60 N.C. 198 (1864).

No Right to Rearrest on Finding Bail Insufficient. — After once taking the bail, the sheriff, on finding the bail to be insufficient, has no right to rearrest the defendant, and the defendant in such a case is justified in resisting the arrest. State v. Brittain, 25 N.C. 17 (1842); State v. Queen, 66 N.C. 615 (1872).

Notice and Exceptions Unnecessary. — If the sheriff fails to take bail, the plaintiff need not file exceptions nor give notice to fix him as bail. Adams v. Jones, 60 N.C. 198 (1864).

§ 1-432. Action on sheriff's bond.

If a judgment is recovered against the sheriff, upon his liability as bail, and an execution thereon is returned wholly or partly unsatisfied, the same proceedings may be had on the official bond of the sheriff, to collect the deficiency, as in other cases of delinquency. (C.C.P., s. 172; Code, s. 314; Rev., s. 750; C.S., s. 790.)

§ 1-433. Bail exonerated.

At any time before final judgment against them, the bail may be exonerated, either by the death of the defendant or his imprisonment in a State prison, or by his legal discharge from the obligation to render himself amenable to the process, or by his surrender to the sheriff of the county where he was arrested, in execution of the judgment. (C.C.P., s. 161; Code, s. 303; Rev., s. 751; C.S., s. 791.)

CASE NOTES

Defendant may be legally discharged in several ways, including an order under § 1-417 to vacate the arrest or a decision on the merits, and such discharge exonerates the bail. Smith v. McClure, 25 N.C. App. 280, 212 S.E.2d 702, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 466, 215 S.E.2d 625 (1975).

Meaning of "State Prison". — The term "State prison," as used in this section, applies to either the penitentiary or the county jail. Sedberry v. Carver, 77 N.C. 319 (1877).

Where the imprisonment of a defendant under this section expired before judgment was obtained, either against the principal in the original action or against the bail upon his undertaking, such imprisonment did not exonerate the bail. Adrian v. Scanlin, 77 N.C. 317 (1877); Sedberry v. Carver, 77 N.C. 319 (1877).

As to exoneration of bail during defendant's detention on other charges, see State v. Eller, 218 N.C. 365, 11 S.E.2d 295 (1940). See also, State v. Welborn, 205 N.C. 601, 172 S.E. 174 (1934).

Exoneration by Surrender of Principal. — The obligors on the bond, at any time before final judgment against them, may be released by the defendant's voluntary surrender of his person, or his production by the obligors in accordance with the terms of the bond, etc., whereupon the liability of the latter ceases. Pickelsimer v. Glazener, 173 N.C. 630, 92 S.E. 700 (1917).

§ 1-434. Surrender of defendant.

At any time before final judgment against them, the bail may surrender the defendant in their exoneration, or he may surrender himself to the sheriff of the county where he was arrested, in the following manner:

(1) A certified copy of the undertaking of the bail shall be delivered to the sheriff, who shall detain the defendant in his custody thereon, as upon an order of arrest, and acknowledge the surrender by a certificate in writing.

(2) Upon the production of a copy of the undertaking and sheriff's certificate, the court or judge may, upon a notice to the plaintiff of ten days, with a copy of the certificate, order that the bail be exonerated, and on filing the order and papers used on said application they shall be exonerated accordingly. But this section does not apply to an arrest in an action to recover the possession of personal property unjustly detained, so as to discharge the bail from an undertaking given to the effect provided by law to be given by defendant for the retention of property, under the Article entitled Claim and Delivery. (C.C.P., s. 158; Code, s. 300; Rev., s. 752; C.S., s. 792.)

Cross References. — As to claim and delivery, see §§ 1-472 through 1-484.1.

CASE NOTES

Cited in Pickelsimer v. Glazener, 173 N.C. 630, 92 S.E. 700 (1917).

§ 1-435. Bail may arrest defendant.

For the purpose of surrendering the defendant, the bail, at any time or place, before they are finally charged, may themselves arrest him, or by a written authority endorsed on a certified copy of the undertaking may empower any person over 21 years of age to do so. (C.C.P., s. 159; Code, s. 301; Rev., s. 753; C.S., s. 793.)

CASE NOTES

Right of Sureties to Arrest Principal. — Where a prisoner in arrest and bail is released from custody of the law upon bail, the principal is regarded as delivered to the custody of his sureties under the original process, who may thereafter seize and deliver him in discharge of their liability, or imprison him temporarily when necessary until this can be done, exercising this right in person or by agent in this or another state, upon the Sabbath or otherwise, and if necessary, they may break and enter his house for that purpose. Pickelsimer v. Glazener, 173 N.C. 630, 92 S.E. 700 (1917).

Stated in Hightower v. Thompson, 231 N.C. 491, 57 S.E.2d 763 (1950).

§ 1-436. Proceedings against bail by motion.

In case of failure to comply with the undertaking the bail may be proceeded against by motion in the cause on 10 days' notice to them. (C.C.P., s. 160; Code, s. 302; Rev., s. 754; C.S., s. 794.)

CASE NOTES

The surety is liable for any breach of bail bond obligations. Smith v. McClure, 25 N.C. App. 280, 212 S.E.2d 702, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 466, 215 S.E.2d 625 (1975).

Grounds for Defense by Surety on Bail. — Surety on bail has no right other than to defend an action on the bond on grounds of legal discharge, death, surrender or imprisonment of the principal. Smith v. McClure, 25 N.C. App. 280, 212 S.E.2d 702, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 466, 215 S.E.2d 625 (1975).

Insolvency of the principal is no defense to an action against the bail. Winborne & Bro. v. Mitchell, 111 N.C. 13, 15 S.E. 882 (1892).

When Action Against Bail Lies. — Where the debtor is released upon bail, the creditor may proceed to judgment and issue execution against the debtor's property, and afterwards against his person, if returned "nulla bona"; should the latter writ be returned "non est inventus," the plaintiff may move on 10 days' notice for judgment against the bail, making available to the latter all defenses he may have as to the surrender of his principal; a judgment rendered against him at an intermediate stage of the proceedings is reversible error. Pickelsimer v. Glazener, 173 N.C. 630, 92 S.E. 700 (1917).

Motion Must Be Brought Within Three Years. — Proceedings against bail, in civil actions, are barred unless commenced within three years after judgment against the principal, notwithstanding the fact that the principal may have left the State in the meantime. Albemarle Steam Nav. Co. v. Williams, 111 N.C. 35, 15 S.E. 877 (1892).

Where the defendant appeared in open court in response to notice served upon his surety or bail, he was then "amenable to the process of the court," notwithstanding his refusal to surrender himself, and the court should have ordered execution against the person of the defendant, rather than hold the surety or bail for failure to surrender him. Stepp v. Robinson, 203 N.C. 803, 167 S.E. 147 (1933).

Surety on bail has no standing to object to arrest or summary judgment against defendant. Smith v. McClure, 25 N.C. App.

Applied in Fryar v. Gauldin, 259 N.C. 391, 130 S.E.2d 689 (1963).

§ 1-437. Liability of bail to sheriff.

The bail taken upon the arrest are, unless they justify, or other bail are given or justified, liable to the sheriff by action for damages which he may sustain by reason of such omission. (C.C.P., s. 173; Code, s. 315; Rev., s. 755; C.S., s. 795.)

§ 1-438. When bail to pay costs.

When a notice issues against a person, as the bail of another, and the bail, at or before the term of the court at which he is bound to appear, or ought to plead, is not discharged from his liability by the death or surrender of his principal or otherwise, he is liable for all costs which accrue on said notice, notwithstanding he may be afterwards discharged, by the death or surrender of the principal, or otherwise. (R.C., c. 11, s. 10; Code, s. 319; Rev., s. 756; C.S., s. 796.)

CASE NOTES

Certain Costs Not Allowed. — The costs allowed against bail, notwithstanding a surrender, etc., do not include such as are incurred on account of an improper and ineffectual appeal. Clark v. Latham, 53 N.C. 1 (1860).

§ 1-439. Bail not discharged by amendment.

No amendment of process or pleading discharges the bail of the party arrested thereon, unless it enlarges the sum demanded beyond the sum expressed in the bail bond. (R.C., c. 11, s. 11; Code, s. 320; Rev., s. 757; C.S., s. 797.)

Attachment.

Part 1. General Provisions.

§ 1-440: Superseded by Session Laws 1947, c. 693, codified as § 1-440.1 et seq.

§ 1-440.1. Nature of attachment.

(a) Attachment is a proceeding ancillary to a pending principal action, is in the nature of a preliminary execution against property, and is intended to bring property of a defendant within the legal custody of the court in order that it may subsequently be applied to the satisfaction of any judgment for money which may be rendered against the defendant in the principal action.

(b) No personal judgment, even for costs, may be rendered against a defendant unless personal jurisdiction has been acquired as provided in G.S. 1-75.3.

(c) Although there is no personal service on the defendant, or on an agent for him, and although he does not make a general appearance, judgment may be rendered in an action in which property of the defendant has been attached which judgment shall provide for the application of the attached property, by the method set out in G.S. 1-440.46, to the satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim as established in the principal action. If plaintiff's claim is not thereby satisfied in full, subsequent actions for the unsatisfied balance are not barred. (1947, c. 693, s. 1; 1967, c. 954, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

Purpose of Article. — This Article protects legitimate interests of creditors in narrowly defined situations where the absence of such a remedy would have substantial, deleterious effects on the creditor himself and the commercial credit system as a whole. Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

This Article affords the debtor the most extensive safeguards possible and minimizes both the possibility of a wrongful or arbitrary deprivation of the debtor's property interest and the harm to the debtor as a result of the ex parte issuance of the writ of attachment. Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Narrow nature of attachment statute ensures that the creditor's interests advanced or protected by this procedure are legitimate. Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Origin of Writ. — Attachment, other than the common-law writ which issued out of the common pleas upon the nonappearance of the defendant at the return of the original writ, had its origin in the civil law, and afterwards was adopted in England in the form of a custom of the London merchants, and out of this, as modified and extended by statute, has grown the modern law in respect to this remedy. It was resorted to in order to compel the attendance of the debtor as well as to afford a security to the creditor. Grocery Co. v. Bag Co., 142 N.C. 174, 55 S.E. 90 (1906). See also, Chinnis v. Cobb, 210 N.C. 104, 185 S.E. 638 (1936).

Nature of Writ. — An attachment is not the foundation of an independent action, but is an ancillary and auxiliary remedy collateral to the action. Marsh v. Williams, 63 N.C. 371 (1869); Toms v. Warson, 66 N.C. 417 (1872).

Function of Writ. — The function of the writ of attachment is to seize the property of a defendant and hold it within the grasp of the law until the trial can be had and the rights of the parties determined, or it may be released pending the action if seized without proper cause. In no sense is it a process to bring the defendant into court. It may be issued to accompany the summons, or at any time thereafter. Ditmore v. Goins, 128 N.C. 325, 39 S.E. 61 (1901). See also, Chinnis v. Cobb, 210 N.C. 104, 185 S.E. 638 (1936).

Attachment is a proceeding ancillary to a pending principal action, is in the nature of a preliminary execution against property, and is intended to bring the property of the defendant within the legal custody of the court in order that it may be subsequently applied to the satisfaction of any judgment for money which may be rendered against defendant in the principal action. Edwards v. Brown's Cabinets, 63 N.C. App. 524, 305 S.E.2d 765, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 632, 308 S.E.2d 64 (1983).

Lis pendens, literally "pending suit," is a statutory device by which the world is put on notice that an order of attachment has been issued with respect to certain real property owned by a party against whom a monetary judgment is sought and that the lien of attachment may be executed and the property sold in satisfaction of the judgment. Edwards v. Brown's Cabinets, 63 N.C. App. 524, 305 S.E.2d 765, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 632, 308 S.E.2d 64 (1983).

Due Process Protection. — Attachment of real property is a substantial deprivation of a significant property interest subject to the protection of the due process clause. Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Appellant who was a non-resident at the time attachment proceedings were initiated against his property was not deprived of due process by the failure to provide pre-attachment notice and hearing. Miltland Raleigh-Durham v. Mudie, 122 N.C. App. 168, 468 S.E.2d 275 (1996), appeal dismissed, cert. denied, 343 N.C. 512, 473 S.E.2d 608 (1996).

The writ of attachment differs from the ordinary writ in that the plaintiff is allowed to get a judgment against the defendant without personal service of process, which is contrary to the course of the common law, and as a protection to the absent defendant, all the material facts must be set out in an affidavit, which is made the groundwork of the proceeding. Webb v. Bowler, 50 N.C. 362 (1858).

Strict Construction. — Attachment is a statutory remedy which must be strictly construed. Connolly v. Sharpe, 49 N.C. App. 152, 270 S.E.2d 564 (1980).

A party seeking the benefit of the attachment statutes must bring himself strictly, not within the spirit, but within the letter; he can take nothing by intendment. President & Dirs. v. Hinton, 12 N.C. 397 (1828); Skinner v. Moore, 19 N.C. 138 (1836); Carson v. Woodrow, 160 N.C. 143, 75 S.E. 996 (1912).

The remedy by attachment is special and extraordinary, and the statutory provisions for it must be strictly construed, and cannot have force in cases not plainly within their terms. President & Dirs. v. Hinton, 12 N.C. 397 (1828); Skinner v. Moore, 19 N.C. 138 (1836); Carson v. Woodrow, 160 N.C. 143, 75 S.E. 996 (1912).

There is no law in the Code which more imperiously demands a strict construction; for the property of an absentee may be sold upon an attachment wrongfully sued out before he is appraised of the proceeding, and, if he then should discover that no bond and affidavit were taken and returned, his remedy must at best be very imperfect. President & Dirs. v. Hinton, 12 N.C. 397 (1828); Leak v. Moorman, 61 N.C. 168 (1867).

The provisions of the Code, authorizing the attachment of the property of a nonresident defendant upon constructive service of a summons by publication is an extraordinary and summary remedy, and is in derogation of the common law and statute law of the United States, and cannot be recognized in a case commenced in a federal court. Even in a state court the plaintiff must strictly and technically perform all the conditions required by the statute entitling him to such remedy. Jurisdiction in such cases cannot be acquired or enlarged by implication and liberal construction. Lackett v. Rumbaugh, 45 F. 23 (W.D.N.C. 1891).

Substantial Compliance. — While attachment is a statutory remedy which must be strictly construed, substantial compliance with the statutory requirements will suffice. Connolly v. Sharpe, 49 N.C. App. 152, 270 S.E.2d 564 (1980).

Where, in a proceeding of attachment, it appears from the whole record that the provisions of the statute have been substantially complied with, the action will not be dismissed nor the attachment dissolved. Grant v. Burgwyn, 79 N.C. 513 (1878); Best v. British & Am. Co., 128 N.C. 351, 38 S.E. 923 (1901); Page v. McDonald, 159 N.C. 38, 74 S.E. 642 (1912).

Proceeding Is Quasi In Rem. — Attachment of the property of nonresident defendants in this State is a proceeding quasi in rem, for the purpose of bringing him under the jurisdiction of the State court for determining the controversy in the action brought against him, when properly constituted. Mohn v. Cressey, 193 N.C. 568, 137 S.E. 718 (1927).

Absence of conflicting interests in the attached property does not automatically mandate notice and hearing prior to attachment. Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Property Held by Resident Agent. — By authorizing resident to hold property as their agent, nonresident defendants, as principals, did not surrender their ownership interests in the property, and were thus subject to attachment against their ownership interest in the property. Vinson Realty Co. v. Honig, 88 N.C. App. 113, 362 S.E.2d 602 (1987).

Applied in Whitaker v. Wade, 229 N.C. 327, 49 S.E.2d 627 (1948); Koob v. Koob, 283 N.C. 129, 195 S.E.2d 552 (1973).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Notice and Opportunity for Hearing. — Fuentes v. Shevin, 407 U.S. 67, 92 S. Ct. 1983, 32 L. Ed. 2d 556, rehearing denied, 409 U.S. 902, 93 S. Ct. 177, 34 L. Ed. 2d 165 (1972) does not require that a defendant be given notice and the opportunity for a hearing prior to the issuance by the clerk or judge of an order of attachment pursuant to this section and §§ 1-440.2 and 1-440.14. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Clarence Kluttz, 43 N.C.A.G. 168 (1973).

§ 1-440.2. Actions in which attachment may be had.

Attachment may be had in any action the purpose of which, in whole or in part, or in the alternative, is to secure a judgment for money, or in any action for alimony or for maintenance and support, or an action for the support of a minor child, but not in any other action. (1947, c. 693, s. 1; 1967, c. 1152, s. 4; c. 1153, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

Legislative Intent. — The history of legislation as to attachments shows a legislative intent to broaden the right of this writ to make the same almost coextensive with any well-grounded demand for judgment in personam. Tisdale v. Eubanks, 180 N.C. 153, 104 S.E. 339 (1920); Mitchell v. Talley, 182 N.C. 683, 109 S.E. 882 (1921).

As to the history of this section, see Price v. Cox, 83 N.C. 261 (1880); Wilson v. Louis Cook Mfg. Co., 88 N.C. 5 (1883); Mullen v. Norfolk & Carolina Canal Co., 114 N.C. 8, 19 S.E. 106, rehearing denied, 115 N.C. 15, 20 S.E. 167 (1894); Worth v. Knickerbocker Trust Co., 151 N.C. 191, 65 S.E. 918 (1909).

An attachment in equity will lie against the principal, even though the remedy at law against his surety has not been exhausted. Alexander v. Taylor, 62 N.C. 36 (1866).

Slander. — The security of a person's good name and reputation is within his personal rights as a citizen, and slander thereof is an injury to his person, and would sustain a proceeding for an attachment within the intent and meaning of former § 1-440, as an "injury to the person by wrongful act." Tisdale v. Eubanks, 180 N.C. 153, 104 S.E. 339 (1920).

Death by Wrongful Act. — The former attachment statute was sufficiently comprehensive to include the action for causing the death of another by wrongful act, neglect or default of another. Mitchell v. Talley, 182 N.C. 683, 109 S.E. 882 (1921).

Workers Compensation Cases. — Section 97-95 provides a further action in which attachment may be had, and which must be read in pari materia with this section. Nelson v. Hayes, 116 N.C. App. 632, 448 S.E.2d 848, cert. denied, 338 N.C. 519, 452 S.E.2d 814 (1994).

Uninsured Employer. — Section 97-95 merely provides an avenue to allow for attachment where an employer (1) is uninsured or fails to qualify as a self-insurer, and (2) owns property in the State susceptible to disposal or removal. As such, plaintiff's affidavit must meet one of the grounds for attachment listed in this section or § 1-440.11. Nelson v. Hayes, 116 N.C. App. 632, 448 S.E.2d 848, cert. denied, 338 N.C. 519, 452 S.E.2d 814 (1994).

§ 1-440.3. Grounds for attachment.

In those actions in which attachment may be had under the provisions of G.S. 1-440.2, an order of attachment may be issued when the defendant is

(1) A nonresident, or

(2) A foreign corporation, or

(3) A domestic corporation, whose president, vice-president, secretary or treasurer cannot be found in the State after due diligence, or

(4) A resident of the State who, with intent to defraud his creditors or to avoid service of summons,

a. Has departed, or is about to depart, from the State, or

b. Keeps himself concealed therein, or

(5) A person or domestic corporation which, with intent to defraud his or its creditors,

a. Has removed, or is about to remove, property from this State, or

b. Has assigned, disposed of, or secreted, or is about to assign, dispose of, or secrete, property. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

Impact of this section and § 1-440.11 is either to (1) afford the court in the main action quasi in rem jurisdiction so as to bring the defendants' property under the jurisdiction of the State court or (2) bring property within the custody of the court which would otherwise be unavailable for satisfaction of an ultimate judgment in a principal suit because of assignment or removal by the debtor. Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Section 1-440.11(a)(2)b, in conjunction with this section, manifests a statutory procedure in which a prejudgment writ will be issued only in exceptional circumstances on a rigorous showing that such circumstances exist. Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Postponement of Notice and Hearing. — Circumstances contemplated in subdivisions (1) through (4) are extraordinary situations, justifying postponement of notice and hearing. Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

This section and § 1-440.11 in stating when and under what conditions an order of attachment may be issued manifest a definite procedure for granting the writ, a procedure which does not entail opportunity for prior notice and hearing. Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Concealment Within the State. — Property of the judgment debtor could be attached under this section, where the judgment creditor presented evidence that the debtor had concealed himself in North Carolina and had resisted efforts by the creditor to serve him with process. Jimenez v. Brown, — N.C. App. —, 509 S.E.2d 241 (1998).

Confinement of remedy is certainly an important, initial step in ensuring against wrongful or abusive use of the process by a creditor. Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Subdivision (5) of this section is restricted to circumstances in which creditor is in immediate danger that the debtor will destroy or alienate the property sought to be attached. Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

The ancillary writ of attachment may be issued only on one or more of the grounds specified by this section. Whitaker v. Wade, 229 N.C. 327, 49 S.E.2d 627 (1948).

The proper determination to be made regarding attachment is residence, not domicile. Vinson Realty Co. v. Honig, 88 N.C. App. 113, 362 S.E.2d 602 (1987).

Residence is taken to signify one's place of actual abode, whether it be temporary or permanent, and is thus distinguished from domicile, which indicates one's permanent abode, to which, when absent, one intends to return. Although the two terms have sometimes been used interchangeably, and although the statutory use of "residence" has sometimes been construed to mean "domicile," the two terms are quite distinct. Vinson Realty Co. v. Honig, 88 N.C. App. 113, 362 S.E.2d 602 (1987).

Property of State Resident Domiciled Outside State Held Not Subject to Attachment. — The trial court erred in concluding that defendant, who lived and paid taxes in North Carolina but was domiciled in the Netherlands, was a nonresident and that his interest in the subject property could be attached pursuant to subdivision (1) of this section. Vinson Realty Co. v. Honig, 88 N.C. App. 113, 362 S.E.2d 602 (1987).

All Codefendants Need Not Be Nonresidents for Nonresidents' Property to Be Attached. — Subdivision (1) of this section authorizes attachment of the property of a nonresident defendant; it does not require that all codefendants be nonresidents in order for the property of those defendants who are nonresidents to be attached. Vinson Realty Co. v. Honig, 88 N.C. App. 113, 362 S.E.2d 602 (1987).

Property Held by Resident Agent. — By authorizing resident to hold property as their agent, nonresident defendants, as principals, did not surrender their ownership interests in the property, and were thus subject to attachment against their ownership interest in the property. Vinson Realty Co. v. Honig, 88 N.C. App. 113, 362 S.E.2d 602 (1987).

Grounds upon which an ancillary writ of attachment is issued must be made to appear by affidavit. Whitaker v. Wade, 229 N.C. 327, 49 S.E.2d 627 (1948).

Fraudulent Disposition of Property. — The statute authorizing a warrant of attachment where a fraudulent disposition of property is made as against creditors, relates to the intent with which it is disposed of and not to the manner in which the property is acquired. Howland v. Marshall, 127 N.C. 427, 37 S.E. 462 (1900).

Fraudulent Intent Unnecessary for Attachment Against Nonresident. — An attachment is now made a provisional remedy in the progress of a cause and can be sued out whenever the defendant is a nonresident, regardless of intent. Wheeler v. Cobb, 75 N.C. 21 (1876).

When One Is a Nonresident. — Where a person voluntarily removes from this to another state, for the purpose of discharging the duties of an office of indefinite duration, which requires his continued presence there for an unlimited time, such person is a nonresident of this State for the purpose of an attachment although he may occasionally visit this State, and have the intent to return at some uncertain future time. Wheeler v. Cobb, 75 N.C. 21 (1876).

The fact that a person leaves the State to seek work, for the purpose of prospecting with a view to change his residence if desirable, does not sustain an attachment on the ground that the defendant was a nonresident. Mahoney v. Tyler, 136 N.C. 40, 48 S.E. 549 (1904).

A person who leaves State for an indefinite time, becomes a nonresident even though such person may intend to return at some time in the future, and his motion made by special appearance to vacate an attachment on the ground of residence will be denied. Brann v. Hanes, 194 N.C. 571, 140 S.E. 292 (1927).

Domicile is not determinative of the question whether one is a nonresident. — Nor is the cause of the absence, such as severe illness, material if such absence prevents personal service of summons upon him during an indefinite period of time. Brann v. Hanes, 194 N.C. 571, 140 S.E. 292 (1927).

If upon the levy of an attachment on his property a person promptly returns to this State, and thereby subjects himself to personal service of process, his motion to vacate an attachment on the ground that he is not a nonresident would seem generally to be well sustained. Brann v. Hanes, 194 N.C. 571, 140 S.E. 292 (1927).

Applied in Tyndall v. Tyndall, 270 N.C. 106, 153 S.E.2d 819 (1967); Davenport v. Ralph N. Peters & Co., 386 F.2d 199 (4th Cir. 1967); Northside Properties, Inc. v. Ko-Ko Mart, Inc., 28 N.C. App. 532, 222 S.E.2d 267 (1976).

Stated in Loman Garrett, Inc. v. Timco Mechanical, Inc., 93 N.C. App. 500, 378 S.E.2d 194 (1989); Nelson v. Hayes, 116 N.C. App. 632, 448 S.E.2d 848, cert. denied, 338 N.C. 519, 452 S.E.2d 814 (1994).

§ 1-440.4. Property subject to attachment.

All of a defendant's property within this State which is subject to levy under execution, or which in supplemental proceedings in aid of execution is subject to the satisfaction of a judgment for money, is subject to attachment under the conditions prescribed by this Article. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

What Property Is Subject to Attachment. — All property in this State, whether real or personal, tangible or intangible, owned by a nonresident defendant in an action to recover on any of the causes of action included within the provisions of the attachment statute, is liable to attachment. For case holding that interest in land under a spendthrift trust was not subject to attachment, see Chinnis v. Cobb, 210 N.C. 104, 185 S.E. 638 (1936).

Defendant's property or choses in action in the hands of third persons may be attached. Newberry v. Meadows Fertilizer Co., 206 N.C. 182, 173 S.E. 67 (1934).

By authorizing resident to hold property as their agent, nonresident defendants, as principals, did not surrender their ownership interests in the property, and were thus subject to attachment against their ownership interest in the property. Vinson Realty Co. v. Honig, 88 N.C. App. 113, 362 S.E.2d 602 (1987).

As to liability of cash deposited as security in lieu of bond to attachment, see White v. Ordille, 229 N.C. 490, 50 S.E.2d 499 (1948).

A distributive share in the hands of an administrator, due the wife of a nonresident debtor, cannot be subjected to the payment of the husband's debts in this State by means of an attachment in equity. McLean v. McPhaul, 59 N.C. 15 (1860).

As to attachment of stock in foreign and domestic corporations under former statutes, see Parks-Cramer Co. v. Southern Express Co., 185 N.C. 428, 117 S.E. 505 (1923), cert. denied, 263 U.S. 717, 44 S. Ct. 180, 68 L. Ed. 522 (1924).

Property Absorbed by Nonresident Corporation. — Where a nonresident express company doing business in this State, and having property herein, incurred a liability to its shipper for breach of its contract for the transportation and delivery of a shipment, and afterwards became absorbed in another nonresident corporation carrying on the same business with the same property and stock of the selling (debtor) company, the one continuing to do business here was subject to attachment under the provisions of former law, where the cause of action arose here; and, the fact that the certificates of stock were not physically in the jurisdiction of the courts of this State was immaterial. Parks-Cramer Co. v. Southern Express Co., 185 N.C. 428, 117 S.E. 505 (1923), cert. denied, 263 U.S. 717, 44 S. Ct. 180, 68 L. Ed. 522 (1924).

Any interest an agent may have by reason of the possession of his principal's property is not subject to attachment. Davenport v. Ralph N. Peters & Co., 274 F. Supp. 99 (W.D.N.C. 1966), rev'd on other grounds, 386 F.2d 199 (4th Cir. 1967).

The bare interest of a creditor in his chattel security is not subject to attachment. Davenport v. Ralph N. Peters & Co., 274 F. Supp. 99 (W.D.N.C. 1966), rev'd on other grounds, 386 F.2d 199 (4th Cir. 1967).

Tax Books of Sheriff Not Liable to Attachment. — Though a sheriff, who has settled for the taxes due on a tax list which have not been paid to him, may collect the same within the time allowed by law, yet the tax books, showing the debts thus due him, cannot be attached by a creditor to whom he is indebted. Davie v. Blackburn, 117 N.C. 383, 23 S.E. 321 (1895).

Quoted in Elmwood v. Elmwood, 295 N.C. 168, 244 S.E.2d 668 (1978).

§ 1-440.5. By whom order issued; when and where; filing of bond and affidavit.

(a) An order of attachment may be issued by
  (1) The clerk of the court in which the action has been, or is being, commenced, or by
  (2) A judge of the appropriate trial division, as authorized in subsection (b) of this section.

(b) An order of attachment issued by a judge may be issued as follows:
  (1) If the action has been or is being commenced in the Superior Court Division, a resident superior court judge of the district, or a judge regularly holding the superior courts of the district, may issue the order in open court or in chambers, in session or in vacation, and within or without the district. Any other judge holding a session of superior court in the county may issue the order in open court.
  (2) If the action has been or is being commenced in the District Court Division, the presiding judge, the chief district judge, or any district judge authorized by the chief to hear motions and enter interlocutory orders may issue the order in open court or in chambers in session or in vacation.

(c) In those cases where the order of attachment is issued by the judge, such judge shall cause the bond required by G.S. 1-440.10 and the affidavit required by G.S. 1-440.11 to be filed promptly with the clerk of the court of the county in which the action is pending. (1947, c. 693, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 30.)

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

Constitutionality. — This section complies with procedural due process as required by the federal constitution. Connolly v. Sharpe, 49 N.C. App. 152, 270 S.E.2d 564 (1980).

Issuance of attachment by clerk is consistent with due process. Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

The issuance of the attachment order by the clerk is consistent with due process since the clerk is a judicial officer and not a mere administrative functionary. Northside Properties, Inc. v. Ko-Ko Mart, Inc., 28 N.C. App. 532, 222 S.E.2d 267, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 615, 223 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

The clerk only acts ministerially in issuing the process for attachment. Evans v. Etheridge, 96 N.C. 42, 1 S.E. 633 (1887).

Power of Clerk to Issue Warrant When He Is Plaintiff. — A clerk of the superior court, upon making the necessary affidavit before some person authorized by law, may issue a warrant of attachment in an action in which he is plaintiff. Evans v. Etheridge, 96 N.C. 42, 1 S.E. 633 (1887).

Issuance of Blank Forms Prohibited. — When an attachment form in blank, including a form for the affidavit, had been signed by the clerk and delivered to the attorney of the party seeking the attachment, upon condition that he properly fill out the papers and give sufficient bond, the writ and the levy thereunder were both void, though subsequently approved by the clerk. Carson v. Woodrow, 160 N.C. 143, 75 S.E. 996 (1912).

Appeal from Clerk's Decision. — From the decision of the clerk in granting a warrant of attachment an appeal lies to the judge. Cushing v. Styron, 104 N.C. 338, 10 S.E. 258 (1889); Howland v. Marshall, 127 N.C. 427, 37 S.E. 462 (1900).

§ 1-440.6. Time of issuance with reference to summons or service by publication.

(a) The order of attachment may be issued at the time the summons is issued or at any time thereafter.

(b) No order of attachment may be issued in any action after judgment in the principal action is had in the superior court. (1947, c. 693, s. 1; 1967, c. 954, s. 3.)

§ 1-440.7. Time within which service of summons or service by publication must be had.

(a) When an order of attachment is issued before the summons is served.

(1) If personal service within the State is to be had, such personal service must be had within 30 days after the issuance of the order of attachment;

(2) If such personal service within the State is not to be had,

a. Service of the summons outside the State, in the manner provided by Rule 4(j)(9)a or b of the Rules of Civil Procedure, must be had within 30 days after the issuance of the order of attachment, or

b. Service by publication must be commenced not later than the thirty-first day after the issuance of the order of attachment. If publication is commenced, such publication must be completed as provided by Rule 4(j)(9)c of the Rules of Civil Procedure unless the defendant appears in the action or unless personal service is had on him within the State.

(b) Upon failure of compliance with the applicable provisions of subsection (a) of this section, either the clerk or the judge shall, upon the motion of the defendant or any other interested party, make an order dissolving the attachment, and the defendant shall have all the rights that would accrue to him under the provisions of G.S. 1-440.45, the same as if the principal action had been prosecuted to judgment and the defendant had prevailed therein. (1947, c. 693, s. 1; 1967, c. 954, s. 3; 1971, c. 1093, ss. 14, 15.)

Editor's Note. — The references in this section to paragraphs of subdivision (j)(9) of Rule 4 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, § 1A-1, Rule 4(j)(9), were intended to refer to Rule 4 as it read prior to more recent amendments. As to manner of service to exercise personal jurisdiction, see now subdivision (j) of § 1A-1, Rule 4. As to service by publication on a party that cannot otherwise be served, see subdivision (j1) of § 1A-1, Rule 4. As to service in a foreign country, see subdivision (j3) of § 1A-1, Rule 4.

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

Main Action Commenced by Summons. — The warrant of attachment is only a provisional or ancillary remedy in and dependent upon a main action commenced by the issuing of a summons. Lackett v. Rumbaugh, 45 F. 23 (W.D.N.C. 1891).

Proceedings When Notice Not Duly Served. — Under the former statute it was held that if the notice was not duly served by the publication, it was error to discharge an attachment granted as ancillary to an action because of the insufficiency of the affidavit to obtain service of the summons by publication, because it was possible that the defect might be cured by amendments. Branch v. Frank, 81 N.C. 180 (1879); Mills v. Hansel, 168 N.C. 651, 85 S.E. 17 (1915).

The remedy was not to dismiss the attachment, but to order a republication, for, as the defendant was a nonresident, to dismiss the attachment might deprive the plaintiff of all remedy by the removal of the property before a new proceeding and attachment could be had. Price v. Cox, 83 N.C. 261 (1880); Penniman v. Daniel, 90 N.C. 154 (1884); Penniman v. Daniel, 93 N.C. 332 (1885); Mills v. Hansel, 168 N.C. 651, 85 S.E. 17 (1915).

Failure to Commence Service by Publication Within Thirty-One Days. — A defendant is entitled to have an attachment dissolved if plaintiff fails to commence service by publication within 31 days after the issuance of the order of attachment. Accident Indem. Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 261 N.C. 778, 136 S.E.2d 95 (1964).

The court has a right to extend the time for service by publication. Finch v. Slater, 152 N.C. 155, 67 S.E. 264 (1910); Mills v. Hansel, 168 N.C. 651, 85 S.E. 17 (1915); Thrush v. Thrush, 246 N.C. 114, 97 S.E.2d 472 (1957).

Applied in S.D. Scott & Co. v. Jones, 230 N.C. 74, 52 S.E.2d 219 (1949); Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

§ 1-440.8. General provisions relative to bonds.

(a) Any bond given pursuant to the provisions of this Article shall be executed by the party required to furnish the bond and by

(1) A surety company authorized to do business in this State, as provided by G.S. 58-73-5, or by

(2) One or more individual sureties, as may be required by the court.

(b) Each individual surety shall execute an affidavit, to be attached to the bond, stating that he is a resident of the State and that he is worth the amount specified in the bond exclusive of property exempt from execution and over and above all his liabilities.

(c) Any bond given pursuant to any provisions of this Article shall be subject to the approval of the court.

(d) It is not a defense in an action on any bond given pursuant to this Article that

(1) The court had no jurisdiction to require or accept bond, or

(2) The order of attachment was improperly granted, or
(3) There was any other irregularity in the attachment proceeding. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

§ 1-440.9. Authority of court to fix procedural details.

The court of proper jurisdiction, before which any matter is pending under the provisions of this Article, shall have authority to fix and determine all necessary procedural details in all instances in which the statute fails to make definite provision as to such procedure. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Court Has Authority to Dissolve Attachment After Order Not Carried Out. — This Article does not specifically authorize the court to dissolve or dismiss an attachment when a plaintiff fails to carry out the court's order to increase the bond, but pursuant to the general authorization of this section to fix all procedural details not specified elsewhere, and in aid of its own jurisdiction over the matter, the court has authority to dissolve an attachment after the court's lawful order has not been carried out. Palmer v. M.R.S. Dev. Corp., 9 N.C. App. 668, 177 S.E.2d 328 (1970).

Authority of Clerk to Stop Sale and Order Resale. — This section gave the clerk sufficient authority to stop the first sale of an aircraft, as to which the sheriff's announcement at the sale that the aircraft would be sold free of the plaintiff savings and loan's lien was at variance with the advertised notice that defendant's interest would be sold, where the aircraft brought at the first sale only a small fraction of its value, and the clerk also had the power to order a new sale. North State Sav. & Loan Corp. v. Carter Dev. Co., 83 N.C. App. 422, 350 S.E.2d 374 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 405, 354 S.E.2d 716 (1987).

Applied in Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Part 2. Procedure to Secure Attachment.

§ 1-440.10. Bond for attachment.

Before the court issues an order of attachment, the plaintiff must furnish a bond as follows:

(1) The amount of the bond shall be such as may be fixed by the court issuing the order of attachment and shall be such as may be deemed necessary by the court in order to afford reasonable protection to the defendant, but shall not be less than two hundred dollars ($200.00);
(2) The condition of the bond shall be that a. If the order of attachment is dissolved, dismissed or set aside by the court, or
   b. If the plaintiff fails to obtain judgment against the defendant, the plaintiff will pay all costs that may be awarded to the defendant and all damages that the defendant may sustain by reason of the attachment, the surety's liability, however, to be limited to the amount of the bond. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

A judge of the superior court has authority to require plaintiffs in attachment to increase their bond or have their attachment dismissed. Palmer v. M.R.S. Dev. Corp., 9 N.C. App. 668, 177 S.E.2d 328 (1970).

And he has authority to dismiss the attachment by a second order when plaintiffs failed to post additional bond within the time fixed. Palmer v. M.R.S. Dev. Corp., 9 N.C. App. 668, 177 S.E.2d 328 (1970).

Plaintiffs Not Entitled to Jury Trial on Question of Increasing Bond. — Plaintiffs in attachment were not entitled to a jury trial on the question of increasing the bond required by this section, the size of a plaintiff's bond not being within the "issues" envisioned by § 1-440.36(c). Palmer v. M.R.S. Dev. Corp., 9 N.C. App. 668, 177 S.E.2d 328 (1970).

Effect of Mistake in Signing Undertaking. — Under the former attachment statute it was held that where, by mistake, the surety on the undertaking of the plaintiff signed his name to the justification of the undertaking instead of to the undertaking itself, this was a valid and binding undertaking. Boger v. Cedar Cove Lumber Co., 165 N.C. 557, 81 S.E. 784 (1914).

For case holding bond sufficient, see Bryan v. The Steamer Enter., 53 N.C. 260 (1860).

Applied in State Employee's Credit Union, Inc. v. Gentry, 75 N.C. App. 260, 330 S.E.2d 645 (1985).

§ 1-440.11. Affidavit for attachment; amendment.

(a) To secure an order of attachment, the plaintiff, or his agent or attorney in his behalf, must state by affidavit

(1) In every case:

a. The plaintiff has commenced or is about to commence an action, the purpose of which, in whole or in part, or in the alternative, is to secure a judgment for money, and the amount thereof,

b. The nature of such action, and

c. The ground or grounds for attachment (one or more of those stated in G.S. 1-440.3); and

(2) In those cases described below, the additional facts indicated:

a. If the action is based on breach of contract, that the plaintiff is entitled to recover the amount for which judgment is sought over and above all counterclaims known to him;

b. If it is alleged as a ground for attachment that the defendant has done, or is about to do, any act with intent to defraud his creditors, the facts and circumstances supporting such allegation.

(b) A verified complaint may be used as the affidavit required by this section.

(c) The court, in its discretion, at any time before judgment in the principal action, may allow any such affidavit to be amended even though the original affidavit is wholly insufficient.

(d) An amendment of an insufficient affidavit of attachment relates to the beginning of the attachment proceeding, and no rights based on such irregularity can be required by any third party by any subsequent attachment intervening between the original affidavit and the amendment. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Form and Sufficiency of Affidavit.
III. Amendment.

I. IN GENERAL.

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

Impact of this section and § 1-440.3 is either to (1) afford the court in the main action quasi in rem jurisdiction so as to bring the defendants' property under the jurisdiction of the State court or (2) bring property within the custody of the court which would otherwise be unavailable for satisfaction of an ultimate judgment in a principal suit because of assignment or removal by the debtor. Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Strict Construction. — The provisions of former § 1-441, relating to the same subject matter as this section, were to be strictly followed. Leak v. Moorman, 61 N.C. 168 (1867); Spiers v. Halstead, Haines & Co., 71 N.C. 209 (1874); Wheeler v. Cobb, 75 N.C. 21 (1876).

Applied in Northside Properties, Inc. v. Ko-Ko Mart, Inc., 28 N.C. App. 532, 222 S.E.2d 267 (1976); State Employee's Credit Union, Inc. v. Gentry, 75 N.C. App. 260, 330 S.E.2d 645 (1985).

Cited in Coor Farm Supply Serv., Inc. v. Thompson, 35 N.C. App. 406, 241 S.E.2d 364 (1978).

II. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF AFFIDAVIT.

Affidavit Necessary. — In order for the valid issuance of an attachment from the superior court, it is necessary that the requisite facts be shown to the court by an affidavit of prescribed form and substance. Carson v. Woodrow, 160 N.C. 143, 75 S.E. 996 (1912).

The affidavit to procure an attachment must be specific and must set forth one of the grounds recited in the statute. Bacon v. Johnson, 110 N.C. 114, 14 S.E. 508 (1892); Mullen v. Norfolk & Carolina Canal Co., 114 N.C. 8, 19 S.E. 106, rehearing denied, 115 N.C. 15, 20 S.E. 167 (1894).

Grounds of Belief Must Be Stated. — Where the plaintiff makes oath that he believes or apprehends the property will be removed, he must also state the grounds of apprehension. Penniman v. Daniel, 90 N.C. 154 (1884).

When the affidavit is that the defendants are "about to assign or dispose of their property with intent to defraud the plaintiffs," which is not the assertion of a fact, but necessarily of a belief merely, the grounds upon which such belief is founded must be set out so that the court may adjudge if they are sufficient. Hughes v. Person, 63 N.C. 548 (1869); Gashine, Emory & Co. v. Baer, 64 N.C. 108 (1870); Clark v. Clark, 64 N.C. 150 (1870); Penniman v. Daniel, 90 N.C. 154 (1884); Judd v. Crawford Gold Mining Co., 120 N.C. 397, 27 S.E. 81 (1897); Connolly v. Sharpe, 49 N.C. App. 152, 270 S.E.2d 564 (1980).

It is generally held that an affidavit made on belief as to the ground of attachment must give the sources of information and recite positive facts reasonably supporting the belief. Connolly v. Sharpe, 49 N.C. App. 152, 270 S.E.2d 564 (1980).

Attachment against resident defendants must be based on an affidavit setting forth the facts and circumstances supporting allegations that they have done or are about to do any act with intent to defraud their creditors. Connolly v. Sharpe, 49 N.C. App. 152, 270 S.E.2d 564 (1980).

And if grounds are not stated the affidavit is fatally defective. First Nat'l Bank v. Tarboro Cotton Factory, 179 N.C. 203, 102 S.E. 195 (1920).

Failure to set forth supporting facts and circumstances in a definite and distinct manner causes the attachment affidavit to be fatally defective. Connolly v. Sharpe, 49 N.C. App. 152, 270 S.E.2d 564 (1980).

Jurisdiction of Court Need Not Be Specifically Alleged. — Where, in proceedings for attachment, it sufficiently appears of record that the court had jurisdiction of the subject matter, it is unnecessary that the affidavit of the attaching creditors specifically allege its jurisdiction. Bacon v. Johnson, 110 N.C. 114, 14 S.E. 508 (1892); Page v. McDonald, 159 N.C. 38, 74 S.E. 642 (1912); Davis v. Davis, 179 N.C. 185, 102 S.E. 270 (1920); County Sav. Bank v. Tolbert, 192 N.C. 126, 133 S.E. 558 (1926).

Nor That Defendant Has Property in This State. — It is not necessary that the affidavit upon which an attachment is sought should state that the defendant has property in this state. Branch v. Frank, 81 N.C. 180 (1879); Parks v. Adams, 113 N.C. 473, 18 S.E. 665 (1893); Foushee v. Owen, 122 N.C. 360, 29 S.E. 770 (1898), overruling Spiers v. Halstead, Haines & Co., 71 N.C. 209 (1874) and Windley v. Bradway, 77 N.C. 333 (1877).

An affidavit made by an agent need not state why it is not made by the principal. Bruff, Faulkner & Co. v. Stern & Bro., 81 N.C. 183 (1879); Sheldon v. Kivett, 110 N.C. 408, 14 S.E. 970 (1892).

Examples of Sufficient Affidavits. — Affidavits for publication of the summons and notice of attachment are sufficient when they show that the defendant cannot, after due and diligent search, be found in this State, that he is a nonresident and has property here of which the court has jurisdiction, and that the plaintiff has a cause of action against the defendant, arising out of a contract by which he expressly promises to pay a specific sum to the plaintiff for services rendered at his request, which sum is still due and owing. Page v. McDonald, 159 N.C. 38, 74 S.E. 642 (1912).

An affidavit for an attachment was sufficient which stated that the defendant was a nonresident and had property in this State, or had removed, or was about to remove some of his property from this State with intent to defraud his creditors. The statute put the modes in the alternative, and the plaintiff would succeed if he established either. Penniman v. Daniel, 90 N.C. 154 (1884).

In proceedings for attachment an affidavit is sufficient which sets out: (1) that the defendant is indebted; and (2) that the defendant has departed from this State with intent, as the affiant is informed and believes, to avoid the service of summons. Hess, Rogers & Co. v. Brower, 76 N.C. 428 (1877).

Examples of Defective Statement. — An affidavit for a warrant of attachment, under former § 1-441, which stated "that the defendant is absent so that the ordinary process of law cannot be served upon him," without an averment that the absence "was with intent to defraud his creditors and to avoid the service of summons," was fatally defective. W.P. Love & Co. v. Young, 69 N.C. 65 (1873).

The affidavit, upon which a warrant of attachment has been issued, which alleges that the defendant is about to assign, dispose of and secrete money or goods with intent to defraud creditors, without setting forth the grounds upon which this belief is based, is fatally defective. First Nat'l Bank v. Tarboro Cotton Factory, 179 N.C. 203, 102 S.E. 195 (1920).

Remedy When Affidavit Defective. — A plea in abatement was held to be the proper mode of taking advantage of a defect in the affidavit for an attachment. Leak v. Moorman, 61 N.C. 168 (1867).

III. AMENDMENT.

The court has discretionary power to permit a plaintiff to amend a defective affidavit upon which warrant of attachment was issued. Thrush v. Thrush, 246 N.C. 114, 97 S.E.2d 472 (1957).

An affidavit can be amended by permission of the court, granted in its discretion, even though the first affidavit was wholly insufficient. Brown, Daniel & Co. v. Hawkins, 65 N.C. 645 (1871); Branch v. Frank, 81 N.C. 180 (1879); Bank of New Hanover v. Blossom, 92 N.C. 695 (1885); Penniman v. Daniel, 93 N.C. 332 (1885); Cushing v. Styron, 104 N.C. 338, 10 S.E. 258 (1889); Sheldon v. Kivett, 110 N.C. 408, 14 S.E. 970 (1892).

A plaintiff has a right to amend his affidavit as to mere matters of form, and if he is ready to swear to the amended affidavit it is error in the clerk to refuse it. Palmer v. Bosher, 71 N.C. 291 (1874).

Findings of Court May Have Effect of Amendment. — An affidavit on attachment defective in failing to set forth the requisite facts may be amended by permission of court, and where the court has found with plaintiff upon conflicting oral evidence, such findings have the effect of an amendment allowed by him. Thornburg v. Burton, 197 N.C. 193, 148 S.E. 28 (1929).

When Clerk Denies Amendment. — Where the clerk refuses to allow an amendment he may, and should, state his reason for such refusal. Cushing v. Styron, 104 N.C. 338, 10 S.E. 258 (1889).

Relation Back of Amendment. — An amendment of an insufficient affidavit in attachment relates back to the beginning of the proceedings, and no rights based on such irregularity can be acquired by third parties by subsequent attachments intervening between the original affidavit and the amendment. Cook v. New York Corundum Co., 114 N.C. 617, 19 S.E. 664 (1894).

From the leave to amend the affidavit no appeal lies. Lippard v. Roseman, 72 N.C. 427 (1875); Henry v. Cannon, 86 N.C. 24 (1882); Wiggins v. McCoy, 87 N.C. 499 (1882); Jarrett v. Gibbs, 107 N.C. 303, 12 S.E. 272 (1890); Sheldon v. Kivett, 110 N.C. 408, 14 S.E. 970 (1892); Cook v. New York Corundum Co., 114 N.C. 617, 19 S.E. 664 (1894).

§ 1-440.12. Order of attachment; form and contents.

(a) If the matters required by G.S. 1-440.11(a) are shown by affidavit to the satisfaction of the court and if the bond required by G.S. 1-440.10 is furnished, the court shall issue an order of attachment which shall

(1) Show the venue, the court in which the action has been, or is being, commenced, and the title of the action;

(2) Run in the name of the State and be directed to the sheriff of a designated county;

(3) State that an affidavit for the attachment of the defendant's property has been filed with the court in the action, that the required attachment bond has been executed and delivered to the court and that it has been made to appear to the satisfaction of the court that the allegations of the plaintiff's affidavit for attachment are true;

(4) Direct the sheriff to attach and safely keep all of the property of the defendant within the sheriff's county which is subject to attachment, or so much thereof as is sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's demand, together with costs and expenses;
(5) Direct that the order of attachment be returned to the clerk of the court in which the action is pending;
(6) Show the date of issuance; and
(7) Be signed by clerk or the judge issuing the order.

(b) The order of attachment shall not contain a return date, but shall be returned to the clerk as provided by G.S. 1-440.16. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to bond for attachment, see § 1-440.10. As to affidavit for attachment, see § 1-440.11.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

A "notice of levy" served upon a garnishee was insufficient process to accord the serving party the status of an attaching creditor. It was incumbent on the party, if it desired to establish a lien by attachment or an interest in the attached property, to put its claim in issue by filing a proper claim in accordance with § 1-440.1 et seq., or § 1-440.43(2). Failing this, the party's contention that it could intervene as an attaching creditor under § 1-440.33(g) failed, and the garnishee's motion to join all attaching creditors was moot. State Employee's Credit Union, Inc. v. Gentry, 75 N.C. App. 260, 330 S.E.2d 645 (1985).

As to whom warrant was to be issued under former statute, see Carson v. Woodrow, 160 N.C. 143, 75 S.E. 996 (1912).

An irregularity in issuing a warrant of attachment to the constable or other lawful officer of the county, when the statute requires it to be issued to the sheriff, may be afterwards cured by an amendment of the court when it appears that the warrant was served by a deputy sheriff. Temple v. Eades Hay Co., 184 N.C. 239, 114 S.E. 162 (1922).

An attachment issued by the clerk of a court for a sum within the jurisdiction of the court, and made returnable to the proper term of the court, would not be dismissed for want of form because directed "to any constable or other lawful officer to execute and return within 30 days (Sundays excepted)," when it appeared that it was executed by the sheriff. Askew v. Stevenson, 61 N.C. 288 (1867).

When Sheriff Is Defendant. — The words of former § 1-447, requiring that the warrant should direct the sheriff to attach "all the property of the defendant" did not, when the sheriff was the defendant, include his tax books showing debts due to him for taxes. Davie v. Blackburn, 117 N.C. 383, 23 S.E. 321 (1895).

A clerk's ex parte order of attachment was properly issued under this section if plaintiff's verified complaint and bond for attachment met the requirements of § 1-440.11 and § 1-440.10 respectively. Armstrong v. Aetna Ins. Co., 249 N.C. 352, 106 S.E.2d 515 (1959).

§ 1-440.13. Additional orders of attachment at time of original order; alias and pluries orders.

(a) At the time the original order of attachment is issued, or thereafter, one or more additional orders, at the request of the plaintiff, may be issued, and any such additional order may be directed to the sheriff of any county in which the defendant may have property.

(b) After the original order or orders have been returned, if no property or, in the opinion of the plaintiff, insufficient property has been attached thereunder, alias or pluries orders may be issued prior to judgment, at the request of the plaintiff, and such alias or pluries orders may be directed to the sheriff of any county in which the defendant may have property. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Perfection of Attachment by Alias and Pluries Order. — Without a valid levy, the order of attachment is not perfected so as to create a lien of attachment, but remains executory until tolled by judgment in the principal action, or until perfected by a levy under an alias or pluries order. Edwards v. Brown's Cabinets, 63 N.C. App. 524, 305 S.E.2d 765, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 632, 308 S.E.2d 64 (1983).

§ 1-440.14. Notice of issuance of order of attachment when no personal service.

(a) When service of process by publication is made subsequent to the original order of attachment, the published and mailed notice of service of process shall include notice of the issuance of the order of attachment.

(b) When the original order of attachment is issued after publication is begun, a notice of the issuance of the order of attachment shall be published once a week for four successive weeks in some newspaper published in the county in which the action is pending, such publication to be commenced within 30 days after the issuance of the order of attachment. Such notice shall show

(1) The county and the court in which the action is pending,
(2) The names of the parties,
(3) The purpose of the action, and
(4) The fact that on a date specified an order was issued to attach the defendant's property.

(c) If no newspaper is published in the county in which the action is pending, the notice

(1) Shall be published once a week for four successive weeks in some newspaper published in the same district court district as defined in G.S. 7A-133 or superior court district or set off districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1, as the case may be, or
(2) Shall be posted at the courthouse door in the county for 30 days. (1947, c. 693, s. 1; 1967, c. 954, s. 3; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 40.)

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

Statement of Amount. — Under former § 1-448, which provided that when the summons in an attachment suit was to be served by publication, the publication should state the fact of the attachment, "the amount of the claims," and in a brief way the nature of the demand, an order and a publication based thereon which fail to state the amount of the plaintiff's claims were fatally defective. Flint v. Coffin, 176 F. 872 (4th Cir. 1910), cert. denied, 217 U.S. 602, 30 S. Ct. 693, 54 L. Ed. 898, 219 U.S. 589, 31 S. Ct. 472, 55 L. Ed. 2d 348 (1911).

In attachment the plaintiff cannot recover an amount in excess of that stated in the summons. Cotton Mills v. Weil, 129 N.C. 452, 40 S.E. 218 (1901).

Defendant's Bond as Waiver of Service of Summons. — Where property has been levied on under the writ, a bond given by the defendants in discharge of the attachment as provided by former § 1-457 was considered equivalent to a personal appearance on the action and a waiver of the requirement for further service of the summons. It amounted to a voluntary submission of the defendant's cause to the jurisdiction of the court. Mitchell v. Elizabeth City Lumber Co., 169 N.C. 397, 86 S.E. 343 (1915).

Late Filing of Newspaper's Affidavit. — After the court acquires control of a debt by the garnishment order, objections that the affidavit of the newspaper showing the publication of the notice and the sheriff's endorsement and return showing the levy in the garnishment proceeding were not timely filed as the law required, are not sufficient to justify a motion to dismiss. Ward v. Kolman Mfg. Co., 267 N.C. 131, 148 S.E.2d 27 (1966).

Omission of Notice in Order of Publication. — Where notice of the attachment was omitted from the order of publication, but in the published notice the defendant was informed that an attachment had been issued against his property, it was held under the former statute that the court had power to amend the order of publication, so as to insert a requirement that notice be given of the attachment. Bank of New Hanover v. Blossom, 92 N.C. 695 (1885).

Applied in S.D. Scott & Co. v. Jones, 230 N.C. 74, 52 S.E.2d 219 (1949).

§ 1-440.15. Method of execution.

(a) The sheriff to whom the order of attachment is directed shall note thereon the date of its delivery to him and shall promptly execute it by levying on the defendant's property as follows:

(1) The levy on real property shall be made as provided by G.S. 1-440.17;

(2) The levy on stock in a corporation shall be made as provided by G.S. 1-440.19;

(3) The levy on goods stored in a warehouse shall be made as provided by G.S. 1-440.20;

(4) The levy on tangible personal property in the possession of the defendant shall, except as provided in G.S. 1-440.19, be made as provided by G.S. 1-440.18;

(5) The levy on tangible personal property belonging to the defendant but not in his possession, or on any indebtedness to the defendant, or on any other intangible personal property belonging to the defendant, shall, except as provided by G.S. 1-440.19 and 1-440.20, be made as provided by G.S. 1-440.25 relating to garnishment.

(b) The sheriff is not required to levy upon personal property before levying upon real property.

(c) In order for the sheriff to make any levy, it is not necessary for him to deliver to the defendant or any other person any copy of the order of attachment or any other process except in the case of garnishment as provided by G.S. 1-440.25. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Levy Made Under Original Order 41 Days After Issuance Is Invalid. — Where the sheriff's levy was under the original order for attachment and was 41 days after its issuance, it was insufficient to constitute a valid levy, and there was no error in the entry of the order to vacate it. Robinson v. Robinson, 10 N.C. App. 463, 179 S.E.2d 144 (1971).

§ 1-440.16. Sheriff's return.

(a) After the sheriff has executed an order of attachment, he shall promptly make a written return showing all property levied upon by him and the date of such levy. In such return, he shall describe the property levied upon in sufficient detail to identify the property clearly. The sheriff forthwith shall deliver the order of attachment, together with his return, to the court in which the action is pending.

(b) If garnishment process is issued, as provided by G.S. 1-440.23 and 1-440.24, the sheriff shall include in his return a report of his proceedings with respect to such garnishment and shall return to the court the original process issued to the garnishee.

(c) If the sheriff makes no levy within 10 days after the issuance of the order of attachment, he forthwith shall deliver to the court, in which the action is pending, the order, and any other process relating thereto, together with his return showing that no levy has been made and the reason therefor. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Levy under an order of attachment must be made within 10 days of the issuance of the order. Robinson v. Robinson, 10 N.C. App. 463, 179 S.E.2d 144 (1971).

Late Filing of Return. — After the court acquires control of a debt by the garnishment order, objections that the affidavit of the newspaper showing the publication of the notice and the sheriff's endorsement and return showing the levy in the garnishment proceeding were not timely filed as the law required, are not sufficient to justify a motion to dismiss. Ward v. Kolman Mfg. Co., 267 N.C. 131, 148 S.E.2d 27 (1966).

The adequacy of the description of the property contained in a sheriff's return upon attachment should be decided on a case-by-case basis. Main St. Shops, Inc. v. Esquire Collections, Ltd., 115 N.C. App. 510, 445 S.E.2d 420 (1994).

Posting a bond to release property from attachment estops a defendant from thereafter challenging any procedural defects in the process. Main St. Shops, Inc. v. Esquire Collections, Ltd., 115 N.C. App. 510, 445 S.E.2d 420 (1994).

§ 1-440.17. Levy on real property.

(a) In order to make a levy on real property, the sheriff need not go upon the land or take control over it, but he

(1) Shall make an endorsement upon the order of attachment or shall attach thereto a statement showing that he thereby levies upon the defendant's interest in the real property described in such endorsement or statement, describing the real property in sufficient detail to identify it clearly, and

(2) Shall, as promptly as practicable, certify such levy, and the names of the parties to the action, to the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the land lies.

(b) Upon receipt of the sheriff's certificate, the clerk shall docket the levy, as provided by G.S. 1-440.33. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

The sheriff may make a valid levy under a warrant of attachment on real property without going on the property. The levy is made effective by the endorsement thereof on the execution or warrant of attachment. The jurisdiction of the court dates from the levy, but the lien becomes effective when certified to the clerk and indexed. Voehringer v. Pollock, 224 N.C. 409, 30 S.E.2d 374 (1944), decided under former law.

Sufficiency of Description. — A levy on land under an attachment is sufficient, if it gives such a description as will distinguish and identify the land. Grier v. Rhyne, 67 N.C. 338 (1872), decided under former law.

§ 1-440.18. Levy on tangible personal property in defendant's possession.

The sheriff shall levy on tangible personal property in the possession of the defendant by seizing and taking into his possession so much thereof as will be sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's demands. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

§ 1-440.19. Levy on stock in corporation.

(a) The sheriff may levy, as on tangible property, on a share of stock in a corporation by seizing the certificate of stock

(1) When the certificate is in the possession of the defendant, and

(2) When, by the law of the state in which the corporation is incorporated, the property interest of the stockholder is embodied in the certificate of stock, as is provided by the Uniform Stock Transfer Act or similar legislation.

(b) The sheriff may levy on a share of stock in a corporation by delivery of copies of the garnishment process to the proper officer or agent of such corporation, as set out in G.S. 1-440.26,

(1) When, by the law of the state in which the corporation is incorporated, the property interest of the stockholder is not embodied in the certificate of stock, or

(2) When, by the law of the state in which the corporation is incorporated, the property interest of the stockholder is embodied in the certificate of the stock, as is provided by the Uniform Stock Transfer Act or similar legislation, and

a. Such certificate has been surrendered to the corporation which issued it, or

b. The transfer of such certificate by the holder thereof has been restrained or enjoined.

(c) A restraining order or injunction against the transfer of a certificate of stock, when proper in an attachment proceeding, may be granted by the clerk or judge pursuant to a motion in the cause to which the attachment is ancillary. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

This section does not envision an attachment of an intangible ownership interest. Instead, the statute clearly and unambiguously provides that the proper means to attach stock of a corporation is for the sheriff to seize the stock certificate. Medoil Corp. v. Clark, 751 F. Supp. 88 (W.D.N.C. 1990).

As to attachment of stock owned by one foreign corporation in another foreign corporation under superseded § 1-459, see Parks-Cramer Co. v. Southern Express Co., 185 N.C. 428, 117 S.E. 505 (1923), cert. denied, 263 U.S. 717, 44 S. Ct. 180, 68 L. Ed. 522 (1924), decided under former law.

§ 1-440.20. Levy on goods in warehouses.

(a) The sheriff may levy on goods delivered to a warehouseman for storage, by delivering copies of the garnishment process to the warehouseman, or to the proper officer or agent for the corporate warehouseman, as set out in G.S. 1-440.26,

(1) If a negotiable warehouse receipt has not been issued with respect thereto, or

(2) If a negotiable warehouse receipt has been issued with respect thereto, and

a. Such receipt is seized, or

b. Such receipt is surrendered to the warehouseman who issued it, or

c. The transfer of such receipt by the holder thereof is restrained or enjoined.

(b) A restraining order or injunction against the transfer of a negotiable warehouse receipt, when proper in an attachment proceeding, may be granted by the clerk or judge pursuant to a motion in the cause to which the attachment is ancillary. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

§ 1-440.21. Nature of garnishment.

(a) Garnishment is not an independent action but is a proceeding ancillary to attachment and is the remedy for discovering and subjecting to attachment

(1) Tangible personal property belonging to the defendant but not in his possession, and

(2) Any indebtedness to the defendant and any other intangible personal property belonging to him.

(b) A garnishee is a person, firm, association, or corporation to which such a summons as specified by G.S. 1-440.23 is issued. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

Constitutionality. — Former § 1-461 applied alike to residents and nonresidents, persons and corporations, and it would not be declared unconstitutional in an action instituted long subsequent to its enactment. Newberry v. Meadows Fertilizer Co., 206 N.C. 182, 173 S.E. 67 (1934).

Jurisdiction Necessary. — The court entertaining a garnishment must have some jurisdiction over the thing garnished. Balk v. Harris, 124 N.C. 467, 32 S.E. 799 (1899), rev'd on other grounds, 198 U.S. 215, 25 S. Ct. 625, 49 L. Ed. 1023 (1905).

In order to subject a debt to garnishment and to give the court jurisdiction to act with respect thereto, three things should occur: (1) The corporation who is the garnishee must have such a residence and agency within the State as renders it amenable to the process of the court; (2) the principal defendant, who is the plaintiff's debtor, must himself have the right to sue the garnishee, his debtor, in this State for the recovery of the debt; (3) it must appear that the situs of the debt is in this State. Ward v. Kolman Mfg. Co., 267 N.C. 131, 148 S.E.2d 27 (1966).

Findings Sufficient to Support Jurisdiction. — Findings that the garnishee was a domesticated corporation, that it owed a debt, evidenced by a note, to a foreign corporation, that the note was assignable to the stockholders of the foreign corporation, that the foreign corporation owed a debt to plaintiff, that plaintiff, in his suit against the foreign corporation, duly garnished the debt and by amendment had the individual stockholders of the foreign corporation made parties, warranted the court in denying defendants' motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction. Ward v. Kolman Mfg. Co., 267 N.C. 131, 148 S.E.2d 27 (1966).

A garnishment is in effect a suit by the principal debtor, the defendant in the action, in the name of the plaintiff, against the garnishee to recover the debt due to the plaintiff and apply it to the satisfaction of the plaintiff's demand. Goodwin v. Claytor, 137 N.C. 224, 49 S.E. 173 (1904).

Proper Remedy to Reach Intangibles. — Garnishment is a proper ancillary remedy by which to discover intangible property rights and subject them to attachment. Ward v. Kolman Mfg. Co., 267 N.C. 131, 148 S.E.2d 27 (1966).

Not Necessary to Bring Separate Action Against Garnishee. — A judgment may be taken against a garnishee, who is found to be indebted to the debtor, in the action to which the garnishment proceeding is ancillary, and is not necessary to bring a separate action against such garnishee. Baker, Ginsberg & Co. v. Belvin, 122 N.C. 90, 122 N.C. 190, 30 S.E. 337, 30 S.E. 337 (1898).

Money Not Yet Due. — Under former § 1-461, money due by a garnishee, or goods in his hands at the time of appearance and answer, were held applicable to the debt, though not earned and due when he was summoned to answer. Goodwin v. Claytor, 137 N.C. 224, 49 S.E. 173 (1904).

Exemption of Earnings for Personal Services Allowed. — Section 1-362 provides that earnings of a debtor for his personal services for the 60 days next preceding shall be exempt from execution. It was held that the exemption protects such earnings from seizure in garnishment. Goodwin v. Claytor, 137 N.C. 224, 49 S.E. 173 (1904).

But Exemption Must Be Claimed. — When a man has earned wages they can be garnished as his property, if no personal exemption is claimed. Pocomoke Guano Co. v. Colwell, 177 N.C. 218, 98 S.E. 535 (1919).

Plaintiff Substituted to Rights of Defendant Against Garnishee. — A plaintiff in garnishment is, in his relation to the garnishee, substituted merely to the rights of his own debtor, and cannot enforce any greater claim against the garnishee than the debtor himself, if suing, would have been entitled to recover. Goodwin v. Claytor, 137 N.C. 224, 49 S.E. 173 (1904).

Cross Action Against Garnishee Not Permitted. — Defendant in an action on contract is not entitled to file a cross action on a separate contract against a party brought in by plaintiff solely for the purpose of garnishment. Kitchen Equip. Co. v. International Erectors, Inc., 268 N.C. 127, 150 S.E.2d 29 (1966).

Amounts Due Corporation from Unpaid Stock Subscriptions. — A corporation was held a necessary party to an attachment proceeding to subject the amounts due it from unpaid subscriptions to its stock to the payment of its debts. Cooper v. Adel Sec. Co., 122 N.C. 463, 30 S.E. 348 (1898).

Bank May Be Garnishee. — A national bank may be proceeded against by garnishment to impound the proceeds of a draft in its hands. Markham-Stephens Co. v. E.L. Richmond Co., 177 N.C. 364, 99 S.E. 17 (1919).

Where Bank a Mere Stakeholder. —

Where the funds of a nonresident defendant are attached in the hands of a local bank, which is only an agency for collection, which position it alleges in its answer, and also alleges ownership of title by its forwarding bank, the position taken by the local bank is that of a mere stakeholder without interest, between two conflicting claimants, and it may successfully maintain that the forwarding bank be made a party to the action, and await the determination of this question in the action, in order to protect itself in the payment of the funds attached in its hands. Temple v. Eades Hay Co., 184 N.C. 239, 114 S.E. 162 (1922).

Quoted in Carolina Paper Co. v. Bouchelle, 285 N.C. 56, 203 S.E.2d 1 (1974); Elmwood v. Elmwood, 295 N.C. 168, 244 S.E.2d 668 (1978).

Cited in Sampson County Child Support Enforcement Agency ex rel. Bolton v. Bolton, 93 N.C. App. 500, 377 S.E.2d 88 (1989).

§ 1-440.22. Issuance of summons to garnishee.

(a) A summons to garnishee may be issued

(1) At the time of the issuance of the original order of attachment, by the court making such order, or

(2) At any time thereafter prior to judgment in the principal action, by the court in which the action is pending.

(b) At the request of the plaintiff, such summons to garnishee shall, at either such time, be issued to each person designated by the plaintiff as a garnishee. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

Sheriff of _____ County.

(1947, c. 693, s. 1; 1999-456, s. 59.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-456, s. 59, effective January 1, 2000, deleted "19" from the date line in the form.

§ 1-440.25. Levy upon debt owed by, or property in possession of, the garnishee.

The levy in all cases of garnishment shall be made by delivering to the garnishee, or a process agent authorized by him or expressly or impliedly authorized by law, or some representative of a corporate garnishee designated by G.S. 1-440.26, a copy of each of the following:

(1) The order of attachment,

(2) The summons to garnishee, and

(3) The notice of levy. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Implied Agent. — It is of no import that a servee was not expressly designated to be an agent for service of process and thus must be termed an implied agent. While there have been no cases under this section dealing with service of process upon an implied agent, an analogy can be made to § 1A-1, Rule 4(j)(6)a. Carolina Paper Co. v. Bouchelle, 19 N.C. App. 697, 200 S.E.2d 203 (1973), aff'd, 285 N.C. 56, 203 S.E.2d 1 (1974).

Although the title of purchasing agent is not specifically enumerated in this section and § 1-440.26(a), this does not preclude the classification of such an agent within one of the listed categories. Carolina Paper Co. v. Bouchelle, 19 N.C. App. 697, 200 S.E.2d 203 (1973), aff'd, 285 N.C. 56, 203 S.E.2d 1 (1974).

Applied in State Employee's Credit Union, Inc. v. Gentry, 75 N.C. App. 260, 330 S.E.2d 645 (1985).

§ 1-440.26. To whom garnishment process may be delivered when garnishee is corporation.

(a) When the garnishee is a domestic corporation, the copies of the process listed in G.S. 1-440.25 may be delivered to the president or other head, secretary, cashier, treasurer, director, managing agent or local agent of the corporation.

(b) When the garnishee is a foreign corporation, the copies of the process listed in G.S. 1-440.25 may be delivered only to the president, treasurer or secretary thereof personally and while such officer is within the State, except that

(1) If the corporation has property within this State, or

(2) If the cause of action arose in this State, or

(3) If the plaintiff resides in this State, the copies of the process may be delivered to any of the persons designated in subsection (a) of this section.

(c) A person receiving or collecting money within this State on behalf of a corporation is deemed to be a local agent of the corporation for the purpose of this section. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Cases Decided Under Former § 1-97(1) Still Pertinent. — Because the language used in former § 1-97(1) was the same as now appears in subsection (a) of this section, cases decided under former § 1-97(1) are still pertinent. Carolina Paper Co. v. Bouchelle, 285 N.C. 56, 203 S.E.2d 1 (1974).

Purchasing Agent May Be "Managing Agent". — Although a purchasing agent does not conveniently fit, at least by nomenclature, into the listed categories of subsection (a) of this section, a careful analysis of such agent's background and responsibilities may manifest sufficient reason why he should be termed a "managing agent." Carolina Paper Co. v. Bouchelle, 19 N.C. App. 697, 200 S.E.2d 203 (1973), aff'd, 285 N.C. 56, 203 S.E.2d 1 (1974).

Although the title of purchasing agent is not specifically enumerated in § 1-440.25 and subsection (a) of this section, this does not preclude the classification of such an agent within one of the listed categories. Carolina Paper Co. v. Bouchelle, 19 N.C. App. 697, 200 S.E.2d 203 (1973), aff'd, 285 N.C. 56, 203 S.E.2d 1 (1974).

Test of Agency. — Where defendant is not the president or the head of the corporation, nor is he secretary, cashier, treasurer, or director, the question then becomes: Is he such an agent, regularly employed, having some charge or measure of control over the business entrusted to him, or of some feature of it, and of sufficient character and rank as to afford reasonable assurance that he will communicate to his company the fact that process has been served upon him. Carolina Paper Co. v. Bouchelle, 285 N.C. 56, 203 S.E.2d 1 (1974).

Bank's loan officer trainee was agent for purpose of serving attachment papers upon garnishee bank in accordance with this section since trainee's duties included collecting of loan payments on bank's behalf. Higgins v. Simmons, 324 N.C. 100, 376 S.E.2d 449 (1989).

§ 1-440.27. Failure of garnishee to appear.

(a) When a garnishee, after being duly summoned, fails to file a verified answer as required, the clerk of the court shall enter a conditional judgment for the plaintiff against the garnishee for the full amount for which the plaintiff shall have prayed judgment against the defendant, together with such amount as in the opinion of the clerk will be sufficient to cover the plaintiff's costs.

(b) The clerk shall thereupon issue a notice to the garnishee requiring him to appear not later than 10 days after the date of service of the notice, and show cause why the conditional judgment shall not be made final. If, after service of such notice, the garnishee fails to appear within the time named and file a verified answer to the summons to the garnishee, or if such notice cannot be served upon the garnishee because he cannot be found within the county where the original summons to such garnishee was served, then in either such event, the clerk shall make the conditional judgment final. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Quoted in Carolina Paper Co. v. Bouchelle, 285 N.C. 56, 203 S.E.2d 1 (1974).

§ 1-440.28. Admission by garnishee; setoff; lien.

(a) When a garnishee admits in his answer that he is indebted to the defendant, or was indebted to the defendant at the time of service of garnishment process upon him or at some date subsequent thereto, the clerk of the court shall enter judgment against the garnishee for the smaller of the two following amounts:

(1) The amount which the garnishee admits that he owes the defendant or has owed the defendant at any time from the date of the service of the garnishment process to the date of answer by the garnishee, or

(2) The full amount for which the plaintiff has prayed judgment against the defendant, together with such amount as in the opinion of the clerk will be sufficient to cover the plaintiff's costs.

(b) When a garnishee admits in his answer that he has in his possession personal property belonging to the defendant, with respect to which the garnishee does not claim a lien or other interest, the clerk of the court shall enter judgment against the garnishee requiring him to deliver such property to the sheriff, and upon such delivery the garnishee shall be exonerated as to the property so delivered.

(c) When a garnishee admits in his answer that, at or subsequent to the date of the service of the garnishment process upon him, he had in his possession property belonging to the defendant, with respect to which the garnishee does not claim a lien or other interest, but that he does not have such property at the time of his answer, the clerk of the court shall at a hearing for that purpose determine, upon affidavit filed, the value of such property, unless the plaintiff, the defendant and the garnishee agree as to the value thereof, or unless, prior to the hearing, a jury trial thereon is demanded by one of the parties. The clerk shall give the parties such notice of the hearing as he may deem reasonable and by such means as he may deem best.

(d) When the value of the property has been determined as provided in subsection (c) of this section the court shall enter judgment against the garnishee for the smaller of the two following amounts:

(1) An amount equal to the value of the property in question, or

(e) When a garnishee alleges in his answer that the debt or the personal property due to be delivered by him to the defendant will become payable or deliverable at a future date, and the plaintiff, within 20 days thereafter, files a reply denying such allegation, the issue thereby raised shall be submitted to and determined by a jury. If it is not denied that the debt owed or the personal property due to be delivered to the defendant will become payable or deliverable at a future date, or if is so found upon the trial, judgment shall be given against the garnishee which shall require the garnishee at the due date of the indebtedness to pay the plaintiff such an amount as is specified in subsection (a) of this section, or at the deliverable date of the personal property to deliver such property to the sheriff in order that it may be sold to satisfy the plaintiff's claim.

(f) In answer to a summons to garnishee, a garnishee may assert any right of setoff which he may have with respect to the defendant in the principal action.

(g) With respect to any property of the defendant which the garnishee has in his possession, a garnishee, in answer to a summons to garnishee, may assert any lien or other valid claim amounting to an interest therein. No garnishee shall be compelled to surrender the possession of any property of the defendant upon which the garnishee establishes a lien or other valid claim amounting to an interest therein, which lien or interest attached or was acquired prior to service of the summons to garnishee, and such property only may be sold subject to the garnishee's lien or interest. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

No Waiver of Setoff Right. — Where insolvent corporate defendant had $2,568.55 balance with bank, where defendant owed bank $5,000, plus interest on a note that had been past due for several months, where bank was attached as debtor of corporate defendant and was served with a summons and notice of levy, and where bank had honored a number of corporation's checks after note became due and did not assert its set off until account was attached, court incorrectly concluded that bank had waived its right of setoff against corporation since right to assert the setoff is recognized under subsection (f) of this section, and bank did not waive its setoff right by honoring some of company's checks after note became due. Killette v. Raemell's Sewing Apparel, Inc., 93 N.C. App. 162, 377 S.E.2d 73 (1989).

Applied in State Employee's Credit Union, Inc. v. Gentry, 75 N.C. App. 260, 330 S.E.2d 645 (1985).

§ 1-440.29. Denial of claim by garnishee; issues of fact.

(a) In addition to any other instances when issues of fact arise in a garnishment proceeding, issues of fact arise

(1) When a garnishee files an answer such that the court cannot determine therefrom whether the garnishee intends to admit or deny that he is indebted to, or has in his possession any property of, the defendant, or

(2) When a garnishee files an answer denying that he is indebted to, or has in his possession any property of, the defendant, or was indebted to, or had in his possession any property of, the defendant at the time of the service of the summons upon him or at any time since then, and the plaintiff, within 20 days thereafter, files a reply alleging the contrary.

(b) When a jury finds that the garnishee owes the defendant a specific sum of money or has in his possession property of the defendant of a specific value, or owed the defendant a specific sum of money or had in his possession property of the defendant of a specific value at the time of the service of the summons upon him or at any time since then, the court shall enter judgment against the garnishee for the smaller of the two following amounts:

(1) The amount specified in the jury's verdict, or

(2) The full amount for which the plaintiff has prayed judgment against the defendant, together with such amount as in the opinion of the clerk will be sufficient to cover the plaintiff's costs. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

Where Principal Defendant Denies Ownership. — The judgment against a nonresident debtor being exhausted by a sale of the property attached, a nonresident defendant in attachment proceedings, who denied ownership of the attached property, could not be injured by the judgment, and hence, was held not entitled, under the former statute, to have an issue submitted as to the title to the property. Foushee v. Owen, 122 N.C. 360, 29 S.E. 770 (1898).

Jury Trial. — Under former § 1-463, relating to trial of issues in garnishment proceedings, the plaintiff in garnishment proceedings, upon the suggestion that he wished to traverse the return of the garnishee, was entitled, without any formal or verified statement, to have the issue tried by a jury. Brenizer v. Royal Arcanum, 141 N.C. 409, 53 S.E. 835 (1906).

No Personal Judgment Against Nonresident Defendant. — In garnishment proceedings under the former statute against a nonresident defendant, service being had by publication, no jurisdiction was acquired to support a personal judgment against the defendant. Goodwin v. Claytor, 137 N.C. 224, 49 S.E. 173 (1904).

§ 1-440.30. Time of jury trial.

All issues arising under G.S. 1-440.28 or G.S. 1-440.29 shall, when a jury trial is demanded by any party, be submitted to and determined by a jury at the same time the principal action is tried, unless the judge, on motion of any party for good cause shown, orders an earlier trial or a separate trial. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

§ 1-440.31. Payment to defendant by garnishee.

Any garnishee who shall pay to the defendant any debt owed the defendant or deliver to the defendant any property belonging to the defendant, after being served with garnishment process, and while the garnishment proceeding is pending, shall not thereby relieve himself of liability to the plaintiff. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

§ 1-440.32. Execution against garnishee.

(a) Pursuant to a judgment against a garnishee, execution may be issued against such garnishee prior to judgment against the defendant in the principal action. The court may issue such execution without notice or hearing. All property seized pursuant to such execution shall be held subject to the order of the court pending judgment in the principal action.

(b) The court, pending judgment in the principal action, may permit the property to remain in the garnishee's possession upon the garnishee's giving a bond in the same manner and on the same conditions as is provided by G.S. 1-440.39 with respect to the discharge of an attachment by the defendant. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

Without Notice or Hearing. — Where judgment has been regularly entered against certain garnishees in proceedings under former § 1-440, the clerk of the superior court could issue execution on the judgment against the garnishees without notice or a hearing under former § 1-461 and § 1-305. Newberry v. Meadows Fertilizer Co., 206 N.C. 182, 173 S.E. 67 (1934).

Execution may be issued against garnishees prior to final judgment against defendant, and the property held subject to the orders of the court pending final judgment. Newberry v. Meadows Fertilizer Co., 206 N.C. 182, 173 S.E. 67 (1934).

There was no distinction between an execution on an ordinary judgment issued under § 1-305, and an execution on a judgment against a garnishee issued under former § 1-461. They were both judgments and sections to be construed in pari materia. Newberry v. Meadows Fertilizer Co., 206 N.C. 182, 173 S.E. 67 (1934).

Part 4. Relating to Attached Property.

§ 1-440.33. When lien of attachment begins; priority of liens.

(a) Upon securing the issuance of an order of attachment, a plaintiff may cause notice of the issuance of the order to be filed with the clerk of the court of any county in which the plaintiff believes that the defendant has real property which is subject to levy pursuant to such order of attachment. Upon receipt of such notice the clerk shall promptly docket the same on the lis pendens docket.

(b) When the clerk receives from the sheriff a certificate of levy on real property as provided by G.S. 1-440.17, the clerk shall promptly note the levy on his judgment docket and index the same. When the levy is thus docketed and indexed,

(1) The lien attaches and relates back to the time of the filing of the notice of lis pendens if the plaintiff has prior to the levy caused notice of the issuance of the order of attachment to be properly entered on the lis pendens docket of the county in which the land lies, as provided by subsection (a) of this section.

(2) The lien attaches only from the time of the docketing of the certificate of levy if no entry of the issuance of the order of attachment has been made prior to the levy on the lis pendens docket of the county in which the land lies.

(c) A levy on tangible personal property of the defendant in the hands of the garnishee, when made in the manner provided by G.S. 1-440.25, creates a lien on the property thus levied on from the time of such levy.

(d) If more than one order of attachment is served with respect to property in possession of the defendant or is served upon a garnishee, the priority of the order of the liens is the same as the order in which the attachments were levied, subject to the provisions of subsection (b) of this section, relating to the time when a lien of attachment begins with respect to real property.

(e) If two or more orders of attachment are served simultaneously, liens attach simultaneously, subject to the provisions of subsection (b) of this section, relating to the time when a lien of attachment begins with respect to real property.

(f) If the funds derived from the attachment of property on which liens become effective simultaneously are insufficient to pay the judgments in full of the simultaneously attaching creditors who have liens which begin simultaneously, such funds are prorated among such creditors according to the amount of the indebtedness of the defendant to each of them, respectively, as established upon the trial.

(g) If more than one order of attachment is served on a garnishee, the court from which the first order of attachment was issued shall, upon motion of the garnishee or of any of the attaching creditors, make parties to the action all of the attaching creditors, who are not already parties thereto in order that any questions of priority among the attaching creditors may be determined in that action and in that court. (1947, c. 693, § 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

Perfection by attachment occurs as to personal property upon levy. In re Millerburg, 61 Bankr. 125 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1986).

When an order of attachment is perfected by a levy, a lien of attachment is created thereby which establishes the lienor's claim as against all other creditors and subsequent lienors. Edwards v. Brown's Cabinets, 63 N.C. App. 524, 305 S.E.2d 765, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 632, 308 S.E.2d 64 (1983).

Lien Enforceable Against Subsequent Purchasers. — When the officer had complied with the provisions of former § 1-449, relating to execution, levy and lien of attachments, the plaintiffs had a lien on such property, which was enforceable against all subsequent purchasers from the defendant. Newberry v. Meadows Fertilizer Co., 203 N.C. 330, 166 S.E. 79 (1932).

A person claiming under a conveyance or encumbrance executed subsequent to the docketing of the notice of the order with respect to the property conveyed or encumbranced takes subject to the action whose pendency was so noted. Edwards v. Brown's Cabinets, 63 N.C. App. 524, 305 S.E.2d 765, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 632, 308 S.E.2d 64 (1983).

The date to which the lien relates back and fixes the priority of the claim, with respect to real property, is the time at which the notice of the order of attachment is docketed in the record of lis pendens in the county where the property is located. Edwards v. Brown's Cabinets, 63 N.C. App. 524, 305 S.E.2d 765, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 632, 308 S.E.2d 64 (1983).

Debt Owed by City to Principal Defendants. — In attachment proceedings under a former statute an examination of the officials of a city alleged to be indebted to defendants operated as a lien on anything owing by the city to defendants, as of the day when the copy of the warrant of attachment was delivered; and thereby prevented any alterations of the state of accounts between defendants and the city. Carmer v. Evers, 80 N.C. 56 (1879).

A "notice of levy" served upon a garnishee was insufficient process to accord the serving party the status of an attaching creditor. It was incumbent on the party, if it desired to establish a lien by attachment or an interest in the attached property, to put its claim in issue by filing a proper claim in accordance with § 1-440.1 et seq. or § 1-440.43(2). Failing this, the party's contention that it could intervene as an attaching creditor under this section failed, and the garnishee's motion to join all attaching creditors was moot. State Employee's Credit Union, Inc. v. Gentry, 75 N.C. App. 260, 330 S.E.2d 645 (1985).

Property of Garnishee. — Under former § 1-461, it was held that no lien attached to any specific property of the garnishee until the issuance of execution on the judgment and proceedings to enforce such execution. Newberry v. Meadows Fertilizer Co., 203 N.C. 330, 166 S.E. 79 (1932).

Homestead. — The lien of an attachment levied under the former statute upon land of a nonresident debtor was paramount to the right of a homestead therein acquired by the debtor by becoming a citizen of the State prior to the rendition of judgment in the action. Watkins v. Overby, 83 N.C. 165 (1880).

Cited in Doub v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (In re Medlin), 229 Bankr. 353 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1998).

§ 1-440.34. Effect of defendant's death after levy.

(a) In case of the death of the defendant, after the issuance of an order of attachment and after a levy is made thereunder but before service of summons is had or before an appearance is entered in the principal action, the levy shall remain in force

(1) If the cause of action set forth by the plaintiff in the principal action is one which survives, and

(2) If service is completed on the personal representative of the defendant within three months from the date of his qualification.

(b) If a levy has been made upon real property and the defendant dies before such real property is sold pursuant to the attachment, the lien of the attachment shall continue but the judgment may be enforced only through the defendant's personal representative in the regular course of administration. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

§ 1-440.35. Sheriff's liability for care of attached property; expense of care.

The sheriff is liable for the care and custody of personal property levied upon pursuant to an order of attachment just as if he had seized it under execution. Upon demand of the sheriff, the plaintiff shall advance to the sheriff from time to time such amount as may be required to provide the necessary care and to maintain the custody of the attached property. The expense so incurred in caring for and maintaining custody of attached property shall be taxed as part of the costs of the action. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Sheriff's liability under this section arises only when such loss, damage or destruction is caused by the sheriff's failure to exercise proper care and diligence to preserve the property. Butler v. Southeastern Millworks, Inc. (In re Bldrs. Supply of Wilmington, Inc.), 40 Bankr. 753 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984).

Part 5. Miscellaneous Procedure Pending Final Judgment.

§ 1-440.36. Dissolution of the order of attachment.

(a) At any time before judgment in the principal action, a defendant whose property has been attached may specially or generally appear and move, either before the clerk or the judge, to dissolve the order of attachment.

(b) When the defect alleged as grounds for the motion appears upon the face of the record, no issues of fact arise, and the motion is heard and determined upon the record.

(c) When the defect alleged does not appear upon the face of the record, the motion is heard and determined upon the affidavits filed by the plaintiff and the defendant, unless, prior to the actual commencement of the hearing, a jury trial is demanded in writing by the plaintiff or the defendant. Either the clerk or the judge hearing and determining the motion to dissolve the order of attachment shall find the facts upon which his ruling thereon is based. If a jury trial is demanded by either party, the issues involved shall be submitted and determined at the same time the principal action is tried, unless the judge, on motion of any party for good cause shown, orders an earlier trial or a separate trial. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

Remedy in This Section Is Not Exclusive. — When the defendant contests the grounds on which the writ issued, this section provides a ready means of attack upon the writ without awaiting the trial of the main issue. But this remedy is not exclusive. He may make the necessary allegations in his answer by way of defense and await the trial. Whitaker v. Wade, 229 N.C. 327, 49 S.E.2d 627 (1948).

Section 1-440.43 provides a method by which interested third parties attack an attachment. Edwards v. Brown's Cabinets, 63 N.C. App. 524, 305 S.E.2d 765, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 632, 308 S.E.2d 64 (1983).

Inasmuch as a statutory method of third party attack on an attachment is available, the function of lis pendens would be to put a third party in a position to use it. It is unacceptable to hold that the efficacy of lis pendens to perform its designated function should depend on proper execution of the order which caused its entry. Edwards v. Brown's Cabinets, 63 N.C. App. 524, 305 S.E.2d 765, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 632, 308 S.E.2d 64 (1983).

Section 1-440.43 applies to any person who has acquired a lien upon or an interest in attached property whether such interest is acquired prior to or subsequent to the attachment and allows for the making of a motion, at any time prior to judgment in the principal action, to dissolve or modify the order of attachment. Edwards v. Brown's Cabinets, 63 N.C. App. 524, 305 S.E.2d 765, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 632, 308 S.E.2d 64 (1983).

Section Affords Hearing and Judicial Determination. — In combination with the § 1-440.11 requirement that the facts supporting the allegation of intent to defraud be stated in the affidavit, this section affords a meaningful hearing and judicial determination of the attachment at an early stage. Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Jurisdiction of Judge of Superior Court. — On motion to dissolve an attachment, the judge of superior court has concurrent jurisdiction with the clerk of superior court to determine the matter; and consequently the judge is not limited to determining whether or not there was competent evidence to support the findings of the clerk but can consider the evidence de novo and hear evidence not before the clerk. Hiscox v. Shea, 8 N.C. App. 90, 173 S.E.2d 591 (1970).

Where jury determined that the attachment was wrongfully issued, it was proper for the court to dissolve the attachment and discharge the defendant's surety from liability. Whitaker v. Wade, 229 N.C. 327, 49 S.E.2d 627 (1948).

Clerk Has Jurisdiction. — The clerk of the superior court has jurisdiction to vacate an attachment. Palmer v. Bosher, 71 N.C. 291 (1874).

Motion May Be Made by Any One of Several Defendants. — Any one of several defendants whose property has been attached has such an interest in the action as to maintain a motion to vacate the attachment. Luff v. Levey, 203 N.C. 783, 166 S.E. 922 (1932).

Failure of Defendant to Move to Vacate. — The proper publication of summons for a nonresident defendant whose property has been attached gives the defendant notice that he can vacate the warrant if insufficient, and upon his failing to move to vacate the process he will not be held to be prejudiced by a subsequent judgment. Page v. McDonald, 159 N.C. 38, 74 S.E. 642 (1912).

Attachment Vacated When Defendant Bankrupt. — Bankruptcy of defendant was held to be sufficient ground for vacating an attachment levied upon his property. Mixer, Whitman & Co. v. Excelsior Oil & Guano Co., 65 N.C. 552 (1871); Ward v. Hargett, 151 N.C. 365, 66 S.E. 340 (1909).

And Where It Appears from Pleadings That Action Must Fail. — The trial judge may vacate an attachment pending trial where it plainly appears from the pleadings that the action of the plaintiff must fail. Knight v. Hatfield, 129 N.C. 191, 39 S.E. 807 (1901).

It is error to discharge an attachment, granted as ancillary to an action, because of the insufficiency of the affidavit to obtain service of the summons by publication, for it is possible that the defect may be cured by amendment. Branch v. Frank, 81 N.C. 180 (1879); Price v. Cox, 83 N.C. 261 (1880).

Validity of warrant of attachment is determined upon facts alleged in the original affidavit and existing at the time when the proceeding is instituted, not upon new matter which may have afterwards transpired. W.M. Devries & Co. v. Summit, 86 N.C. 126 (1882).

Court May Find Facts. — In attachment and other ancillary proceedings it is competent for the court to find the facts from the affidavits and other evidence; and a party consenting to this mode of trial cannot afterwards demand a jury trial. Pasour v. Lineberger, 90 N.C. 159 (1884).

An appeal lies from the refusal to dismiss an attachment. Sheldon v. Kivett, 110 N.C. 408, 14 S.E. 970 (1892); Raisin Fertilizer Co. v. Grubbs, 114 N.C. 470, 19 S.E. 597 (1894); Judd v. Crawford Gold Mining Co., 120 N.C. 397, 27 S.E. 81 (1897).

Appeal Takes Case from Jurisdiction of Court Below. — Where an appeal is taken from a refusal to discharge an attachment, the court below cannot in the meantime allow a motion "to dismiss" the same to be entered, for the appeal takes the case out of its jurisdiction. Pasour v. Lineberger, 90 N.C. 159 (1884).

When Facts Upon Which Vacation of Attachment Was Based Must Be Set Out. — The superior court judge is not required to set out the facts upon which he has vacated an attachment levied on the defendant's property, unless the party, appealing and complaining of the ruling of law, requests him to find the facts necessary to give him the benefit of his exceptions. Coharie Lumber Co. v. Buhmann, 160 N.C. 385, 75 S.E. 1008 (1912).

When Findings of Fact Not Reviewable. — On appeal it will be presumed that the superior court judge found facts sufficient to support his order vacating an attachment on the debtor's property, when they do not appear of record; and any facts found by him, so appearing, are not reviewable. Coharie Lumber Co. v. Buhmann, 160 N.C. 385, 75 S.E. 1008 (1912).

The findings of fact of the clerk of the superior court, on a motion to vacate an attachment, supported by the evidence and approved by the judge, are not subject to review. Brann v. Hanes, 194 N.C. 571, 140 S.E. 292 (1927).

Failure of Judge to Make Findings of Fact. — On appeal to the superior court from an order of the clerk dissolving an attachment, failure of the judge to make findings of fact in his order which vacated and overruled the clerk's order is erroneous. Hiscox v. Shea, 8 N.C. App. 90, 173 S.E.2d 591 (1970).

Decision Is Res Judicata. — A decision on a motion to vacate an attachment is res judicata until reversed. Roulhac v. Brown, 87 N.C. 1 (1882); Pasour v. Lineberger, 90 N.C. 159 (1884); Morganton Mfg. & Trading Co. v. Foy-Seawell Lumber Co., 177 N.C. 404, 99 S.E. 104 (1919).

Dissolution of Bond. — Defendants were not prevented from challenging the court's ex parte findings on which the attachment and temporary restraining order were based because of the substitution of their bond. And, having shown that the attachment was erroneously ordered, they were entitled to have their bond dissolved. Davenport v. Ralph N. Peters & Co., 274 F. Supp. 99 (W.D.N.C. 1966), rev'd on other grounds, 386 F.2d 199 (4th Cir. 1967).

Applied in Northside Properties, Inc. v. Ko-Ko Mart, Inc., 28 N.C. App. 532, 222 S.E.2d 267 (1976); Connolly v. Sharpe, 49 N.C. App. 152, 270 S.E.2d 564 (1980).

§ 1-440.37. Modification of the order of attachment.

At any time before judgment in the principal action, the defendant may apply to the clerk or the judge for an order modifying the order of attachment. Such motion shall be heard upon affidavits. If the order is modified, the court making the order of modification shall make such provisions with respect to bonds and other incidental matters as may be necessary to protect the rights of the parties. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Section 1-440.43 provides a method by which interested third parties may attack an attachment. Such section applies to any person who has acquired a lien upon or an interest in such property whether such interest is acquired prior to or subsequent to the attachment and allows for the making of a motion, at any time prior to judgment in the principal action, to dissolve or modify the order of attachment. Edwards v. Brown's Cabinets, 63 N.C. App. 524, 305 S.E.2d 765, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 632, 308 S.E.2d 64 (1983).

Inasmuch as a statutory method of third party attack on an attachment is available, the function of lis pendens would be to put a third party in a position to use it. It is unacceptable to hold that the efficacy of lis pendens to perform its designated function should depend on proper execution of the order which caused its entry. Edwards v. Brown's Cabinets, 63 N.C. App. 524, 305 S.E.2d 765, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 632, 308 S.E.2d 64 (1983).

Applied in Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975); Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

§ 1-440.38. Stay of order dissolving or modifying an order of attachment.

Whenever a plaintiff appeals from an order dissolving or modifying an order of attachment, such order shall be stayed and the attachment lien with respect to all property theretofore attached shall remain in effect until the appeal is finally disposed of. In order to protect the defendant in the event that an order dissolving or modifying an order of attachment is affirmed on appeal, the court from whose order the appeal is taken may, in its discretion, require the plaintiff to execute and deposit with the clerk an additional bond with sufficient surety and in an amount deemed adequate by the court to indemnify the defendant against all losses which he may suffer on account of the continuation of the lien of the attachment pending the determination of the appeal. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

§ 1-440.39. Discharge of attachment upon giving bond.

(a) Any defendant whose property has been attached may move, either before the clerk or the judge, to discharge the attachment upon his giving bond for the property attached. If no prior general appearance has been made by such defendant, such motion shall constitute a general appearance.

(b) The court hearing such motion shall make an order discharging such attachment upon such defendant's filing a bond as follows:

(1) If it is made to appear to the satisfaction of the court by affidavit that the property attached is of a greater value than the amount claimed by the plaintiff, the court shall require a bond in double the amount of the judgment prayed for by the plaintiff, and the condition of such bond shall be that if judgment is rendered against the defendant, the defendant will pay to the plaintiff the amount of the judgment and all costs that the defendant may be ordered to pay, the surety's liability, however, to be limited to the amount of the bond.

(2) If it is made to appear to the satisfaction of the court by affidavit that the property attached is of less value than the amount claimed by the plaintiff, the court shall, upon affidavits filed, determine the value thereof and shall require a bond in double the amount of such value, and the condition of the bond shall be that if judgment is rendered against the defendant, the defendant will pay to the plaintiff an amount equal to the value of such property.

(c) If a bond is filed as provided in subsection (b) of this section, all property of such defendant then remaining in the possession of the sheriff pursuant to such attachment, including, but not by way of limitation, money collected and the proceeds of sales, shall be delivered to the defendant and shall thereafter be free from the attachment.

(d) The discharge of an attachment as provided by this section does not bar the defendant from exercising any right provided by G.S. 1-440.36, 1-440.37 or 1-440.40. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

By giving bond in the manner provided by former § 1-457, the debtor could procure the release of the attachment. Bizzell v. Mitchell, 195 N.C. 484, 142 S.E. 706 (1928).

Bond in Lieu of Attachment Lien. — Where attachment had been levied on the defendant's property necessary for the prosecution of his business, and upon his giving bond, he or his receiver was permitted by the court to continue operations, the giving of the bond was in lieu of the lien acquired in attachment, and analogous to the proceedings in discharge authorized by former §§ 1-456 and 1-457. Martin

v. McBryde, 182 N.C. 175, 108 S.E. 739 (1921).

When Undertaking Unnecessary. — The undertaking required in former § 1-457 was not necessary when the warrant on its face appeared to have been issued irregularly, or for a cause insufficient in law or false in fact. Bear v. Cohen, 65 N.C. 511 (1871); W.M. Devries & Co. v. Summit, 86 N.C. 126 (1882).

When an attachment on the debtor's property had been vacated by the superior court judge, the defendant was not required to give the undertaking under former § 1-457 to regain possession of the property. Coharie Lumber Co. v. Buhmann, 160 N.C. 385, 75 S.E. 1008 (1912).

Effect of Undertaking as Waiver or Estoppel. — Giving the undertaking under former § 1-457 was equivalent to a general appearance in the action, and waived certain irregularities. It estopped the defendant from denying ownership of the property levied on, but not from traversing the truth of the allegation on which the attachment was based. Giving the undertaking did not waive the validity of the statutory ground of attachment. Bizzell v. Mitchell, 195 N.C. 484, 142 S.E. 706 (1928).

The filing of bond by a defendant to release his property from an attachment does not bar defendant from challenging the validity of the attachment. Armstrong v. Aetna Ins. Co., 249 N.C. 352, 106 S.E.2d 515 (1959).

Dissolution of Bond. — Defendants were not prevented from challenging the court's ex parte findings on which the attachment and temporary restraining order were based because of the substitution of their bond. And, having shown that the attachment was erroneously ordered, they were entitled to have their bond dissolved. Davenport v. Ralph N. Peters & Co., 274 F. Supp. 99 (W.D.N.C. 1966), rev'd on other grounds, 386 F.2d 199 (4th Cir. 1967).

Restitution of Property. — Former § 1-456, providing for the restitution of property upon an order dissolving the attachment, did not apply to cases where there had been a sale or transfer of the property by the defendant to the plaintiff after the levy of the attachment. Jackson, Oglesby & Co. v. Burnett, 119 N.C. 195, 25 S.E. 868 (1896).

Notwithstanding the dissolution of an attachment, the plaintiff, who claimed that the property has been transferred to him by the defendant after the levy of the warrant, was entitled to have submitted to the jury an issue as to the ownership of the property. Jackson, Oglesby & Co. v. Burnett, 119 N.C. 195, 25 S.E. 868 (1896).

Refusal of Sheriff to Deliver Property. — If the sheriff failed or refused to deliver the property after discharge of the attachment as provided in former § 1-456, the defendant could perhaps apply to the court and obtain an order requiring him to do so, or could sue the sheriff and his sureties for the default, but the plaintiff would not be liable. Mahoney v. Tyler, 136 N.C. 40, 48 S.E. 549 (1904).

Discharge of Surety. — When the surety signed a bond under former § 1-457, it was held that he entered into the obligation with reference to the cause as it then stood, so when a new element of liability was introduced by an amendment, the surety was discharged. Rushing v. Ashcraft, 211 N.C. 627, 191 S.E. 332 (1937).

Applied in Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975); Northside Properties, Inc. v. Ko-Ko Mart, Inc., 28 N.C. App. 532, 222 S.E.2d 267 (1976).

Cited in Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

§ 1-440.40. Defendant's objection to bond or surety.

(a) At any time before judgment in the principal action, on motion of the defendant, the clerk or judge may, if he deems it necessary in order to provide adequate protection, require an increase in the amount of the bond previously given by or required of the plaintiff.

(b) At any time before judgment in the principal action the defendant may except to any surety upon any bond given by the plaintiff pursuant to the provisions of this Article, in which case the surety shall be required to justify, and the procedure with respect thereto shall be as is prescribed for the justification of bail in arrest and bail proceedings. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

A judge of the superior court has authority to require plaintiffs in attachment to increase their bond or have their attachment dismissed. Palmer v. M.R.S. Dev. Corp., 9 N.C. App. 668, 177 S.E.2d 328 (1970).

And he has authority to dismiss the attachment by a special order when plaintiffs failed to post additional bond within the time fixed. Palmer v. M.R.S. Dev. Corp., 9 N.C. App. 668, 177 S.E.2d 328 (1970).

§ 1-440.41. Defendant's remedies not exclusive.

The exercise by the defendant of any one or more rights provided by G.S. 1-440.36 through 1-440.40 does not bar the defendant from exercising any other rights provided by those sections. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

§ 1-440.42. Plaintiff's objection to bond or surety; failure to comply with order to furnish increased or new bond.

(a) At any time before judgment in the principal action, on motion of the plaintiff, the clerk or judge may, if he deems it necessary in order to provide adequate protection, require an increase in the amount of the bond previously given by or required of any defendant, garnishee or intervenor.

(b) At any time before judgment in the principal action the plaintiff may except to any surety upon any bond given by any defendant, garnishee or intervenor pursuant to the provisions of this Article, in which case the surety shall be required to justify, and the procedure with respect thereto shall be as is prescribed for the justification of bail in arrest and bail proceedings.

(c) Upon failure of a defendant, garnishee or intervenor to comply with an order requiring an increase in the amount of a bond previously given, or upon failure to comply with an order requiring a new bond when the surety on the previous bond is unsatisfactory, the court may, in addition to any other action with respect thereto, issue an order of attachment directing the sheriff to seize and take into his possession property released upon the giving of the previous bond, if the person failing to comply with the order still has possession of the same. Such property when retaken into his possession by the sheriff shall be subject to all the provisions of this Article relating to attached property. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

§ 1-440.43. Remedies of third person claiming attached property or interest therein.

Any person other than the defendant who claims property which has been attached, or any person who has acquired a lien upon or an interest in such property, whether such lien or interest is acquired prior to or subsequent to the attachment, may

(1) Apply to the court to have the attachment order dissolved or modified, or to have the bond increased, upon the same conditions and by the same methods as are available to the defendant, or

(2) Intervene and secure possession of the property in the same manner and under the same conditions as is provided for intervention in claim and delivery proceedings. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

This section provides a method by which interested third parties may attack an attachment. Edwards v. Brown's Cabinets, 63 N.C. App. 524, 305 S.E.2d 765, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 632, 308 S.E.2d 64 (1983).

Inasmuch as a statutory method of third party attack on an attachment is available, the function of lis pendens would be to put a third party in a position to use it. It is unacceptable to hold that the efficacy of lis pendens to perform its designated function should depend on proper execution of the order which caused its entry. Edwards v. Brown's Cabinets, 63 N.C. App. 524, 305 S.E.2d 765, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 632, 308 S.E.2d 64 (1983).

Subdivisions Interpreted. — With respect to subdivision (1), any person other than a defendant may dissolve an attachment order by the same method available to a defendant, and a defendant can dissolve an order of attachment "at any time before judgment in the principal action." With respect to subdivision (2), the language of § 1A-1, Rule 24 would govern, and the third party's motion to intervene must be made "upon timely application." Loman Garrett, Inc. v. Timco Mechanical, Inc., 93 N.C. App. 500, 378 S.E.2d 194 (1989).

A "notice of levy" served upon a garnishee was insufficient process to accord the serving party the status of an attaching creditor. It was incumbent on the party, if it desired to establish a lien by attachment or an interest in the attached property, to put its claim in issue by filing a proper claim in accordance with § 1-440.1 et seq. or this section. Failing this, the party's contention that it could intervene as an attaching creditor under § 1-440.33(g) failed, and the garnishee's motion to join all attaching creditors was moot. State Employee's Credit Union, Inc. v. Gentry, 75 N.C. App. 260, 330 S.E.2d 645 (1985).

Owner of garage and wrecker service, with whom sheriff contracted to store certain cars levied on pursuant to court order, was a legal possessor, and under subsection (d) of § 44A-2 had a lien on the cars from the time he began towing them away. Case v. Miller, 68 N.C. App. 729, 315 S.E.2d 737 (1984).

For remedies of claimant under prior law, whose property had been attached by a sheriff, under a warrant issued in an action to which he was not a party, see Stein v. Cozart, 122 N.C. 280, 30 S.E. 340 (1898); Martin v. Buffaloe, 128 N.C. 305, 38 S.E. 902 (1901); Gay v. Mitchell, 146 N.C. 509, 60 S.E. 426 (1908); Tyler v. Mahoney, 168 N.C. 237, 84 S.E. 362 (1915); Tatham v. Dehart, 183 N.C. 657, 112 S.E. 430 (1922); Flowers v. Spears, 190 N.C. 747, 130 S.E. 710 (1925).

Where Defendant Held Property as Agent. — Where the evidence tended to show that a defendant held property levied on as agent for another, such third person should be allowed to be made a party. Farmers' Bank & Trust Co. v. Murphy, 189 N.C. 479, 127 S.E. 527 (1925).

Separate Trials. — In attachment under the former statute a separate trial for the intervenor was discretionary with the trial judge. Cotton Mills v. Weil, 129 N.C. 452, 40 S.E. 218 (1901).

Burden of Proving Title. — In attachment the burden was on the intervenor to establish title to the property. Cotton Mills v. Weil, 129 N.C. 452, 40 S.E. 218 (1901).

Objection to Irregularity of Attachment Proceedings. — Under the former statute it was held that parties who intervened in attachment proceedings could not be heard to object to the irregularity of the same, that being a matter between the parties to the main action. Cook v. New York Corundum Co., 114 N.C. 617, 19 S.E. 664 (1894).

An intervenor in an action wherein attachment on the defendant's property had been issued, who claimed a prior lien by reason of a former order of court in another and independent proceeding, became party to the action and could not successfully attack the validity of the proceedings in attachment, and the question of priority was left to be determined in the action. Mitchell v. Talley, 182 N.C. 683, 109 S.E. 882 (1921).

Bank's Motion to Intervene Was Properly Denied. — Where the bank sought to intervene at the time of the hearing at which the trial court was ready to resolve the matter before it based on the pleadings and affidavits submitted by the parties, and where plaintiff's second complaint had been filed and served on counsel for defendant in October, where the record affirmatively disclosed that the same counsel had been representing the interests of the bank, as well as those of the bank's debtor since before June and was at all times since that date aware of the attachment proceedings, counsel for the bank had ample opportunity to intervene at any time after the filing of plaintiff's complaint, and the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the bank's motion to intervene. Loman Garrett, Inc. v. Timco Mechanical, Inc., 93 N.C. App. 500, 378 S.E.2d 194 (1989).

Under the former statute an intervenor had no right to interfere in the action between the original parties, since he was interested only as to the title to the property. Cotton Mills v. Weil, 129 N.C. 452, 40 S.E. 218 (1901).

Cited in Harshaw v. Mustafa, 84 N.C. App. 296, 352 S.E.2d 247 (1987); Harshaw v. Mustafa, 321 N.C. 288, 362 S.E.2d 541 (1987).

§ 1-440.44. When attached property to be sold before judgment.

(a) The sheriff shall apply to the clerk or to the judge for authority to sell property, or any share or interest therein, seized pursuant to an order of attachment,

(1) If the property is perishable, or

(2) If the property is not perishable, but

a. Will materially deteriorate in value pending litigation, or
b. Will likely cost more than one fifth of its value to keep pending a final determination of the action, and
c. Is not discharged from the attachment lien in the manner provided by G.S. 1-440.39 within ten days after the seizure thereof.

(b) If the court so orders, the property described in subsection (a) of this section shall thereupon be sold under the direction of the court unless the discharge of the same is secured by the defendant or other person interested therein, in the manner provided by G.S. 1-440.39, prior to such sale. The proceeds of such sale shall be liable for any judgment obtained in the principal action and shall be retained by the sheriff to await such judgment. (1947, c. 693, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

Sale of Third Party's Goods. — Where an attachment was levied upon the goods of a third party which, being perishable, were sold by the sheriff, and the third party interpleaded in the action and recovered judgment, the costs and expenses of the attachment and sale were not properly chargeable against the fund arising from such sale. Haywood v. Hardie, 76 N.C. 384 (1877).

An intervenor obtaining the possession of property attached by giving a replevy bond could not sell part of the property, such sale not being made as provided by superseded § 1-454, similar to this section, and claim the right to pay for the part sold and return the balance thereof. Bulluck v. Haley, 198 N.C. 355, 151 S.E. 731 (1930).

Authority of Clerk to Stop Sale and Order Resale. — Section 1-440.9 gave the clerk sufficient authority to stop the first sale of an aircraft, as to which the sheriff's announcement at the sale that the aircraft would be sold free of the plaintiff savings and loan's lien was at variance with the advertised notice that defendant's interest would be sold, where the aircraft brought at the first sale only a small fraction of its value, and the clerk also had the power to order a new sale. North State Sav. & Loan Corp. v. Carter Dev. Co., 83 N.C. App. 422, 350 S.E.2d 374 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 405, 354 S.E.2d 716 (1987).

Part 6. Procedure after Judgment.

§ 1-440.45. When defendant prevails in principal action.

(a) If the defendant prevails in the principal action, or if the order of attachment is for any reason dissolved, dismissed or set aside, or if service is not had on the defendant as provided by G.S. 1-440.7,

(1) The defendant shall be entitled to have delivered to him
a. All bonds taken for his benefit whether filed in the proceedings or taken by an officer, and
b. The proceeds of any sales and all money collected, and
c. All attached property remaining in the officer's hands, and
(2) Any garnishee shall be entitled to have vacated any judgment theretofore taken against him.

(b) Either the clerk or the judge shall have authority, upon motion of the defendant or any garnishee, to make any such order as may be necessary or proper to carry out the provisions of subsection (a) of this section.

(c) Upon judgment in his favor in the principal action, the defendant may thereafter, by motion in the cause, recover on any bond taken for his benefit therein, or he may maintain an independent action thereon. (1947, c. 693, s. 1; 1951, c. 837, s. 8.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

When Defendant Prevented from Recovering Garnished Wages. — Where an earlier order garnishing defendant's salary was stricken, defendant could not recover any funds on deposit with the clerk under this section since first, defendant could not claim to have prevailed in the principal case, the order striking the garnishment order not resolving any action in defendant's favor; second, the order of attachment was not dissolved by the order striking garnishment; and third, defendant could not assert the lack of service upon him for the reason that he failed in his response to motion for garnishment and countermotion to raise the defense of lack of proper service. Sturgill v. Sturgill, 49 N.C. App. 580, 272 S.E.2d 423 (1980).

Prior to 1947, there was no provision in this Article for the assessment of damages in the original action against the plaintiff and his surety for the wrongful issuance of a warrant of attachment. The defendant was compelled to pursue his remedy by independent action after the groundlessness of the action or the ancillary writ was judicially determined. Whitaker v. Wade, 229 N.C. 327, 49 S.E.2d 627 (1948).

Claim on Bond May Not Be Heard at Original Hearing. — Subsection (c) of this section does not mean that defendant's claim against plaintiff's bond may be heard and damages assessed at the original hearing. It provides instead that such damages are to be assessed in the same action, at the election of the defendant, after judgment on the main issue. Defendant's cause of action on the bond is bottomed on the wrongful issuance of the writ. The groundlessness of the writ is an essential element of his right to damages and this cannot completely exist or appear until that fact is judicially determined either by judgment vacating the writ of judgment against the plaintiff in the main action. Then only does defendant's cause of action on the bond arise and become complete. His proper remedy is by motion in the cause after judgment. Whitaker v. Wade, 229 N.C. 327, 49 S.E.2d 627 (1948).

Remedy Is by Motion After Judgment or Subsequent Independent Action. — Where it is determined upon the trial of the main issue that plaintiff's averment upon which attachment was issued was false, defendant may have damages assessed for the wrongful attachment either upon motion in the cause after judgment or by subsequent independent action. Whitaker v. Wade, 229 N.C. 327, 49 S.E.2d 627 (1948).

When Limitations Begin to Run on Action on Bond. — In an action to recover on the bond given by the creditor and his surety in attachment proceedings for a wrongful levy therein, the statute of limitations began to run from the rendition of the judgment and not from the time the property was replevied. The recovery of the judgment in the former action was the condition authorizing the suit, and a vacation of the attachment. Smith v. American Bonding Co., 160 N.C. 574, 76 S.E. 481 (1912).

Misjoinder of Principal and Surety. — An action would not be dismissed for a misjoinder of parties where the plaintiff was suing, in the same action, the principal and surety on an attachment bond given under the former statute. The remedy was by motion to have the causes divided. Smith v. American Bonding Co., 160 N.C. 574, 76 S.E. 481 (1912).

Creditor Not Liable on Bond for Sheriff's Failure. — An attaching creditor under the former statute was not liable on his bond for the failure of the sheriff to perform his duty relative to the attached property. Mahoney v. Tyler, 136 N.C. 40, 48 S.E. 549 (1904).

Recovery of Expenses Incurred by Defendant in Procuring Bond. — In an action to recover on an attachment bond given under the former statute for the wrongful levy therein, damages might be awarded for the reasonable expense that the plaintiff, who was the defendant in the attachment proceedings, had incurred in procuring the undertaking he had given to obtain the release of the property attached. Smith v. American Bonding Co., 160 N.C. 574, 76 S.E. 481 (1912).

Traveling Expenses and Value of Time. — Damages could not be recovered in an action for a wrongful levy in attachment under the former statute for railroad and traveling expenses, and the value of the plaintiff's time in procuring the release of his property. Smith v. American Bonding Co., 160 N.C. 574, 76 S.E. 481 (1912).

Delivery of Property and Proceeds of Sales. — The sales of property mentioned in former § 1-468, requiring delivery of property or proceeds of sale to defendant upon his recovery, referred to those before the attachment was vacated, as for instance sales made under the order of the court when property was perishable. The sheriff had no right, after the attachment had been vacated, to sell any property seized by him, as it then became his duty to deliver at once to the defendant all property in his hands. Mahoney v. Tyler, 136 N.C. 40, 48 S.E. 549 (1904).

When Defendant May Proceed on Bond. — If an order of attachment is dissolved, dismissed, or set aside by the court, or if the attachment plaintiff fails to obtain judgment against the attachment defendant, the attachment defendant may, without the necessity of showing malice or want of probable cause, proceed against the attachment plaintiff and his surety jointly or severally by independent action or motion in the cause, on the contractual obligations of the attachment plaintiff and his surety embodied in the bond and the statute under which it is given. Brown v. Guaranty Estates Corp., 239 N.C. 595, 80 S.E.2d 645 (1954); Godwin v. Vinson, 254 N.C. 582, 119 S.E.2d 616 (1961).

§ 1-440.46. When plaintiff prevails in principal action.

(a) If judgment is entered for the plaintiff in the principal action, the sheriff shall satisfy such judgment out of money collected by him or paid to him in the attachment proceeding or out of property attached by him as follows:

(1) After paying the costs of the action, he shall apply on the judgment as much of the balance of the money in his hands as may be necessary to satisfy the judgment.

(2) If the money so applied is not sufficient to pay the judgment in full, the sheriff shall, upon the issuance of an execution on the judgment, sell sufficient attached property, except debts and evidences of indebtedness to satisfy the judgment.

(3) While the judgment remains unsatisfied, and notwithstanding the pendency of the sale of any personal or real property as provided by subdivision (2) of this subsection, the sheriff shall collect and apply on the judgment any debts or evidences of indebtedness attached by him.

(4) If, after the expiration of six months from the docketing of the judgment, the judgment is not fully satisfied, the sheriff shall, when ordered by the clerk or judge, as provided in subsection (b) of this section, sell all debts and notes and other evidences of indebtedness remaining unpaid in his hands, and shall apply the net proceeds thereof, or as much thereof as may be necessary, to the satisfaction of the judgment. To forestall the running of the statute of limitations, earlier sale may be ordered in the discretion of the court.

(b) In order to secure the sale of the remaining debts and evidences of indebtedness as provided in subsection (a)(4) of this section, the plaintiff may move therefor, either before the clerk or the judge, and shall submit with his motion

(1) His affidavit setting forth fully the proceedings had by the sheriff since the service of the attachment, listing or describing the property attached, and showing the disposition thereof, and

(2) The affidavit of the sheriff that he has endeavored to collect the debts or evidences of indebtedness and that there remains uncollected some part thereof.

Upon the filing of such motion, the court to which the motion is made shall give the defendant or his attorney such notice of the hearing thereon as the court may deem reasonable, and by such means as the court may deem best. Upon the hearing, the court may order the sheriff to sell the debts and other evidences of indebtedness remaining in his hands, or may make such other order with respect thereto as the court may deem proper.

(c) In case of the sale of a share of stock of a corporation or of property in a warehouse for which a negotiable warehouse receipt has been issued, the sheriff shall execute and deliver to the purchaser a certificate of sale therefor, and the purchaser shall have all the rights with respect thereto which the defendant had.

(d) Upon judgment in his favor in the principal action, the plaintiff is entitled to judgment on any bond taken for his benefit therein.

(e) When the judgment and all costs of the proceedings have been paid, the sheriff, upon demand of the defendant, shall deliver to the defendant the residue of the attached property or the proceeds thereof. (1947, c. 693, s. 1; 1951, c. 837, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited below were decided under prior similar provisions.

Judgment Against Defendant and Surety Proper. — Where the bond signed by the surety was for the benefit of the plaintiff, and the judgment did not exceed the amount of the bond, the trial judge correctly gave judgment against the defendant and the surety. Beck Distrib. Corp. v. Imported Parts, Inc., 10 N.C. App. 737, 179 S.E.2d 793 (1971).

Property Held Until Final Judgment. — The first paragraph of former § 1-466, which was similar to the first paragraph of this section, indicated that the property was held until final judgment and the sheriff could collect from a garnishee against whom judgment was entered. Newberry v. Meadows Fertilizer Co., 206 N.C. 182, 173 S.E. 67 (1934).

Property in Possession of Third Party. — Where a person in possession of property was not a party to an attachment suit brought under the former statute, the plaintiff, in addition to a judgment for his debt, was not entitled to a judgment for such property, but must proceed under former § 1-466. Post-Glover Elec. Co. v. McEntee-Peterson Eng'r Co., 128 N.C. 199, 38 S.E. 831 (1901).

Judgment Against Nonresident. — No judgment in personam may be entered or enforced against a nonresident who has not been personally served with summons. Johnson v. Whilden, 166 N.C. 104, 81 S.E. 1057 (1914), rehearing denied, 171 N.C. 153, 88 S.E. 223 (1916).

Power and Duty of Sheriff. — The attachment is simply a levy before judgment, and upon execution issuing on a judgment it is the duty of the sheriff to sell the attached property. Gamble v. Rhyne, 80 N.C. 183 (1879); Farmers Mfg. Co. v. Steinmetz, 133 N.C. 192, 45 S.E. 552 (1903); Morganton Mfg. & Trading Co. v. Foy-Seawell Lumber Co., 177 N.C. 404, 99 S.E. 104 (1919).

Former § 1-466 gave an express direction to the sheriff to sell the property previously levied on by him under the attachment, and invested him with as much power and authority to act in the premises as if an execution, in the form of a venditioni exponas, had been issued to him, specially commanding him to sell the particular property. Post-Glover Elec. Co. v. McEntee-Peterson Eng'rs Co., 128 N.C. 199, 38 S.E. 831 (1901); Chemical Co. v. Sloan, 136 N.C. 122, 48 S.E. 577 (1904); May v. Getty, 140 N.C. 310, 53 S.E. 75 (1905); Morganton Mfg. & Trading Co. v. Foy-Seawell Lumber Co., 177 N.C. 404, 99 S.E. 104 (1919).

Sale Passes Only Right of Defendant. — A sale under an execution issuing upon a judgment on an attachment only passed the right of the defendant in attachment. Post-Glover Elec. Co. v. McEntee-Peterson Eng'rs Co., 128 N.C. 199, 38 S.E. 831 (1901).

Surety Concluded from Asserting Insufficiency of Bond. — Where judgment by default final had been rendered against the principal debtor and the surety on an attachment bond given in the action in the form required by former § 1-457 to secure whatever judgment might be rendered, and the property attached had accordingly been retained by the debtor, the surety was concluded from asserting the insufficiency of the bond in not having another surety thereon, as the statute required, when the bond was given and accepted as he had intended, and he had not excepted thereto. Thompson v. Dillingham, 183 N.C. 566, 112 S.E. 321 (1922).

§ 1-472. Claim for delivery of personal property.

The plaintiff in an action to recover the possession of personal property may claim the immediate delivery of the property as provided in this Article at any time before the judgment in the principal action. (C.C.P., s. 176; Code, s. 321; Rev., s. 790; C.S., s. 830; 1977, c. 753.)

This statutory remedy is adopted from the Code of New York. Manix v. Howard, 82 N.C. 125 (1880).

Strictly speaking, there is no such action under the Code as "claim and delivery." The action is for the recovery of a specific chattel, and the delivery of the chattel is a provisional remedy, ancillary, but not essential to such action. If the plaintiff see fit, delivery of the chattel may be waived, and the action prosecuted to recover possession of the chattel, as in the old action of detinue, or to recover the value of the property, as in trover or trespass. Jarman v. Ward, 67 N.C. 32 (1872); Allsbrook v. Shields, 67 N.C. 333 (1872); Hopper v. Miller, 76 N.C. 402 (1877); Wilson v. Hughes, 94 N.C. 182 (1886).

Claim and Delivery Founded on Right to Possession. — Claim and delivery is founded on the right of the plaintiff to the possession of the property. If the defendant also claims the possession, the main issue is on that right, and the party establishing it will have judgment to retain or be restored to the possession, as the case may be. Holmes v. Godwin, 69 N.C. 467 (1873).

And Is a Substitute for Common-Law Remedies. — Under this section the action of "claim and delivery" is a substitute for the action of replevin, if a bond is given by the plaintiff; if not, it is a substitute for the action of detinue or trover. Jarman v. Ward, 67 N.C. 32 (1872); Hopper v. Miller, 76 N.C. 402 (1877).

And Is an Ancillary Remedy. — There is but one form of action in civil cases. In that, many ancillary remedies may be asked, i.e., arrest and bail, claim and delivery, injunction, attachment, and appointment of receivers. These need not be asked, even if the party is entitled to them and if they are improperly asked they are simply denied or dismissed, but that does not affect the action itself, which goes on if the plaintiff is entitled to any other remedy. Deloatch v. Coman, 90 N.C. 186 (1884); Morris v. O'Briant, 94 N.C. 72 (1886); Wilson v. Hughes, 94 N.C. 182 (1886); Hargrove v. Harris, 116 N.C. 418, 21 S.E. 916 (1895).

Section Mandatory. — To entitle a party to maintain an action for claim and delivery of personal property, there must be a compliance with all the requisites specified in this section and § 1-473. Hirsh v. J.D. Whitehead & Co., 65 N.C. 516 (1871).

Object of Action Is to Recover Specific Property. — The recovery of the thing itself, and not damages in lieu thereof, is the primary object of the suit, and the value is given only as an alternative when delivery of the specific property cannot be had. Hendley v. McIntyre, 132 N.C. 276, 43 S.E. 824 (1903).

Who May Bring the Action. — One in the rightful possession of property as bailee can maintain an action of claim and delivery against a wrongdoer who is depriving him of possession. Hopper v. Miller, 76 N.C. 402 (1877).

The crop produced by a tenant being vested in the lessor until the rents shall be paid, he can maintain an action for recovery of an undivided portion thereof, and it is not necessary that he shall specifically designate in his complaint, or affidavit in claim and delivery, such undivided part. Boone v. Darden, 109 N.C. 74, 13 S.E. 728 (1891).

One tenant in common of personal property may not maintain claim and delivery against a third person in possession without the other owners it being required that the claimant show sole ownership. Allen v. McMillan, 191 N.C. 517, 132 S.E. 276 (1926).

Where, in a contract between the landlord and tenant, no time was fixed for the division of the crops, the landlord was not obliged to wait until the whole crop had been gathered, but had a right to bring his action for the possession of the crop before it was fully harvested. State v. Copeland, 86 N.C. 691 (1882); Jordan v. Bryan, 103 N.C. 59, 9 S.E. 135 (1889); Rich v. Hobson, 112 N.C. 79, 16 S.E. 931 (1893).

After default and refusal to surrender possession to the mortgagee, the mortgagee becomes, in law, the absolute owner of the mortgaged property, though the mortgagor has the right to redeem, until the property is sold, and the mortgagee is entitled to the same remedy against him for the possession that he would have against any other person who has the possession of his property. W.C. Kiser & Co. v. Blanton, 123 N.C. 400, 31 S.E. 878 (1898).

An action for the possession of property must be brought against the party in possession. Haughton v. Newberry, 69 N.C. 456 (1873); Webb v. Taylor, 80 N.C. 305 (1879); Moore v. Brady, 125 N.C. 35, 34 S.E. 72 (1899); GMAC v. Waugh, 207 N.C. 717, 178 S.E. 85 (1935).

Claim and delivery is not maintainable against one who has neither possession nor control of the property sought to be recovered, but who has sold and delivered it to another party. Webb v. Taylor, 80 N.C. 305 (1879), citing Jones v. Green, 20 N.C. 488 (1839); Charles v. Elliott, 20 N.C. 606 (1839); Slade v. Washburn, 24 N.C. 414 (1842); Foscue v. Eubank, 32 N.C. 424 (1849); Haughton v. Newberry, 69 N.C. 456 (1873).

Claim and delivery will lie for the recovery of a title deed if the controversy does not involve the determination of the title to the land conveyed by it. Pasterfield v. Sawyer, 132 N.C. 258, 43 S.E. 799 (1903).

And action is proper where the crops are removed from the land leased. Livingston v. Farish, 89 N.C. 140 (1883).

Effect of Alteration of Article Claimed. — If a person bestows his labor upon the property of another, thereby changing it into another species of article, the property is changed, and the owner of the original material cannot recover the article in its altered condition, but is only entitled to its value in the shape in which it was taken from him. Potter v. Mardre, 74 N.C. 36 (1876).

Statute of Limitations Applies. — The three-year statute of limitations in § 1-52 is also applicable to an action of claim and delivery. Hence where a note was given in payment for personal property and the statute of limitations had run on the note no action of claim and delivery could be maintained. Lester Piano Co. v. Loven, 207 N.C. 96, 176 S.E. 290 (1934).

Conflicting Evidence Presents Question for Jury. — Where the evidence is conflicting as to the plaintiff's sole ownership of the personal property in claim and delivery, the question is one for the jury. Allen v. McMillan, 191 N.C. 517, 132 S.E. 276 (1926).

Judgment. — Where claim and delivery is brought to get possession of property for the purpose of selling it, according to the terms of a contract, to pay an indebtedness, and all parties interested are before the court and the amount due ascertained, the plaintiff upon recovering holds as a trustee, and a judgment, directing an adjustment of all the equities involved in order that the matter may be determined, is the proper one to be rendered; and if possession of the property cannot be had, then the judgment should be in the alternative. Austin v. Secrest, 91 N.C. 214 (1884).

In claim and delivery the judgment should be for the delivery of the property or its value. Oil Co. v. Grocery Co., 136 N.C. 354, 48 S.E. 781 (1904).

Plaintiff May Recover Both Possession of Property and Damages for Its Detention. — In a proceeding for claim and delivery of personal property a plaintiff is entitled in a single action to recover both possession of the property and damages for its detention. Bowen v. King, 146 N.C. 385, 59 S.E. 1044 (1907); Mica Indus., Inc. v. Penland, 249 N.C. 602, 107 S.E.2d 120 (1959).

Action Will Lie Against Officer Taking Property Under Execution Against Third Person. — An action for claim and delivery of personal property can be maintained by the owner against an officer taking the same under an execution against a third person. Jones v. Ward, 77 N.C. 337 (1877); Churchill v. Lee, 77 N.C. 341 (1877); Mitchell v. Sims, 124 N.C. 411, 32 S.E. 735 (1899); Mica Indus., Inc. v. Penland, 249 N.C. 602, 107 S.E.2d 120 (1959).

Stated in Red House Furn. Co. v. Smith, 63 N.C. App. 769, 306 S.E.2d 130 (1983).

§ 1-473. Affidavit and requisites.

Where a delivery is claimed, an affidavit must be made before the clerk of the court in which the action is required to be tried or before some person competent to administer oaths, by the plaintiff, or someone in his behalf, showing —

(1) That the plaintiff is the owner of the property claimed (particularly describing it), or is lawfully entitled to its possession by virtue of a special property therein, the facts in respect to which must be set forth.
(2) That the property is wrongfully detained by the defendant.
(3) The alleged cause of the detention, according to his best knowledge, information and belief.
(4) That the property has not been taken for tax, assessment or fine, pursuant to a statute; or seized under an execution or attachment against the property of the plaintiff; or, if so seized, that it is, by statute, exempt from such seizure; and,
(5) The actual value of the property. (C.C.P., s. 177; 1881, c. 134; Code, s. 322; Rev., s. 791; C.S., s. 831.)

Broad Language. — The words of this section are as broad as can well be imagined, and include every case, with four specified exceptions, where the plaintiff makes an affidavit that he is entitled to the possession of certain personal property, and that it is wrongfully detained by the defendant, and gives the required bond. Jones v. Ward, 77 N.C. 337 (1877).

Under this section there is no limitation or restriction put upon the plaintiff, who seeks to recover personal property and have the same immediately delivered to him, except that the same has not been taken for tax assessments or fines pursuant to a statute, or seized under an execution or attachment against the property of the plaintiff, or, if seized, that it is by statute exempt from such seizure. Mitchell v. Sims, 124 N.C. 411, 32 S.E. 735 (1899).

Application of Section. — It is only in cases when the plaintiff seeks to have the property delivered to him immediately, and to have the possession pending the action, as in the old action of replevin, that the affidavit and bond are required. Jarman v. Ward, 67 N.C. 32 (1872).

The affidavit required by this section is indispensable to maintain claim and delivery. Griffith v. Richmond, 126 N.C. 377, 35 S.E. 620 (1900).

And in making the affidavit this section must be strictly followed. Hirsh v. J.D. Whitehead & Co., 65 N.C. 516 (1871).

And plaintiff should set forth his special interest in the property. Cooper v. Evans, 174 N.C. 412, 93 S.E. 897 (1917).

The deputy of the clerk of the superior court is authorized to take the affidavit of the plaintiff and to order the seizure of personal property in an action of claim and delivery. Jackson v. Buchanan, 89 N.C. 74 (1883).

Burden of Proof. — In claim and delivery proceedings the burden is on the plaintiff to establish a cause of action. Smith v. Cook, 196 N.C. 558, 146 S.E. 229 (1929).

Claimant Authorized to Take Possession of Property upon Execution of Bond. — Under this section when the immediate delivery of the property is sought, the broad language of the statute gives the right to the claimant, upon his executing the bond required by law, to take the property from the possession of any person, even from an officer of the law. Mitchell v. Sims, 124 N.C. 411, 32 S.E. 735 (1899).

Applied in GMAC v. Waugh, 207 N.C. 717, 178 S.E. 85 (1935).

Cited in McKinney v. Sutphin, 196 N.C. 318, 145 S.E. 621 (1928); Keith Tractor & Implement Co. v. McLamb, 252 N.C. 760, 114 S.E.2d 668 (1960); General Tire & Rubber Co. v. Distributors, Inc., 253 N.C. 459, 117 S.E.2d 479 (1960).

§ 1-474. Order of seizure and delivery to plaintiff.

(a) Order. — The clerk of court may, upon notice and hearing as provided in G.S. 1-474.1 and upon the giving by the plaintiff of the undertaking prescribed in G.S. 1-475, require the sheriff of the county where the property claimed is located to take the property from the defendant and deliver it to the plaintiff. The act of the clerk in issuing or refusing to issue the order to the sheriff is a judicial act and may be appealed pursuant to G.S. 1-301.1 to the judge of the district or superior court having jurisdiction of the principal action.

(b) Expiration of Certain Orders. — When delivery of property is claimed from a debtor who allegedly defaulted on his payments for personal property purchased under a conditional sale contract, a purchase money security agreement or on a loan secured by personal property, an order of seizure and delivery to the plaintiff for that property expires 60 days after it is issued. (C.C.P., s. 178; Code, s. 323; Rev., s. 792; C.S., s. 832; 1973, c. 472, s. 1; 1985, c. 736; 1999-216, s. 6.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-216, s. 6, effective January 1, 2000, and applicable to all orders or judgments subject to this act that are entered on or after that date, in subsection (a), substituted "the" for "said" following "take" in the first sentence, inserted "pursuant to G.S. 1-301.1" in the second sentence, and made a minor punctuation change.

CASE NOTES

Summons Necessary to Invoke Jurisdiction. — In an action for the claim and delivery of personal property, the issuing of a summons is necessary to give the clerk jurisdiction to make the order to the sheriff, requiring him to take such property and deliver the same to the plaintiff, and an order to that effect without such summons is no justification to the sheriff or the defendant for any action in the premises. Potter v. Mardre, 74 N.C. 36 (1876).

Issuance of Order Is Ministerial Act. — In issuing the order, the clerk does not represent the court, whose officer he is, and as in numerous cases he is authorized to do, under the statute, but he performs a ministerial act, peremptorily enjoined, and exercises a function belonging to the office. Jackson v. Buchanan, 89 N.C. 74 (1883).

Which May Be Performed by Deputy Clerk. — The clerk of the superior court, in making the order of seizure of property in the provisional remedy of claim and delivery, only does a ministerial and not a judicial act or service, and therefore a deputy clerk might make such order. Jackson v. Buchanan, 89 N.C. 74 (1883); Evans v. Etheridge, 96 N.C. 42, 1 S.E. 633 (1887).

Dismissal of Action by Plaintiff After Receipt of Property Prohibited. — In an action of claim and delivery it is not competent to the plaintiff, after the property is put into his possession by process of law, to move to dismiss the action and fail to file a complaint, thereby raising no issue and depriving the defendant of an opportunity to assert his right. Manix v. Howard, 82 N.C. 125 (1880).

Questions raised by defendants involving substantial rights can be decided only when the case is heard on its merits. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Smith, 24 N.C. App. 133, 210 S.E.2d 212 (1974), cert. denied, 286 N.C. 420, 211 S.E.2d 801 (1975).

Stated in Hutchison v. Bank of N.C., 392 F. Supp. 888 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

§ 1-474.1. Notice of hearing; waiver; permissible form of notice and waiver.

(a) The clerk of court, upon the request of the plaintiff, shall issue a notice to the defendant setting a time and place for a hearing before the clerk which shall not be less than 10 days from the date of service of said notice upon the defendant. The notice shall be served on the defendant in any manner provided by the Rules of Civil Procedure for the service of summons. Upon the request of the plaintiff the notice shall contain an order enjoining the defendant from willfully disposing of the property in any manner, from removing or permitting the removal of the property from the State of North Carolina, or from causing or permitting willful damage or destruction of the property. If in a trial on the merits it is determined that the plaintiff was entitled to the possession of the property, and the defendant after service of notice of the hearing shall have willfully disposed of the property, removed or permitted the removal of the property from the State of North Carolina, or caused or permitted its willful damage or destruction, the defendant may be found in contempt of court and may be fined or imprisoned by the court as provided by law.

(b) Waiver of the rights to notice and hearing shall not be permitted except as set forth herein. At any time subsequent to service of the notice of hearing provided in subsection (a), the clerk of court, upon the request of the plaintiff, shall mail to the defendant at his last known address a form by which the defendant may waive his right to the hearing. Upon the return of the form to the clerk of court, bearing the signature of the defendant and that of a witness to the defendant's signature (which witness shall not be a party to the action or an agent or employee of a party to the action), the clerk in his discretion may dispense with the necessity of a hearing and may proceed to issue the order of seizure prescribed by G.S. 1-474.

§ 1-475. Plaintiff's undertaking.

The plaintiff must give a written undertaking payable to the defendant, executed by one or more sufficient sureties, approved by the sheriff, to the effect that they are bound in double the value of the property, as stated in the affidavit for the prosecution of the action, for the return of the property to the defendant, with damages for its deterioration and detention if return can be had, and if for any cause return cannot be had, for the payment to him of such sum as may be recovered against the plaintiff for the value of the property at the time of the seizure, with interest thereon as damages for such seizure and detention. (C.C.P., s. 179; Code, s. 324; 1885, c. 50; Rev., s. 793; C.S., s. 833.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article discussing security as a pre-condition to provisional injunctive relief, see 52 N.C.L. Rev. 1091 (1974).

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Undertaking. — The required undertaking is for the protection of defendants, so that a fund might be established from which recovery could be had were it shown that the plaintiff was not lawfully entitled to the property or that the property was damaged or diminished in value through plaintiff's fault while plaintiff held possession of it. Marine Ecology Sys. v. Spooners Creek Yacht Harbor, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 726, 253 S.E.2d 613 (1979).

Judgment on Bond Should Be in Alternative. — A judgment on the forthcoming bond in claim and delivery proceedings should be in the alternative for the return of the property, or, if that cannot be had, for its value with damages. Grubbs v. Stephenson, 117 N.C. 66, 23 S.E. 97 (1895).

Value of Property Should Be Ascertained. — For the benefit of the sureties upon the undertaking the value of the property at the time of seizure should also be ascertained, as they are liable for such value, not exceeding the indebtedness secured. Griffith v. Richmond, 126 N.C. 377, 35 S.E. 620 (1900).

Where, in claim and delivery proceedings, the vendor of the property, who had retained title until the notes for its purchase should be paid, intervened and was adjudged to be entitled to the property, the plaintiff (purchaser from the vendee), who had given bond for the return of the property to the defendant is entitled to have its value ascertained and should be adjudged to pay that amount, not exceeding, however, the balance due the vendor. Barrington v. Skinner, 117 N.C. 47, 23 S.E. 90 (1895).

Maximum Amount in Controversy Ordinarily Assigned as Value of Property. — Custom and prudence have established that plaintiffs will ordinarily assign to the property to be repossessed a value which represents the maximum amount in controversy over such property, where that figure is likely to be higher than the actual value of the property. This provides the maximum protection for the party from whom the property has been taken by the claim and delivery proceeding and is consistent with the notions of due process. Marine Ecology Sys. v. Spooners Creek Yacht Harbor, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 726, 253 S.E.2d 613 (1979).

But Valuation in Undertaking Not Conclusive. — The valuation made in an affidavit or undertaking may be some evidence of value but is not conclusive. Marine Ecology Sys. v. Spooners Creek Yacht Harbor, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 726, 253 S.E.2d 613 (1979).

And Plaintiff Not Prevented from Proving Actual Value at Trial. — The affidavit and undertaking in a claim and delivery action, intended as they are for the defendant's protection, are not made as conclusive declarations of value and, accordingly, defendant is not entitled to take those valuations and seek, by collateral estoppel, to prevent plaintiff from proving at trial the actual value of the property, using market value or other applicable standards of valuation. Marine Ecology Sys. v. Spooners Creek Yacht Harbor, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 726, 253 S.E.2d 613 (1979).

Measure of Damages Where Property Cannot Be Returned. — Where defendant recovers judgment and the property cannot be returned to him, the measure of damages is the value of the property at the time of its seizure, and an instruction that defendant would be entitled to recover, if plaintiff's seizure of the property were wrongful. C.I.T. Corp. v. Watkins, 208 N.C. 448, 181 S.E. 270 (1935).

The plaintiff and surety are not liable where sheriff seized and retained certain property not specified or described in the affidavit. Williams v. Perkins, 192 N.C. 175, 134 S.E. 417 (1926).

Voluntary Nonsuit by Plaintiff. — Where the plaintiff has taken a voluntary nonsuit after the property had been taken in claim and delivery and therein sold, the defendant in that action may maintain an independent action for damages, against the plaintiff in the former action and the surety on his bond, given in conformity with this section, wherein nominal damages at least are recoverable, with actual damages for the value of the property at the time of the seizure under claim and delivery. Davis Bros. Co. v. Wallace, 190 N.C. 543, 130 S.E. 176 (1925).

§ 1-476. Sheriff's duties.

Upon the receipt of the order from the clerk with the plaintiff's undertaking, the sheriff shall forthwith take the property described in the affidavit, if it is in the possession of the defendant or his agent, and retain it in his custody. He shall also, without delay, serve on the defendant a copy of the affidavit, notice, and undertaking, by delivering the same to him personally, if he can be found, or to his agent, from whose possession the property is taken; or, if neither can be found, by leaving them at the usual place of abode of either, with some person of suitable age and discretion. (C.C.P., s. 179; Code, s. 324; 1885, c. 50; Rev., s. 793; C.S., s. 834.)

CASE NOTES

The sheriff or his deputy is not the agent of the party who sued out the claim and delivery, but he is an officer to carry out the mandate of the court. Williams v. Perkins, 192 N.C. 175, 134 S.E. 417 (1926).

Independent Action May Be Maintained Against Sheriff. — Where the sheriff has wrongfully seized certain personal property of the defendant in claim and delivery, not described therein as the subject of such seizure, the defendant may maintain an independent action for damages against the sheriff. Williams v. Perkins, 192 N.C. 175, 134 S.E. 417 (1926).

§ 1-477. Exceptions to undertaking; liability of sheriff.

The defendant may, within three days after the service of a copy of the affidavit and undertaking, notify the sheriff personally, or by leaving a copy at his office in the county seat of the county, that he excepts to the sufficiency of the sureties. If he fails to do so, he is deemed to have waived all objection to them. When the defendant excepts, the sureties must justify on notice, in like manner as upon bail on arrest. The sheriff is responsible for the sufficiency of the sureties until the objection to them is either waived as above provided, or until they justify, or until new sureties are substituted and justify. If the defendant excepts to the sureties he cannot reclaim the property as provided in the succeeding section [G.S. 1-478]. (C.C.P., s. 180; Code, s. 325; Rev., s. 794; C.S., s. 835.)

CASE NOTES

Sheriff Liable as Surety. — In delivering property to a defendant, when seized in claim and delivery proceedings without taking a proper undertaking and requiring the same to be justified, a sheriff becomes liable as a surety thereon. Wells v. Bourne, 113 N.C. 82, 18 S.E. 106 (1893).

Measure of Damages. — The measure of liability is the delivery of the property to the plaintiff with the damages for its deterioration, or, failing delivery, the value of the property. Wells v. Bourne, 113 N.C. 82, 18 S.E. 106 (1893).

Proof. — Where plaintiff, in an action against a sheriff to recover damages for his failure to take a proper undertaking for the return of property seized by him at the instance of the plaintiff and adjudged to be returned, failed to show that execution issued for the property and against the sureties on the undertaking had been returned unsatisfied, he failed to show, and could not recover, actual damage against such sheriff. Wells v. Bourne, 113 N.C. 82, 18 S.E. 106 (1893).

When Objection to Undertaking Must Be Made. — The objection that what purports to be the undertaking of the plaintiff, in such action, was not properly executed, comes too late when made at the trial term. Spencer v. Bell, 109 N.C. 39, 13 S.E. 704 (1891).

§ 1-478. Defendant's undertaking for replevy.

At any time before the delivery of the property to the plaintiff, the defendant may, if he does not except to the sureties of the plaintiff, require the return thereof, upon giving to the sheriff a written undertaking, payable to the plaintiff, executed by one or more sufficient sureties, to the effect that they are bound in double the value of the property, as stated in the affidavit of the plaintiff, for the delivery thereof to the plaintiff, with damages, not less than the difference in value of the property at the time of the execution of the undertaking and the value of the property at the time of its delivery to the plaintiff, together with damages for detention and the costs, if delivery can be had, and if delivery cannot be had, for the payment to him of such sum as may be recovered against the defendant for the value of the property at the time of the wrongful taking or detention, with interest thereon, as damages for such taking and detention, together with the costs of the action. If a return of the property is not so required, within three days after the taking and service of notice to the defendant, it must be delivered to the plaintiff, unless it is claimed by an interpleader.

The defendant's undertaking shall include liability for costs, as provided in this section, only where the undertaking is given in actions instituted in the superior court. (C.C.P., s. 181; Code, s. 326; 1885, c. 50, s. 2; Rev., s. 795; 1911, c. 17; C.S., s. 836; 1961, c. 462.)

Cross References. — As to judgment in an action for the return of personal property, see § 1-230.

CASE NOTES

Liability of Surety. — The principle, applying to ordinary contracts, that a surety is released from liability by an extension of time given to his principal does not apply to a surety on a replevin bond given under the provisions of this section, where the defendant retains possession of the property. V. Wallace & Sons v. Robinson, 185 N.C. 530, 117 S.E. 508 (1923).

The liability of the surety on a replevy bond in claim and delivery is not required to be determined in a separate action. Federal Fin. & Credit Co. v. Teeter, 196 N.C. 232, 145 S.E. 8 (1928).

The sureties to an undertaking, on behalf of the defendant, in claim and delivery are not liable for any debt which the plaintiff may recover in the action. Hall v. Tillman, 103 N.C. 276, 9 S.E. 194 (1889).

Liability Where Bond Voluntary. — Where an action of claim and delivery is instituted in a court inferior to the superior court, the defendant is not required by this section to give bond for the payment by him of the costs of the action if a judgment adverse to him is rendered in the action. However, when the bond is so conditioned it is not rendered void and unenforceable against either the defendant or his surety. In the absence of fraud, mistake, or other matters entitling them or either of them to equitable relief, both the defendant and his surety are bound according to the terms of the bond, which they executed voluntarily. Wright v. Nash, 205 N.C. 221, 171 S.E. 48 (1933).

The recovery against the surety can in no event exceed the penalty of the bond. Boyd v. Walters, 201 N.C. 378, 160 S.E. 451 (1931).

Summary Judgment Against Sureties. — Summary judgment may be rendered against the defendant's sureties on an undertaking to retain the property in an action of claim and delivery, but the judgment must be such as is authorized by this section and § 1-230. Hall v. Tillman, 103 N.C. 276, 9 S.E. 194 (1889).

Form of Judgment Against Surety. — Where the defendant in claim and delivery replevies the property, giving bond for the retention to cover loss in the action, the form of the judgment against the surety on the bond should be for the full amount of the bond, to be discharged upon return of the property and the payment of damages and costs recovered by the plaintiff. Boyd v. Walters, 201 N.C. 378, 160 S.E. 451 (1931).

Sureties' Defenses. — The surety on a replevin bond in claim and delivery, under the requirements of this section that the property shall be delivered to the plaintiff, or, if it cannot be, the value at the time it was delivered to the defendant, may not, upon adjudication in plaintiff's favor, set up the defense that it had been taken by another, or prevented by an act of God, or that another than the plaintiff had a superior title to the property by mortgage or otherwise. Garner v. Quakenbush, 188 N.C. 180, 124 S.E. 154 (1924).

The remedy of a surety on a replevin bond to contest his liability as such under a consent judgment entered by the court against the defendant, his principal, is by appeal from the judgment, or by an independent action in case of fraud, and not by his motion in the case. V. Wallace & Sons v. Robinson, 185 N.C. 530, 117 S.E. 508 (1923).

Recovery of Costs. — The entire costs of prosecuting an action involving the title to the property should be recovered by a plaintiff who prevails against the defendant and the sureties on the bond. Hall v. Tillman, 110 N.C. 220, 14 S.E. 745 (1892).

§ 1-479. Qualification and justification of defendant's sureties.

The qualification of the defendant's sureties, and their justification, is as prescribed in respect to bail upon an order of arrest. The defendant's sureties, upon notice to the plaintiff of not less than two nor more than six days, shall justify before the court or judge, and upon this justification the sheriff must deliver the property to the defendant. The sheriff is responsible for the defendant's sureties until justification is completed or expressly waived, and he may retain the property until that time; but if they, or others in their place, fail to justify at the time and place appointed, he must deliver the property to the plaintiff. (C.C.P., ss. 182, 183; Code, ss. 327, 328; Rev., ss. 796, 797; C.S., s. 837; 1971, c. 268, s. 30.1.)

§ 1-480. Property concealed in buildings.

If the property, or any part of it, is concealed in a building or enclosure, the sheriff shall publicly demand its delivery. If it is not delivered he must cause the building or enclosure to be broken open, and take the property into his possession. If necessary, he may call to his aid the power of his county, and if the property is upon the person the sheriff or other officer may seize the person, and search for and take it. (C.C.P., s. 184; Code, s. 329; Rev., s. 798; C.S., s. 838.)

CASE NOTES

Although this section permits forcible entry, no similar exception has been promulgated with respect to the execution of writs of possession pursuant to § 1-313(4). Red House Furn. Co. v. Smith, 310 N.C. 617, 313 S.E.2d 569 (1984).

An officer cannot break open an outer door or window of a dwelling against the consent of the owner for the purpose of making a levy on the goods of the owner. Red House Furn. Co. v. Smith, 310 N.C. 617, 313 S.E.2d 569 (1984).

Applied in Red House Furn. Co. v. Smith, 63 N.C. App. 769, 306 S.E.2d 130 (1983).

§ 1-481. Care and delivery of seized property.

When the sheriff has taken property, as provided in this Article, he must keep it in a secure place, and deliver it to the party entitled thereto, upon receiving his lawful fees for taking and his necessary expenses for keeping it. (C.C.P., s. 185; Code, s. 330; Rev., s. 799; C.S., s. 839.)

CASE NOTES

Expenses of Seizing Included in Costs. — It is proper to allow in the bill of costs the expense of seizing and caring for the property. Hendricks v. Ireland, 162 N.C. 523, 77 S.E. 1011 (1913).

Cited in McKinney v. Sutphin, 196 N.C. 318, 145 S.E. 621 (1928).

§ 1-482. Property claimed by third person; proceedings.

When the property taken by the sheriff is claimed by any person other than the plaintiff or defendant the claimant may intervene upon filing an affidavit of his title and right to the possession of the property, stating the grounds of such right and title, and upon his delivering to the sheriff an undertaking in an amount double the value of the property specified in his affidavit, for the delivery of the property to the person entitled to it, and for the payment of all such costs and damages as may be awarded against him, this undertaking to be executed by one or more sufficient sureties, accompanied by their affidavits that they are each worth double the value of the property. A copy of this undertaking and accompanying affidavit shall be served by the sheriff on the plaintiff and defendant at least 10 days before the return day of the summons in the action, when the court trying it shall order a jury to be impaneled to inquire in whom is the right to the property specified in plaintiff's complaint. The finding of the jury is conclusive as to the parties then in court, and the court shall adjudge accordingly, unless it is reversed upon appeal. However, this section shall not be construed to prevent any such intervener or third person from intervening and asserting his claim to the property, or any part thereof, without giving bond as herein required, where such intervener or other third person does not ask for possession of the property pending the trial of the issue. (1793, c. 389, s. 3, P.R.; R.C., c. 7, s. 10; C.C.P., s. 186; Code, s. 331; Rev., s. 800; 1913, c. 188; C.S., s. 840; 1933, c. 131; 1971, c. 268, s. 30.2.)

Cross References. — For requisites of affidavit, see § 1-473.

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — It is the purpose of the section to allow one interpleading to come into the action in its course, allege and prove his title and right of possession of the property upon their real merits, and, if he shall succeed, take it without the delay and expense incident to a separate and independent action that otherwise he might be forced to bring. This seems to be the just and reasonable view, and the one that harmonizes with well-settled principles of the law applicable. Claywell v. McGimpsey, 15 N.C. 89 (1833); Churchill v. Lee, 77 N.C. 341 (1877); Hudson v. Wetherington, 79 N.C. 3 (1878); Wallace Bros. v. Robeson, 100 N.C. 206 (1888).

The right of an outside claimant to intervene is well settled by precedent. McKesson v. Mendenhall, 64 N.C. 286 (1870); Toms v. Warson, 66 N.C. 417 (1872); Clemmons v. Hampton, 70 N.C. 534 (1874); Bruff v. Stern, 81 N.C. 183 (1879); Sims v. Goettle Bros., 82 N.C. 268 (1880).

Intervener Restricted to Question of Title. — It is well settled that in an action involving the title to property an interpleader is restricted to the issue as to his title or claim to the property, and cannot raise or litigate questions or rights which do not affect such titles. McLean v. Douglas, 28 N.C. 233 (1846); Dawson v. Thigpen, 137 N.C. 462, 49 S.E. 959 (1905).

In a proceeding under this section the intervener is not called on or required, and indeed he is not permitted to question the validity of the plaintiff's claim against the defendant, nor to file any answer thereto which denies or tends to deny its validity. On the contrary, the intervener has himself become the actor in the suit, and, on authority, is restricted to the issue whether his claim of right and title is superior to that of the original plaintiff. Cotton Mills v. Weil, 129 N.C. 452, 40 S.E. 218 (1901); Maynard v. Insurance Co., 132 N.C. 711, 44 S.E. 405 (1903); Mitchell v. Talley, 182 N.C. 683, 109 S.E. 882 (1921); Hill v. Patillo, 187 N.C. 531, 122 S.E. 306 (1924).

Intervener Must Prove Title. — In proceedings in attachment one who interpleads under this section is an actor upon whom rests the burden of proving his title to the property he claims. And this is so, although the property was in his possession when seized by the sheriff. Wallace Bros. v. Robeson, 100 N.C. 206, 6 S.E. 650 (1888); Cotton Mills v. Weil, 129 N.C. 452, 40 S.E. 218 (1901).

Appearance Waives Objections. — A party to an action is deemed to have waived his right to object to the sufficiency of an affidavit of an attorney for an interpleader or intervener, as not having been made in accordance with the requirements of § 1-473, by appearing at the taking of depositions in his behalf and cross-examining his witness. Allen v. McMillan, 191 N.C. 517, 132 S.E. 276 (1926).

Voluntary Recognition of Jurisdiction. — Where the court has allowed a third party to interplead and ordered him to be made a party to the action, an appearance of an original party to the action must first attack the validity of the order, if he so desires and a voluntary recognition that the court has acquired jurisdiction of a party is conclusive. Allen v. McMillan, 191 N.C. 517, 132 S.E. 276 (1926).

Separate Trial. — A separate trial for the intervener is discretionary with the trial judge. Cotton Mills v. Weil, 129 N.C. 452, 40 S.E. 218 (1901).

Effect of Three Years' Delay by Intervener. — In an action for the possession of personal property, under this section, a third party claiming such property loses his right to be made a party to the suit after a lapse of three years from the filing of his affidavit and his motion to allow him to interplead. Clemmons v. Hampton, 70 N.C. 534 (1874).

Where the defendant consents to a judgment against himself and sureties, the sureties cannot be allowed to intervene as parties and move to have the judgment vacated, when they have not offered to interplead and claim the property in the manner prescribed by this section. McDonald v. McBryde, 117 N.C. 125, 23 S.E. 103 (1895).

Nonsuit by Plaintiff. — In an action to recover possession of personal property, where the defendant has replevied the property and a third person has interpleaded, the plaintiff may take a nonsuit, but the action goes on for the interpleader. Dawson v. Thigpen, 137 N.C. 462, 49 S.E. 959 (1905).

Jurisdiction of Justice of the Peace. — A justice of the peace may entertain and try an interplea to determine the title although the value of the property exceeds fifty dollars ($50.00). Grambling v. Dickey, 118 N.C. 986, 24 S.E. 671 (1896).

When Garnishee Bank a Mere Stakeholder. — Where funds of a nonresident defendant are attached in a local bank that maintains the position of a mere stakeholder, and alleges ownership of its forwarding bank, and asks that the forwarding bank be made a party to the action, the forwarding bank, when brought in, may make its own claim of title and thus cure the defect, if any, in the proceedings in this respect, it being a matter of procedure. Temple v. Eades Hay Co., 184 N.C. 239, 114 S.E. 162 (1922).

The bond required of an intervener by this section has no application in attachment, where the garnishee bank holding the funds attached does so as a stakeholder, not claiming them, but only seeks to hold the same for the adjudication of the court between two conflicting claimants. Temple v. Eades Hay Co., 184 N.C. 239, 114 S.E. 162 (1922).

Where the plaintiffs attach property and bring action against a husband and wife to have a deed from the husband to the wife set aside and to subject the property attached to the payment of the judgment, the wife has a right to set up her claim to the property attached, and the refusal of the trial court to require her to give an interpleader bond under this section is not error. Unaka & City Nat'l Bank v. Lewis, 201 N.C. 148, 159 S.E. 312 (1931).

§ 1-483. Delivery of property to intervener.

Upon the filing by the claimant of the undertaking set forth in G.S. 1-482, the sheriff is not bound to keep the property, or to deliver it to the plaintiff; but may deliver it to the claimant, unless the plaintiff executes and delivers to him a similar undertaking to that required of claimant; and notwithstanding such claim, when so made, the sheriff may retain the property a reasonable time to demand such indemnity. (1793, c. 389, s. 3, P.R.; R.C., c. 7, s. 10; Code, s. 332; Rev., s. 801; C.S., s. 841.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — This section is intended only for the benefit of the sheriff, and to enable him to protect himself against the claim of the third party, by taking from the plaintiff an indemnity against such claim before he delivers the property to him. Clemmons v. Hampton, 70 N.C. 534 (1874).

Sheriff Must Take Security. — Under this section the property is not to be delivered to the intervener by the sheriff until the security is given. Bear v. Cohen, 65 N.C. 511 (1871).

§ 1-484. Sheriff to return papers in 10 days.

The sheriff must return the undertaking, notice and affidavit, with his proceedings thereon, to the court in which the action is pending within 10 days after taking the property mentioned therein. (C.C.P., s. 187; Code, s. 133; Rev., s. 802; C.S., s. 842.)

§ 1-484.1. Remedy not exclusive.

The provisions of this Article shall not be construed to preclude the use of attachment or any other ancillary remedy (upon the terms and subject to the conditions provided by law for the exercise thereof) simultaneously with the remedy of claim and delivery. (1973, c. 472, s. 2.1.)

Article 37.

Injunction.

§ 1-485. When preliminary injunction issued.

A preliminary injunction may be issued by order in accordance with the provisions of this Article. The order may be made by any judge of the superior court or any judge of the district court authorized to hear in-chambers matters in the following cases, and shall be issued by the clerk of the court in which the action is required to be tried:

(1) When it appears by the complaint that the plaintiff is entitled to the relief demanded, and this relief, or any part thereof, consists in restraining the commission or continuance of some act the commission or continuance of which, during the litigation, would produce injury to the plaintiff; or,

(2) When, during the litigation, it appears by affidavit that a party thereto is doing or threatens or is about to do, or is procuring or suffering some act to be done in violation of the rights of another party to the litigation respecting the subject of the action, and tending to render the judgment ineffectual; or,

(3) When, during the pendency of an action, it appears by affidavit of any person that the defendant threatens or is about to remove or dispose of his property, with intent to defraud the plaintiff. (C.C.P., ss. 188, 189; Code, ss. 334, 338; Rev., s. 806; C.S., s. 843; 1967, c. 954, s. 3; 1973, c. 66, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note discussing preliminary injunctions in employment noncompetition cases in light of A.E.P. Industries, Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983), see 63 N.C.L. Rev. 222 (1984).

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Nature of Injunction.
III. Grounds for Relief.
A. Character of Relief in General.
B. Availability of Other Relief.
C. Application of Section.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

This section is constitutional. Jolliff v. Winslow, 24 N.C. App. 107, 210 S.E.2d 221 (1974), appeal dismissed, 286 N.C. 545, 212 S.E.2d 656 (1975).

This section is merely a statutory recognition of the abolition of the distinction between special and common injunctions, a distinction existing under the old practice. Since the adoption of the Code all injunctions are simply ancillary proceedings and are not available to anyone the basis of whose claims for such relief does not come within at least one of the enumerated classes of this section. Person v. Person, 154 N.C. 453, 70 S.E. 752 (1911).

Issuance of an injunction presupposes, as an essential requisite, the pendency of an action which is receiving or will receive a judicial determination. Armstrong v. Kinsell, 164 N.C. 125, 80 S.E. 235 (1913).

Restraint Sought Must Be Germane to Subject of Action. — This section does not permit injunction to issue when the restraint sought is not germane to the subject of the action. Jackson v. Jernigan, 216 N.C. 401, 5 S.E.2d 143 (1939).

Notice and Hearing Required. — A preliminary injunction, unlike a temporary restraining order, requires notice to the adverse party and a hearing. Jolliff v. Winslow, 24 N.C. App. 107, 210 S.E.2d 221 (1974), appeal dismissed, 286 N.C. 545, 212 S.E.2d 656 (1975).

Court May Consider Affidavits. — Both before and after the adoption of the new Rules of Civil Procedure, it was and is proper for the court to consider evidence by affidavits in show cause hearings for injunctions, and subdivision (1) of this section does not prohibit this. State ex rel. Morgan v. Dare to Be Great, Inc., 15 N.C. App. 275, 189 S.E.2d 802 (1972).

When proceeding under subdivision (1) of this section for a preliminary injunction, the court is not limited to what appears in the complaint. The courts have historically heard motions for preliminary injunction on affidavits. State ex rel. Morgan v. Dare to Be Great, Inc., 15 N.C. App. 275, 189 S.E.2d 802 (1972).

Restraining Order and Injunction Distinguished. — This section in nowise abolishes the distinction between restraining orders and injunctions. The distinctive features between these remedial agencies remain and are respected to the utmost extent by the courts. A restraining order can be issued in any cause by any judge of the superior court anywhere in the State, and made returnable at any time within 20 days, at any place, before a judge residing in or assigned to or holding by exchange the courts within the district in which the county where the cause is pending is situated; but a perpetual injunction can be granted only in the county where the cause is pending, and by the judge who tries the cause at the final hearing. Hamilton v. Icard, 112 N.C. 589, 17 S.E. 519 (1893); Kinston v. Wooten, 150 N.C. 295, 63 S.E. 1061 (1909).

An injunction may be granted by a judge outside the county in which the main cause is pending since this is an ancillary proceeding not involving the merits of the cause. Parker v. McPhail, 112 N.C. 502, 16 S.E. 848 (1893); Ledbetter v. Pinner, 120 N.C. 455, 27 S.E. 123 (1897).

Mandamus and Mandatory Injunction Distinguished. — In North Carolina, where both legal and equitable jurisdiction is vested in the same court, there is very little difference in its practical results between proceedings in mandamus and mandatory injunction, the former is permissible when the action is to enforce performance of duties existent for the benefit of the public, and the latter is confined usually to causes of an equitable nature, and to the enforcement of rights which solely concerns individuals. Clinton-Dunn Tel. Co. v. Carolina Tel. & Tel. Co., 159 N.C. 9, 74 S.E. 636 (1912).

Good Faith and Reasonable Diligence

Necessary. — Before injunctive relief will be granted it is necessary that the plaintiff show his good faith and reasonable diligence in instituting his action. Jones v. Commissioners of Person County, 107 N.C. 248, 12 S.E. 69 (1890).

Increasing Bond. — Under this section the garnishees may be restrained and enjoined from making further payments on their indebtedness to the defendant, until the final determination of the action, but the defendant and the garnishees may move that the bond required of the plaintiffs shall be increased in amount, to the end that said defendant and the garnishees shall be fully protected against loss or damage resulting from the injunction. Newberry v. Meadows Fertilizer Co., 203 N.C. 330, 166 S.E. 79 (1932).

The burden is upon the applicant for an interlocutory injunction to prove a probability of substantial injury to the applicant from the continuance of the activity of which it complains to the final determination of the action. Board of Provincial Elders v. Jones, 273 N.C. 174, 159 S.E.2d 545 (1968).

Findings and Proceedings Are Not Binding at Trial on Merits. — The findings of fact and other proceedings of the judge who hears the application for an interlocutory injunction are not binding on the parties at the trial on the merits. Indeed, these findings and proceedings are not proper matters for the consideration of the court or jury in passing on the issues determinable at the final hearing. Schloss v. Jamison, 258 N.C. 271, 128 S.E.2d 590 (1962).

The constitutionality of a statute or ordinance should not be decided in an interlocutory injunction on pleadings and an ex parte affidavit, but should be determined at the hearing on the merits, when all the facts can be shown. Schloss v. Jamison, 258 N.C. 271, 128 S.E.2d 590 (1962).

The constitutional prohibition of trial of "issues of fact" by the Supreme Court extends to issues of fact as heretofore understood, and does not hinder that tribunal from trying such questions of fact as may be involved in a consideration of the propriety of continuing or vacating an order of a provisional injunction. Heilig v. Stokes, 63 N.C. 612 (1869).

Discretion of Court. — It ordinarily lies in the sound discretion of the court to determine whether or not a temporary injunction will be granted on hearing pleadings and affidavits only. In the exercise of such discretion the court should consider the inconvenience and damage to defendant as well as the benefit that will accrue to the plaintiff. Western Conference of Original Free Will Baptists v. Creech, 256 N.C. 128, 123 S.E.2d 619 (1962).

It lies within the discretion of the court to determine whether a preliminary injunction will be granted upon pleadings and affidavits. In exercising its discretion the court should consider the inconvenience and damage to defendant as well as the benefit that will accrue to the plaintiff. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 58 N.C. App. 155, 293 S.E.2d 232 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

Issuance of a preliminary injunction is a matter of discretion to be exercised by the hearing judge after a careful balancing of the equities. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

It is proper for the court to take into account probable injuries to persons not parties to the action and to the public if a preliminary injunction were to be issued. Iredell Digestive Disease Clinic v. Petrozza, 92 N.C. App. 21, 373 S.E.2d 449 (1988), aff'd, 324 N.C. 327, 377 S.E.2d 750 (1989).

Appeal. — On appeal the reviewing court is not bound by the findings or ruling of the court below in injunction cases, but may review the evidence on appeal. Even so there is a presumption that the judgment entered below is correct, and the burden is upon appellant to assign and show error. Western Conference of Original Free Will Baptists v. Creech, 256 N.C. 128, 123 S.E.2d 619 (1962); State ex rel. Edmisten v. Challenge, Inc., 54 N.C. App. 513, 284 S.E.2d 333 (1981).

In reviewing the denial of a preliminary injunction, the appellate court is not bound by the findings of the lower court, but there is a presumption that the lower court decision was correct. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 58 N.C. App. 155, 293 S.E.2d 232 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

A decision by the trial court to issue or deny an injunction will generally be upheld on appeal if there is ample competent evidence to support the decision, even though the evidence may be conflicting and the appellate court could substitute its own findings. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 58 N.C. App. 155, 293 S.E.2d 232 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983); Wrightsville Winds Townhouses Homeowners' Assoc. v. Miller, 100 N.C. App. 531, 397 S.E.2d 345 (1990), cert. denied,.

On appeal from an order of superior court granting or denying a preliminary injunction, an appellate court is not bound by the findings, but may review and weigh the evidence and find facts for itself. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983); Iredell Digestive Disease Clinic v. Petrozza, 92 N.C. App. 21, 373 S.E.2d 449 (1988), aff'd, Hampton v. Hardin, 88 N.C. 592 (1883).

In reviewing the grant of a preliminary injunction, the appellate court may weigh the evidence and find facts for itself. Wrightsville Winds Townhouses Homeowners' Assoc. v. Miller, 100 N.C. App. 531, 397 S.E.2d 345

(1990), cert. denied, 328 N.C. 275, 400 S.E.2d 463 (1991).

Order Setting Injunction Bond Remanded Where Facts and Amount of Bond in Dispute. — Where order setting an injunction bond at $20,000 contained no findings of fact or conclusions of law relating to the amount of the bond, and facts were in dispute, remand was necessary for proper determination of the amount of the security bond. Iverson v. TM One, Inc., 92 N.C. App. 161, 374 S.E.2d 160 (1988).

Applied in River Dev. Corp. v. Parker Tree Farms, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 1, 182 S.E.2d 211 (1971); Smith's Cycles, Inc. v. American Honda Motor Co., 26 N.C. App. 76, 214 S.E.2d 785 (1975).

Cited in Collins v. North Carolina State College, 198 N.C. 337, 151 S.E. 646 (1930); Hopkins v. Swain, 206 N.C. 439, 174 S.E. 409 (1934); Carpenter v. Boyles, 213 N.C. 432, 196 S.E. 850 (1938); Brown v. Williams, 242 N.C. 648, 89 S.E.2d 260 (1955); Town of Hillsborough v. Smith, 10 N.C. App. 70, 178 S.E.2d 18 (1970).

II. NATURE OF INJUNCTION.

The remedy authorized by this section is an ancillary one afforded by the courts of equity for the purpose of preserving the status quo pending the action. It will issue to prevent an injury being committed or seriously threatened. In addition, a mandatory injunction may be issued to restore the status wrongfully disturbed. Seaboard Air Line R.R. v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 237 N.C. 88, 74 S.E.2d 430 (1953).

Under North Carolina statutes and procedure, an injunction is not a cause of action or a lawsuit in and of itself, but is a remedy which is ancillary to a pending suit. Lynch v. Snepp, 350 F. Supp. 1134 (W.D.N.C. 1972), rev'd on other grounds, 472 F.2d 769 (4th Cir. 1973).

Where no complaint or summons has been filed, no action has been instituted and therefore there is no pending action to which the injunction can be ancillary. Lynch v. Snepp, 350 F. Supp. 1134 (W.D.N.C. 1972), rev'd on other grounds, 472 F.2d 769 (4th Cir. 1973).

A preliminary injunction is interlocutory in nature, issued after notice and hearing, and restrains a party pending final determination on the merits. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

It is the purpose of a temporary injunction to maintain as nearly as possible the status quo. Western Conference of Original Free Will Baptists v. Creech, 256 N.C. 128, 123 S.E.2d 619 (1962).

The purpose of a preliminary injunction is ordinarily to preserve the status quo pending trial on the merits. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

Preliminary injunction serves as an equitable policing measure to prevent the parties from harming one another during the litigation; to keep the parties, while the suit goes on, as far as possible in the respective positions they occupied when the suit began. Jolliff v. Winslow, 24 N.C. App. 107, 210 S.E.2d 221 (1974), appeal dismissed, 286 N.C. 545, 212 S.E.2d 656 (1975); Musten v. Musten, 36 N.C. App. 618, 244 S.E.2d 699 (1978).

Extraordinary and Provisional Remedy. — Although the specific details for the granting of injunctions are set out in the section, an injunction is still regarded as an extraordinary and provisional remedy, recourse to which may only be had by a party who has exhausted all available remedies, or unless it be made to appear that the party will suffer irreparable injury unless such relief is granted. Chambers v. Penland, 78 N.C. 53 (1878); Fink v. Stewart, 94 N.C. 484 (1886).

Injunction, being equitable in its nature and origin, must be administered upon equitable principles, except insofar as it may come within some plain statutory provision. Person v. Leary, 127 N.C. 114, 37 S.E. 149 (1900).

This section enlarges the power of the court to grant equitable relief, especially since the granting of the temporary injunction, herein provided, may be accompanied with the appointment of a receiver when necessary for the protection of the subject matter of the action. John L. Roper Lumber Co. v. Wallace, 93 N.C. 22 (1885).

III. GROUNDS FOR RELIEF.

A. Character of Relief in General.

An injunction can only operate in personam and unless jurisdiction of the party can be acquired, the attempted procedure is a nullity; and upon this principle proceedings to restrain the negotiation of a note in the hands of a holder, a nonresident and beyond the borders of the State, should be dismissed. Warlick v. Reynolds, 151 N.C. 606, 66 S.E. 657 (1910); Armstrong v. Kinsell, 164 N.C. 125, 80 S.E. 235 (1913).

The grant of a preliminary mandatory injunction is within the prerogative jurisdiction of courts of equity. Such preliminary injunctions are issued to preserve the status quo until upon final hearing the court may grant full relief, and are usually issued in cases where the defendant has proceeded knowingly in breach of contract or in willful disregard of an order of court. Seaboard Air Line R.R. v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 237 N.C. 88, 74 S.E.2d 430 (1953).

Mandatory Injunction May Be Issued for Protection of Easements and Proprietary Rights. — When it appears with reasonable certainty that the complainant is entitled to relief, the court will ordinarily issue the preliminary mandatory injunction for the protection of easements and proprietary rights. In such case it is not necessary to await the final hearing. If the asserted right is clear and its violation palpable, and the complainant has not slept on his rights, the writ will generally be issued without exclusive regard to the final determination of the merits and the defendant compelled to undo what he has done. Seaboard Air Line R.R. v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 237 N.C. 88, 74 S.E.2d 430 (1953).

Mandatory Injunction Should Not Be Issued Except in Case of Apparent Necessity. — A preliminary mandatory injunction on ex parte application should not be granted, except in case of apparent necessity for the purpose of restoring the status quo pending the litigation. Seaboard Air Line R.R. v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 237 N.C. 88, 74 S.E.2d 430 (1953).

Injury Must Be Immediate, Pressing, Irreparable, and Clearly Established. — As a rule a mandatory order will not be made as a preliminary injunction, except where the injury is immediate, pressing, irreparable, and clearly established. Seaboard Air Line R.R. v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 237 N.C. 88, 74 S.E.2d 430 (1953).

Injunctive relief is granted only when irreparable injury is real and immediate. This is especially true with reference to the issuance of a preliminary injunction. Board of Provincial Elders v. Jones, 273 N.C. 174, 159 S.E.2d 545 (1968).

B. Availability of Other Relief.

When proper relief can otherwise be had then no injunction will be issued, and where a party can obtain his relief by a motion in the original action he will not be permitted later to institute a new and independent action for the purpose of obtaining an injunction. Faison v. McIlwaine, 72 N.C. 312 (1875).

An injunction ordinarily will not be granted where there is an adequate legal remedy which is as practical and efficient as is the equitable remedy. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 58 N.C. App. 155, 293 S.E.2d 232 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

Irreparable Injury. — The rule in regard to the granting of an injunction on the ground that the injury complained of is irreparable in its nature is a strict one. The plaintiff must clearly show that the injury is peculiar in nature, one that cannot be repaired, put back again, or atoned for in damages. McKesson v. Hennessee, 66 N.C. 473 (1872); Bond v. Wool, 107 N.C. 139, 12 S.E. 281 (1890); Goldsboro Lumber Co. v. Hines Bros. Lumber Co., 127 N.C. 130, 37 S.E. 152 (1900).

The injury threatened to plaintiff must be irreparable, real and immediate. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 58 N.C. App. 155, 293 S.E.2d 232 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

The party moving for a preliminary injunction must offer particular facts supporting its claim of irreparable injury. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 58 N.C. App. 155, 293 S.E.2d 232 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

To constitute irreparable injury it is not essential that it be shown that the injury is beyond the possibility of repair or possible compensation in damages, but that the injury is one to which the complainant should not be required to submit or the other party permitted to inflict, and is of such continuous and frequent recurrence that no reasonable redress can be had in a court of law. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

Where there has been an improper or premature execution by the clerk, the injured party's remedy is the perfection of his appeal and notice thereof which will have the effect of staying the proceedings, and an injunction will not be granted in such case. Bryan v. Hubbs, 69 N.C. 423 (1873).

Where it is shown that injury will result from the issuance of an irregular execution, the proper remedy is by motion to set aside and not injunction. Foard v. Alexander, 64 N.C. 69 (1870).

C. Application of Section.

An injunction pendente lite should not be granted where there is a serious question as to the right of the defendant to engage in the activity and to forbid the defendant to do so, pending the final determination of the matter, would cause the defendant greater damage than the plaintiff would sustain from the continuance of the activity while the litigation is pending. Board of Provincial Elders v. Jones, 273 N.C. 174, 159 S.E.2d 545 (1968).

Injunction Subsidiary to Another Action or Special Proceeding. — A court of equity, or a court in the exercise of its equity powers, may use the writ of injunction as a remedy subsidiary to and in aid of another action or special proceeding. However, in such cases, in order to justify continuing the writ until the final hearing, ordinarily it must be made to appear (1) that there is probable cause the plaintiff will be able to establish the asserted right, and (2) that there is a reasonable apprehension of irreparable loss unless the temporary order of injunction remains in force, or that in the opinion of the court such injunctive relief appears to be reasonably necessary to protect the plaintiff's rights until the controversy can be determined. Edmonds v. Hall, 236 N.C. 153, 72 S.E.2d 221 (1952).

By subsidiary injunction proceedings a party to an action may be restrained from committing an act respecting the subject of the action which would render judgment therein ineffective. Edmonds v. Hall, 236 N.C. 153, 72 S.E.2d 221 (1952).

When Temporary Injunction Granted Generally. — Ordinarily a temporary injunction will be granted pending trial on the merits, (1) if there is probable cause for supposing that plaintiff will be able to sustain his primary equity and (2) if there is reasonable apprehension of irreparable loss unless injunctive relief be granted, or if in the court's opinion it appears reasonably necessary to protect plaintiff's right until the controversy between him and defendant can be determined. Western Conference of Original Free Will Baptists v. Creech, 256 N.C. 128, 123 S.E.2d 619 (1962); Waff Bros. v. Bank of N.C., N.A., 289 N.C. 198, 221 S.E.2d 273 (1976); State ex rel. Edmisten v. Challenge, Inc., 54 N.C. App. 513, 284 S.E.2d 333 (1981).

A preliminary injunction will be issued only (1) if a plaintiff is able to show likelihood of success on the merits of his case and (2) if a plaintiff is likely to sustain irreparable loss unless the injunction is issued, or if, in the opinion of the court, issuance is necessary for the protection of a plaintiff's rights during the course of litigation. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983); Iredell Digestive Disease Clinic v. Petrozza, 92 N.C. App. 21, 373 S.E.2d 449 (1988), aff'd, State v. Herald, 10 N.C. App. 263, 178 S.E.2d 120 (1970).

To receive a preliminary injunction, plaintiff must show the likelihood of success on the merits and some type of irreparable harm. This standard, however, does not require a showing that the injury is beyond repair, but that the injury is one to which complainant should not be required to submit or which the other party should be permitted to inflict. Wrightsville Winds Townhouses Homeowners' Assoc. v. Miller, 100 N.C. App. 531, 397 S.E.2d 345 (1990), cert. denied, 328 N.C. 275, 400 S.E.2d 463 (1991).

The courts cannot enjoin the enforcement of the criminal law, nor can the validity of an ordinance be tested by an injunction. Paul v. Washington, 134 N.C. 363, 47 S.E. 793 (1904).

An injunction will not issue to restrain an act which has already been committed. Yount v. Setzer, 155 N.C. 213, 71 S.E. 209 (1911).

Injunction Awarded Only for Relief Sought. — Court did not err in dismissing plaintiffs' claims for preliminary injunctive relief, where, under a fair reading of plaintiffs' prayer for relief, the only preliminary injunctive relief requested was the enjoining of the disposal of school property, and although allegations may have been sufficient to show with particularity irreparable harm resulting from the expenditure of bond monies for the purchase of the facility, plaintiffs did not seek to enjoin that purchase. Moore v. Wykle, 107 N.C. App. 120, 419 S.E.2d 164, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 666, 424 S.E.2d 405 (1992).

Wasteful or Wrongful Disposition of Property of Dissolved Corporation. — The court, upon the dissolution of a corporation, has full control over the property of such corporation, and if necessary for the protection of such property, an injunction may be properly issued. State ex rel. Attorney Gen. v. Roanoke Nav. Co., 84 N.C. 705 (1881).

Obstruction of Easement. — A preliminary mandatory injunction may be issued when an easement into one's property has been obstructed. Jolliff v. Winslow, 24 N.C. App. 107, 210 S.E.2d 221 (1974), appeal dismissed, 286 N.C. 545, 212 S.E.2d 656 (1975).

An injunction does not ordinarily lie in a suit to try the title to land. Musten v. Musten, 36 N.C. App. 618, 244 S.E.2d 699 (1978).

This section applies equally as well whether the party litigants be public service or municipal corporations or individuals. Merrick v. Intramontaine R.R., 118 N.C. 1081, 24 S.E. 667 (1896); Griffin v. Goldsboro Water Co., 122 N.C. 206, 30 S.E. 319 (1898); Woodley v. Carolina Tel. & Tel. Co., 163 N.C. 284, 79 S.E. 598 (1913).

Private Nuisance. — Where plaintiffs were likely to succeed on at least one of their claims (private nuisance) at a trial on the merits with regard to picketing of doctor's home by abortion protestors, the claim warranted injunctive relief. Kaplan v. Prolife Action League, 111 N.C. App. 1, 431 S.E.2d 828, appeal dismissed and discretionary review denied, 335 N.C. 175, 436 S.E.2d 379 (1993), cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1253, 114 S. Ct. 2783, 129 L. Ed. 2d 894 (1994).

§ 1-486. When solvent defendant restrained.

In an application for an injunction to enjoin a trespass on land it is not necessary to allege the insolvency of the defendant when the trespass complained of is continuous in its nature, or is the cutting or destruction of timber trees. (1885, c. 401; Rev., s. 807; C.S., s. 844.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on remedies for trespass to land in North Carolina, see 47 N.C.L. Rev. 334 (1969).

CASE NOTES

Where the injury being sustained or about to be sustained is irreparable so that there can be no sufficient recompense in money, then the plaintiff need not, in his pleadings, allege the insolvency of the defendant, but if the injury is an ordinary one which may be atoned for in money, then the plaintiff, in order to secure a temporary injunction, must allege the defendant's insolvency, for otherwise he has an adequate remedy in an action for damages. Lewis v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 99 N.C. 11, 5 S.E. 19 (1888); Stewart v. Munger, 174 N.C. 402, 93 S.E. 927 (1917).

Continuing Trespass. — Where it appears that the facts of the case are in dispute and the trespass by the defendant would be continuous, and would produce injury to the plaintiff, a restraining order should be issued. Lodge v. Ijames, 156 N.C. 159, 72 S.E. 204 (1911); Sutton v. Sutton, 161 N.C. 665, 77 S.E. 838 (1913); Cobb v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 172 N.C. 58, 89 S.E. 807 (1916).

When relief is sought against on continuing trespass, a restraining order may properly issue without allegation of insolvency; and this ancillary remedy may be available in an action where the title to land is at issue, but may not be used as an instrument to settle a dispute as to the possession, or to effect an ouster. Young v. Pittman, 224 N.C. 175, 29 S.E.2d 551 (1944).

Allegations that defendant is insolvent and is cutting down timber trees on plaintiff's land and hauling them off and threatens to continue to do so, to the irreparable damage of the plaintiff, is sufficient to authorize the appointment of a receiver, and since the enactment of this section, it is not necessary to allege the insolvency of the defendant. McKay v. Chapin, 120 N.C. 159, 26 S.E. 701 (1897).

When a continuous trespass is sought to be enjoined, and the rights of the parties require the determination of the jury upon conflicting evidence, and irreparable injury for the continued trespass will likely follow, the courts will ordinarily continue the cause to the hearing to prevent further litigation, cost, and trouble, when no harm thereby can be done, irrespective of the solvency of the alleged trespasser. Norfolk S.R.R. v. Rapid Transit Co., 195 N.C. 305, 141 S.E. 882 (1928).

Court Must Weigh Relative Conveniences and Inconveniences to Parties. — The hearing judge may issue an interlocutory injunction upon the application of the plaintiff in actual or constructive possession to enjoin a trespass on land when the trespass would be continuous in nature and produce injury to the plaintiff during the litigation. But the rule that the judge will consider and weigh the relative conveniences and inconveniences to the parties in determining the propriety of the injunction is operative here. In consequence, an interlocutory injunction against a trespass should be refused where its issuance would confer little benefit on the plaintiff and cause great inconvenience to the defendant. Huskins v. Yancey Hosp., 238 N.C. 357, 78 S.E.2d 116 (1953).

Effect of Section upon Discretionary Power of the Court. — The construction placed on this section does not deprive the courts of their discretionary power to require a bond to secure the plaintiff against damages, or to appoint a receiver, where there is a bona fide contention as to the title to lands or timber trees thereon. Stewart v. Munger, 174 N.C. 402, 93 S.E. 927 (1917).

§ 1-487. Timberlands, trial of title to.

In all actions to try title to timberlands, and for trespass thereon for cutting timber trees, when the court finds as a fact that there is a bona fide contention on both sides based upon evidence constituting a prima facie title, no order shall be made pending such action, permitting either party to cut said timber trees, except by consent, until the title to said land or timber trees is finally determined in the action. In all cases where the title to any timber or trees, or the right to cut and remove the same during a term of years, is claimed by any party to such action, and the fee of the soil or other estate in the land by another, whether party to the action or not, the time within which such timber or trees may be cut or removed by the party claiming the same, and all other rights acquired in connection therewith, shall not be affected or abridged, but the running of the term is suspended during the pendency of the action. (1901, c. 666, s. 1; 1903, c. 642; Rev., s. 808; C.S., s. 845.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on remedies for trespass to land in North Carolina, see 47 N.C.L. Rev. 334 (1969).

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — Although the time for cutting the timber trees was extended with the enactment of this section, it is now settled that the section does not interfere with any vested right within the meaning of the constitutional provision prohibiting such interference. Charles S. Riley & Co. v. Carter, 165 N.C. 334, 81 S.E. 414 (1914).

Purpose of Section. — The primary object of this section is to throw a greater safeguard around the rights of the litigating parties and to preserve the timber upon the lands in dispute, until the rights of the respective parties can be adjudicated. Moore v. Fowle, 139 N.C. 51, 51 S.E. 796 (1905).

Plaintiff Must Show a Bona Fide Claim. — The plaintiff, in order to prevent a dissolution of the injunction obtained against the defendant, must show (1) a bona fide claim to the lands, and (2) that such claim is based upon evidence constituting a prima facie title. Moore v. Fowle, 139 N.C. 51, 51 S.E. 796 (1905).

§ 1-488. When timber may be cut.

In any action specified in G.S. 1-487, when the judge finds as a fact that the contention of either party is not in good faith and is not based upon evidence constituting a prima facie title, upon motion of the other party, who may satisfy the court of the bona fides of his contention and who may produce evidence showing a prima facie title, the court may allow such party to cut the timber trees by giving bond as required by law. Nothing in this section affects the right of appeal, and when any party to such action has been enjoined, a sufficient bond must be required to cover all damages that may accrue to the party enjoined by reason of the injunction as now required by law. (1901, c. 666, ss. 2, 3; Rev., s. 809; C.S., s. 846.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on remedies for trespass to land in North Carolina, see 47 N.C.L. Rev. 334 (1969).

CASE NOTES

Under this section the plaintiff must not only show that his claim is made in good faith and that he has a prima facie title thereto, but the court must be able to find, as a matter of fact, that the claim of the adverse party is not made in good faith. When relief is sought under this provision all these conditions must be complied with. Johnson v. Duvall, 135 N.C. 642, 47 S.E. 611 (1904). See also, Chandler v. Cameron, 227 N.C. 233, 41 S.E.2d 753 (1947).

Injunction Granted Where Contention Bona Fide. — This section was not intended to be a substitute for the preceding sections, and when the court fails to find, in the light of all the evidence, that there is not a bona fide contention, then it should grant an injunction under §§ 1-486 and 1-487. Kelly v. Enter. Lumber Co., 157 N.C. 175, 72 S.E. 957 (1911).

§ 1-493. What judges have jurisdiction.

All judges of the superior court and judges of the district court authorized to hear in-chambers matters have jurisdiction to grant injunctions and issue restraining orders in all civil actions and proceedings pending in their respective divisions. (1876-7, c. 223, ss. 1, 2; 1879, c. 63, ss. 1, 3; Code, s. 335; Rev., s. 814; C.S., s. 851; 1971, c. 381, s. 12; 1973, c. 66, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided prior to the 1973 amendment to this section.

Jurisdiction. — The general jurisdiction of restraining orders and injunctions is vested in the judges of the superior courts. Any judge of such court may issue a restraining order in any cause and anywhere in the State. Hamilton v. Icard, 112 N.C. 589, 17 S.E. 519 (1893).

For case holding that references to the superior court would be deemed to refer also to the district court, see Boston v. Freeman, 6 N.C. App. 736, 171 S.E.2d 206 (1969).

Perpetual Injunction. — A perpetual injunction must be granted only in the county in which the cause is pending. Hamilton v. Icard, 112 N.C. 589, 17 S.E. 519 (1893). See also, Ledbetter v. Pinner, 120 N.C. 455, 27 S.E. 123 (1897).

Where an action to try title is pending, a judge of the superior court has judicial power to issue an order restraining a party from further action. Massengill v. Lee, 228 N.C. 35, 44 S.E.2d 356 (1947).

§ 1-494. Before what judge returnable.

All restraining orders and injunctions granted by any of the judges of the superior court shall be made returnable before the resident judge of the district, a special judge residing in the district, or any superior court judge assigned to hold court in the district where the civil action or special proceeding is pending, within 20 days from date of order. If a judge before whom the matter is returned fails, for any reason, to hear the motion and application, on the date set or within 10 days thereafter, any regular or special judge resident in, or assigned to hold the courts of, some adjoining district may hear and determine the said motion and application, after giving 10 days' notice to the parties interested in the application or motion. This removal continues in force the motion and application or motion. This removal continues in force the motion and application theretofore granted till they can be heard and determined by the judge having jurisdiction.

All restraining orders and injunctions granted by any judge of the district court shall be made returnable before the judge granting such order or injunction or before the chief district judge or a district judge authorized to hear in-chambers matters in the district where the civil action is pending, within 20 days from the date of the order. If the judge before whom the matter is returned fails, for any reason, to hear the motion and application on the date set, or within 10 days thereafter, any district judge of the district authorized to hear in-chambers matters may hear and determine the said motion and application, after giving 10 days' notice to the parties interested in the application or motion. (1876, c. 223, s. 2; 1879, c. 63, ss. 2, 3; 1881, c. 51; Code, s. 336; Rev., s. 815; C.S., s. 852; 1963, c. 1143; 1973, c. 66, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Where the judge to whom the motion is returnable fails to hear it, the judge of the adjoining district can hear it upon 10 days' notice to the parties. Hamilton v. Icard, 112 N.C. 589, 17 S.E. 519 (1893).

§ 1-495. Stipulation as to judge to hear.

By a stipulation in writing, signed by all the parties to an application for an injunction order, or their attorneys, to the effect that the matter may be heard before a judge of the appropriate trial division designated in the stipulation, the judge before whom the restraining order is returnable by law, or who is by law the judge to hear the motion for an injunction order, shall, upon receipt of the stipulation forward it and all the papers to the judge designated, whose duty it then is to hear and decide the matter, and return all the papers to the court out of which they issued. (1883, c. 33; Code, s. 337; Rev., s. 816; C.S., s. 853; 1973, c. 66, s. 4.)

CASE NOTES

Stipulation of Parties Permitted. — Agreement in writing by all parties concerned as to what judge of the superior court shall hear the motion is allowed under this section. Hamilton v. Icard, 112 N.C. 589, 17 S.E. 519 (1893); Crabtree v. Scheelky, 119 N.C. 56, 25 S.E. 707 (1896).

Duty of Judge Designated by Stipulation. — When the parties have stipulated as to what judge shall hear the motion, it is the duty of such judge, if he has before him all the facts, to hear and determine the case, and it is error to continue the injunction. Cooper v. Cooper, 127 N.C. 490, 37 S.E. 492 (1900).

Applied in Forester v. Town of North Wilkesboro, 206 N.C. 347, 174 S.E. 112 (1934).

Cross References. — For provisions similar to those of the repealed sections, see § 1A-1, Rule 65.

§ 1-498. Application to extend, modify, or vacate; before whom heard.

Applications to extend, modify, or vacate temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions issued in the superior court division may be heard by the judge having jurisdiction if he is within the district or in an adjoining district, but if out of the district and not in an adjoining district, then before any judge who is at the time in the district, and if there is no judge in the district, before any judge in an adjoining district.

Applications to extend, modify, or vacate temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions issued in the district court division may be heard by the district judge who made the original order or by the chief district judge or by a district judge of the district authorized to hear in-chambers matters.

§ 1-500. Restraining orders and injunctions in effect pending appeal; indemnifying bond.

Whenever a plaintiff shall appeal from a judgment rendered at chambers, or in session, either vacating a restraining order theretofore granted, or denying a perpetual injunction in any case where such injunction is the principal relief sought by the plaintiff, and where it shall appear that vacating said restraining order or denying said injunction will enable the defendant to consummate the threatened act, sought to be enjoined, before such appeal can be heard, so that the plaintiff will thereby be deprived of the benefits of any judgment of the appellate division, reversing the judgment of the lower court, then in such case the original restraining order granted in the case shall in the discretion of the trial judge be and remain in full force and effect until said appeal shall be finally disposed of: Provided, the plaintiff shall forthwith execute and deposit with the clerk a written undertaking with sufficient surety, approved by the clerk or judge, in an amount to be fixed by the judge to indemnify the party enjoined against all loss, not exceeding an amount to be specified, which he may suffer on account of continuing such restraining order as aforesaid, in the event that the judgment of the lower court is affirmed by the appellate division. (1921, c. 58; C.S., s. 858(a); 1969, c. 44, s. 12; 1971, c. 381, s. 12.)

Cross References. — As to suspension, modification, restoration or grant of an injunction during the pendency of an appeal, see § 1A-1, Rule 62(c).

CASE NOTES

The dissolution of a restraining order is in the discretion of the trial judge. Such an order is not reviewable by the appellate division except in cases of abuse of discretion. Currin v. Smith, 270 N.C. 108, 153 S.E.2d 821 (1967).

Supplementary Order Held Within Discretion of Court. — Where an appeal was taken from a judgment of the superior court judge vacating an order restraining county board of education from transferring a public school from one district to another, a supplementary order providing for the payment of the teachers pending the appeal was within the sound discretion of the trial judge and was not reviewable. Clark v. McQueen, 195 N.C. 714, 143 S.E. 528 (1928).

Scope of Review. — In determining on appeal whether the lower court erred in ordering a temporary restraining order vacated prior to a hearing of the matter on the merits, the Supreme Court is not bound by the findings of fact or lack of such findings by the lower court, but may review the evidence and make its own findings of fact. Waff Bros. v. Bank of N.C., 289 N.C. 198, 221 S.E.2d 273 (1976).

Matters to Be Considered upon Final Hearing. — Upon the final hearing on the merits of a complaint seeking a temporary restraining order, neither the Supreme Court's findings of fact upon appeal of an order vacating a temporary restraining order nor the findings or conclusions of the Court of Appeals or of the trial judge at the hearing upon the order to show cause why the restraining order should not be continued are to be considered by the superior court. Waff Bros. v. Bank of N.C., 289 N.C. 198, 221 S.E.2d 273 (1976).

Receivers.

Part 1. Receivers Generally.

§ 1-501. What judge appoints.

Any judge of the superior or district court with authority to grant restraining orders and injunctions has like jurisdiction in appointing receivers, and all motions to show cause are returnable as is provided for injunctions, except only a judge of the Superior Court Division has jurisdiction to appoint receivers of corporations. Any resident judge of the Superior Court Division or any nonresident judge of the Superior Court Division assigned to a district who appoints receivers pursuant to the authority granted hereby while holding court in that district may, in his discretion, retain jurisdiction and supervision of the original action, of the receivers appointed therefor and of any other civil actions pending in the same district involving the receivers, following his rotation out of the district. (C.C.P., s. 215; 1876-7, c. 223; 1879, c. 63; 1881, c. 51; Code, s. 379; Rev., s. 846; C.S., s. 859; 1971, c. 268, s. 31; 1979, c. 525, s. 13.)

CASE NOTES

This section and § 1-485 invest the court with very large and comprehensive powers to protect rights and prevent the perpetration or the continuance of wrong in respect to the subject matter of the action, and to take charge of and protect the property in controversy both before and after judgment, by injunctions and through receivers, pending the litigation; they facilitate and enlarge the authority of the courts in the exercise of these remedial agencies and do not in any degree abridge the exercise of like general powers that appertain to courts of equity to grant the relief specified or to grant perpetual injunctions in proper cases and like relief. John L. Roper Lumber Co. v. Wallace, 93 N.C. 22 (1885).

Inherent Power of Courts to Appoint Receivers. — The power to appoint a receiver is necessarily inherent in a court which possesses equitable jurisdiction. Skinner v. Maxwell, 66 N.C. 45 (1872).

The clerk cannot appoint a receiver as that power is reserved to the judge alone. Parks v. Sprinkle, 64 N.C. 637 (1870).

Appointment of Receivers in Discretion of Judge. — The appointment of a receiver is not a matter of positive right, but rests in the sound legal discretion of the judge, who will take into consideration the nature of the property and the effect of granting or refusing such an application upon the material interests of the respective parties to the controversy. Whitehead v. Hale, 118 N.C. 601, 24 S.E. 360 (1896).

What Plaintiff Must Show. — Where the appointment of a receiver is sought as an ancillary remedy, the plaintiffs must allege and show that they are entitled to the main relief, and must then show their equity entitling them to the ancillary relief in aid of their main relief. Witz, Biedler & Co. v. Gray, 116 N.C. 48, 20 S.E. 1019 (1895).

Verification and Notice. — The practice of appointing a receiver upon an unverified complaint and without notice to creditors and other interested persons is not commended. Fisher v. Trust Co., 138 N.C. 90, 50 S.E. 592 (1905).

What Judge Should Determine. — Upon an application for an injunction and receiver, it is not necessary for the judge to "find the facts" further than to examine the affidavits and determine whether sufficient cause is shown for the ancillary relief. Jones v. Boyd, 80 N.C. 258 (1879); City Nat'l Bank v. Bridgers, 114 N.C. 381, 19 S.E. 642 (1894).

Effect on Both Parties Must Be Considered. — It is the duty of the court, in passing upon a motion for an injunction or the appointment of a receiver, to consider the consequences of such action upon both parties. Hanna v. Hanna, 89 N.C. 68 (1883); Venable v. Smith, 98 N.C. 523, 4 S.E. 514 (1887). See also, Lewis v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 99 N.C. 11, 5 S.E. 19 (1888).

As to which judge may appoint a receiver, see Corbin v. Berry, 83 N.C. 27 (1880); Galbreath v. Everett, 84 N.C. 546 (1881); Hamilton v. Icard, 112 N.C. 589, 17 S.E. 519 (1893); Worth v. Piedmont Bank, 121 N.C. 343, 28 S.E. 488 (1897).

Number of Receivers Appointed. — The court should not appoint more receivers than are necessary. Battery Park Bank v. Western Carolina Bank, 126 N.C. 531, 36 S.E. 39 (1900).

Section Fixes Place Where Orders Are Returnable. — It is perfectly manifest that this section, with a view to prevent the inconvenience of parties, intended to fix the place where, rather than the persons before whom, such orders should be made returnable, and that the judges were denominated in the order in which the reviewing finds them because it was supposed that one or the other of them would at all times be within the district of the action. Galbreath v. Everett, 84 N.C. 546 (1881).

Place of Hearing. — The hearing as to a receiver may be held outside of the county where the main action is pending. Parker v. McPhail, 112 N.C. 502, 16 S.E. 848 (1893).

Retention of Jurisdiction by Judge Rotated out of District. — In an action challenging the appointment of operating receivers for a corporation where the trial judge made the appointment after he was rotated out of the district, the trial judge properly entered an order retaining jurisdiction in himself of all matters in the action. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

A receiver is an officer of the court, and his possession of the property is the possession of the court. He holds it as a custodian until the rightful claimant is ascertained by the court, and then for such claimant. Battle v. Davis, 66 N.C. 252 (1872).

The interest of the owner is in nowise changed by the appointment of a receiver. The legal title and possession are held by him for the owner and the property is to be administered under the orders of the court. Southern Pants Co. v. Rochester German Ins. Co., 159 N.C. 78, 74 S.E. 812 (1912).

As to relation back of receiver's title, see Worth v. Piedmont Bank, 121 N.C. 343, 28 S.E. 488 (1897).

As to determination of priority where two receivers have been appointed, see Worth v. Piedmont Bank, 121 N.C. 343, 28 S.E. 488 (1897).

Effect of Omission of Security. — An order appointing a receiver is not void by reason of an omission of the court to require adequate security. Nesbitt & Bro. v. Turrentine, 83 N.C. 535 (1880).

As to proof of appointment of foreign receivers, see Person v. Leary, 127 N.C. 114, 37 S.E. 149 (1900).

Temporary Receiver Held Not Liable for Failure to Honor Levy. — A temporary receiver appointed by a state superior court judge for the purpose of taking possession of all the assets of a partnership which was involved in certain legal disputes incident to its dissolution was not personally liable for failure to honor a levy for unpaid taxes of one of the partners under 26 U.S.C. § 6332(c), as the property involved was subject to a prior judicial attachment or execution by being the subject of the state court supervised receivership. United States v. McPherson, 631 F. Supp. 269 (M.D.N.C. 1986).

§ 1-502. In what cases appointed.

A receiver may be appointed —

(1) Before judgment, on the application of either party, when he establishes an apparent right to property which is the subject of the action and in the possession of an adverse party, and the property or its rents and profits are in danger of being lost, or materially injured or impaired; except in cases where judgment upon failure to answer may be had on application to the court.

(2) After judgment, to carry the judgment into effect.

(3) After judgment, to dispose of the property according to the judgment, or to preserve it during the pendency of an appeal, or when an execution has been returned unsatisfied, and the judgment debtor refuses to apply his property in satisfaction of the judgment.

(4) In cases provided in G.S. 1-507.1 and in like cases, of the property within this State of foreign corporations.

(5) In cases wherein restitution is sought for violations of G.S. 75-1.1.

(6) In cases involving partition of real property, pursuant to G.S. 46-3.1.

The provisions of G.S. 1-507.1 through 1-507.11 are applicable, as near as may be, to receivers appointed hereunder. (C.C.P., s. 215; 1876-7, c. 223; 1879, c. 63; 1881, c. 51; Code, s. 379; Rev., s. 847; C.S., s. 860; 1955, c. 1371, s. 3; 1973, c. 614, s. 3; 1981, c. 584, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

This section is expressly made applicable to all receivers. Ledbetter v. Farmers Bank & Trust Co., 142 F.2d 147 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 323 U.S. 719, 65 S. Ct. 48, 89 L. Ed. 578 (1944), rehearing denied, 323 U.S. 813, 65 S. Ct. 112, 89 L. Ed. 647, 323 U.S. 886, 65 S. Ct. 682, 89 L. Ed. 1435 (1945).

Effect of Section. — This section specifies certain cases in which a receiver may be appointed, but does not materially alter the equitable jurisdiction of North Carolina courts upon this subject. Skinner v. Maxwell, 66 N.C. 45 (1872).

The power to appoint a receiver is inherent in a court of equity. The change to the Code did not abridge, but enlarged, it. In re Penny, 10 F. Supp. 638 (M.D.N.C. 1935).

And Is Not Limited by This Section. — The power of the court to appoint a receiver in proper cases and upon a proper showing is not limited by this section. Sinclair v. Moore Cent. R.R., 228 N.C. 389, 45 S.E.2d 555 (1947).

Receivership is ordinarily ancillary to some equitable relief. Murphy v. Murphy, 261 N.C. 95, 134 S.E.2d 148 (1964).

A receiver will not be appointed where there is a full and adequate remedy at law. In re Penny, 10 F. Supp. 638 (M.D.N.C. 1935).

Receivership is a harsh remedy and will be granted only where there is no other safe or expedient remedy. Murphy v. Murphy, 261 N.C. 95, 134 S.E.2d 148 (1964).

A receiver of defendant's property will not be appointed at the request of a judgment creditor without more being shown where he has the remedy of execution against the property. Scoggins v. Gooch, 211 N.C. 677, 191 S.E. 750 (1937).

The trial court did not have the statutory or equitable power to appoint a receiver where there was no evidence to indicate the property or its rents or profits were in danger of being lost or materially injured or impaired. Williams v. Liggett, 113 N.C. App. 812, 440 S.E.2d 331 (1994).

Unless Defense of Adequate Remedy at Law Is Waived. — A simple contract creditor may obtain equitable relief in proper cases where the answer admits indebtedness and consents to appointment of a receiver, waiving the defense of adequate remedy at law. In re Penny, 10 F. Supp. 638 (M.D.N.C. 1935).

Appointment of Receiver Pendente Lite in Discretion of Court. — The appointment of a receiver pendente lite is not a matter of strict right, but rests in the sound discretion of the court. Hanna v. Hanna, 89 N.C. 68 (1883).

A receiver may be appointed pendente lite in the discretion of the court. Murphy v. Murphy, 261 N.C. 95, 134 S.E.2d 148 (1964).

In order to appoint a receiver before judgment under this section, it must appear that claimant has an apparent right to property which is the subject of the action and the property or the rents are in danger of being lost. Witz, Biedler & Co. v. Gray, 116 N.C. 48, 20 S.E. 1019 (1895); Pearce v. Elwell, 116 N.C. 595, 21 S.E. 305 (1895).

Where a party establishes an apparent right to land, and the person in possession is insolvent, a receiver will be appointed to take charge of the rents and profits during the pendency of the action. Kerchner v. Fairley, 80 N.C. 24 (1879); Nesbitt & Bro. v. Turrentine, 83 N.C. 536 (1880); Horton v. White, 84 N.C. 297 (1881); Oldham v. First Nat'l Bank, 84 N.C. 304 (1881); John L. Roper Lumber Co. v. Wallace, 93 N.C. 22 (1885); McNair v. Pope, 96 N.C. 502, 2 S.E. 54 (1887).

Where property is the subject of an action and is liable to clear equities in a party out of possession, the court may appoint a receiver when it seems just and necessary to keep the property in dispute from the control of either party until the controversy is determined. Skinner v. Maxwell, 66 N.C. 45 (1872).

Where the plaintiff makes it proper to appear to the court that he is in imminent danger of loss by the defendant's insolvency, or that he reasonably apprehends that the defendant's property will be destroyed, removed or otherwise disposed of by the defendant pending the action, or that the defendant is insolvent, and the property must be sold to pay his debts, or that he is attempting to defraud the plaintiff, a receiver for his property may be appointed before judgment. Kelly v. McLamb, 182 N.C. 158, 108 S.E. 435 (1921).

Where equity will impress a trust upon property in the hands of one who has obtained it by fraud or covin, and the property or fund is threatened both by his fraud and insolvency, the principles of equity will justify and call for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the property and conserve it pending the litigation. Peoples Nat'l Bank v. Waggoner, 185 N.C. 297, 117 S.E. 6 (1923).

It is generally necessary to show that the party in possession is insolvent. Ellington v. Currie, 193 N.C. 610, 137 S.E. 869 (1927); In re Penny, 10 F. Supp. 638 (M.D.N.C. 1935).

But Insolvency Alone Is Insufficient. — The mere insolvency of the party in possession of property, where there is no allegation that the defendant intends to run off with or conceal or destroy the property, is not sufficient ground for the appointment of a receiver. Whitehead v. Hale, 118 N.C. 601, 24 S.E. 360 (1896).

Danger of Loss Must Be Shown. — Property or funds will not be taken from one entitled to custody thereof, and transferred to a receiver, unless there is imminent danger of loss. Thompson v. McNair, 62 N.C. 121 (1867); Rheinstein v. Bixby, 92 N.C. 307 (1885).

Under this section, apparent danger of waste or injury to the property, or loss of the rents and profits by reason of the insolvency of the adverse party in possession, is the ground for appointing a receiver thereof. Rollins v. Henry, 77 N.C. 467 (1877); Twitty v. Logan, 80 N.C. 69 (1879).

General Allegations of Threat of Loss Insufficient. — A receiver will not be appointed pendente lite, on a general allegation that loss will ensue from nonappointment, without a full statement of the facts. Hughes v. Person, 63 N.C. 548 (1869); Wood v. Harrell, 74 N.C. 338 (1876); Hanna v. Hanna, 89 N.C. 68 (1883). See also, Southern Flour Co. v. McIver, 109 N.C. 120, 13 S.E. 905 (1891).

Apparently Good Title to Land Sufficient. — Where a party in an action involving the title and possession of land demands affirmative relief and asks for the appointment of a receiver, it is sufficient if he shows an apparently good title, either not controverted or not unequivocably denied by his adversary. Lovett v. Slocumb, 109 N.C. 110, 13 S.E. 893 (1891).

Appointment of Receiver upon Application for Injunction. — Under the broad terms of this section the court has power to appoint a receiver upon an application for an injunction, where it appears that this action will best serve the interests of both parties. Hurwitz v. Carolina Sand & Gravel Co., 189 N.C. 1, 126 S.E. 171 (1925).

Insolvent Foreign Corporations. — An insolvent corporation, with its property or plant located in this State, is subject to the appointment by North Carolina courts of a receiver to take charge of its assets here and administer them as a trust fund for its creditors, though incorporated under the laws of another state. Holshouser v. Copper Co., 138 N.C. 248, 50 S.E. 650 (1905); Summit Silk Co. v. Kinston Spinning Co., 154 N.C. 421, 70 S.E. 820 (1911).

Infant's Estate. — On the principle of protection, a receiver may be appointed for an infant's estate if it is not vested in a trustee, for he is incompetent to take charge of it himself. Skinner v. Maxwell, 66 N.C. 45 (1872).

Domestic Relations Cases. — Receivers have been appointed in domestic relations cases to preserve specific property and to collect rents and income. Murphy v. Murphy, 261 N.C. 95, 134 S.E.2d 148 (1964).

Appointment Held Proper — To Prevent Suspension of Business. — Where the property and franchise of a city water company were to be sold to satisfy a judgment, it was held that in order to prevent all possible risk of the temporary suspension of the business of the water company, it would be proper to appoint a receiver. McNeal Pipe & Foundry Co. v. Howland, 111 N.C. 615, 16 S.E. 857 (1892).

Same — Fraudulent Confession of Judgment. — A receiver could be appointed under this section in a suit against a debtor and others to restrain an execution sale, where the debtor had confessed judgment apparently with fraudulent intent, and executions had been levied on the only property of the debtor within the State in favor of nonresident creditors who sought to take the property out of the State. Stern & Co. v. Austern, 120 N.C. 107, 27 S.E. 31 (1897).

Same — On Application of Mortgagee. — Where plaintiff mortgagor obtained an injunction to restrain the sale of the mortgaged premises until certain counterclaims could be passed upon and the sum really due could be ascertained, the defendant mortgagee was entitled to have a receiver appointed to take charge of the property and secure the rents and profits where the same were in danger of being lost. Oldham v. First Nat'l Bank, 84 N.C. 304 (1881).

Where plaintiff mortgagee was administrator of one of two mortgagors, whose heirs and the other mortgagor were defendants in an action to foreclose a mortgage, and the property conveyed was inadequate to pay the debt, and the mortgagor in possession was insolvent, and the plaintiff denied an alleged payment of the debt and the existence of assets in his hands applicable thereto, in such case it was not error in the court on application of the plaintiff to appoint a receiver to secure the rents and profits pending the litigation. Kerchner v. Fairley, 80 N.C. 24 (1879). See also, Broeck v. Orchard, 74 N.C. 409 (1876); Rollins v. Henry, 77 N.C. 467 (1877).

Same — Mining by One of Two Devisee-Executors. — Where lands were devised to two persons, both of whom were appointed executors, charged with the payment of certain debts, and one of the executors, claiming a part of the land under a deed subsequent in date to the execution of the will, had entered thereon and was proceeding to operate it as mining property, and it appeared there was some danger of waste of the property, and the solvency of the vendee-executor was doubtful, appointment of a receiver was proper. Stith v. Jones, 101 N.C. 360, 8 S.E. 151 (1888).

Appointment Proper to Protect Security Interest. — The record contained ample evidence that defendant had severe financial difficulties at the time bank had a receiver appointed, and therefore, bank did not wrongfully seize property by having receiver appointed since it had a right to protect its security interest in the property. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Carrington Dev. Assocs., 119 N.C. App. 480, 459 S.E.2d 17 (1995).

Appointment Not Proper Where Receivership Would Cause Loss. — A receiver would not be appointed in an action to foreclose a mortgage on a newspaper where the defendant denied owing anything on the mortgage debt, and it was apparent that, owing to the peculiar nature of the property, the appointment of a receiver would practically destroy its value. Whitehead v. Hale, 118 N.C. 601, 24 S.E. 360 (1896).

Same — Mere Allegation of Insufficiency of Personalty. — Where an executor's petition to sell lands alleged merely that personalty was insufficient to pay debts, plaintiff executor was not entitled to the appointment of a receiver for the lands on the ground that the action could not be tried until a subsequent term, and that the devisee had refused to pay taxes; the allegation that the personalty was insufficient failed to show plaintiff executor's apparent right to the relief, especially as the devisee denied the allegation that the personalty was insufficient. Neighbors v. Evans, 210 N.C. 550, 187 S.E. 796 (1936).

Notice to Owner. — Notice to the owner of property should be given before appointment of a receiver therefor. York v. McCall, 160 N.C. 276, 76 S.E. 84 (1912).

No Requirement of Notice to Shareholders Who Are Not Parties. — In an action challenging the appointment of operating receivers for a corporation, there was no merit to defendants' contention that the initial order of the trial court appointing the receivers was void because certain shareholders were not given notice of the proceedings and were thereby denied their due process rights to notice prior to a court proceeding, the outcome of which would affect their property interests, since there is no requirement in the statutes, either in the provisions governing the appointment of receivers or in the provisions governing derivative shareholder suits, that notice be given to persons who are not parties to the action. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Effect of Instrument Giving Mortgagee Power of Appointment of Trustee. — The appointment of a receiver is an equitable remedy and the provisions of this section and § 1-503, enacted before the giving of a deed of trust upon lands, may not be entirely supplanted by a provision in the instrument which gives the mortgagee or trustee the unequivocal right to the appointment of a receiver in the event of the happening of certain conditions, so as to prevent North Carolina courts sitting in their equity jurisdiction from administering the equities to which the mortgagor is entitled under the facts. Woodall v. North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank, 201 N.C. 428, 160 S.E. 475 (1931).

Turning over Assets to Bankruptcy Trustee. — Where the debtor and one small creditor agree to have a receiver appointed and to restrain all other creditors from doing anything, a receivership under such circumstances is an agency for the defendant, and the title of such a receiver to the assets of the bankrupt debtor is merely colorable and he may be required to turn over assets to trustee in bankruptcy. In re Penny, 10 F. Supp. 638 (M.D.N.C. 1935).

Temporary Receiver Held Not Liable for Failure to Honor Levy. — A temporary receiver appointed by a state superior court judge for the purpose of taking possession of all the assets of a partnership which was involved in certain legal disputes incident to its dissolution was not personally liable for failure to honor a levy for unpaid taxes of one of the partners under 26 U.S.C. § 6332(c), as the property involved was subject to a prior judicial attachment or execution by being the subject of the state court supervised receivership. United States v. McPherson, 631 F. Supp. 269 (M.D.N.C. 1986).

For case distinguishing between receiver appointed as provisional remedy in an ordinary suit and a corporate receiver, see United States v. McPherson, 631 F. Supp. 269 (M.D.N.C. 1986).

Applied in National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 236 N.C. 35, 72 S.E.2d 109 (1952); Stegall Milling Co. v. Hettiger, 27 N.C. App. 76, 217 S.E.2d 767 (1975); Couch v. ADC Realty Corp., 48 N.C. App. 108, 268 S.E.2d 237 (1980).

Hilliard, 221 N.C. 329, 20 S.E.2d 278 (1942); York v. Cole, 251 N.C. 344, 111 S.E.2d 334 (1959); Doxol Gas of Angier, Inc. v. Howard, 28 N.C. App. 132, 220 S.E.2d 203 (1975).

§ 1-502.1. Applicant for receiver to furnish bond to adverse party.

Before a judge may appoint a receiver, the judge shall require the party making application for the appointment to furnish a bond payable to the adverse party in a form and amount approved by the judge. The bond shall secure payment by the applicant of all damages, including reasonable attorney fees, sustained by the adverse party by the appointment and acts of the receiver if the appointment is vacated or otherwise set aside. The judge may require that the amount of bond be increased for this purpose any time after the appointment of a receiver. (1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 994, s. 1.)

§ 1-503. Appointment refused on bond being given.

In all cases where there is an application for the appointment of a receiver, upon the ground that the property or its rents and profits are in danger of being lost, or materially injured or impaired, or that a corporation defendant is insolvent or in imminent danger of insolvency, and the subject of the action is the recovery of a money demand, the judge before whom the application is made or pending shall have the discretionary power to refuse the appointment of a receiver if the party against whom such relief is asked, whether a person, partnership or corporation, tenders to the court an undertaking payable to the adverse party in an amount double the sum demanded by the plaintiff, with at least two sufficient and duly justified sureties, conditioned for the payment of such amount as may be recovered in the action, and summary judgment may be taken upon the undertaking. In the progress of the action the court may in its discretion require additional sureties on such undertaking. (1885, c. 94; Rev., s. 848; C.S., s. 861.)

CASE NOTES

This section was enacted for the benefit and protection of a defendant against whom an application for a receiver is prosecuted. It authorizes the judge in his discretion, upon the filing of the undertaking therein stipulated, to refuse the appointment of a receiver. Sinclair v. Moore Cent. R.R., 228 N.C. 389, 45 S.E.2d 555 (1947).

Execution of Bond as Alternative to Appointment of Receiver. — Where there is danger of loss of rents and profits, instead of appointing a receiver the court may allow the defendant to execute a bond to secure the rents and profits and such damages as may be adjudged the plaintiff, and require an account to be kept. John L. Roper Lumber Co. v. Wallace, 93 N.C. 22 (1885); Durant v. Crowell, 97 N.C. 367, 2 S.E. 541 (1887); Lewis v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 99 N.C. 11, 5 S.E. 19 (1888); Ousby v. Neal, 99 N.C. 146, 5 S.E. 901 (1888).

Retention of Possession upon Giving Bond. — Upon application for a receiver, it is proper to allow a defendant to continue in possession of property upon giving a sufficient bond to protect the other claimants. Frank v. Robinson, 96 N.C. 28, 1 S.E. 781 (1887). See also, Kron v. Smith, 96 N.C. 386, 2 S.E. 463 (1887); Godwin v. Watford, 107 N.C. 168, 11 S.E. 1051 (1890).

Effect of Acceptance of Bond. — Plaintiffs who are parties at the time the court accepts bond and denies application for appointment of a receiver are thereby estopped from further prosecuting their application for a receiver, and the court is without authority to revoke such order at a subsequent term over the objection of the defendants. Sinclair v. Moore Cent. R.R., 228 N.C. 389, 45 S.E.2d 555 (1947).

Appointment of Receiver Held Error. — The court erred in directing a receiver to take possession and control of mines and machinery for operating the same without giving the defendant an opportunity to file a bond to secure the payment over to the receiver of any proceeds therefrom as the court might subsequently direct. Stith v. Jones, 101 N.C. 360, 8 S.E. 151 (1888).

Bankruptcy of Defendant. — Where plaintiff in an action in the superior court acquires a lien on defendant's property, which is taken into the custody of the court and released on the giving of a bond under this section, and defendant is adjudicated a bankrupt, the State court may order that the cause proceed to trial, any judgment rendered for plaintiff to be collectible, by execution, only from the sureties on the bond, so that the plaintiff or sureties may prove the judgment as a claim in the bankruptcy proceeding. Gordon v. Calhoun Motors, Inc., 222 N.C. 398, 23 S.E.2d 325 (1942).

Effect of § 1-111 on Power of Court. — Section 1-111, requiring a defendant in ejectment to give bond before putting in a defense to the action, does not abridge the power of the court to appoint a receiver to secure the rents and profits. Kron v. Dennis, 90 N.C. 327 (1884); Durant v. Crowell, 97 N.C. 367, 2 S.E. 541 (1887); Arey v. Williams, 154 N.C. 610, 154 N.C. 910, 70 S.E. 931, 70 S.E. 931 (1911).

Applied in Woodall v. North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank, 201 N.C. 428, 160 S.E. 475 (1931); Little v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 208 N.C. 726, 182 S.E. 491 (1935).

§ 1-504. Receiver's bond.

A receiver appointed in an action or special proceeding must, before entering upon his duties, execute and file with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending an undertaking payable to the adverse party with at least two sufficient sureties in a penalty fixed by the judge making the appointment, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties as receiver. And the judge having jurisdiction thereof may at any time remove the receiver, or direct him to give a new undertaking, with new sureties, and on the like condition. This section does not apply to a case where special provision is made by law for the security to be given by a receiver, or for increasing the same, or for removing a receiver. (Code, s. 383; Rev., s. 849; C.S., s. 862.)

Cross References. — As to bonds in surety company, see § 58-73-1 et seq. (formerly codified as § 109-16 et seq.)

CASE NOTES

The determination of the amount of the bond is within the discretion of the court. Ledbetter v. Farmers Bank & Trust Co., 142 F.2d 147 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 323 U.S. 719, 65 S. Ct. 48, 89 L. Ed. 578 (1944), rehearing denied, 323 U.S. 813, 65 S. Ct. 112, 89 L. Ed. 647, 323 U.S. 886, 65 S. Ct. 682, 89 L. Ed. 1435 (1945).

Effect of Failure to Require Adequate Security. — An order appointing a receiver is not void by reason of an omission of the court to require adequate security. Nesbitt & Bro. v. Turrentine, 83 N.C. 536 (1880).

An order appointing a receiver is not void because of an inadequate bond. Ledbetter v. Farmers Bank & Trust Co., 142 F.2d 147 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 323 U.S. 719, 65 S. Ct. 48, 89 L. Ed. 578 (1944), rehearing denied, 323 U.S. 813, 65 S. Ct. 112, 89 L. Ed. 647, 323 U.S. 886, 65 S. Ct. 682, 89 L. Ed. 1435 (1945), citing Nesbitt & Bro. v. Turrentine, 83 N.C. 536 (1880).

Mortgagees Not Liable for Suggesting Inadequate Bond. — The fact that mortgagees suggested an inadequate amount in the bond of a receiver did not thereby render them legally liable to the mortgagor. Ledbetter v. Farmers Bank & Trust Co., 142 F.2d 147 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 323 U.S. 719, 65 S. Ct. 48, 89 L. Ed. 578 (1944), rehearing denied, 323 U.S. 813, 65 S. Ct. 112, 89 L. Ed. 647, 323 U.S. 886, 65 S. Ct. 682, 89 L. Ed. 1435 (1945).

What Is a Breach of the Bond. — Where the receiver's delinquency is manifest, and he fails to comply with the order of the court in respect to the fund, such failure is a breach of the bond, upon which suit may be brought by leave of the court. Bank of Washington v. Creditors, 86 N.C. 323 (1882).

Default Must Be Ascertained Before Suit on Bond. — A receiver and his surety cannot be sued upon the bond for an alleged breach of his trust before a default is ascertained, the proper practice being to apply to the court for a rule on the receiver to render his account. Bank of Washington v. Creditors, 86 N.C. 323 (1882); Atkinson v. Smith, 89 N.C. 72 (1883).

Burden of Proof. — The burden is upon a receiver and his sureties to show that he used due diligence in investing the money in his hands. Waters v. Melson, 112 N.C. 89, 16 S.E. 918 (1893).

Procedure for Recovery on Bond. — The court will not, by order in a cause in which a receiver has been appointed, direct a judgment to be entered against him and his sureties. The proper practice is upon a report finding the amount due by the receiver, and upon his failure to pay the same, for the court to grant leave to sue upon the bond. Atkinson v. Smith, 89 N.C. 72 (1883).

Independent Action Against Sureties Required. — The liability of sureties on a receiver's bond can only be enforced by independent action against them and not by motion in the cause. Black v. Gentery, 119 N.C. 502, 26 S.E. 43 (1896).

Receiver Not Necessary Party to Action Against Sureties. — Where judgment has been recovered against the receiver, he is not a necessary party to an action against the sureties on his bond. Black v. Gentery, 119 N.C. 502, 26 S.E. 43 (1896).

Cited in United States v. McPherson, 631 F. Supp. 269 (M.D.N.C. 1986).

§ 1-505. Sale of property in hands of receiver.

In a case pending in the Superior Court Division in which a receiver has been appointed, the resident superior court judge or a superior court judge regularly holding the courts of the district shall have power and authority to order a sale of any property, real or personal, in the hands of a receiver duly and regularly appointed. In a case pending in the District Court Division in which a receiver has been appointed, the chief district judge or a district judge designated by the chief district judge to hear motions and enter interlocutory orders shall have the power and authority to order a sale of any property, real or personal, in the hands of a duly appointed receiver. Sales of property authorized by this section shall be upon such terms as appear to be to the best interests of the creditors affected by the receivership. The procedure for such sales shall be as provided in Article 29A of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes. (1931, c. 123, s. 1; 1949, c. 719, s. 2; 1955, c. 399, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 32.)

§ 1-507. Validation of sales made outside county of action.

All receiver's sales made prior to March 16, 1931, where orders were made and confirmation decreed or where either orders were made or confirmation decreed outside the county in which said actions were pending by a resident judge or the judge assigned to hold the courts of the district are hereby validated, ratified and confirmed. (1931, c. 123, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Temporary Receiver Held Not Liable for Failure to Honor Levy. — A temporary receiver appointed by a state superior court judge for the purpose of taking possession of all the assets of a partnership which was involved in certain legal disputes incident to its dissolution was not personally liable for failure to honor a levy for unpaid taxes of one of the partners under 26 U.S.C. § 6332(c), as the property involved was subject to a prior judicial attachment or execution by being the subject of the state court supervised receivership. United States v. McPherson, 631 F. Supp. 269 (M.D.N.C. 1986).

Nothing in this section suggests that the receiver should take the property free of existing obligations. State ex rel. Eure v. Lawrence, 93 N.C. App. 446, 378 S.E.2d 207 (1989).

For case distinguishing between a receiver appointed as a provisional remedy in an ordinary suit and a corporate receiver, see United States v. McPherson, 631 F. Supp. 269 (M.D.N.C. 1986).

Part 2. Receivers of Corporations.

§ 1-507.1. Appointment and removal.

When a corporation becomes insolvent or suspends its ordinary business for want of funds, or is in imminent danger of insolvency, or has forfeited its corporate right, or its corporate existence has expired by limitation, a receiver may be appointed by the court under the same regulations that are provided by law for the appointment of receivers in other cases; and the court may remove a receiver or trustee and appoint another in his place, or fill any vacancy. Everything required to be done by receivers or trustees is valid if performed by a majority of them. (Code, s. 668; 1901, c. 2, ss. 73, 79; Rev., ss. 1219, 1223; C.S., s. 1208; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on corporate receivership in North Carolina, see 32 N.C.L. Rev. 149 (1954).

For article on North Carolina receivership statutes applicable to insolvent debtors, see 17 Wake Forest L. Rev. 745 (1981).

CASE NOTES

Broad Powers Conferred. — This Part is so broad and comprehensive in its provisions regarding the appointment of receivers that it is not necessary to refer to the general power of a court of equity in such cases. Summit Silk Co. v. Kinston Spinning Co., 154 N.C. 421, 70 S.E. 820 (1911).

Section Does Not Limit Power of Court. — The power of the court to appoint a receiver in proper cases is not limited by this section or § 1-502. Sinclair v. Moore Cent. R.R., 228 N.C. 389, 45 S.E.2d 555 (1947).

Selection of Receivers in Discretion of Court. — The selection of a receiver for an insolvent corporation is a matter largely in the discretion of the trial judge, and will not generally be reviewed unless this discretionary power has been greatly abused; hence, though the practice of appointing the plaintiff's attorney as receiver is not commended, he will not be removed, as a matter of law, on appeal, though like any other receiver, he may be removed upon application to the proper judge of the superior court. Mitchell v. Aulander Realty Co., 169 N.C. 516, 86 S.E. 358 (1915). See also, Fisher v. Southern Loan & Trust Co., 138 N.C. 90, 50 S.E. 592 (1905).

Presumption as to Order Made Without Specific Findings or Request Therefor. — Where an order appointing receivers is made without specific findings of fact and without any request for findings, it will be presumed that the judge accepted as true for the purposes of the order the facts alleged in the complaint, used as an application for receivership. Royall v. Carr Lumber Co., 248 N.C. 735, 105 S.E.2d 65 (1958).

Receiver Represents Both Creditors and Owners. — Upon the insolvency of a corporation and the appointment of a receiver under the provisions of this section, the receiver represents the creditors as well as the owners, excluding the general creditors from taking any separate or effective steps on their account in furtherance of their claims; and the proceeding for the receivership is in the nature of a judicial process by which the rights of the general creditors are fastened upon the property. Observer Co. v. Little, 175 N.C. 42, 94 S.E. 526 (1917).

Relation Back of Receiver's Title to Time of Order. — The title of the receiver on his appointment dates back to the time of granting the order, even though certain preliminary conditions must first be performed and the receiver remains out of possession pending such performance. Worth v. Bank of New Hanover, 122 N.C. 397, 29 S.E. 775 (1898); Pelletier v. Greenville Lumber Co., 123 N.C. 596, 31 S.E. 855 (1898); Battery Park Bank v. Western Carolina Bank, 127 N.C. 432, 37 S.E. 461 (1900); Fisher v. Western Carolina Bank, 132 N.C. 769, 44 S.E. 601 (1903).

Valid Liens Not Divested. — The title of a receiver relates only to the time of his appointment, and valid liens existing at that time are not divested. Battery Park Bank v. Western Carolina Bank, 127 N.C. 432, 37 S.E. 461 (1900); Roberts v. Bowen Mfg. Co., 169 N.C. 27, 85 S.E. 45 (1915).

A receivership continues as long as the court may think it necessary to the performance of the duties pertaining thereto. Young v. Rollings, 90 N.C. 125 (1884).

Effect of Appointment on Powers of Officers. — The appointment of a receiver, who is directed to take control of all the property of a company, and to assume entire management of its affairs, has the effect of suspending all the officers of the company; they may not interfere with the business of the company and are entitled to no salaries during the continuance of the receivership. Lenoir v. Linville Imp. Co., 126 N.C. 922, 36 S.E. 185 (1900).

Delivery of Funds to Receiver. — An order appointing a receiver of a defunct corporation with power to receive into possession all the effects of the company, and with the usual rights and powers of receivers, involves the correlative duty of delivering the funds to him by the late officers of the company in whose hands the funds are, although this is not expressly required in the decretal order. Young v. Rollings, 90 N.C. 125 (1884).

Appointment of Assignee as Receiver. — One to whom an insolvent bank made an assignment of its assets, and who on the same day, and at the suit of creditors, was appointed receiver, held the assets, after such adjudication, not by virtue of the deed of assignment, but as an officer of the court appointed to settle and wind up the affairs of such insolvent bank. Davis v. Industrial Mfg. Co., 114 N.C. 321, 19 S.E. 371 (1894).

Receiver Appointed After Reorganization. — The organization of a new corporation at once dissolves the old one, and if there are creditors of the dissolved corporation, they may cause the property of the defunct corporation to be applied to their debts by means of a receiver. Marshall v. Western N.C.R.R., 92 N.C. 322 (1885).

Dissolution of De Facto Corporation. — Assuming that a bank which had never been duly incorporated had a corporate existence as to those who bona fide dealt with it as a corporation, a receiver should be appointed to take charge of and preserve its effects, where it has voluntarily dissolved, and no one claims to own its stock, and all its supposed officers disclaim their offices. Dobson v. Simonton, 78 N.C. 63 (1878).

Fraudulent Disposal of Property. — If, during the existence of a corporation, its officers fraudulently or unlawfully disposed of any of its property, the creditors are entitled to have a receiver appointed to sue for and recover it. Latta v. Catawba Elec. Co., 146 N.C. 285, 59 S.E. 1028 (1907).

Cessation of Business. — Where a corporation had ceased operation, a stockholder had the right to maintain an action for the appointment of a receiver, although the corporation had not been dissolved in accordance with statutory provisions. Greenleaf v. Land & Lumber Co., 146 N.C. 505, 60 S.E. 424 (1908).

For case distinguishing between a receiver appointed as a provisional remedy in an ordinary suit and a corporate receiver, see United States v. McPherson, 631 F. Supp. 269 (M.D.N.C. 1986).

When Receiver May Be Appointed for a Solvent Corporation. — While appointing a receiver for a going, solvent corporation is an especially rare and drastic remedy, it has been found to constitute a proper remedy in cases where there is fraud or gross misconduct in the management of the corporation, where there is incapacity or neglect on the part of those operating it, where there is evidence of diversion of corporate funds, and even where there is a refusal to permit inspection of corporate books, at least when such a refusal occurs in combination with the existence of other grounds. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

When Receiver Unnecessary. — It is unnecessary to have a receiver appointed in order for the assignee of a judgment creditor, and those beneficially interested, to maintain an action against officers and stockholders for misapplication of funds in distribution among the shareholders as dividends. Chatham v. Mecklenburg Realty Co., 180 N.C. 500, 105 S.E. 329 (1920).

The law contemplates the settlement of all claims against the insolvent debtor in the original action in which the receiver is appointed, except in the infrequent instances where the appointing court, for good cause shown, grants leave to a claimant to bring an independent action against the receiver. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Berry, 2 N.C. App. 547, 163 S.E.2d 505 (1968).

No Requirement of Notice to Shareholders Not Parties. — In an action challenging the appointment of operating receivers for a corporation, there was no merit to defendants' contention that the initial order of the trial court appointing the receivers was void because certain shareholders were not given notice of the proceedings and were thereby denied their due process rights to notice prior to a court proceeding, the outcome of which would affect their property interests, since there is no requirement in the statutes, either in the provisions governing the appointment of receivers or in the provisions governing derivative shareholder suits, that notice be given to persons who are not parties to the action. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Adjudication of Bankruptcy During Insolvency Proceedings. — Proceedings against an insolvent corporation under this section do not preclude creditors from petitioning to have the corporation adjudged a bankrupt, notwithstanding the action of the State courts. In re McKinnon Co., 237 F. 869 (E.D.N.C. 1916).

Selection of Counsel by Receiver. — When a receiver is directed by the court appointing him to employ counsel to assist him in the discharge of his duties, it is the receiver's duty to select an independent counsel rather than one who is acting for either party in the action. Where there is a perfect identity of interests between the plaintiffs and the receivers or where the parties have consented, the exception may arise, permitting a party's counsel to serve as counsel to the receiver. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 309 N.C. 695, 309 S.E.2d 193 (1983), rehearing denied, 310 N.C. 749, 319 S.E.2d 266 (1984).

Cited in National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 236 N.C. 35, 72 S.E.2d 109 (1952); Savannah Sugar Ref. Co. v. Royal Crown Bottling Co., 259 N.C. 103, 130 S.E.2d 33 (1963).

§ 1-507.2. Powers and bond.

The receiver has power and authority to —

(1) Demand, sue for, collect, receive and take into his possession all the goods and chattels, rights and credits, moneys and effects, lands and tenements, books, papers, choses in action, bills, notes, and property of every description of the corporation.

(2) Foreclose mortgages, deeds of trust, and other liens executed to the corporation.

(3) Institute suits for the recovery of any estate, property, damages, or demands existing in favor of the corporation, and he shall, upon application by him, be substituted as party plaintiff in the place of the corporation in any suit or proceeding pending at the time of his appointment.

(4) Sell, convey, and assign all of the said estate, rights, and interest.

(5) Appoint agents under him.

(6) Examine persons and papers, and pass on claims as elsewhere provided in this part.

(7) Do all other acts which might be done by the corporation, if in being, that are necessary for the final settlement of its unfinished business.

The powers of the receiver may be continued as long as the court thinks necessary, and the receiver shall hold and dispose of the proceeds of all sales of property under the direction of the court, and, before acting, must enter into such bond and comply with such terms as the court prescribes. (Code, s. 668; 1901, c. 2, ss. 74, 84; Rev., ss. 1222, 1231; C.S., s. 1209; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on installment land contracts in North Carolina, see 3 Campbell L. Rev. 29 (1981).

CASE NOTES

Source of Receiver's Authority. — A receiver receives his authority from the applicable statutes, together with the directions and instructions of the court in its order appointing him. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Berry, 2 N.C. App. 547, 163 S.E.2d 505 (1968).

Capacity in Which Receiver Holds and Disposes of Property. — The receiver holds and disposes of all property coming into his hands in his official capacity, under the direction of the court. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Berry, 2 N.C. App. 547, 163 S.E.2d 505 (1968).

Power of Receiver to Sue. — The receiver represents and, in a certain sense, succeeds to the rights of the corporation. There is no valid reason why he may not, representing the corporation and its creditors, bring any and all actions in respect to its assets, or rights of action, which it or its creditors could have brought. Smathers v. Western Carolina Bank, 135 N.C. 410, 47 S.E. 893 (1904).

The receiver may sue either in his own name or that of the corporation. In whichever name he may elect to bring the action, it is essentially a suit by the corporation, prosecuted by order of the court, for the collection of the assets. Gray v. Lewis, 94 N.C. 392 (1886); Davis v. Industrial Mfg. Co., 114 N.C. 321, 19 S.E. 371, 23 L.R.A. 322 (1894); Smathers v. Western Carolina Bank, 135 N.C. 410, 47 S.E. 893 (1904).

Ordinarily the mere appointment of a receiver will not toll the statute of limitations unless the circumstances are such that such appointment precludes the institution of suit. Thus, when a receiver has full authority to institute suit, his appointment will not suspend the running of limitations under § 1-40. Nicholas v. Salisbury Hdwe. & Furn. Co., 248 N.C. 462, 103 S.E.2d 837 (1958).

Scope of Suit by Receivers of Bank. — In a suit by the receivers of a bank, all the rights of the bank, its creditors, and the defendant debtor, both legal and equitable, pertaining to the matters set out in the pleadings, could be adjudicated, and such judgment could be entered as would enforce the rights of the general creditors and also protect any equities that the defendant might be entitled to. Smathers v. Western Carolina Bank, 135 N.C. 410, 47 S.E. 893 (1904). See also, Gray v. Lewis, 94 N.C. 392 (1886); Davis v. Industrial Mfg. Co., 114 N.C. 321, 19 S.E. 371, 23 L.R.A. 322 (1894).

Receiver May Plead Usury. — The plea of usury may be made by the receiver of an insolvent corporation against which a usurious contract is sought to be enforced. Riley v. Sears, 154 N.C. 509, 70 S.E. 997 (1911).

Valid Existing Liens Protected. — The title of a receiver of a private corporation to the corporate property relates back only to the time of his appointment, and it cannot divest the property of valid liens existing at that time. Roberts v. Bowen Mfg. Co., 169 N.C. 27, 85 S.E. 45 (1915).

Power of Receiver After Charter Has Expired. — A receiver appointed under § 1-507.1 to wind up the affairs of a corporation may proceed to collect the assets and to prosecute and defend suits after the corporation has ceased to exist by the expiration of its charter. Asheville Div. No. 15 v. Aston, 92 N.C. 578 (1885).

Power to Make Conveyances. — While subdivision (4) of this section empowers receivers to convey the estate, the receiver of a corporation may not ordinarily dispose of a substantial part of the assets entrusted to him without authority of court, and his sales are subject to confirmation unless authority to convey on specified terms is expressly given. Harrison v. Brown, 222 N.C. 610, 24 S.E.2d 470 (1943).

Deed Held Sufficient to Pass Title. — Where, under a court order, the receiver of an insolvent bank conveyed lands according to the terms of a deed of trust by which the bank held the land, under this section and § 1-507.3 the deed was sufficient in law to pass title. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Hudson, 200 N.C. 688, 158 S.E. 244 (1931).

§ 1-507.3. Title and inventory.

All of the real and personal property of an insolvent corporation, wheresoever situated, and all its franchises, rights, privileges and effects, upon the appointment of a receiver, forthwith vest in him, and the corporation is divested of the title thereto. Within thirty days after his appointment he shall lay before the court a full and complete inventory of all estate, property, and effects of the corporation, its nature and probable value, and an account of all debts due from and to it, as nearly as the same can be ascertained, and shall make a report of his proceedings to the superior court at such times as the court may direct during the continuance of the trust. (1901, c. 2, ss. 75, 80; Rev., ss. 1224, 1225; C.S., s. 1210; 1945, c. 635; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Receiver holds title to property vested in him as an officer of the court. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Berry, 2 N.C. App. 547, 163 S.E.2d 505 (1968).

Nothing in this section suggests that the receiver should take the property free of existing obligations. State ex rel. Eure v. Lawrence, 93 N.C. App. 446, 378 S.E.2d 207 (1989).

For case distinguishing between a receiver appointed as a provisional remedy in an ordinary suit and a corporate receiver, see United States v. McPherson, 631 F. Supp. 269 (M.D.N.C. 1986).

Prior Liens Not Divested. — In the very nature of things, the receiver takes the property of the insolvent debtor subject to the mortgages, judgments and other liens existing at the time of his appointment. This rule is recognized and enforced when the court permits a receiver to sell encumbered property free from liens, and transfers the liens to the proceeds of sale under § 1-507.8. National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 236 N.C. 35, 72 S.E.2d 109 (1952).

The appointment of a receiver does not divest the property of prior existing liens, but the court, through its receiver, receives such property impressed with all existing rights and equities, and the relative ranks of claims and standing of liens remain unaffected by the receivership. Pelletier v. Greenville Lumber Co., 123 N.C. 596, 31 S.E. 855 (1898); Battery Park Bank v. Western Carolina Bank, 127 N.C. 432, 37 S.E. 461 (1900); Fisher v. Western Carolina Bank, 132 N.C. 769, 44 S.E. 601 (1903); Garrison v. Vermont Mills, 154 N.C. 1, 69 S.E. 743 (1910); Witherell v. Murphy, 154 N.C. 82, 69 S.E. 748 (1910).

Effect of Subsequent Judgments. — The title to the property of a corporation vests in the receiver at the time he was duly appointed by the court, from which time the corporation is divested thereof, and a judgment against the corporation entered thereafter, but before the docketing of the order or the qualifying of the receiver thereunder, can acquire no lien in favor of the judgment creditor. Odell Hdwe. Co. v. Holt-Morgan Mills, 173 N.C. 308, 92 S.E. 8 (1917).

A judgment rendered in an independent action after the appointment of a receiver does not create a lien on the corporate property as against the receiver. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Berry, 2 N.C. App. 547, 163 S.E.2d 505 (1968).

A judgment rendered against a corporation does not relate back, by implication of law, to the beginning of the term, so as to create a lien on the corporate property as against the vesting of the title in a receiver who had in the meanwhile been appointed. Odell Hdwe. Co. v. Holt-Morgan Mills, 173 N.C. 308, 92 S.E. 8 (1917).

Where a creditor held an unsecured claim against an insolvent partnership at the time of the appointment of the receiver, and subsequent to that event reduced such claim to judgment in an independent action against the partners, the creditor did not acquire any lien under the judgment on any of the property owned by the defendants as partners, because under this section such property vested in the receiver prior to the rendition of the judgment. National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 236 N.C. 35, 72 S.E.2d 109 (1952).

Effect of Unrecorded Condition in Contract of Conditional Sale. — A receiver has the power of creditors armed with process to disregard or avoid the unrecorded condition in a contract of conditional sale. Observer Co. v. Little, 175 N.C. 42, 94 S.E. 526 (1917).

Insurance Policies Not Forfeited. — The vesting of the property of a corporation in the receiver under this section does not constitute such a change in the "interest, title or possession" of the property as to forfeit insurance policies on the property. Southern Pants Co. v. Rochester German Ins. Co., 159 N.C. 78, 74 S.E. 812 (1912).

Procedure Where Receiver Refuses to Bring Action. — In an action brought by creditors, depositors or stockholders to recover assets belonging to the corporation, the title to which has vested in the receiver, upon his refusal to bring the action the receiver may properly be made a defendant, to the end that the recovery may be subject to orders and decrees by the court, in the judgment as to its application to the claims of creditors and depositors, or to its distribution among stockholders. Douglass v. Dawson, 190 N.C. 458, 130 S.E. 195 (1925).

§ 1-507.4. Foreclosure by receivers and trustees of corporate mortgagees or grantees.

Where real estate has been conveyed by mortgage deed, or deed of trust to any corporation in this State authorized to accept such conveyance for the purpose of securing the notes or bonds of the grantor, and such corporation thereafter shall be placed in the hands of a receiver or trustee in properly instituted court proceedings, then such receiver or trustee under and pursuant to the orders and the decrees of the said court or other court of competent jurisdiction may sell such real property pursuant to the orders and the decrees of the said court or may foreclose and sell such real property as provided in such mortgage deed, or deed of trust, pursuant to the orders and decrees of such court.

All such sales shall be made as directed by the court in the cause in which said receiver is appointed or the said trustee elected, and for the satisfaction and settlement of such notes and bonds secured by such mortgage deed or deed of trust or in such other actions for the sales of the said real property as the said receiver or trustee may institute and all pursuant to the orders and decrees of the court having jurisdiction therein.

All sales of real property made prior to April 10, 1931 by such receiver or trustee of and pursuant to the orders of the courts of competent jurisdiction in such cases, are hereby validated. (1931, c. 265; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2.)

§ 1-507.5. May send for persons and papers; penalty for refusing to answer.

The receiver has power to send for persons and papers, to examine any persons, including the creditors, claimants, president, directors, and other officers and agents of the corporation, on oath or affirmation (which oath or affirmation the receiver may administer), respecting its affairs and transactions and its estate, money, goods, chattels, credits, notes, bills, choses in action, real and personal estate and effects of every kind; and also respecting its debts, obligations, contracts, and liabilities, and the claims against it; and if any person refuses to be sworn or affirmed, or to make answers to such questions as may be put to him, or refuses to declare the whole truth touching the subject matter of the examination, the court may, on report of the receiver, commit such person as for contempt. (1901, c. 2, s. 78; Rev., s. 1227; C.S., s. 1211; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2.)

§ 1-507.6. Proof of claims; time limit.

All claims against an insolvent corporation must be presented to the receiver in writing; and the claimant, if required, shall submit himself to such examination in relation to the claim as the receiver directs, and shall produce such books and papers relating to the claim as shall be required. The receiver has power to examine under oath or affirmation all witnesses produced before him touching the claim, and shall pass upon and allow or disallow the claims or any part thereof, and notify the claimants of his determination. The court may limit the time within which creditors may present and prove to the receiver their respective claims against the corporation, and may bar all creditors and claimants failing to do so within the time limited from participating in the distribution of the assets of the corporation. The court may also prescribe what notice, by publication or otherwise, must be given to creditors of such limitation of time. (1901, c. 2, ss. 81, 82; Rev., ss. 1228, 1229; C.S., s. 1212; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Court May Limit Time for Presentation and Proof of Claims. — This section authorizes the court to limit the time within which creditors may present and prove to the receiver their respective claims against a corporation and may bar all creditors and claimants failing to prove their claims within the time allotted from participating in the distribution of the assets of the corporation. Tractor & Auto Supply Co. v. Fayetteville Tractor & Equip. Co., 2 N.C. App. 531, 163 S.E.2d 510 (1968).

And Should Give Appropriate Notice Thereof. — The court in control of a receivership should fix the time in which any and all claims against the estate of the insolvent debtor are to be presented to the receiver, give appropriate notice to creditors of such limitation of time by publication or otherwise, and postpone any order of distribution until an opportunity has been afforded for the determination of the status of all claims and their order of priority. National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 232 N.C. 98, 59 S.E.2d 593 (1950).

Creditors must file and prove their claims when the court so directs or be barred. Brewer v. Elks, 260 N.C. 470, 133 S.E.2d 159 (1963).

Proof of claims must be filed with the receiver in writing pursuant to this section and within the time limit directed by the court or such claim may be barred. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Berry, 2 N.C. App. 547, 163 S.E.2d 505 (1968).

But Court May Extend Time for Filing. — The court has the discretion to permit the filing of claims subsequent to the time fixed after the appointment of the receiver. Odell Hdwe. Co. v. Holt-Morgan Mills, 173 N.C. 308, 92 S.E. 8 (1917).

Assignment of Claims. — After a receiver is appointed for a bank, a creditor may assign his claim, but such assignment is subject to the receiver's right to set off claims the bank may have against the creditor, and if the assignee of a claim is himself a debtor of the bank he cannot use the assigned claim as a setoff. Davis v. Industrial Mfg. Co., 114 N.C. 321, 19 S.E. 371 (1894).

Power of Receiver to Conduct Examination. — To enable the receiver to decide whether claims are just, the law confers upon him plenary power to examine the claimants and witnesses touching the claims, and to require the production of relevant books and papers. National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 232 N.C. 98, 59 S.E.2d 593 (1950).

Corporate Officer's Burden of Proof. — North Carolina law places on an officer of a corporation the burden of proving that he was not unjustly enriched by his dealing with the corporation. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 103 N.C. App. 479, 405 S.E.2d 794 (1991).

Where officer of corporation engaged in transactions which were not approved by the corporate defendants or shareholders, the burden was on him to prove that the transactions were just and reasonable. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 103 N.C. App. 479, 405 S.E.2d 794 (1991).

Corporate Officer's Failure to Account. — Where a trial court found that a corporate officer's failure to account made it impossible for the receivers to defend against the claims of that officer and his wife against the corporation in liquidation, the trial court was therefore authorized, pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 41(b), to dismiss the claims of the officer and his wife on their receivership in the event that the corporate officer failed to provide an accounting within 30 days of the effective date of the order of the trial court. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 103 N.C. App. 479, 405 S.E.2d 794 (1991).

Burden of Proof on Claimants to Receivership. — Where, in response to claims of a corporate officer and his wife made on the receivership, a judge ordered the court-appointed receivers to retain personal property claimed by the two claimants until there was a comprehensive accounting by the corporate officer to the defendant corporations, the order was consistent with this section, requiring claimants to receivership to prove their claims. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 103 N.C. App. 479, 405 S.E.2d 794 (1991).

As a claimant on the receivership, the wife of a corporate officer bears the burden of proving her claim and as such is subject to all valid defenses. Accordingly, she is subject to the court's authority over the receivership even if she is not a necessary party to the derivative action. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 103 N.C. App. 479, 405 S.E.2d 794 (1991).

Claims Based on Joint Ownership. — A claimant in the liquidation of a corporation has the burden of proving her claims pursuant to this section. With respect to claims based on joint ownership, a defense against the claims of a party count as a defense to the joint claims of a spouse. The trial court was therefore justified in denying all the claims of a wife made jointly with her husband, a corporate officer, until an accounting was made to comply with a court order for the husband to make an accounting to the corporation. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 103 N.C. App. 479, 405 S.E.2d 794 (1991).

§ 1-507.7. Report on claims to court; exceptions and jury trial.

It is the duty of the receiver to report to the session of the superior court subsequent to a finding by him as to any claim against the corporation, and exceptions thereto may be filed by any person interested, within 10 days after notice of the finding by the receiver, and not later than within the first three days of the said term; and, if, on an exception so filed, a jury trial is demanded, it is the duty of the court to prepare a proper issue and submit it to a jury; and if the demand is not made in the exceptions to the report the right to a jury trial is waived. The judge may, in his discretion, extend the time for filing such exceptions. Provided, that no court shall issue any order of distribution or order of discharge of a receiver until said receiver has proved to the satisfaction of the court that written notice has been mailed to the last known address of every claimant who has properly filed claim with the receiver, to the effect that such orders will be applied for at a certain time and place therein set forth and by producing a receipt issued by the United States post office, showing that such notice has been mailed to each of such claimant's last known address at least 20 days prior to the time set for hearing and passing upon such application to the court for said orders of distribution and/or discharge.

As to delinquency proceedings for insurance companies under Article 17A of General Statutes Chapter 58, such prior notice need be given only to those claimants whose presented claims have been denied or have not been adjudicated; and notice is satisfied by mailing either a general notice of application for distribution showing disposition of the claims or a copy of the application to such claimants. Proof of mailing with the United States Postal Service may be made by the receiver's certificate of service without either the necessity of postal receipt or the listing of individual claimants names and addresses. (1901, c. 2, s. 83; Rev., s. 1230; C.S., s. 1213; 1945, c. 219; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2; 1971, c. 381, s. 12; 1985, c. 666, s. 70.)

Editor's Note. — Much of Article 17A of Chapter 58, referred to in this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1989, c. 452, which also enacted an Article 46 of Chapter 58, containing similar provisions to those contained in the repealed sections of Article 17A. Article 46 of Chapter 58 has been recodified as Article 30 of Chapter 58.

CASE NOTES

The term "any person interested" undoubtedly includes a claimant who wishes to resist a finding by the receiver adjudging his claim to be invalid or of less dignity than that alleged by him. Moreover, a creditor who has a valid claim is certainly a "person interested" for the purpose of opposing a report of the receiver allowing the validity or priority of other asserted claims, payment of which will exhaust or reduce the receivership assets otherwise available for the satisfaction of his claim. National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 232 N.C. 98, 59 S.E.2d 593 (1950).

Partner as "Interested Person". — A partner who is individually liable for partnership debts if the partnership assets are insufficient to discharge a claim is unquestionably an "interested person" who may challenge the validity of an asserted partnership obligation. Brewer v. Elks, 260 N.C. 470, 133 S.E.2d 159 (1963).

The power to extend time for filing exceptions to a receiver's report is expressly given by this section. Benson v. Roberson, 226 N.C. 103, 36 S.E.2d 729 (1946).

Effect of Exceptions Not Filed Within Time Prescribed. — Exceptions filed and made a part of the record are not void as a matter of law merely because they are not filed within the first three days of the term of court commencing next after the filing of the receiver's report, in the absence of a motion to strike or order to that effect, and a judgment entered on the ground that such exceptions were not before the court for consideration will be remanded. Benson v. Roberson, 226 N.C. 103, 36 S.E.2d 729 (1946).

Validity of claim must be determined by court. Brewer v. Elks, 260 N.C. 470, 133 S.E.2d 159 (1963).

Refusal to Grant Hearing on Objections Held Error. — Where objections were filed by a creditor of a corporation in the hands of a receiver to an order allowing a claim against such corporation, which order adjudicated material and controverted issues of fact without consent, evidence or findings, it was error to deny a motion to set aside the allowance of such claim and refuse to grant a hearing on such objections alleging facts which if true would constitute a valid defense to such claim. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Tar River Lumber Co., 224 N.C. 432, 31 S.E.2d 353 (1944). See also, Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Tar River Lumber Co., 224 N.C. 153, 29 S.E.2d 348 (1944).

Compliance with Notice Requirement Prerequisite to Discharge. — This section expressly prohibits issuance of order of discharge unless the receiver demonstrates compliance with the notice requirement. John T. Council, Inc. v. Balfour Prods. Group, Inc., 80 N.C. App. 157, 341 S.E.2d 74 (1986).

Determining Claim to Be Preferred Improper Without Notice. — An order of the superior court adjudging that the claim of a particular creditor constituted a preferred claim and ordering the receiver to pay such claim, made without notice, either actual or constructive, to other claimants, is contrary to the established rules of practice and procedure in receivership proceedings. National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 232 N.C. 98, 59 S.E.2d 593 (1950).

Vacation of Order for Failure to Comply with Notice Procedure. — Even where defendant had actual notice of hearing and did not show how it was prejudiced by noncompliance with the prescribed notice procedure, where there was no showing that notice was mailed to each claimant at least 20 days prior to the hearing, the order discharging the receiver would be vacated. John T. Council, Inc. v. Balfour Prods. Group, Inc., 80 N.C. App. 157, 341 S.E.2d 74 (1986).

As to establishment of claim where jury trial waived, see National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 236 N.C. 35, 72 S.E.2d 109 (1952).

§ 1-507.8. Property sold pending litigation.

When the property of an insolvent corporation is at the time of the appointment of a receiver encumbered with mortgages or other liens, the legality of which is brought in question, and the property is of a character materially to deteriorate in value pending the litigation, the court may order the receiver to sell the same, clear of encumbrance, at public or private sale, for the best price that can be obtained, and pay the money into the court, there to remain subject to the same liens and equities of all parties in interest as was the property before sale to be disposed of as the court directs. And the receiver or receivers making such sale is hereby authorized and directed to report to the resident judge of the district or to the judge holding the courts of the district in which the property is sold, the said sale for confirmation, the said report to be made to the said judge in any county in which he may be at the time; but before acting upon said report, the said receiver or receivers shall publish in some newspaper published in the county or in some newspaper of general circulation in the county, where there is no newspaper published in the county, a notice directed to all creditors and persons interested in said property, that the said receiver will make application to the judge (naming him) at a certain place and time for the confirmation of his said report, which said notice shall be published at least 10 days before the time fixed therein for the said hearing. And the said judge is authorized to act upon said report, either confirming it or rejecting the sale; and if he rejects the sale it shall be competent for him to order a new sale and the said order shall have the same force and effect as if made at a regular session of the superior court of the county in which the property is situated. (1901, c. 2, s. 86; Rev., s. 1232; C.S., s. 1214; Ex. Sess. 1924, c. 13; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2; 1971, c. 381, s. 12.)

CASE NOTES

As to the applicability of this section to pending litigation, see Martin v. Valaningham, 189 N.C. 656, 127 S.E. 695 (1925).

Stated in State ex rel. Eure v. Lawrence, 93 N.C. App. 446, 378 S.E.2d 207 (1989).

§ 1-507.9. Compensation and expenses; counsel fees.

Before distribution of the assets of an insolvent corporation among the creditors or stockholders, the court shall allow a reasonable compensation to the receiver for his services, not to exceed five percent upon receipts and disbursements, and the costs and expenses of administration of his trust and of the proceedings in said court, to be first paid out of said assets. The court is authorized and empowered to allow counsel fees to an attorney serving as a receiver (in addition to the commissions allowed him as receiver as herein provided) where such attorney in behalf of the receivership renders professional services, as an attorney, which are beyond the ordinary routine of a receivership and of a type which would reasonably justify the retention of legal counsel by any such receiver not himself licensed to practice law. (1901, c. 2, s. 88; Rev., s. 1226; C.S., s. 1215; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2; 1967, c. 32.)

CASE NOTES

The effect of this section is to take from the funds of the insolvent corporation a sufficient sum to pay all the costs, allowances and legitimate expenses, and then to distribute what is left according to priority. Hickson Lumber Co. v. Gay Lumber Co., 150 N.C. 281, 63 S.E. 1048 (1909).

Allowance of Costs Affects a Substantial Right of Creditors. — The allowance of the costs of administration of a receivership of an insolvent corporation made by a court affects a substantial right of the creditors, in that it disposes of a part of the assets of the insolvent corporation, and is a reduction to that extent of the amounts to which the creditors are entitled under their claims against it. King v. Premo & King, Inc., 258 N.C. 701, 129 S.E.2d 493 (1963).

Items Included in Costs. — Costs of administration of a receivership include, inter alia, such items as the following: (1) Court costs in proceedings relating to the receivership; (2) Compensation for the receiver; (3) Reasonable and proper compensation for the receiver's attorney for services which require legal knowledge and skill and which were rendered to the receiver for the benefit of the receivership; (4) Costs of conserving property in receivership; (5) Costs of sales of property in receivership; (6) Premiums for fire insurance on property in receivership; (7) Bookkeeping, clerical and accounting expense and postage in connection with the administration of the receivership; (8) Payment of all taxes on property real or personal in the possession of the receiver which fall due during the time he is in possession as receiver, or which have accrued upon the property in his possession prior to his appointment. King v. Premo & King, Inc., 258 N.C. 701, 129 S.E.2d 493 (1963).

Costs of administration include such items as the following: (1) Court costs in proceedings relating to the receivership; (2) Compensation for the receiver; (3) Compensation for the receiver's attorney; (4) Bookkeeping and clerical expense; (5) Auditing expense; (6) Premiums for fire insurance on property in receivership; (7) Compensation for watchmen for services in guarding property in receivership; and (8) Costs of sale of property in receivership. National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 236 N.C. 35, 72 S.E.2d 109 (1952).

Costs and expenses of receivership are generally limited to taxes and those costs and expenses necessary to preserve the estate for the benefit of all persons interested, and are payable, primarily, out of the fund in the hands of the receiver, but if necessary, out of the corpus of the estate in the custody of the court. National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 236 N.C. 35, 72 S.E.2d 109 (1952).

Commissions payable to a receiver are part of the costs and expenses of the suit in which he is appointed, and should be paid as such instead of being classed as a debt payable pro rata with other debts. Wilson Cotton Mills v. Randleman Cotton Mills, 115 N.C. 475, 20 S.E. 770 (1894), rehearing denied, 116 N.C. 647, 21 S.E. 431 (1895).

Section Limits Commissions to Five Percent. — A rate not exceeding five percent on receipts and five percent on disbursements is the statutory limit of a receiver's commissions. Battery Park Bank v. Western Carolina Bank, 126 N.C. 531, 36 S.E. 39 (1900).

But this section does not state that a receiver is entitled to a five percent commission upon receipts and disbursements. Rather, it states that "the court shall allow a reasonable compensation to the receiver for his services, not to exceed five percent upon receipts and disbursements." King v. Premo & King, Inc., 258 N.C. 701, 129 S.E.2d 493 (1963).

Commission May Be Divided Between Parties. — An allowance to a receiver is a part of the costs of the action and usually taxable against the losing party, but the court below may, in its discretion, divide it between the parties, as in the case of referees' fees. Simmons v. Allison, 119 N.C. 556, 26 S.E. 171 (1896).

Counsel Fees Not Allowed for Collecting Assets of Estate. — A receiver is not entitled to allowance for the services of an attorney in hunting up and taking into possession the property belonging to the estate, since it is the personal duty of the receiver to look after such matters. King v. Premo & King, Inc., 258 N.C. 701, 129 S.E.2d 493 (1963).

Nor for Duties Not Requiring Legal Skill. — The contacting of purchasers, the showing of property for sale, the sales and resales of property, and the accounting and bookkeeping in respect to the administration of the receivership require no legal knowledge and skill, and are the performance of ordinary duties, which may and should be performed by the receiver himself and are not the subject of an allowance of counsel fees. King v. Premo & King, Inc., 258 N.C. 701, 129 S.E.2d 493 (1963).

Counsel Fees Where Employment Unlawful Because of Conflict of Interest. — Where the employment of an attorney by a receiver is unlawful by reason of his employment by an adverse party, he should not for that reason be denied a reasonable compensation for services which were necessary or valuable to the receiver, when performed with the usual fidelity and ability. Charges properly excluded would be for services rendered in a manner influenced by the attorney's professional connection with the adverse party. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 309 N.C. 695, 309 S.E.2d 193 (1983), rehearing denied, 310 N.C. 749, 319 S.E.2d 266 (1984).

The court may charge against the interest of lienholders expenses incurred by the receiver in preserving and selling the property subject to the liens and in applying the cash realized by its sale upon the claims of the lienholders. As a general rule, however, expenses of this character will not be charged against the interests of lienholders where unencumbered assets are available for their payment. National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 236 N.C. 35, 72 S.E.2d 109 (1952).

For case distinguishing costs of administration and expenses of operation, see National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 236 N.C. 35, 72 S.E.2d 109 (1952).

Costs of administration are preferred in payment to expenses of operation. National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 236 N.C. 35, 72 S.E.2d 109 (1952).

Expenses of Operation Subordinate to Claims of Nonconsenting Lienholders. — Indebtedness incurred by a receiver for the expenses of carrying on and operating the business of an insolvent private concern owing no duty to the public cannot be given priority over the claims of nonconsenting lienholders to the corpus of the property. National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 236 N.C. 35, 72 S.E.2d 109 (1952).

Application of First Assets to Costs. — Under this section, the first assets that are the property of the corporation must be applied to the costs of the proceedings in court, including the fees of the receiver and referee, and except as to private corporations, receivers' certificates issued in operation of the plant, under the orders of the court, and liabilities incurred for labor, and torts. Hickson Lumber Co. v. Gay Lumber Co., 150 N.C. 281, 63 S.E. 1048 (1909); Humphrey Bros. v. Buell-Crocker Lumber Co., 174 N.C. 514, 93 S.E. 971 (1917).

When Costs Take Priority over Mortgage. — One who takes a mortgage upon corporation property for money loaned to operate it or to secure other debts, past or prospective, does so with the knowledge that, under this section, the lien of his mortgage is subject to be displaced in favor of the expenses of receivership; but when the corporation has acquired the property subject to a valid registered mortgage, then the costs of receivership are not prior to that mortgage. Humphrey Bros. v. Buell-Crocker Lumber Co., 174 N.C. 514, 93 S.E. 971 (1917).

Allowance of Commissions Held Premature. — The allowance of commissions to receivers appointed by the court, by consent, to finish partially constructed waterworks, was premature before the work was finished, as it could not be determined whether such allowance was excessive or too little. Delafield v. Mercer Constr. Co., 118 N.C. 105, 24 S.E. 10 (1896).

Allowance of Costs Is Subject to Review. — That the amount of the allowance of costs by the superior court of attorney's fees is reviewable is well settled. King v. Premo & King, Inc., 258 N.C. 701, 129 S.E.2d 493 (1963).

Review of Compensation of Persons Employed to Assist Receiver. — Those employed by a receiver to assist in the administration of a receivership should understand that their compensation is subject to trial court review and approval. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 309 N.C. 695, 309 S.E.2d 193 (1983), rehearing denied, 310 N.C. 749, 319 S.E.2d 266 (1984).

The allowance of commissions and counsel fees to a receiver by the superior court is prima facie correct, and the appellate court will not alter or modify the same unless based on the wrong principle, or clearly inadequate or excessive. Graham v. Carr, 133 N.C. 449, 45 S.E. 847 (1903); King v. Premo &

King, Inc., 258 N.C. 701, 129 S.E.2d 493 (1963); Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 309 N.C. 695, 309 S.E.2d 193 (1983), rehearing denied, 310 N.C. 749, 319 S.E.2d 266 (1984).

When the order of the court below allowing commissions to a receiver for services as such is appealed from, and there is no suggestion that the amount was excessive or based upon a wrong principle, the order will not be disturbed. Talbot v. Tyson, 147 N.C. 273, 60 S.E. 1125 (1908).

§ 1-507.10. Debts provided for, receiver discharged.

When a receiver has been appointed, and it afterwards appears that the debts of the corporation have been paid, or provided for, and that there remains, or can be obtained by further contributions, sufficient capital to enable it to resume its business, the court may, in its discretion, a proper case being shown, discharge the receiver, and decree that the property, rights, and franchises of the corporation revert to it, and thereafter the corporation may resume control of the same, as fully as if the receiver had never been appointed. (1901, c. 2, s. 76; Rev., s. 1220; C.S., s. 1216; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Discharged Receiver Held Not a Proper Party. — Where the receiver of an insolvent railroad company had been discharged, he was not a proper party to an action against a foreclosure purchaser to recover for personal injuries suffered after his discharge. Howe v. Harper, 127 N.C. 356, 37 S.E. 505 (1900).

§ 1-507.11. Reorganization.

When a majority in interest of the stockholders of the corporation have agreed upon a plan for its reorganization and a resumption by it of the management and control of its property and business, the corporation may, with the consent of the court, upon the reconveyance to it of its property and franchises, either by deed or decree of the court, mortgage the same for an amount necessary for the purposes of the reorganization; and may issue bonds or other evidences of indebtedness, or additional stock, or both, and use the same for the full or partial payment of the creditors who will accept the same, or otherwise dispose of the same for the purposes of the reorganization. (1901, c. 2, s. 77; Rev., s. 1221; C.S., s. 1217; 1955, c. 1371, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Power of Superior Court to Approve Reorganization. — This section gives the superior court, in a receivership, power to approve a plan for the reorganization of a corporation which provides for the readjustment of the company's capital structure, when approved by a majority in interest of the stockholders; but it cannot affect either the rights of dissenting stockholders not parties to the receivership or the vested rights of parties to the proceedings unless they fail to appear. Commercial Nat'l Bank v. Mooresville Cotton Mills, 222 N.C. 305, 22 S.E.2d 913 (1942).

Where a corporation engaged in business transfers its entire property rights and franchise to a new company incorporated and organized by the same stockholders and directors as the old, and the new company continues the business and adopts the contracts of its predecessor, the effect of such a merger is to create a novation so far as the creditors of the old company are concerned, and to substitute the new one as debtor, and in such case it is not necessary to obtain the consent of the creditors of the old company to the change. Friedenwald Co. v. Asheville Tobacco Works & Cigarette Co., 117 N.C. 544, 23 S.E. 490 (1895).

New Corporation Assumes Contracts of Old. — Where, by merger of an old into a new corporation, a novation of the debts of the old is created, the new corporation is, to all intents and purposes, the same body and answerable for its own contracts made under a different name. Friedenwald Co. v. Asheville Tobacco Works & Cigarette Co., 117 N.C. 544, 23 S.E. 490 (1895).

Duty of Fiduciaries. — In the reorganization of a corporation under this section, executors, trustees and other fiduciaries holding stock in the corporation not only have the right, but also the duty, to assert whatever legal rights they may have which in their opinion will be for the best interest of the estates involved. Commercial Nat'l Bank v. Mooresville Cotton Mills, 222 N.C. 305, 22 S.E.2d 913 (1942).

For case distinguishing between a receiver appointed as a provisional remedy in an ordinary suit, and a corporate receiver, see United States v. McPherson, 631 F. Supp. 269 (M.D.N.C. 1986).

Deposit or Delivery of Money or Other Property.

§ 1-508. Ordered paid into court.

When it is admitted by the pleading or examination of a party that he has in his possession or under his control any money or other thing capable of delivery, which, being the subject of the litigation, is held by him as trustee for another party, or which belongs or is due to another party, the judge may order it deposited in court, or delivered to such party with or without security, subject to the further direction of the judge. (C.C.P., s. 215; Code, s. 380; Rev., s. 850; C.S., s. 863.)

CASE NOTES

When Custodian May Retain Fund. — Absent threatened irreparable damage or loss of a fund, it will be suffered to remain in the hands of the party who in law is entitled to its custody and care. Thompson v. McNair, 62 N.C. 121 (1867); L. Levenson & Co. v. Elson, 88 N.C. 182 (1883).

When Court Will Retain Fund. — When a disputed fund is in the possession and under the control of the court, and the right of a claimant is doubtful, it will be retained until the determination of the controversy, when it can be ascertained to whom it belongs. Ponton v. McAdoo, 71 N.C. 101 (1874); Morris v. Willard, 84 N.C. 293 (1881); L. Levenson & Co. v. Elson, 88 N.C. 182 (1883).

Court Authorized to Order Money Delivered to Party. — Where a tenant, upon the uncontroverted facts, is entitled as a matter of law to the proceeds of a crop insurance policy paid into court by an insurer, free from the landlord's crop lien for advancements, the court has authority under this section to order that such fund be to the tenant. Peoples v. United States Fire Ins. Co., 248 N.C. 303, 103 S.E.2d 381 (1958).

Stated in Rivenbark v. Southmark Corp., 93 N.C. App. 414, 378 S.E.2d 196 (1989).

§ 1-509. Ordered seized by sheriff.

When, in the exercise of his authority, a judge has ordered the deposit, delivery or conveyance of money or other property, and the order is disobeyed, the judge, besides punishing the disobedience as for contempt, may make an order requiring the sheriff to take the money or property, and deposit, deliver, or convey it, in conformity with the direction of the judge. (C.C.P., s. 215; Code, s. 381; Rev., s. 851; C.S., s. 864.)

§ 1-510. Defendant ordered to satisfy admitted sum.

When the answer of the defendant expressly, or by not denying, admits part of the plaintiff's claim to be just, the judge, on motion, may order the defendant to satisfy that part of the claim, and may enforce the order as it enforces a judgment or provisional remedy. (C.C.P., s. 215; Code, s. 382; Rev., s. 852; C.S., s. 865.)

CASE NOTES

This section may not be invoked where its application would give sanction to piecemeal recoveries which would be essentially inconsistent. Universal C.I.T. Credit Corp. v. Saunders, 235 N.C. 369, 70 S.E.2d 176 (1952).

Where the complaint in an action on two notes set out each note as a separate cause of action and the defendant answered as to one only, it was error to refuse judgment on the note to which no defense was interposed, and from such refusal, being a denial of a substantial right, an appeal was properly taken. In such case judgment should have been given on the one note and the cause continued as to the other. Curran v. Kerchner, 117 N.C. 264, 23 S.E. 177 (1895).

Where, in an action on a note, the defendants admitted liability in a certain part thereof, but denied liability for the balance, an order directing that plaintiff recover the amount admitted to be due without prejudice to plaintiff's right to litigate the balance of the note was authorized by this section. Meadows Fertilizer Co. v. Farmers Trading Co., 203 N.C. 261, 165 S.E. 694 (1932).

§ 1-514. Writs of sci. fa. and quo warranto abolished.

The writs of scire facias and of quo warranto, and proceedings by information in the nature of quo warranto, are abolished; and the remedies obtainable in those forms may be obtained by civil actions under this Article. To the extent that rules of procedure are not provided for in this Article, the Rules of Civil Procedure shall apply. (R.C., c. 26, ss. 5, 25; C.C.P., s. 362; Code, s. 603; Rev., s. 286; C.S., s. 869; 1967, c. 954, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Some Aspects of the Criminal Court Process in North Carolina," see 49 N.C.L. Rev. 469 (1971).

For article, "Removing Local Elected Officials From Office in North Carolina," see 16 Wake Forest L. Rev. 547 (1980).

CASE NOTES

This Article prescribes a specific mode for trying the title to a public office. Such relief is to be sought in a civil action. State ex rel. Freeman v. Ponder, 234 N.C. 294, 67 S.E.2d 292 (1951).

Title to a public office can only be determined in a direct proceeding brought for that purpose under the statutes incorporated in this Article. Corey v. Hardison, 236 N.C. 147, 72 S.E.2d 416 (1952).

Though for convenience the action of quo warranto is still spoken of, it must be remembered that the action has been specifically abolished, and there is in fact only a civil action in which the subject matter is a trial of the title to an office. Cozart v. Fleming, 123 N.C. 547, 31 S.E. 822 (1898).

Interest of Public in Determining Title to Office. — Although the proceeding by information in the nature of the writ of quo warranto has been abolished, the remedy to be pursued whenever the controversy is as to the validity of an election, or the right to hold a public office, is by an action in the nature of a writ of quo warranto. It is not merely an action to redress the grievance of a private person who claims a right to the office; rather, the public has an interest in the question which the legislature seems to have considered paramount to that of the private rights of the persons aggrieved. Hence, the requirement that such actions must be brought by the Attorney General in the name of the people of the State, and upon his own information without the relation of a private person when the person aggrieved does not see proper to assert his right. And when the claimant does seek redress, he must be joined in the action, but still it must be brought by the Attorney General in the name of the people. Patterson v. Hubbs, 65 N.C. 119 (1871); People ex rel. Nichols v. McKee, 68 N.C. 429 (1873); Brown v. Turner, 70 N.C. 93 (1874); People ex rel. Hargrove v. Hilliard, 72 N.C. 169 (1875); Hargrove ex rel. Tuck v. Hunt, 73 N.C. 24 (1875); Saunders v. Gatling, 81 N.C. 298 (1879).

Object of Former Writ of Scire Facias. — Writs of scire facias consisted of two classes: The object of the first class was to remedy defects in or to continue an action; that of the second class, to commence some proceeding. McDowell v. Asbury, 66 N.C. 444 (1872).

Substance of Remedy Not Affected by Section. — Proceedings in the nature of a scire facias of the first class are almost indispensable in the administration of justice, and the object of this section was merely to abolish the name and form of writs of this class and simplify the process into a notice or summons to show cause why further proceedings should not be had to provide further relief in matters where parties had had a day in court, etc., and not to affect the substance of the remedy. On such motion the judge may allow the defendant to make any defense of which he could have availed himself under the old scire facias proceeding. McDowell v. Asbury, 66 N.C. 444 (1872).

For historical discussion, see State ex rel. Giles v. Hardie, 23 N.C. 42 (1840); Ex parte Daughtry, 28 N.C. 155 (1845); Saunders v. Gatling, 81 N.C. 298 (1879); State ex rel. Foard v. Hall, 111 N.C. 369, 16 S.E. 420 (1892).

Applied in Stephens v. Dowell, 208 N.C. 555, 181 S.E. 629 (1935); Swaringen v. Poplin, 211 N.C. 700, 191 S.E. 746 (1937).

§ 1-515. Action by Attorney General.

An action may be brought by the Attorney General in the name of the State, upon his own information or upon the complaint of a private party, against the party offending, in the following cases:

(1) When a person usurps, intrudes into, or unlawfully holds or exercises any public office, civil or military, or any franchise within this State, or any office in a corporation created by the authority of this State; or,

(2) When a public officer, civil or military, has done or suffered an act which, by law, makes a forfeiture of his office.

(3) When any person, natural or corporate, has or claims to have or hold any rights or franchises by reason of a grant or otherwise, in violation of the provisions of G.S. 146-39. (C.C.P., s. 366; Code, s. 607; Rev., s. 827; 1911, cc. 195, 201; C.S., s. 870; 1983, c. 768, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to actions by the Attorney General in the name of the State to vacate land grants, see § 146-63.

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on taxpayers' actions, see 13 Wake Forest L. Rev. 397 (1977).

CASE NOTES

Scope of Provisions. — This and the subsequent sections provide for the fullest relief to the rightful claimant against an unlawful intrusion, and thereby dispense with the need of recourse to another process, unless those required to induct still refuse to do so after the motion of the intruder by the judgment of the court; and then they may be compelled to proceed in the discharge of their duties. As the statutory remedy is ample, so where it can be had and made effectual, it is the only mode of deciding the conflicting claims to office by an adjudication between the contesting parties. Ellison v. Aldermen of Raleigh, 89 N.C. 125 (1883).

Actions of this character may be instituted in the name of the State on the relation of the Attorney General or of any individual who is a citizen and taxpayer of the jurisdiction where the officer is to exercise his duties and powers. Saunders v. Gatling, 81 N.C. 298 (1879); State ex rel. Foard v. Hall, 111 N.C. 369, 16 S.E. 420 (1892); State ex rel. Hines v. Vann, 118 N.C. 3, 23 S.E. 932 (1896); State ex rel. Haughtalling v. Taylor, 122 N.C. 141, 122 N.C. 171, 29 S.E. 101, 29 S.E. 101 (1898).

A private person cannot institute or maintain an action of this character in his own name or upon his own authority, even if he is a claimant of the office. The action must be brought and prosecuted in the name of the State by the Attorney General or in the name of the State upon the relation of a private person who claims to be entitled to the office, or in the name of the State upon the relation of a private person who is a citizen and taxpayer of the jurisdiction where the officer is to exercise his duties and powers. State ex rel. Freeman v. Ponder, 234 N.C. 294, 67 S.E.2d 292 (1951).

Relator need not allege title to the office or interest therein. State ex rel. Foard v. Hall, 111 N.C. 369, 16 S.E. 420 (1892).

But the action is nonetheless personal as to the parties claiming the office, the issue between them being the right to the same. Rhodes v. Love, 153 N.C. 468, 69 S.E. 436 (1910). See also, Ellison v. Aldermen of Raleigh, 89 N.C. 125 (1883).

It is not permissible to try the title to an office by injunction or mandamus; a civil action in the nature of quo warranto is the appropriate remedy, to be tried before a judge and jury. Ellison v. Aldermen of Raleigh, 89 N.C. 125 (1883); Lyon v. Board of Comm'rs, 120 N.C. 237, 26 S.E. 929 (1897); Cozart v. Fleming, 123 N.C. 547, 31 S.E. 822 (1898).

Procedure for Determining Title to Public Office. — One of the chief purposes of quo warranto or an information in the nature of quo warranto is to try the title to an office. This is the method prescribed for settling a controversy between rival claimants when one is in possession of the office under a claim of right and in the exercise of official functions or the performance of official duties; and the jurisdiction of the superior court in this behalf has never been abdicated in favor of the board of county canvassers or other officers of an election. Swaringen v. Poplin, 211 N.C. 700, 191 S.E. 746 (1937), citing Harkrader v. Lawrence, 190 N.C. 441, 130 S.E. 35 (1925). See also, State ex rel. Giles v. Hardie, 23 N.C. 42 (1840); Ex parte Daughtry, 28 N.C. 155 (1845); Saunders v. Gatling, 81 N.C. 298 (1879).

The title to a public office in dispute between two rival claimants must be determined by an action in the nature of quo warranto, especially when the defendant is in possession of the office under a claim of right in him to hold it and exercise its function or perform its duties; and a mandamus to compel the surrender of the books and papers will not lie until the claimant has established the disputed title. Rogers v. Powell, 174 N.C. 388, 93 S.E. 917 (1917). See also, State ex rel. Burke v. Commissioners of Bessemer City, 148 N.C. 46, 61 S.E. 609 (1908).

Remedy to Determine Validity of Election. — A civil action in the nature of a writ of quo warranto is the appropriate remedy to test the validity of an election of the right to a public office. Such action must be brought in the name of the people of the State by the Attorney General on the relation of the party aggrieved. Saunders v. Gatling, 81 N.C. 298 (1879); Davis v. Moss, 81 N.C. 303 (1879).

A tabulation of the result of an election by the clerk, in the manner required by law, is prima facie correct, and can only be questioned in an action in the nature of a quo warranto proceeding. Swain v. McRae, 80 N.C. 111 (1879); Gatling v. Boone, 98 N.C. 573, 3 S.E. 392 (1887); Cozart v. Fleming, 123 N.C. 547, 31 S.E. 822 (1898).

The certificate of election of an officer, or his commission coming from the proper source, is prima facie evidence in favor of the holder, and in every proceeding except a direct one to try the title of such holder it is conclusive; but in quo warranto the court will go behind the certificate or commission, and inquire into the validity of the election or appointment and decide the legal rights of the parties upon full investigation of the facts. Lyon v. Board of Comm'rs, 120 N.C. 237, 26 S.E. 929 (1897).

How Right to Judge's Office Determined. — For all practical purposes, a judge de facto is a judge de jure as to all parties other than the State itself. His right or title to his office cannot be impeached in a habeas corpus proceeding or in any other collateral way. It cannot be questioned except in a direct proceeding brought against him for that purpose by the Attorney General in the name of the State, upon his own information or upon the complaint of a private person. In re Wingler, 231 N.C. 560, 58 S.E.2d 372 (1950).

An action against a judge of probate to vacate his office is properly brought by the Attorney General under this section. Patterson v. Hubbs, 65 N.C. 119 (1871); People ex rel. Att'y Gen. v. Heaton, 77 N.C. 18 (1877).

Determination of Right to Hold Two Offices. — A citizen and taxpayer of a county is entitled to bring an action in the nature of quo warranto to try the right of a person to hold two offices in such county at the same time. State ex rel. Foard v. Hall, 111 N.C. 369, 16 S.E. 420 (1892); State ex rel. Hines v. Vann, 118 N.C. 3, 23 S.E. 932 (1896); State ex rel. Barnhill v. Thompson, 122 N.C. 493, 29 S.E. 720 (1898).

Where board of county canvassers illegally determined that one who had been elected to the office of register of deeds was not so elected, and that his opponent had been elected, but the latter failed to qualify and enter upon the duties of the office, whereupon the board of county commissioners declared the office vacant and appointed a third party, this could not in anywise affect the right of the duly elected officer to have the action of the board of canvassers revised by the courts in an action under this section. State ex rel. Roberts v. Calvert, 98 N.C. 580, 4 S.E. 127 (1887).

Recount of Ballots. — Preservation of ballots is required that they may be kept as evidence to certify or correct election returns when impeached, and on a quo warranto the ballot boxes may be brought into court and the recount made in the presence of the court and jury. Broughton v. Young, 119 N.C. 915, 27 S.E. 277 (1896); Cozart v. Fleming, 123 N.C. 547, 31 S.E. 822 (1898).

Quo Warranto Is Not Proper Remedy to Test Validity of Tax. — Quo warranto is the sole remedy to test the validity of an election to public office, but not to test the validity of a tax, even though it is levied under the authority of a popular election. Barbee v. Board of Comm'rs, 210 N.C. 717, 188 S.E. 314 (1936).

No Jurisdiction in Courts to Determine Contest for a Seat in the General Assembly. — The Constitution of North Carolina withdraws from the consideration of North Carolina courts the question of title involved in a contest for a seat in the General Assembly, and an action in quo warranto will not lie under this section. State ex rel. Alexander v. Pharr, 179 N.C. 699, 103 S.E. 8 (1920).

What Is a Public Office. — An office such as properly comes within the legitimate scope of a quo warranto information may be defined as a public position to which a portion of the sovereignty of the county, either legislative, executive or judicial, attaches for the time being, and which is exercised for the benefit of the public. High Ex. Leg. Rem., § 620; Eliason v. Coleman, 86 N.C. 235 (1882).

The statute has reference to such usurping occupants as are exercising public functions or conferred franchises wrongfully; it is confined to an office which is a part of the government and part of the State policy, and to an officer who takes part in the government. Eliason v. Coleman, 86 N.C. 235 (1882). See also, People ex rel. Nichols v. McKee, 68 N.C. 429 (1873).

The true test of a public office is that it is a parcel of the administration of government, civil or military, or is itself created directly by the law-making power; and an information in the nature of a quo warranto only will lie to recover the same. Eliason v. Coleman, 86 N.C. 235 (1882).

While it has often been a matter of controversy what shall be said to be a public office, a town clerk, recorder, and clerk of the peace, a constable, and even a sexton, a parish clerk, and clerk of the city works are officers of such a public character as to come within the rule. Rhodes v. Love, 153 N.C. 468, 69 S.E. 436 (1910).

Chief of Police. — The office of chief of police is such an office that an action in the nature of a quo warranto may be brought to try the title to it. State ex rel. Foard v. Hall, 111 N.C. 369, 16 S.E. 420 (1892).

Chief Engineer. — This section did not authorize a quo warranto as to the office of chief engineer in a quasi private corporation, namely the Western North Carolina R.R. Company. Eliason v. Coleman, 86 N.C. 235 (1882); State ex rel. Foard v. Hall, 111 N.C. 369, 16 S.E. 420 (1892).

The business of selling liquor is not an office so that the defendant's right to it shall be tested by an action in the nature of a quo warranto under this section. Hargett v. Bell, 134 N.C. 394, 46 S.E. 749 (1904).

The wrongful occupant must have entered under color of authority and not be a mere usurper, in the restricted sense of that term, to put the rightful claimant to the necessity of a resort to this remedy. Ellison v. Aldermen of Raleigh, 89 N.C. 125 (1883).

As to allegation that defendant has usurped and is illegally exercising duties of office, see Cozart v. Fleming, 123 N.C. 547, 31 S.E. 822 (1898).

Defendant's testimony concerning hearings held by a county board of elections was not hearsay, as defendant testified only as to what he had done, and he did not testify as to the results of the inquiry to the board of elections. Such evidence was relevant to the issue before the jury, that is, whether defendant has usurped, intruded into, or unlawfully held his public office. State ex rel. Everett v. Hardy, 65 N.C. App. 350, 309 S.E.2d 280 (1983).

Scope of Review on Appeal. — The facts found by the referee as to the result of an election in a proceeding in the nature of a quo warranto, approved by the trial judge, are not subject to review on appeal when supported by competent evidence. State ex rel. Robertson v. Jackson, 183 N.C. 695, 110 S.E. 593 (1922).

The question of fraud in the returns of the county board of canvassers as to those voting in an election, in proceedings in the nature of a quo warranto to determine the rights of contestants for a public office, is eliminated on appeal, when the report of the referee, approved by the trial judge, finds an absence of fraud, upon competent evidence. ## § 1-516. Action by private person with leave.

When application is made to the Attorney General by a private relator to bring such an action, he shall grant leave that it may be brought in the name of the State, upon the relation of such applicant, upon the applicant tendering to the Attorney General satisfactory security to indemnify the State against all costs and expenses which may accrue in consequence of the action. (1874-5, c. 76; 1881, c. 330; Code, s. 608; Rev., s. 828; C.S., s. 871.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section, allowing the prosecution of an action in the name of the State to assert the right of a citizen to a public office, is not, for that reason, unconstitutional. McCall v. Webb, 135 N.C. 356, 47 S.E. 802 (1904).

The right to proceed by an action in the nature of a quo warranto information is not guaranteed to every citizen, and can only be prosecuted by leave of the Attorney General. Ellison v. Aldermen of Raleigh, 89 N.C. 125 (1883).

Prerequisites to Prosecution of Action by Private Person. — Before any private person can commence or maintain an action of this nature in the capacity of a relator, he must apply to the Attorney General for permission to bring the action, tender to the Attorney General satisfactory security to indemnify the State against all costs and expenses incident to the action, and obtain leave from the Attorney General to bring the action in the name of the State upon his relation. State ex rel. Freeman v. Ponder, 234 N.C. 294, 67 S.E.2d 292 (1951).

In proceedings under this section and § 1-514 to try title to a public office, the interest of the public is involved and is paramount to the rights of the relator, and the consent of the Attorney General, the filing of the bond, etc., as required by this section, are prerequisites to the right of the relator to maintain the action. Cooper v. Crisco, 201 N.C. 739, 161 S.E. 310 (1931).

Applicability of Statutory Conditions to Second Suit After Voluntary Nonsuit. — Common-law procedure by quo warranto, and proceedings by information in the nature thereof have been abolished by § 1-514 and the remedy in such matters is under the provisions of this section. And where the relator has complied with these conditions and takes a voluntary nonsuit and within a year brings another action upon the same subject matter against the same respondent, but fails to obtain permission to bring the second action or to file bond therefor until the day before judgment is signed, his delay is fatal and the action is properly dismissed, it being necessary that the provisions of the section be again complied with before the bringing of the second action. Cooper v. Crisco, 201 N.C. 739, 161 S.E. 310 (1931).

Judge Cannot Confer Power to Prosecute Action. — Where a relator had no leave from the Attorney General permitting him to sue as such, he was incapacitated by law to prosecute the action, and the trial judge could not confer upon him the legal power denied to him by positive legislative enactment through the simple expedient of designating him a party-plaintiff and treating his answer as a complaint. State ex rel. Freeman v. Ponder, 234 N.C. 294, 67 S.E.2d 292 (1951).

Applied in State ex rel. Midgett v. Gray, 159 N.C. 443, 74 S.E. 1050 (1912); State ex rel. Grimes v. Holmes, 207 N.C. 293, 176 S.E. 746 (1934).

Cited in Bouldin v. Davis, 197 N.C. 731, 150 S.E. 507 (1929); Barbee v. Board of Comm'rs, 210 N.C. 717, 188 S.E. 314 (1936).

§ 1-517. Solvent sureties required.

The Attorney General, before granting leave to a private relator to bring a suit to try the title to an office, may require two sureties to the bond required by law to be filed to indemnify the State against costs and expenses, and require such sureties to justify, and may require such proof and evidence of the solvency of the sureties as is satisfactory to him. (1901, c. 595, s. 2; Rev., s. 829; C.S., s. 872.)

§ 1-518. Leave withdrawn and action dismissed for insufficient bond.

When the Attorney General has granted leave to a private relator to bring an action in the name of the State to try the title to an office, and it afterwards is shown to the satisfaction of the Attorney General that the bond filed by the private relator is insufficient, or that the sureties are insolvent, the Attorney General may recall and revoke such leave, and upon a certificate of the withdrawal and revocation by the Attorney General to the clerk of the court of the county where the action is pending, it is the duty of the presiding judge, upon motion of the defendant, to dismiss the action. (1891, c. 595; Rev., s. 830; C.S., s. 873.)

§ 1-519. Arrest and bail of defendant usurping office.

When action is brought against a person for usurping an office, the Attorney General, in addition to the statement of the cause of action, may set forth in the complaint the name of the person rightfully entitled to the office, with a statement of his right thereto; and in such case, upon proof by affidavit that the defendant has received fees or emoluments belonging to and by means of his usurpation of the office, an order shall be granted by a judge of the superior court for the arrest of the defendant, and holding him to bail; and thereupon he shall be arrested and held to bail in the same manner, and with the same effect, and subject to the same rights and liabilities, as in other civil actions where the defendant is subject to arrest. (C.C.P., s. 369; 1883, c. 102; Code, s. 609; Rev., s. 831; C.S., s. 874.)

Cross References. — As to arrest and bail in civil actions, see § 1-409 et seq.

§ 1-520. Several claims tried in one action.

Where several persons claim to be entitled to the same office or franchise, one action may be brought against all of them, in order to try their respective rights to the office or franchise. (C.C.P., s. 374; Code, s. 614; Rev., s. 832; C.S., s. 875.)

§ 1-521. Trials expedited.

All actions to try the title or right to any State, county or municipal office shall stand for trial at the next session of court after the summons and complaint have been served for 30 days, regardless of whether issues were joined more than 10 days before the session; and it is the duty of the judge to expedite the trial of these actions and to give them precedence over all others, civil or criminal. It is unlawful to appropriate any public funds to the payment of counsel fees in any such action. (1874-5, c. 173; Code, s. 616; 1901, c. 42; Rev., s. 833; C.S., s. 876; 1947, c. 781; 1971, c. 381, s. 12.)

Stated in State ex rel. Freeman v. Ponder, 234 N.C. 294, 67 S.E.2d 292 (1951).

§ 1-522. Time for bringing action.

All actions brought by a private relator, upon the leave of the Attorney General, to try the title to an office must be brought, and a copy of the complaint served on the defendant, within ninety days after his induction into the office to which the title is to be tried; and when it appears from the papers in the cause, or is otherwise shown to the satisfaction of the court, that the summons and complaint have not been served within ninety days, it is the duty of the judge upon motion of defendant to dismiss the action at any time before the trial, at the cost of the plaintiff. (1901, c. 519; 1903, c. 556; Rev., s. 834; C.S., s. 877.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Removing Local Elected Officials From Office in North Carolina," see 16 Wake Forest L. Rev. 547 (1980).

CASE NOTES

When Section Does Not Apply. — This provision, requiring a private relator, upon leave of the Attorney General, to bring his action within 90 days after the induction of the defendant into the contested office, does not apply where the alleged intruder has occupied the office more than 90 days before the plaintiff's cause of action accrued, or where it is impossible under the circumstances to give the required notice. Rhodes v. Love, 153 N.C. 468, 69 S.E. 436 (1910).

Applied in State ex rel. Long v. Smitherman, 251 N.C. 682, 111 S.E.2d 834 (1960).

§ 1-523. Defendant's undertaking before answer.

Before the defendant may answer or demur to the complaint he must execute and file in the superior court clerk's office of the county wherein the suit is pending, an undertaking, with good and sufficient surety, in the sum of two hundred dollars ($200.00), which may be increased from time to time in the discretion of the judge, to be void upon condition that the defendant pays to the plaintiff all such costs and damages, including damages for the loss of such fees and emoluments as may or ought to have come into the hands of the defendant, as the plaintiff may recover. (1895, c. 105; Rev., s. 835; C.S., s. 878.)

§ 1-524. Possession of office not disturbed pending trial.

In any civil action pending in any of the courts of this State in which the title to an office is involved, the defendant being in the possession of the office and discharging the duties thereof shall continue therein pending the action, and no judge shall make a restraining order interfering with or enjoining such officer in the premises. The officer shall, notwithstanding any such order, continue to exercise the duties of the office pending the litigation, and receive the emoluments thereof. (1899, c. 33; Rev., s. 836; C.S., s. 879.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — An injunction to prevent the exercise of a public office would produce general inconvenience; for instance, an injunction against one who it is alleged has usurped the office of the clerk of a court, forbidding him to discharge the duties of the office, would stop all judicial proceedings, and the public would be made to suffer by this mode of contesting the right to the office and to the fees and emoluments. Hence, in this and like cases, the appropriate remedy is by an action in the nature of a quo warranto, not an injunction. Patterson v. Hubbs, 65 N.C. 119 (1871).

Title Should Be Determined First. — Individuals claiming to comprise the board of trustees of a school district de jure may not enjoin those in possession under a colorable claim of right as such board from the performance of their duties as such, and require the defendants to turn over to them the school buildings, etc., and thus determine collaterally the question of title, nor would remedy by injunction be permitted in quo warranto proceedings, where the title to office is directly involved, but the parties should first try out the question of title in an action brought directly for the purpose. Rogers v. Powell, 174 N.C. 388, 93 S.E. 917 (1917).

Stated in Osborne v. Canton, 219 N.C. 139, 13 S.E.2d 265 (1941).

§ 1-525. Judgment by default and inquiry on failure of defendant to give bond.

At any time after a duly verified complaint is filed alleging facts sufficient to entitle plaintiff to the office, whether this complaint is filed at the beginning of the action or later, the plaintiff may, upon ten days' notice to the defendant or his attorney of record, move before the judge resident in or riding the district, at chambers, to require the defendant to give the undertaking specified in G.S. 1-523. It is the duty of the judge to require the defendant to give the undertaking within ten days, and if it is not so given, the judge shall render judgment in favor of plaintiff and against defendant for the recovery of the office and the costs, and a judgment by default and inquiry to be executed at a term for damages, including loss of fees and salary. Upon the filing of the judgment for the recovery of such office with the clerk, it is his duty to issue and the sheriff's duty to serve the necessary process to put the plaintiff into possession of the office. If the defendant shall give the undertaking, the court, if judgment is rendered for plaintiff, shall render judgment against the defendant and his sureties for costs and damages, including loss of fees and salary. Nothing herein prevents the judge's extending, for cause, the time in which to give the undertaking. (1895, c. 105, s. 2; 1899, c. 49; Rev., s. 837; C.S., s. 880.)

§ 1-526. Service of summons and complaint.

The service of the summons and complaint as hereinbefore provided may be made by leaving a copy at the last residence or business office of the defendant or defendants, and service so made shall be deemed a legal service. (1899, c. 126; Rev., s. 838; C.S., s. 881.)

As to sufficiency of summons, see McLeod v. Pearson, 208 N.C. 539, 181 S.E. 753 (1935).

§ 1-527. Judgment in such actions.

In every such case judgment shall be rendered upon the right of the defendant, and also upon the right of the party alleged to be entitled, or only upon the right of the defendant, as justice requires. When the defendant, whether a natural person or corporation, against whom the action has been brought, is adjudged guilty of usurping or intruding into, or unlawfully holding or exercising any office, franchise or privilege, judgment shall be rendered that the defendant be excluded from such office, franchise or privilege, and also that the plaintiff recover costs against him. The court may also, in its discretion, fine the defendant a sum not exceeding two thousand dollars ($2000). The clear proceeds of the fine shall be remitted to the Civil Penalty and Forfeiture Fund in accordance with G.S. 115C-457.2. (Const., Art. IX, s. 5; R.C., c. 95; C.C.P., ss. 370, 375; Code, ss. 610, 615; Rev., ss. 839, 840; C.S., s. 882; 1998-215, s. 95.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1998 amendment, effective October 31, 1998, added the last sentence.

CASE NOTES

Where defendant went into office under an unconstitutional appointment by the General Assembly, the court presumed that there was no criminal intent and did not impose the fine. People ex rel. Nichols v. McKee, 68 N.C. 429 (1873).

Applied in State ex rel. Everett v. Hardy, 65 N.C. App. 350, 309 S.E.2d 280 (1983).

§ 1-528. Mandamus to aid relator.

In any civil action brought to try the title or right to hold any office, when the judgment of the court is in favor of the relator in the action, it is the duty of the court to issue a writ of mandamus or such other process as is necessary and proper to carry the judgment into effect, and to induct the party entitled into office. (1885, c. 406, s. 1; Rev., s. 841; C.S., s. 883.)

§ 1-529. Appeal; bonds of parties.

No appeal by the defendant to the appellate division from the judgment of the superior court in such action shall stay the execution of the judgment, unless a justified undertaking is executed on the part of the appellant by one or more sureties, in a sum to be fixed by the court, conditioned that the appellant will pay to the party entitled to the same the salary, fees, emoluments and all moneys whatsoever received by the appellant by virtue or under color of the office. In no event shall the judgment be executed pending appeal, unless a justified undertaking is executed on the part of the appellee by one or more persons in a sum to be fixed by the court, conditioned that the appellee will pay to the party entitled to the same the salary, fees, emoluments and all moneys whatsoever received by the appellee by virtue or under color of office during his occupancy thereof. (1885, c. 406, s. 2; Rev., s. 842; C.S., s. 884; 1969, c. 44, s. 13.)

§ 1-530. Relator inducted into office; duty.

If the judgment is rendered in favor of the person alleged to be entitled, he shall be entitled, after taking the oath of office and executing such official bond as may be required by law, to take upon himself the execution of the office. It is his duty, immediately thereafter, to demand of the defendant in the action all the books and papers in his custody, or within his power, belonging to the office from which he has been excluded. (C.C.P., ss. 371, 373; Code, ss. 611, 613; Rev., ss. 843, 844; C.S., s. 885.)

CASE NOTES

Recovery of Fees and Emoluments. — Compensation in damages for the loss of the fees and emoluments of the office could be recovered from the intruder who had received the same, in an action brought after the rendition of the judgment for money had and received to the relator's use. State ex rel. Howerton v. Tate, 70 N.C. 161 (1874); Swain v. McRae, 80 N.C. 111 (1879); State ex rel. Jones v. Jones, 80 N.C. 127 (1879).

Person Entitled Has Property Interest in Office. — A person who is rightfully entitled to an office, although not in the actual possession thereof, has a property interest therein, and may maintain an action for money had and received against a mere intruder who may perform the duties of such office for a time and receive the fees arising therefrom; and such intruder cannot retain any part of the fees as a compensation for his labor. State ex rel. Howerton v. Tate, 70 N.C. 161 (1874); Osborne v. Canton, 219 N.C. 139, 13 S.E.2d 265 (1941).

Oath and Bond. — Where defendant alleges that he refused to surrender the office because he was entitled thereto, his motion to amend his answer to allege, as a further reason for refusal, that the relator had not filed bond or taken the oath of office, is properly denied, since such further allegations do not constitute a defense, the filing of bond and the taking of oath not being required of relator when defendant refuses to surrender the office on the ground that he is the de jure officer, because in such circumstances such action would be a vain thing which the law does not require and it being expressly provided by this section, that if judgment is rendered in favor of the relator he shall be entitled to take over the office after taking oath and executing the official bond, and the fact that the motion is made after defendant has surrendered the office and the relator has filed bond and taken the oath, does not alter this result, the defense not being germane on the question of the right to the emoluments of the office between the time of relator's election and his actual induction into office. Osborne v. Canton, 219 N.C. 139, 13 S.E.2d 265 (1941).

It is the intention of the lawmaking power that one who is rightfully entitled to an office which another wrongfully claims and withholds shall not be required, as a condition precedent to an action to try title to that office, to do the vain thing of going through the formality of complying with the requirements for induction into the office. Osborne v. Canton, 219 N.C. 139, 13 S.E.2d 265 (1941).

Court Can Enforce Demand for Documents. — When the relator has taken office and made the demand for the books and papers belonging to the office, the court can issue any appropriate process to enforce compliance with such demand by a refractory or contumacious defendant. Rhodes v. Love, 153 N.C. 468, 69 S.E. 436 (1910).

Cited in Edwards v. Board of Educ., 235 N.C. 345, 70 S.E.2d 170 (1952).

§ 1-531. Refusal to surrender official papers misdemeanor.

If a person against whom a judgment has been rendered in an action brought to recover a public office shall fail or refuse to turn over, on demand, to the person adjudged to be entitled to such office, all papers, documents and books belonging to such office, he shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (C.C.P., s. 372; Code, s. 612; Rev., s. 3601; C.S., s. 886; 1993, c. 539, s. 2; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

§ 1-532. Action to recover property forfeited to State.

When any property, real or personal, is forfeited to the State, or to any officer for its use, an action for the recovery of such property, alleging the grounds of the forfeiture, may be brought by the proper officer in any superior court. (C.C.P., s. 381; Code, s. 621; Rev., s. 845; C.S., s. 887.)

ARTICLE 42.

Waste.

§ 1-533. Remedy and judgment.

Wrongs, remediable by the old action of waste, are subjects of action as other wrongs; and the judgment may be for damages, forfeiture of the estate of the party offending, and eviction from the premises. (C.C.P., s. 383; Code, s. 624; Rev., s. 853; C.S., s. 888.)

CASE NOTES

Waste Defined. — Waste is a spoiling or destroying of the estate, with respect to buildings, wood or soil, to the lasting injury of the inheritance; but the acts done or permitted which constitute such injury differ according to the condition of the country. Sherrill v. Connor, 107 N.C. 630, 12 S.E. 588 (1890).

Waste, at common law, was any permanent injury with respect to lands, houses, gardens, trees, or other corporeal hereditaments by the owner of an estate less than a fee. Homeland, Inc. v. Backer, 78 N.C. App. 477, 337 S.E.2d 114 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 377, 342 S.E.2d 896 (1986).

With reference to the lessor-lessee situation, waste has been defined as an implied obligation in every lease on the part of the lessee to use reasonable diligence to treat the premises in such a manner that no injury is done to the property. Homeland, Inc. v. Backer, 78 N.C. App. 477, 337 S.E.2d 114 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 377, 342 S.E.2d 896 (1986).

Where the evidence did not conclusively show that defendants, lessees under a 30 year lease, committed waste, and on the contrary, there was plenary evidence that defendants made extensive improvements to all the rental units on the property, which they would be expected to do under a 30 year lease, plaintiff failed to establish a clear and uncontradicted prima facie case on the issue of waste, and the trial court erred in entering a directed verdict for plaintiff on this issue. Homeland, Inc. v. Backer, 78 N.C. App. 477, 337 S.E.2d 114 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 377, 342 S.E.2d 896 (1986).

Nature of Action. — An action for wrongs in the nature of waste is not necessarily an action "for penalties," or "for damages merely vindictive"; on the contrary, the action is generally used to recover actual and substantial damages. And that an action survives when such is its purpose, either to or against the personal representative, is well established. Rippey v. Miller, 33 N.C. 247 (1850); Butner v. Keelhn, 51 N.C. 60 (1858); Collier v. Arrington, 61 N.C. 356 (1867); Peebles v. North Carolina R.R., 63 N.C. 238 (1869); Shuler v. Millsaps, 72 N.C. 297 (1874); Shields v. Lawrence, 72 N.C. 43 (1875).

Discretion of Jury. — It must be left, in large measure, to the discretion of the jury to say whether the destruction of timber, or giving up a cultivated field and permitting bushes to grow and take possession of it, in the light of the evidence in the case, has proved a lasting injury to the inheritance. King v. Miller, 99 N.C. 583, 6 S.E. 660 (1888); Sherrill v. Connor, 107 N.C. 630, 12 S.E. 588 (1890).

In ascertaining whether a given act or omission subjects the tenant to liability, the condition of the land when dower was assigned should be compared with its state during the period for which damage is claimed. Sherrill v. Connor, 107 N.C. 630, 12 S.E. 588 (1890).

No one shall have an action of waste unless he has the immediate estate of inheritance. Edens v. Foulks, 2 N.C. App. 325, 163 S.E.2d 51 (1968).

One entitled to a contingent remainder cannot maintain an action at law against the tenant in possession to recover damages for waste, for the reason that it cannot be known in advance of the happening of the contingency whether the contingent remainderman would suffer damage or loss by the waste; and if the estate never became vested in him, he would be paid for that which he had not lost. Edens v. Foulks, 2 N.C. App. 325, 163 S.E.2d 51 (1968).

An action cannot be maintained by plaintiff a contingent remainderman because, if allowed, the life estate is destroyed by the forfeiture resulting from the waste under the statute, and yet the event upon which the plaintiff is to take his estate in remainder has not happened. Edens v. Foulks, 2 N.C. App. 325, 163 S.E.2d 51 (1968).

If a person's interest is a contingent remainder, such person has no standing to maintain an action for waste and forfeiture under this section. Edens v. Foulks, 2 N.C. App. 325, 163 S.E.2d 51 (1968).

But a contingent remainderman is entitled to an injunction to prevent a person in possession from committing future waste, the action being maintainable for the protection of the inheritance, which is certain, although the persons on whom it may fall are uncertain. Edens v. Foulks, 2 N.C. App. 325, 163 S.E.2d 51 (1968).

Contingent and vested remainder distinguished. Edens v. Foulks, 2 N.C. App. 325, 163 S.E.2d 51 (1968).

§ 1-534. For and against whom action lies.

In all cases of waste, an action lies in the appropriate trial division of the General Court of Justice at the instance of him in whom the right is, against all persons committing the waste, as well tenant for term of life as tenant for term of years and guardians. (52 Hen. III, c. 23; 6 Edw. I, c. 5; 20 Edw. I, st. 2; 11 Hen. VI, c. 5; R.C., c. 116, s. 1; Code, s. 625; Rev., s. 854; C.S., s. 889; 1971, c. 268, s. 33.)

CASE NOTES

The writ of waste is founded upon principles peculiar to itself and is dependent upon privy between the reversioner and tenant. No one shall have the action of waste, unless he has the immediate estate of inheritance; and between the heir of the reversioner and the tenant, who commits waste, there is no privy, the waste being committed in the lifetime of the reversioner. Browne v. Blick, 7 N.C. 511 (1819).

Contingent Remainderman Cannot Sue. — A contingent remainderman cannot sue for waste, but, for the protection of his right, he must resort to equity for the protection of his interest. Gordon v. Lowther, 75 N.C. 193 (1876); Latham v. Lumber Co., 139 N.C. 9, 51 S.E. 780 (1905); Richardson v. Richardson, 152 N.C. 705, 68 S.E. 217 (1910).

The judgment creditor is in no sense like a remainderman or reversioner. He cannot bring "the old action of waste," as it was at common law, nor is he embraced in any one of the classes "for and against whom an action of waste lies" under this section. Jones v. Britton, 102 N.C. 166, 9 S.E. 554 (1889).

The right to sue for waste includes the right to restrain its commission. Hinson v. Hinson, 120 N.C. 400, 27 S.E. 80 (1897); Morrison v. Morrison, 122 N.C. 598, 29 S.E. 901 (1898).

While persons holding a vested estate for life, coupled with contingent interest, are not liable in an action for waste, they and their tenants may be restrained from further despoiling and injuring the inheritance, where it appears that they have been removing from the land timber trees not cut down in the course of prudent husbandry. Gordon v. Lowther, 75 N.C. 193 (1876); Jones v. Britton, 102 N.C. 166, 9 S.E. 554 (1889); Farabow v. Green, 108 N.C. 339, 12 S.E. 1003 (1891).

Cited in Howell v. Shaw, 183 N.C. 460, 112 S.E. 38 (1922).

§ 1-535. Tenant in possession liable.

Where a tenant for life or years grants his estate to another, and still continues in the possession of the lands, tenements, or hereditaments, an action lies against the said tenant for life or years. (11 Hen. VI, c. 5; R.C., c. 116, s. 2; Code, s. 626; Rev., s. 855; C.S., s. 890.)

§ 1-536. Action by tenant against cotenant.

Where a joint tenant or a tenant in common commits waste, an action lies against him at the instance of his cotenant or joint tenant. (13 Edw. I, c. 22; R.C., c. 116, s. 4; Code, s. 627; Rev., s. 856; C.S., s. 891.)

CASE NOTES

Section Changes Common-Law Rule. — One of the settled rules at common law in England, was that one tenant in common could not sue his cotenant, except for partition. However, the legislature, feeling the practical difficulties at an early date, authorized a tenant in common to maintain an action for waste against his cotenant or joint tenant. And such tenant can also restrain his cotenant from the commission of waste. Morrison v. Morrison, 122 N.C. 598, 29 S.E. 901 (1898).

Under this section, one tenant in common may sue his cotenant for waste for cutting down trees to be sold as cross ties and hauled off the land. Hinson v. Hinson, 120 N.C. 400, 27 S.E. 80 (1897).

Applied in Daniel v. Tallassee Power Co., 204 N.C. 274, 168 S.E. 217 (1933).

Stated in Langley v. Moore, 64 N.C. App. 520, 307 S.E.2d 817 (1983).

§ 1-537. Action by heirs.

Every heir may bring action for waste committed on lands, tenements, or hereditaments of his own inheritance, as well in the time of his ancestor as in his own. (6 Edw. I, c. 5; 20 Edw. I, st. 2; 11 Hen. VI, c. 5; R.C., c. 116, s. 5; Code, s. 628; Rev., s. 857; C.S., s. 892.)

§ 1-538. Judgment for treble damages and possession.

In all cases of waste, when judgment is against the defendant, the court may give judgment for treble the amount of the damages assessed by the jury, and also that the plaintiff recover the place wasted, if the damages are not paid on or before a day to be named in the judgment. (6 Edw. I, c. 5; 20 Edw. I, st. 2; R.C., c. 116, s. 3; Code, s. 629; Rev., s. 858; C.S., s. 893.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Requiem for the Rule in Shelley's Case", see 67 N.C.L. Rev. 681 (1989).

CASE NOTES

Application of Section. — Under this section a life tenant, who, by neglect or wantonness, occasions permanent waste or injury to the inheritance, whether voluntary or permissive, thereby subjects himself to liability to pay the actual damages, or treble damages, at the discretion of the judge, and also to forfeit the place wasted on a day to be fixed by the judge, if he should in the meantime fail to pay the damages recovered of him. Sherrill v. Connor, 107 N.C. 630, 12 S.E. 588 (1890).

Section Changes Former Law. — This section is substantially the same as the law in force before the enactment of the Code except for two important changes. The word "may" has been substituted for "shall" in the old statute of Gloucester, and, by a qualification added to it, the judgment for the place wasted must be conditional, and can take effect only upon the failure of the defendant to pay the actual damages before a day certain. It is therefore left within the sound discretion of the judge who tries the action to determine whether he will give treble or single damages, as well as to fix a day after which a writ of possession may issue for the place wasted, if the damage allowed shall not have been in the meantime actually paid. The old statute was, manifestly, amended when the Code was enacted, for the purpose of vesting a discretionary power in the court in reference to the amount of the judgment, and fixing the time for forfeiture of the place wasted on failure to pay the amount recovered. Sherrill v. Connor, 107 N.C. 630, 12 S.E. 588 (1890).

For case discussing prospective damages, see Sherrill v. Connor, 107 N.C. 630, 12 S.E. 588 (1890).

Judgment Must Be in Accord with This

Section. — In an action by remaindermen against the life tenant for waste under § 1-533, judgment must be in accord with this section, and the court in such action has no authority to order the realty to be sold and the life tenant's share, diminished in the amount of damages awarded by the jury for waste, paid to the life tenant. Parrish v. Parrish, 247 N.C. 584, 101 S.E.2d 480 (1958).

In an action for waste where the jury finds insignificant damages, judgment will be arrested. Sheppard v. Sheppard, 3 N.C. 382 (1806).

Judgment for Damages Only Authorized. — It is not error for the judgment in an action of waste to be for the damages only, and not also for the place wasted. Bright v. Wilson, 1 N.C. 251 (1800).

New Action for Subsequent Injury Authorized. — If the life tenant should allow the inheritance to sustain further injury after the time of trial, damage may be recovered in another action. Sherrill v. Connor, 107 N.C. 630, 12 S.E. 588 (1890).

Appeal. — Under this section the court may give judgment for treble damages and the place wasted, and on appeal the court will not make such discretionary power obligatory. Sherrill v. Connor, 107 N.C. 630, 12 S.E. 588 (1890).

Article 43.

Nuisance and Other Wrongs.

§ 1-538.1. Strict liability for damage to person or property by minors.

Any person or other legal entity shall be entitled to recover actual damages suffered in an amount not to exceed a total of two thousand dollars ($2,000) from the parent or parents of any minor who shall maliciously or willfully injure such person or destroy the real or personal property of such person. Parents whose custody and control have been removed by court order or by contract prior to the act complained of shall not be liable under this act. This act shall not preclude or limit recovery of damages from parents under common law remedies available in this State. (1961, c. 1101; 1981, c. 414, s. 1; 1993, c. 540, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1981 tort law, see 60 N.C.L. Rev. 1465 (1982).

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — The enactment of this section is within the police power of the State and it is not violative of the provisions of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 17, or of the provisions of U.S. Const., Amend. V. General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Faulkner, 259 N.C. 317, 130 S.E.2d 645 (1963).

This section gives to the parents of children a full opportunity to be heard or defend before a competent tribunal in an orderly proceeding adapted to the nature of the case, which is uniform and regular and in accord with fundamental rules which do not violate fundamental rights. General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Faulkner, 259 N.C. 317, 130 S.E.2d 645 (1963).

Purpose of Section. — This section and similar statutes appear to have been adopted not out of consideration for providing a restorative compensation for the victims of injurious or tortious conduct of children, but as an aid in the control of juvenile delinquency. General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Faulkner, 259 N.C. 317, 130 S.E.2d 645 (1963).

The rationale of this section apparently is that parental indifference and failure to supervise the activities of children is one of the major causes of juvenile delinquency; that parental liability for harm done by children will stimulate attention and supervision; and that the total effect will be a reduction in the anti-social behavior of children. General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Faulkner, 259 N.C. 317, 130 S.E.2d 645 (1963).

Section Imposes Vicarious Liability on Parents. — In an action against the parents under this section the complaint is not fatally defective because it fails to allege that any act or omission to act on the part of the defendants was the proximate cause of an injury to plaintiff, for the reason that this section imposes vicarious liability upon parents by virtue of their relationship for the malicious or wilfull destruction of property by a child under the age of eighteen. General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Faulkner, 259 N.C. 317, 130 S.E.2d 645 (1963).

At common law, the mere relationship of parent and child was not considered a proper basis for imposing vicarious liability upon the parent for the torts of the child. General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Faulkner, 259 N.C. 317, 130 S.E.2d 645 (1963).

Parental liability for a child's tort at common law was imposed generally in two situations, i.e., where there was an agency relationship, or where the parent was himself guilty in the commission of the tort in some way. General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Faulkner, 259 N.C. 317, 130 S.E.2d 645 (1963).

For the plaintiff to recover from the parents he must establish, inter alia, by the greater weight of the evidence, that the minor was under the age of eighteen years, and that the child maliciously or wilfully destroyed property, real, personal, or mixed. General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Faulkner, 259 N.C. 317, 130 S.E.2d 645 (1963).

Insurer Paying Loss May Sue on Subrogated Claim. — An insurance company, as plaintiff, may bring suit in its own name against defendants upon a claim to which it has become subrogated by payment in full of its loss to its insured under the provisions of its policy of insurance, who pursuant to the provisions of this section, would have been able to bring such an action in its own name. General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Faulkner, 259 N.C. 317, 130 S.E.2d 645 (1963).

Application of Section. — For application of section to automobile collision case, see Smith v. Simpson, 260 N.C. 601, 133 S.E.2d 474 (1963).

The limit of the parents' civil liability for damage "maliciously or willfully" done to property by a juvenile pursuant to this section is not the proper criteria for determining the punishment to be imposed upon that juvenile found to be delinquent under § 7A-649 [see now § 7B-2506]. In re Register, 84 N.C. App. 336, 352 S.E.2d 889 (1987).

§ 1-538.2. Civil liability for larceny, shoplifting, theft by employee, embezzlement, and obtaining property by false pretense.

(a) Any person, other than an unemancipated minor, who commits an act that is punishable under G.S. 14-72, 14-72.1, 14-74, 14-90, or 14-100 is liable for civil damages to the owner of the property. In any action brought by the owner of the property, the owner is entitled to recover the value of the goods or merchandise, if the goods or merchandise have been destroyed, or any loss of value to the goods or merchandise, if the goods or merchandise were recovered, or the amount of any money lost by reason of the theft or embezzlement or fraud of an employee. In addition to the above, the owner of the property is entitled to recover any consequential damages, and punitive damages, together with reasonable attorneys' fees. The total compensatory and consequential damages awarded to a plaintiff against a defendant under this section shall not be less than one hundred fifty dollars ($150.00) and shall not exceed one thousand dollars ($1,000), except an act punishable under G.S. 14-74 or G.S. 14-90 shall have no maximum limit under this section.

(b) The parent or legal guardian, having the care, custody and control of an unemancipated minor who commits an act punishable under G.S. 14-72, 14-72.1, 14-74, 14-90, or 14-100, is civilly liable to the owner of the property obtained by the act if such parent or legal guardian knew or should have known of the propensity of the child to commit such an act; and had the opportunity and ability to control the child, and made no reasonable effort to correct or restrain the child. In an action brought against the parent or legal guardian by the owner, the owner is entitled to recover the amounts specified in subsection (a) except punitive damages. The total compensatory and consequential damages awarded to a plaintiff against the parent or legal guardian shall not be less than one hundred fifty dollars ($150.00) and shall not exceed one thousand dollars ($1,000).

(c) An action may be brought under this section regardless of whether a criminal action is brought or a criminal conviction is obtained for the act alleged in the civil action.

(c1) For the purposes of this section, consequential damages shall include, but shall not be limited to:

(2) Any costs, such as mileage, postage, stationery, or telephone expenses that were incurred as a result of the violation.

(c2) The owner of the property may seek payment for damages under subsections (a) and (b) of this section prior to filing a civil action, by sending the violator a demand letter. If such a letter is sent, it shall be substantially similar to the following:

"Our records show that on (date), you unlawfully took possession of property from (store name/owner of the property), located in (city, state), without the consent of (store name/owner of the property), without paying for the property, and with the intent of converting the property to your own use. In accordance with G.S. 1-538.2, we are authorized to demand that you pay damages of one hundred fifty dollars ($150.00).

In the event you fail to comply with our demand for one hundred fifty dollars ($150.00) within 15 days from the date of your receipt of the notice, you may be held civilly liable for an amount not less than one hundred fifty dollars ($150.00) and not more than one thousand dollars ($1,000) in a civil action against you to recover the penalties and damages authorized by law, which include court costs and attorneys' fees. If you pay the one hundred fifty dollars ($150.00), (store name/owner of the property) will have no further civil remedy against you arising from the events occurring on (date).

If you are the parent or legal guardian of an unemancipated minor who unlawfully took possession of property as set out above, you can be held liable if you knew or should have known of the propensity of the child to commit the act complained of, and you had the opportunity and ability to control the child and you made no reasonable effort to correct or restrain the child.

If you believe you have received this notice in error, please contact (name) immediately.

YOU HAVE A RIGHT TO CONTEST YOUR LIABILITY IN COURT."

(c3) The owner of the property sending the demand letter required by this section shall have qualified privilege from any civil liability resulting therefrom provided that there is no excessive publication and that the owner acted in good faith and without malice.

(c4) If the recipient of a notice pursuant to subsection (c2) of this section pays the demanded one hundred fifty dollars ($150.00) within 15 days of the recipient's receipt of the notice, the owner of the property shall have no further civil remedy against that violator for the incident described in the notice.

(d) Nothing contained in this act shall prohibit recovery upon any other theory in the law. (1987, c. 519, s. 1; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1081, s. 4.1; 1995, c. 185, s. 1; 1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 742, s. 3.)

§ 1-538.3. Negligent supervision of minor.

(a) The parent or individual legal guardian who has the care, custody, and control of an unemancipated minor may be held civilly liable to an educational entity for the negligent supervision of that minor if the educational entity proves by clear, cogent, and convincing evidence that:

(1) The minor:

a. Violated the provisions of G.S. 14-49, 14-49.1, 14-50, 14-69.1(c), 14-69.2(c), 14-269.2(b1), 14-269.2(c1), or committed a felony offense involving injury to persons or property through use of a gun, rifle, pistol, or other firearm of any kind as defined in G.S. 14-269.2(b); and

b. The offense occurred on educational property; and

(2) The parent or individual legal guardian who has the care, custody, and control of the minor:

a. Knew or reasonably should have known of the minor's likelihood to commit such an act;

b. Had the opportunity and ability to control the minor; and

c. Made no reasonable effort to correct, restrain, or properly supervise the minor.

(b) In an action brought against the parent or legal guardian under this section for a false report, hoax, or possession of a bomb or other explosive device on educational property, the educational entity is entitled to recover the actual compensatory and consequential damages resulting from the disruption or dismissal of school or the school-sponsored activity arising from the false report, the hoax, the bringing or possession of a bomb or other explosive device onto educational property or to a school-sponsored activity. The total amount of compensatory and consequential damages awarded to a plaintiff against the parent or legal guardian pursuant to this subsection shall not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000).

(c) In an action brought against the parent or legal guardian under this section, the educational entity is entitled to recover the actual compensatory and consequential damages to educational property that is the result of the discharge of the firearm or the detonation or explosion of the bomb or other explosive device. The total amount of compensatory and consequential damages awarded to a plaintiff against the parent or legal guardian pursuant to this subsection shall not exceed fifty thousand dollars ($50,000).

(d) For purposes of this section, the term "educational property" has the same definition as in G.S. 14-269.2(a)(1), and the term "educational entity" means the board of education or other entity that administers and controls the educational property or the school-sponsored activity.

(e) Nothing contained in this section shall prohibit recovery upon any other theory in the law. (1999-257, s. 5.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-257, s. 12, made this section effective September 1, 1999, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date.

§ 1-539. Remedy for nuisance.

Injuries remediable by the old writ of nuisance are subjects of action as other injuries; and in such action there may be judgment for damages, or for the removal of the nuisance, or both. (C.C.P., s. 387; Code, s. 630; Rev., s. 825; C.S., 894.)

Cross References. — As to injunction against nuisance, see § 1-485.

CASE NOTES

Nuisance Defined. — That which annoys and disturbs one in the possession of his property, rendering its ordinary use or occupation physically uncomfortable to him is a nuisance. Baltimore & P.R.R. v. Fifth Baptist Church, 108 U.S. 317, 2 S. Ct. 719, 27 L. Ed. 739 (1883).

A private nuisance exists where the right or privilege interfered with is essentially a private one. If the offense is so general as to affect a number of citizens in the neighborhood the aggravation of offenses will amount to a public wrong and may be the subject of a public prosecution. But in such a case the individual can still maintain a civil action, and he need not show that his particular damage differs in kind and degree from that of the other individuals affected. McManus v. Southern Ry., 150 N.C. 655, 64 S.E. 766 (1909).

Adequate Remedies Available for Nuisance. — Where a nuisance has been established, working harm to the rights of an individual citizen, the law of North Carolina is searching and adequate to afford an injured person ample redress, both by remedial and preventive remedies. McManus v. Southern Ry., 150 N.C. 655, 64 S.E. 766 (1909).

The ancient writ of nuisance has been superseded under this section by civil action for damages or for a removal of the nuisance, or for both. Barrier v. Troutman, 231 N.C. 47, 55 S.E.2d 923 (1949).

Damages in nuisance action should be such as to lead to the abatement of the nuisance. Bradley v. Amis, 3 N.C. 399 (1806).

Appreciable Damage Must Be Suffered. — To sustain an action for a nuisance, public or private, which does not involve the physical invasion of the property of another, it is always required to be shown that some appreciable damage has been suffered, or that some serious or irreparable injury is threatened, and unless this is made to appear a right to nominal damages does not arise. McManus v. Southern Ry., 150 N.C. 655, 64 S.E. 766 (1909).

An individual may not maintain an action for a public nuisance unless he shows unusual and special damage, different from that suffered by the general public. Pedrick v. Railroad, 143 N.C. 485, 55 S.E. 877 (1906); McManus v. Southern Ry., 150 N.C. 655, 64 S.E. 766 (1909); Barrier v. Troutman, 231 N.C. 47, 55 S.E.2d 923 (1949).

An action by an individual to abate a nuisance cannot be successfully resisted on the ground that no special damage to the plaintiff has been shown, when it appears that the nuisance complained of was the fact that the defendant caused water to flood adjoining lands, which bred fever carrying mosquitoes, thereby inflicting sickness on the plaintiff and his family, although others in the community suffered sickness from the same cause. Pruitt v. Bethell, 174 N.C. 454, 93 S.E. 945 (1917).

One suffering peculiar damages from a public nuisance is not restricted but may sue for an injunction. Reyburn v. Sawyer, 135 N.C. 328, 47 S.E. 761 (1904).

Where the nuisance is continuous and recurrent and the injury irreparable, and remedy by way of damages inadequate, equity will restrain, even though the enterprise be in itself lawful. Barrier v. Troutman, 231 N.C. 47, 55 S.E.2d 923 (1949).

Permanent Damages for Continued Trespass or Nuisance. — In North Carolina, the landowner may recover permanent damages from a defendant municipality or other corporation having the power of eminent domain when that body intends to continue committing trespass or nuisance; in such a situation, the remedy of abatement is not available. Rudd v. Electrolux Corp., 982 F. Supp. 355 (M.D.N.C. 1997).

Permanent damages for the depreciation of property cannot be recovered. The owners may enjoin commission of the acts constituting the nuisance and recover such temporary damages as their property has sustained thereby. Taylor v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 145 N.C. 400, 59 S.E. 129 (1907).

Proximate Cause. — In order to recover damages the maintenance of a public nuisance must be the proximate cause of the injuries. McGhee v. Norfolk & S. Ry., 147 N.C. 142, 60 S.E. 912 (1908).

Abatement of a private nuisance is not dependent upon recovery of damages. Barrier v. Troutman, 231 N.C. 47, 55 S.E.2d 923 (1949).

Plaintiff alleged that by reason of the topography and the manner of its use and operation, planes using the airport on adjoining planes using the airport on adjoining property flew over plaintiff's clinic at a height of not more than 100 feet, so as to constitute a recurrent danger and disturbance to plaintiff and patients of his clinic. It was held that the complaint alleged a private nuisance, and upon verdict of the jury that the airport constituted a nuisance as alleged in the complaint, plaintiff was entitled to enjoin such use notwithstanding the further finding of the jury that plaintiff had not been damaged in a special and peculiar way. Barrier v. Troutman, 231 N.C. 47, 55 S.E.2d 923 (1949).

An airport is not a nuisance per se, but may become a nuisance if its location, structure and manner of use and operation result in depriving complainant of the comfort and enjoyment of his property. Barrier v. Troutman, 231 N.C. 47, 55 S.E.2d 923 (1949).

Plaintiffs were not entitled to recover for future flooding in nuisance proceeding. Plaintiff's remedy in nuisance proceeding between private parties is by successive suits brought from time to time against the author of the nuisance as long as the noxious condition is maintained, in which he may recover past damages down to the time of trial. Cox v. Robert C. Rhein Interest, Inc., 100 N.C. App. 584, 397 S.E.2d 358 (1990).

Diminution of Damage. — In an action for damages from a permanent nuisance, the suit being in the nature of a proceeding to condemn the plaintiff's property, it was held, that special benefits arising out of the establishment of the nuisance may be set off in diminution of damages. Brown v. Virginia-Carolina Chem. Co., 162 N.C. 83, 77 S.E. 1102 (1913).

§ 1-539.1. Damages for unlawful cutting, removal or burning of timber; misrepresentation of property lines.

(a) Any person, firm or corporation not being the bona fide owner thereof or agent of the owner who shall without the consent and permission of the bona fide owner enter upon the land of another and injure, cut or remove any valuable wood, timber, shrub or tree therefrom, shall be liable to the owner of said land for double the value of such wood, timber, shrubs or trees so injured, cut or removed.

(b) If any person, firm or corporation shall willfully and intentionally set on fire, or cause to be set on fire, in any manner whatever, any valuable wood, timber or trees on the lands of another, such person, firm or corporation shall be liable to the owner of said lands for double the value of such wood, timber or trees damaged or destroyed thereby.

(c) Any person, firm or corporation cutting timber under contract and incurring damages as provided in subsection (a) of this section as a result of a misrepresentation of property lines by the party letting the contract shall be entitled to reimbursement from the party letting the contract for damages incurred. (1945, c. 837; 1955, c. 594; 1971, c. 119; 1977, c. 859.)

CASE NOTES

Strict Construction. — Strict construction of this section requires that everything be excluded from the operation of the section which does not come within the scope of the language used, taking the words in their natural and ordinary meaning. Jones v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 15 N.C. App. 515, 190 S.E.2d 422 (1972).

Application of Section. — In order for this statute to apply, the defendant must be a trespasser to the land and must injure, cut or remove wood, timber, shrubs, or trees thereon or therefrom. Matthews v. Brown, 62 N.C. App. 559, 303 S.E.2d 223 (1983).

Effect of Section. — This section not only doubles the value of the timber cut but imposes strict liability as well. Britt v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 46 N.C. App. 107, 264 S.E.2d 395 (1980).

Damages Are to Be Assessed Before Crediting Defendant. — Where trial judge signed a judgment which denied plaintiff's motion to double the timber value because he found that credits to defendant left no damages to double, the trial court erred in failing to double the damages for the unlawful cutting of timber pursuant to subsection (a) of this section; the $22,000.00 amount assigned to the value of the cut timber should have been doubled to equal a $44,000.00 judgment against defendant. Because plaintiff had stipulated that defendant was to be allowed a credit for proceeds recovered by plaintiff and for the value of timber left on the ground at the tract, defendant was entitled to a credit from the $44,000.00 judgment in the amount of $20,140.00. Perry-Griffin Found. v. Proctor, 107 N.C. App. 528, 421 S.E.2d 186 (1992).

Double Timber Value. — This section authorizes doubling timber value, but not doubling loss in property value. Barnard v. Rowland, — N.C. App. —, 512 S.E.2d 458 (1999).

Alternative Measures of Damages. — Where plaintiff sues for the unlawful cutting or removal of timber, there are two alternative measures of damages available. One gives the landowner the difference in the value of his property immediately before and immediately after the cutting, and the other gives plaintiff the value of the timber itself. This latter value is then doubled by reason of this section, which allows plaintiff to recover double the value of timber cut or removed. Britt v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 46 N.C. App. 107, 264 S.E.2d 395 (1980).

Plaintiffs who sought to recover both their statutory damages for cut timber and damages for diminution in value of their property elected to recover their statutory damages when they proceeded upon that theory at trial and recovered damages thereunder. Britt v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 46 N.C. App. 107, 264 S.E.2d 395 (1980).

A plaintiff suing for unlawful cutting or removal of timber may recover either (1) the difference in value of the property immediately before and immediately after the cutting (in addition to punitive damages), or (2) double the value of the timber itself, but not both. Barnard v. Rowland, — N.C. App. —, 512 S.E.2d 458 (1999).

Owner May Recover Value Added by Intentional Wrongdoer. — If the trespasser is an intentional and knowing wrongdoer, the owner of the land may recover the enhanced value of the timber added to it by the labor of the trespasser. Jones v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 15 N.C. App. 515, 190 S.E.2d 422 (1972).

But This Section and the Enhanced Value Theory Are Mutually Exclusive. — The common-law theory of enhanced value and the statutory remedy of double value are mutually exclusive. Jones v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 15 N.C. App. 515, 190 S.E.2d 422 (1972).

And Section May Not Be Applied to Enhanced Value. — A strict interpretation of this section would not permit its application to an enhanced value situation. Jones v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 15 N.C. App. 515, 190 S.E.2d 422 (1972).

While this section provides that the wrongdoer shall be liable to the owner of the land for double the value of the wood or trees injured, cut or removed, the statute does not indicate when the value should be doubled. To collect double the enhanced value plaintiffs would be proceeding under the common-law theory of an action in trover to recover the value of the goods in their enhanced condition and at the same time proceeding under the statutory remedy. The two remedies are exclusive and are not to be combined to provide an additional remedy. Jones v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 15 N.C. App. 515, 190 S.E.2d 422 (1972).

In order to recover penalties under this section plaintiff must establish ownership of the land from which the timber was cut. Woodard v. Marshall, 14 N.C. App. 67, 187 S.E.2d 430 (1972).

In order to sustain an action for permanent damages to the freehold, or to the ownership interest, such as an action for unlawful cutting of timber, plaintiff must allege and show that he is the owner of the land from which the timber was cut. Woodard v. Marshall, 14 N.C. App. 67, 187 S.E.2d 430 (1972).

Defendants' denial of plaintiff's allegation of title and trespass placed the burden on plaintiff of establishing each of these allegations. Woodard v. Marshall, 14 N.C. App. 67, 187 S.E.2d 430 (1972).

Where the plaintiff claims damages for unlawful cutting of timber, he is claiming permanent damages to the freehold, or damages to the ownership interest, and his right to recover depends upon his establishing his title to the described lands. Woodard v. Marshall, 14 N.C. App. 67, 187 S.E.2d 430 (1972).

In an action for permanent damages to the freehold, or to the ownership interest, plaintiff must rely upon the strength of his own title. This requirement may be met by various methods: (1) He may offer a connected chain of title or a grant direct from the State to himself; (2) Without exhibiting any grant from the State, he may show open, notorious, continuous adverse and unequivocal possession of the land in controversy, under color of title in himself and those under whom he claims, for 21 years before the action was brought; (3) He may show title out of the State by offering a grant to a stranger, without connecting himself with it, and then offer proof of open, notorious, continuous adverse possession, under color of title to himself and those under whom he claims, for seven years before the action was brought; (4) He may show, as against the State, possession under known and visible boundaries for 30 years, or as against individuals for 20 years before the action was brought; (5) He can prove title by estoppel, as by showing that the defendant was his tenant, or derived his title through his tenant, when the action was brought; or (6) He may connect the defendant with a common source of title and show in himself a better title from that source. Woodard v. Marshall, 14 N.C. App. 67, 187 S.E.2d 430 (1972).

To sustain an action for permanent damages to the freehold, or to the ownership interest, such as an action for unlawful cutting of timber, the plaintiff must allege and show that he is the owner of the land from which the timber was cut. Fordham v. Eason, 131 N.C. App. 226, 505 S.E.2d 895 (1998).

The possession of real property is not a sufficient interest upon which to base a recovery for permanent damages to the freehold — the ownership interest. Woodard v. Marshall, 14 N.C. App. 67, 187 S.E.2d 430 (1972).

Defendant's entry upon plaintiff's land was authorized even though defendant knew or should have known that plaintiff's president exceeded his authority when he signed and accepted payment under the agreement made with defendant; since neither the officers, directors nor shareholders of plaintiff objected at any time to the timber being cut and removed, the cutting and removal of timber was in the ordinary course of plaintiff's business and plaintiff had authorized the president to clear the land, plaintiff's president had the apparent authority to bind plaintiff-corporation to the timber agreement with defendant, and the trial court was correct in granting defendant's motion for summary judgment on the trespass claim. Sentry Enters., Inc. v. Canal Wood Corp., 94 N.C. App. 293, 380 S.E.2d 152 (1989).

Instruction Directing Jury to Double Damages Authorized. — In an action for wrongful cuttings of timber on plaintiffs' land, it was not error for the court to instruct the jury that if they found the plaintiffs had suffered damages they should double the amount of damages in arriving at their verdict, rather than instructing the jury to determine the amount of damages and then doubling it himself. Pridgen v. Callaway, 44 N.C. App. 163, 260 S.E.2d 441 (1979).

Award of Double Damages Is Not Within the Judge's Discretion. — Trial judge erred by refusing to instruct the jury to award double damages and by subsequently failing to order double damages. The phrase "shall be liable" in the statutory provision provides that double damages must be ordered when the requirements of the statute are met. The plain language of the statute indicates that an award of double damages is not within the judge's discretion. Perry-Griffin Found. v. Proctor, 107 N.C. App. 528, 421 S.E.2d 186 (1992).

§ 1-539.2. Dismantling portion of building.

When one person owns a portion of a building and another or other persons own the remainder of said building, neither of said owners shall dismantle his portion of said building without making secure the portions of said building belonging to other persons. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be responsible in damages to the owners of other portions of such building. (1955, c. 1359.)

§ 1-539.2A. Damages for computer trespass.

(a) Any person whose property or person is injured by reason of a violation of G.S. 14-458 may sue for and recover any damages sustained and the costs of the suit. Without limiting the general of the term, "damages" shall include loss of profits. If the injury arises from the transmission of unsolicited bulk commercial electronic mail, the injured person, other than an electronic mail service provider, may also recover attorneys' fees and may elect, in lieu of actual damages, to recover the lesser of ten dollars ($10.00) for each and every unsolicited bulk commercial electronic mail message transmitted in violation of this section, or twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) per day. The injured person shall not have a cause of action against the electronic mail service provider which merely transmits the unsolicited bulk commercial electronic mail over its computer network. If the injury arises from the transmission of unsolicited bulk commercial electronic mail, an injured electronic mail service provider may also recover attorneys' fees and costs and may elect, in lieu of actual damages, to recover the greater of ten dollars ($10.00) for each and every unsolicited bulk commercial electronic mail message transmitted in violation of this section, or twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) per day.

(b) A civil action under this section shall be commenced before expiration of the time period prescribed in G.S. 1-54. In actions alleging injury arising from the transmission of unsolicited bulk commercial electronic mail, personal jurisdiction may be exercised pursuant to G.S. 1-75.4. (1999-212, s. 4; 1999-456, s. 8.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-212, s. 5, made this section effective December 1, 1999, and applicable to violations of G.S. 14-458 occurring on or after that date.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-456, s. 8, effective December 1, 1999, substituted "G.S. 1-75.4" for "G.S. 1-75.4(13)" in subsection (b).

Defense of Charitable Immunity Abolished; and Qualified Immunity for Volunteers.

§ 1-539.9. Defense abolished as to actions arising after September 1, 1967.

The common-law defense of charitable immunity is abolished and shall not constitute a valid defense to any action or cause of action arising subsequent to September 1, 1967. (1967, c. 856.)

CASE NOTES

Stated in Darsie v. Duke Univ., 48 N.C. App. 20, 268 S.E.2d 554 (1980).

§ 1-539.10. Immunity from civil liability for volunteers.

(a) A volunteer who performs services for a charitable organization is not liable in civil damages for any acts or omissions resulting in any injury, death, or loss to person or property arising from the volunteer services rendered if:

(1) The volunteer was acting in good faith and the services rendered were reasonable under the circumstances; and

(2) The acts or omissions do not amount to gross negligence, wanton conduct, or intentional wrongdoing.

(3) The acts or omissions did not occur while the volunteer was operating or responsible for the operation of a motor vehicle.

(b) To the extent that any charitable organization or volunteer has liability insurance, that charitable organization or volunteer shall be deemed to have waived the qualified immunity herein to the extent of indemnification by insurance for the negligence by any volunteer.

(c) Nothing herein shall be construed to alter the standard of care requirement or liability of persons rendering professional services. (1987, c. 505, s. 1(2).)

§ 1-539.11. Definitions.

As used in this Article:

(1) "Charitable Organization" means an organization that has humane and philanthropic objectives, whose activities benefit humanity or a significant rather than limited segment of the community without expectation of pecuniary profit or reward and is exempt from taxation under either G.S. 105-130.11(a)(3) or G.S. 105-130.11(a)(5) or Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

(2) "Volunteer" means an individual, serving as a direct service volunteer performing services for a charitable, nonprofit organization, who does not receive compensation, or anything of value in lieu of compensation, for the services, other than reimbursement for expenses actually incurred. (1987, c. 505, s. 1(2).)

§ 1-539.12. Immunity from civil liability for employers disclosing information.

(a) An employer who discloses information about a current or former employee's job history or job performance to a prospective employer of the current or former employee upon request of the prospective employer or upon request of the current or former employee is immune from civil liability and is not liable in civil damages for the disclosure or any consequences of the disclosure. This immunity shall not apply when a claimant shows by a preponderance of the evidence both of the following:

(1) The information disclosed by the current or former employer was false.

(2) The employer providing the information knew or reasonably should have known that the information was false.

(b) For purposes of this section, "job performance" includes:

(1) The suitability of the employee for re-employment;

(2) The employee's skills, abilities, and traits as they may relate to suitability for future employment; and

(3) In the case of a former employee, the reason for the employee's separation.

(c) The provisions of this section apply to any employee, agent, or other representative of the current or former employer who is authorized to provide and who provides information in accordance with the provisions of this section. For the purposes of this section, "employer" also includes a job placement service but does not include a private personnel service as defined in G.S. 95-47.1 or a job listing service as defined in G.S. 95-47.19 except as provided hereinafter. The provisions of this section apply to a private personnel service as defined in G.S, 95-47.1 and a job listing service as defined in G.S. 95-47.19 only to the extent that the service conveys information derived from credit reports, court records, educational records, and information furnished to it by the employee or prior employers and the service identifies the source of the information.

(d) This section does not affect any privileges or immunities from civil liability established by another section of the General Statutes or available at common law. (1997-478, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

This section does not violate substantive due process because it does not deny a parent seeking to bring an action against a child for personal injury a right to which she otherwise would be entitled. Before this statute was enacted, the established rule was that both children and their parents were immune from such suits by each other. This section abolished parental immunity and opened an avenue for children to sue their parents. To hold that an established right was taken away because the statute did not open the same door for parents is incorrect. Even if one views this section as "denying" parents of such a right, such denial is within the rights of the Legislature. Allen v. Allen, 76 N.C. App. 504, 333 S.E.2d 530, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 315 N.C. 182, 337 S.E.2d 855 (1985).

The class created by this section was based on a "reasonable distinction." It is rationally related to the governmental objective of promoting and protecting domestic harmony. This section is not in violation of the equal protection requirements in the North Carolina or United States Constitutions. Allen v. Allen, 76 N.C. App. 504, 333 S.E.2d 530, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 315 N.C. 182, 337 S.E.2d 855 (1985).

This section does not create an arbitrary classification in violation of the equal protection clauses of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19, and U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. Ledwell v. Berry, 39 N.C. App. 224, 249 S.E.2d 862 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 585, 254 S.E.2d 35 (1979).

It is the general rule in North Carolina that unemancipated minors may not maintain an action against their parents to recover damages for an unintentional tort. Since the parent cannot be held liable in a direct action against him by the injured child, a third-party may not maintain an action against the parent, based on allegations of joint negligence, to recover contribution for damages awarded to the minor. Lee v. Mowett Sales Co., 76 N.C. App. 556, 334 S.E.2d 250 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 489, 342 S.E.2d 882 (1986).

By the enactment of this section, the Legislature created a limited exception to the common-law doctrine of parent-child immunity in North Carolina. Lee v. Mowett Sales Co., 76 N.C. App. 556, 334 S.E.2d 250 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 489, 342 S.E.2d 882 (1986).

This section abolishes only a parent's immunity to suit. Allen v. Allen, 76 N.C. App. 504, 333 S.E.2d 530, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 315 N.C. 182, 337 S.E.2d 855 (1985).

The text of this section is very explicit and it, not the title, controls, despite the contention that the title implies total abolition of the parent-child immunity doctrine. Allen v. Allen, 76 N.C. App. 504, 333 S.E.2d 530, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 315 N.C. 182, 337 S.E.2d 855 (1985).

It is not this section standing alone which abrogates parental immunity in wrongful death actions arising out of operation of motor vehicles; it is this section and § 28A-18-2, read in pari materia, which bring about this result. Carver v. Carver, 310 N.C. 669, 314 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

A riding lawnmower is not a "motor vehicle" within the meaning of this section. Lee v. Mowett Sales Co., 76 N.C. App. 556, 334 S.E.2d 250 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 489, 342 S.E.2d 882 (1986).

For case declining to judicially abolish the parent-child immunity doctrine in cases not involving motor vehicles, see Lee ex rel. Schlosser v. Mowett Sales Co., 316 N.C. 489, 342 S.E.2d 882 (1986).

Wrongful Death Action by Child's Estate. — A wrongful death action based on defendant mother's negligence in operation of a motor vehicle could be maintained on behalf of deceased child's estate against defendant mother, but only the father would be entitled to share in any recovery. Carver v. Carver, 310 N.C. 669, 314 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

Father would not be barred from sharing in any recovery by his son's estate where the estate's recovery would be grounded, if at all, solely on the negligence of the child's mother. Carver v. Carver, 310 N.C. 669, 314 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

An unemancipated minor child injured prior to October 1, 1975, by the ordinary negligence of its parent, has no right of action against the parent, since this section applies to action occurring on or after that date. Cassidy v. Cheek, 58 N.C. App. 742, 294 S.E.2d 414 (1982), modified on other grounds, 308 N.C. 670, 303 S.E.2d 792 (1983).

Adult Child's Immunity from Suits by Parents for Conduct Occurring While Unemancipated Minor. — This section's exception to the parent-child immunity doctrine did not abolish the unemancipated minor's immunity from suits by his parents; furthermore, defendant, who had reached age of majority at the time of the lawsuit, remained immune from suit by his mother, plaintiff, for negligent conduct occurring when defendant was an unemancipated minor. Coffey v. Coffey, 94 N.C. App. 717, 381 S.E.2d 467 (1989).

Application of Foreign Law. — The trial court properly dismissed a wrongful death action brought by the daughter's estate against the mother, where the accident occurred in Alabama, which has not abolished the parental immunity doctrine. Gbye v. Gbye, 130 N.C. App. 585, 503 S.E.2d 434 (1998), review denied, 349 N.C. 357, — S.E.2d — (1998).

Article 43E.

Affirmative Defense Based On Year 2000 Failure.

(This Article expires October 1, 2000)

§ 1-539.25. (Expires October 1, 2000) Definitions.

Unless the context clearly requires otherwise, the definitions in this section apply throughout this Article:

(1) "Electronic computing device" means any computer hardware or software, computer chip, embedded chip, process control equipment, or other information system that:
   a. Is used to capture, store, manipulate, or process data; or
   b. Controls, monitors, or assists in the operation of physical apparatus that is not primarily used as a computer but that relies on automation or digital technology to function, including, but not limited to, vehicles, vessels, buildings, structures, facilities, elevators, medical equipment, traffic signals, and factory machinery.

(2) "Person" means any natural person, partnership, corporation, body politic, and any unincorporated association, organization, or society which may sue or be sued under a common name.

(3) "Year 2000 problem" means any computing, physical, enterprise, or distribution system complication that has occurred or may occur as a result of the change of the year from 1999 to 2000 in any person's technology system, including computer hardware, programs, software, or systems; embedded chip calculations or embedded systems; firmware; microprocessors; or management systems, business processes, or computing applications that govern, utilize, drive, or depend on the Year 2000 processing capability of the person's technology systems. "Year 2000 problem" includes the common computer programming practice of using a two-digit field to represent a year, resulting in erroneous date calculations; an ambiguous interpretation of the term or field "00"; the failure to recognize 2000 as a leap year; algorithms that use "99" or "00" to activate another function; or the failure of any other applications, software, or hardware due to their date-sensitive nature. (1999-308, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to Year 2000 liability and damages, see G.S. 66-280, et seq.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-308, s. 3, made this section effective July 15, 1999, and applicable to actions accruing on or after that date. The act expires October 1, 2000, except that any affirmative defense raised in a pending civil action pursuant to this act remains effective until the conclusion of that action.

§ 1-539.26. (Expires October 1, 2000) Right to affirmative defense based on year 2000 problem.

(a) A person has an affirmative defense to any claim or action brought against the person if the person establishes that the person's default, failure to pay, breach, omission, or other violation that is the basis of the claim against the person was caused by a year 2000 problem associated with an electronic computing device that is not owned, controlled, or operated by the person, and, if it were not for the year 2000 problem, the person would have been able to satisfy the obligations that are the basis of the claim.

(b) If a person establishes an affirmative defense as set forth in subsection (a) of this section, the court shall dismiss the claim without prejudice and the person or entity making the claim against the person shall not reassert the claim as to which the affirmative defense was asserted for a period of 60 days from the date on which the affirmative defense is granted by the court. Any statute of limitations applicable to the claim is tolled for 90 days upon the granting of the affirmative defense under this section.

(c) This section does not affect those transactions upon which a default has occurred before any disruption of financial or data transfer operations attributable to the year 2000 date change, and does not apply to claims for personal injury or wrongful death.

(d) The granting of the affirmative defense under this section does not impair, extinguish, discharge, satisfy, or otherwise affect the underlying obligation that is the basis of the claim against which the affirmative defense was asserted; except that the inability of a party to bring the claim based upon the obligation must be delayed as set forth in subsection (b) of this section.

(e) An individual who has established an affirmative defense as set forth in subsection (a) of this section may dispute directly with a credit reporting agency operating in this State any item of information in the individual's consumer file relating to the subject of the affirmative defense. The credit reporting agency shall comply with the requirements of the federal "Fair Credit Reporting Act" in responding to the dispute. If requested by the individual, the credit reporting agency shall include the individual's statement of explanation regarding an item of information that the consumer reporting agency denies is inaccurate or a statement concerning the content of the individual's consumer file. The statement shall not exceed 100 words and the credit reporting agency shall not charge the individual a fee for the inclusion of this statement in the individual's consumer file.

(f) A person who agrees to participate in prelitigation mediation as provided in G.S. 66-283 may not assert an affirmative defense as set forth in subsection (a) of this section. (1999-308, s. 1, 2.)

Cross References. — As to Year 2000 liability and damages, see G.S. 66-280, et seq.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-308, s. 3, made this section effective July 15, 1999, and applicable to actions accruing on or after that date. The act expires October 1, 2000, except that any affirmative defense raised in a pending civil action pursuant to this act remains effective until the conclusion of that action.

Session Laws 1999-308, s. 2, provides that G.S. 1-539.26(f), as enacted in section 1 of this act, is effective only if Senate Bill 1005 becomes law. Senate Bill 1005 was enacted as Session Laws 1999-295.

Subdivision (f) was originally enacted as subdivision (e1). It has been redesignated at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

SUBCHAPTER XV. INCIDENTAL PROCEDURE IN CIVIL ACTIONS.

ARTICLE 44.

§ 1-540. By agreement receipt of less sum is discharge.

In all claims, or money demands, of whatever kind, and howsoever due, where an agreement is made and accepted for a less amount than that demanded or claimed to be due, in satisfaction thereof, the payment of the less amount according to such agreement in compromise of the whole is a full and complete discharge of the same. (1874-5, c. 178; Code, s. 574; Rev., s. 859; C.S., s. 895.)

Legal Periodicals. — For discussion of the law of contracts in relation to this section, see 13 N.C.L. Rev. 45 (1935).

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Illustrative Cases.

I. IN GENERAL.

Constitutionality. — This section is constitutional. Koonce v. Russell, 103 N.C. 179, 9 S.E. 316 (1889); Petit v. Woodlief, 115 N.C. 120, 20 S.E. 208 (1894); Wittkowsky v. Baruch, 127 N.C. 313, 37 S.E. 449 (1900).

This section applies as a compromise and settlement when an agreement is made and accepted. Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969).

An agreement to compromise and settle disputed matters is valid and binding. The law favors the avoidance or adjustment of litigation, and a compromise made in good faith for such a purpose will be sustained as not only based upon a sufficient consideration but upon the highest consideration of public policy as well, and this, too, without any special regard to the special merits of the controversy or the character or validity of the claims of the respective parties. York v. Westall, 143 N.C. 276, 55 S.E. 724 (1906). See also, Williams v. Alexander, 39 N.C. 207 (1845); Barnawell v. Threadgill, 56 N.C. 50 (1856); Mayo v. Gardner, 49 N.C. 359 (1857); Mathis v. Bryson, 49 N.C. 508 (1857); Findly v. Ray, 50 N.C. 125 (1857).

When the amount due is uncertain or unliquidated, if an offer in satisfaction of the claim is accompanied with such acts and declarations as amount to a condition that the money shall be accepted only as a payment in full of the claim, and the party to whom the offer is made must of necessity understand, from its very terms, that if he takes the money he takes it subject to such condition, then, in law, the payment operates to discharge the whole claim. Petit v. Woodlief, 115 N.C. 120, 20 S.E. 208 (1894).

Essentials of Compromise. — As in the case of other contracts, mutuality is essential to a valid compromise. There must be a meeting of minds upon every feature and element of such agreement. Horn v. Detroit Dry Dock Co., 150 U.S. 610, 14 S. Ct. 214, 37 L. Ed. 1199 (1893).

The agreement, in order to be binding upon the parties, must have been executed voluntarily and without duress, or undue influence, in good faith, deliberately and understandingly. Hennessy v. Bacon, 137 U.S. 78, 11 S. Ct. 17, 34 L. Ed. 605 (1890).

The word "agreement" implies the parties are of one mind, that all have a common understanding of the rights and obligations of the others and that there has been a meeting of the minds. Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969); Rockingham Square Shopping Center, Inc. v. Integon Life Ins. Corp., 52 N.C. App. 633, 279 S.E.2d 918, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 196, 285 S.E.2d 101 (1981).

Agreements are reached by an offer by one party and an acceptance by the other. This is true even though the legal effect of the acceptance may not be understood. Baillie

Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969); Rockingham Square Shopping Center, Inc. v. Integon Life Ins. Corp., 52 N.C. App. 633, 279 S.E.2d 918, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 196, 285 S.E.2d 101 (1981).

A compromise and settlement must be based upon a disputed claim. Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969).

This section is not applicable where the payment is not intended as a compromise of the whole, or any part of the debt, but as a payment in full. Smith v. Richards, 129 N.C. 267, 40 S.E. 5 (1901).

Elements of Accord and Satisfaction — Generally. — An accord and satisfaction is compounded of two elements: An accord, which is an agreement whereby one of the parties undertakes to give or perform and the other to accept in satisfaction of a claim, liquidated or in dispute, something other than or different from what he is or considers himself entitled to; and a satisfaction, which is the execution or performance of such agreement. Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969); Rockingham Square Shopping Center, Inc. v. Integon Life Ins. Corp., 52 N.C. App. 633, 279 S.E.2d 918, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 196, 285 S.E.2d 101 (1981); Sharpe v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 62 N.C. App. 564, 302 S.E.2d 893, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 823, 310 S.E.2d 353 (1983).

For additional case discussing elements of accord and satisfaction, see Allgood v. Wilmington Sav. & Trust Co., 242 N.C. 506, 88 S.E.2d 825 (1955).

An accord is an agreement in which one of the parties undertakes a performance in satisfaction of a liquidated or disputed claim, arising from tort or contract, and the other party agrees to accept the performance even though it is different from what he considered himself entitled to; satisfaction is the completion or execution of the agreed performance. Sanyo Elec., Inc. v. Albright Distrib. Co., 76 N.C. App. 115, 331 S.E.2d 738, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 668, 335 S.E.2d 496 (1985).

Same — Consideration Required. — Consideration must in some form or other be present in an accord. Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969).

Slight Irregularities Do Not Vitiate. — Where a plea in accord and satisfaction, has been made in bar to an action that defendant had paid an agreed amount and costs into the clerk's office, the fact that a witness ticket of a small amount, which the plaintiff had refused to receive, was not taxed in the costs, will not affect the validity of the tender. McAuley v. Sloan, 173 N.C. 80, 91 S.E. 701 (1917).

Where a creditor agrees to accept a lesser amount in satisfaction of his debt, the lesser amount to include advertising, the amount of which was to be agreed upon by the creditor, the failure of the debtor to pay the amount of the compromise, the creditor having refused to state the amount of advertising he would take, does not invalidate the compromise. Ramsey v. Browder, 136 N.C. 251, 48 S.E. 651 (1904).

Applicability of Accord and Satisfaction to Tort and Contract Actions. — Accord and satisfaction is a method of discharging a contract or settling a cause of action arising either from a contract or tort, by the parties compromising the matter in dispute between them, and accepting its benefits. Walker v. Burt, 182 N.C. 325, 109 S.E. 43 (1921).

A plea of accord and satisfaction is recognized as a method of discharging a contract or settling a cause of action arising either from a contract or a tort, by substituting for such contract or cause of action an agreement for the satisfaction thereof, and an execution of such substitute agreement. Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969); Rockingham Square Shopping Center, Inc. v. Integon Life Ins. Corp., 52 N.C. App. 633, 279 S.E.2d 918, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 196, 285 S.E.2d 101 (1981).

The accord is the agreement. — Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969).

An accord is an agreement between the parties that discharges a contract or settles a cause of action. Barber v. White, 46 N.C. App. 110, 264 S.E.2d 385 (1980).

And the satisfaction is the execution or performance of the agreement. Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969); Barber v. White, 46 N.C. App. 110, 264 S.E.2d 385 (1980).

An accord and satisfaction may be based on an undisputed or liquidated claim. Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969).

But Accord and Satisfaction Does Not Result from Part Payment of Liquidated and Undisputed Claim. — The fact that a remittance by check purporting to be "in full" is accepted and used does not result in an accord and satisfaction if the claim involved is liquidated and undisputed, under the generally accepted rule that an accord and satisfaction does not result from the part payment of a liquidated and undisputed claim. The creditor is justified in treating the transaction as merely the act of an honest debtor remitting less than is due under a mistake as to the nature of the contract. Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969).

Distinction Between Liquidated and Unliquidated Claims. — There is a well-recognized distinction between liquidated or undisputed claims and unliquidated or disputed ones. Under the common law, an agreement to receive a part of a debt due in lieu of the whole of an undisputed, as distinguished from a disputed debt due, was held to be a nudum pactum as to all in excess of the sum actually paid. Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969).

When Account Deemed Liquidated. — An account is liquidated when the amount thereof has been fixed by agreement or if it can be exactly determined by the application of rules of arithmetic or of law. Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969).

The acceptance of a lesser sum in full payment of a larger sum is valid under this section. Koonce v. Russell, 103 N.C. 179, 9 S.E. 316 (1889); Union Bank v. Board of Comm'rs, 116 N.C. 339, 21 S.E. 410 (1895); Lochner v. Silver Sales Serv., Inc., 232 N.C. 70, 59 S.E.2d 218 (1950).

Under the construction placed upon this section the offer of a less sum than is due, when the amount of the debt is certain, is in effect the same as the offer of a given sum in satisfaction of a contingent or unliquidated claim. And the courts are governed by the rule adopted in reference to offers to settle contingent claims, because they are analogous to proposals of compromise of indebtedness under the statute. Petit v. Woodlief, 115 N.C. 120, 20 S.E. 208 (1894).

Acceptance of Part Payment Acts as Complete Discharge. — The receipt of a part in satisfaction of the whole is now as effective as if the whole amount of the debt had been paid. Tiddy v. Harris, 101 N.C. 589, 8 S.E. 227 (1888); Koonce v. Russell, 103 N.C. 179, 9 S.E. 316 (1889); Petit v. Woodlief, 115 N.C. 120, 20 S.E. 208 (1894); Union Bank v. Board of Comm'rs, 116 N.C. 339, 21 S.E. 410 (1895); Wittkowsky v. Baruch, 127 N.C. 313, 37 S.E. 449 (1900).

Ordinarily when a creditor calls on his debtor or a beneficiary calls on his trustee for an accounting and settlement and the demand is met with an offer of money or property in full discharge of debtor's or trustee's obligation, an acceptance and retention of the thing tendered constitutes a complete discharge, even though the sum or property received is less than the amount actually owing. Prentzas v. Prentzas, 260 N.C. 101, 131 S.E.2d 678 (1963).

And Precludes Further Action Thereon. — Where a plaintiff agreed to accept a certain sum by way of compromise in full satisfaction of his claim, and having been paid that amount by the defendant, he cannot maintain an action thereon. Pruden v. Asheboro & M.R.R., 121 N.C. 509, 28 S.E. 349 (1897).

Payment of One Account Not Settlement of Another. — While the acceptance of a lesser sum in full payment of a larger sum is valid under this section, the payment of one account is not the settlement of another. And the acceptance of a lesser sum constitutes a settlement only as to those items of liability embraced in the settlement. Lochner v. Silver Sales Serv., Inc., 232 N.C. 70, 59 S.E.2d 218 (1950).

Executed Agreement Terminating Controversy Is a Contract. — Whether denominated accord and satisfaction or compromise and settlement, the executed agreement terminating or purporting to terminate a controversy is a contract, to be interpreted and tested by established rules relating to contracts. Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969).

Section Incorporated into Contract. — Where agreements to receive a part in lieu of the whole debt due have been made since the enactment of this section, they are deemed to have been entered into in as full contemplation of its provisions as though it had been incorporated into the contract. Union Bank v. Board of Comm'rs, 116 N.C. 339, 21 S.E. 410 (1895), citing Koonce v. Russell, 103 N.C. 179, 9 S.E. 316 (1889).

The question of accord and satisfaction may be one of fact and of law. Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969).

When Accord and Satisfaction Is Question of Law. — Normally, the existence of an accord and satisfaction is a question of fact for the jury. But where the only reasonable inference is existence or nonexistence, accord and satisfaction is a question of law and may be adjudicated by summary judgment when the essential facts are made clear of record. Rockingham Square Shopping Ctr., Inc. v. Integon Life Ins. Corp., 52 N.C. App. 633, 279 S.E.2d 918, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 196, 285 S.E.2d 101 (1981).

When Creditor Is Remitted to Original Rights. — If the debtor repudiates the agreement or unreasonably delays to execute it, the creditor is remitted to his rights under the original contract, for payment of the sum agreed to be paid under the new contract is essential to a discharge of the old contract. Ramsey v. Browder, 136 N.C. 251, 48 S.E. 651 (1904). See also, Hunt v. Wheeler, 116 N.C. 422, 21 S.E. 915 (1895).

Right to Demand Acceptance. — When a proposal to pay a given sum, provided that the payment shall operate to relieve one of three judgment debtors, is accepted by the creditor, and the debtor within a reasonable time tenders the amount, he has the right to demand that it shall be received and applied in discharge of his obligation to make any further payment. Boykin v. Buie, 109 N.C. 501, 13 S.E. 879 (1891).

When Payer Is Entitled to Restitution. —

Where one pays a certain sum upon a contested debt in compromise thereof in case it shall afterwards be established, a finding by the jury that it never existed will entitle the payer to a restitution for the money advanced by him. Fickey v. Merrimon, 79 N.C. 585 (1878).

A principal may not repudiate the act of his agent in compromising a debt due, and receive the benefit of the consideration therefor. Cashmar-King Supply Co. v. Dowd & King, 146 N.C. 191, 59 S.E. 685 (1907).

Rule Prior to Enactment of Section. — Prior to the passage of the Acts 1874-75, c. 178, an agreement to receive a part in lieu of the whole of a debt due was held to be a nudum pactum as to all in excess of the sum actually paid. Hayes v. Davidson, 70 N.C. 573 (1874); Mitchell v. Sawyer, 71 N.C. 70 (1874); Love v. Johnston, 72 N.C. 415 (1875); Currie v. Kennedy, 78 N.C. 91 (1878); Petit v. Woodlief, 115 N.C. 120, 20 S.E. 208 (1894); Union Bank v. Board of Comm'rs, 116 N.C. 339, 21 S.E. 410 (1895).

Applied in B.B. Walker Co. v. Ashland Chem. Co., 474 F. Supp. 651 (M.D.N.C. 1979).

Quoted in Hassett v. Dixie Furn. Co., 333 N.C. 307, 425 S.E.2d 683 (1993).

Stated in State Distrib. Corp. v. G.E. Bobbitt & Assocs., 62 N.C. App. 530, 303 S.E.2d 349 (1983).

Cited in McAuley v. Sloan, 173 N.C. 80, 91 S.E. 701 (1917); Walker v. Burt, 182 N.C. 325, 109 S.E. 43 (1921).

II. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

Bonds. — When a debtor pays a sum supposed by him to be the balance due on his bond, and the creditor refuses to give up the bond, but says that he will credit the amount paid, it does not amount to a compromise and satisfaction of the bond, although the debtor intends it as such. King v. Phillips, 94 N.C. 555 (1886).

Checks. — Under a uniform construction of this section, as announced in a long line of decisions, it is held that where two parties are in dispute as to the correct amount of an account, and one sends the other a check, or makes a payment, clearly purporting to be in full settlement of the claim, and the other knowingly accepts it upon such condition, this will amount to a full and complete discharge of the debt. Mercer v. Frank Hitch Lumber Co., 173 N.C. 49, 91 S.E. 588 (1917); Blanchard v. Edenton Peanut Co., 182 N.C. 20, 108 S.E. 332 (1921); De Loache v. De Loache, 189 N.C. 394, 127 S.E. 419 (1925); Allgood v. Wilmington Sav. & Trust Co., 242 N.C. 506, 88 S.E.2d 825 (1955); Fidelity & Cas. Co. v. Nello L. Terre Co., 250 N.C. 547, 109 S.E.2d 171 (1959).

Where a settlement was arrived at between the parties by the terms of which all claims between them were settled by the payment to plaintiff of $10,000 and for which he executed releases in full on all claims against the defendants or either of them, and payment was made by check of defendant on which was plainly typed: "Settlement of all accounts in full as of today November 8, 1954," and the check was endorsed and cashed by plaintiff, this section is clearly applicable and controlling. Jordan Motor Lines v. McIntyre, 157 F. Supp. 475 (M.D.N.C. 1957).

When in case of a disputed account between parties a check is given and received under such circumstances as clearly import that it is intended to be, and is tendered, in full settlement of the disputed items, the acceptance and cashing of the check and the appropriation of the proceeds will be regarded as complete satisfaction of the claim. One party will not be allowed to accept a benefit of the check so tendered and at the same time retain the right to sue for an additional amount. Moore v. Greene, 237 N.C. 614, 75 S.E.2d 649 (1953).

The cashing of a "full payment check," i.e., a check marked with some indication that it is tendered in full payment of a disputed claim, is an accord and satisfaction as a matter of law. Barber v. White, 46 N.C. App. 110, 264 S.E.2d 385 (1980).

In an action to recover on an account, plaintiff's retention of a cashier's check marked "for payment in full," tendered by defendant, though the check was not deposited, was sufficient acceptance of a lesser amount than plaintiff claimed was due it to result in an accord and satisfaction or compromise and settlement. FCX, Inc. v. Ocean Oil Co., 46 N.C. App. 755, 266 S.E.2d 388 (1980).

Where an employee was discharged and received and cashed a check for $125, on which was written, "In full for services," which amount was less than claimed, he cannot recover more, although he attempted to qualify his acceptance of the proceeds of the check by writing across the check, above his signature, the words, "Accepted for one month's services." Kerr v. Sanders, 122 N.C. 635, 29 S.E. 943 (1898).

A check given and received by the creditor, which purports to be payment in full of an account, does not preclude the creditor accepting it from showing that in fact it was not in full unless, under the principle of accord and satisfaction, there had been an acceptance of the check in settlement of a disputed account. Baillie Lumber Co. v. Kincaid Carolina Corp., 4 N.C. App. 342, 167 S.E.2d 85 (1969).

Where a check is sent in full payment of an account, the creditor cannot accept and appropriate the check and afterwards recover the amount of any item which was a part of the account. Having elected to take a part in satisfaction of the whole, he will be held to his agreement; but the principle, of course, does not apply to a transaction not embraced by the account. Whether it is or not may often be a question of law upon admitted facts; but sometimes the evidence may be such as to make it a question for the jury. Aydlett v. Brown, 153 N.C. 334, 69 S.E. 243 (1910); Lochner v. Silver Sales Serv., Inc., 232 N.C. 70, 59 S.E.2d 218 (1950).

Where plaintiff's evidence was to the effect that defendant promised to pay him a stipulated amount annually, the remuneration to be paid on the basis of weekly checks for a stipulated commission on sales made by plaintiff, with quarterly payments to make up the proportionate part of the annual salary. The acceptance of such checks by plaintiff with stipulations above plaintiff's endorsement that the payment released the payer of all claims due to date, with accompanying voucher stipulating that the sums included in the checks covered no items except commissions and travel allowances, raised for the determination of the jury the question as to whether the weekly payments composed one account of liability and the quarterly payments another, and therefore whether the settlement included the claim for quarterly payments. Lochner v. Silver Sales Serv., Inc., 232 N.C. 70, 59 S.E.2d 218 (1950).

The cashing of a check tendered in full payment of a disputed claim establishes an accord and satisfaction as a matter of law. In such case the claim is extinguished, regardless of any disclaimers which may be communicated by the payee. Sharpe v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 62 N.C. App. 564, 302 S.E.2d 893, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 823, 310 S.E.2d 353 (1983).

When there is some indication on a check that it is tendered in full payment of a disputed claim, the cashing of the check is held to be an accord and satisfaction as a matter of law. Sanyo Elec., Inc. v. Albright Distrib. Co., 76 N.C. App. 115, 331 S.E.2d 738, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 668, 335 S.E.2d 496 (1985).

Where it was uncontradicted that plaintiff negotiated defendant's check which was tendered as full payment of the disputed claim, this established an accord and satisfaction as a matter of law. When the debtor tendered the check to the creditor, the creditor had to take the check on the terms offered by the creditor or not take it at all. Sanyo Elec., Inc. v. Albright Distrib. Co., 76 N.C. App. 115, 331 S.E.2d 738, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 668, 335 S.E.2d 496 (1985).

Insurance. — Payment to beneficiary of one half of proceeds of life insurance policy did not constitute accord and satisfaction as a matter of law where beneficiary testified that by virtue of such payment she did not abandon her right to balance of proceeds, and receipt did not expressly state that the sum received was in full settlement. Allgood v. Wilmington Sav. & Trust Co., 242 N.C. 506, 88 S.E.2d 825 (1955).

Execution of a sworn statement in proof of fire loss, which established the value of the loss, constituted an accord as to the unliquidated claim and a satisfaction occurred upon plaintiff's acceptance and negotiation of the draft from the insurer. Insured's attempt to alter its terms was unavailing, since insured had to accept it on the terms offered by defendant or not at all, and acceptance and negotiation of it constituted an accord and satisfaction despite insured's attempt to characterize it as merely partial payment. Sharpe v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 62 N.C. App. 564, 302 S.E.2d 893, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 823, 310 S.E.2d 353 (1983).

When the sum paid under an indemnity insurance policy is the only sum due at the time, the language of the receipt will be restricted to the amount due, and will not be construed as a compromise of the whole claim of indemnity for future sickness. Moore v. Maryland Cas. Co., 150 N.C. 153, 63 S.E. 675 (1909).

Mistake as to Amount. — Where the plaintiff agreed to accept a lesser sum in discharge of a larger, which he thought was the amount of the debt, but was mistaken and later found that the debt was larger, there was no compromise as to the amount of the mistake. Holden v. Warren, 118 N.C. 326, 24 S.E. 770 (1896).

Money Paid into Court. — Money tendered and deposited into court by the defendant with costs accrued, "in full tender of all indebtedness of defendant to plaintiffs," if withdrawn by the plaintiffs, pending the litigation, amounts to a satisfaction of their claims, and subjects the plaintiffs to all subsequently accruing costs. Cline v. Rudisill, 126 N.C. 523, 36 S.E. 36 (1900).

Offer and Acceptance by Telegram. — Offer and acceptance by telegram to pay a sum certain in full settlement of a claim in dispute, followed by immediate payment by debtor, constitutes a valid compromise in full satisfaction of the claim. Pruden v. Asheboro & M.R.R., 121 N.C. 509, 28 S.E. 349 (1897).

Where the plaintiff's damages, caused by the defendant's breach of contract, were based upon two distinctive items, the plaintiff agreeing upon and receiving compensation for the first item did not preclude a recovery upon the second one, when it appeared that the settlement had been made in contemplation of the first item alone. Garland v. Linville Imp. Co., 184 N.C. 551, 115 S.E. 164 (1922).

Where at a sale under a deed of trust, it was agreed between the creditor and debtor that the former would bid for the property, and if it brought less than the debt he would accept it in satisfaction of the sums due him, and the debtor was thereby induced not to bid or procure others to do so, and the property was bid off by the creditor for a less sum than his debt, it was held that there was a sufficient consideration to support the agreement and the debtor was discharged from his obligation. Jones v. Wilson, 104 N.C. 9, 10 S.E. 79 (1889).

Where two of several makers of a note agree with the payee that they shall be released from their obligations by giving a new note in a smaller sum, subject to the same conditions of warranty as the old one, the giving of a new note is valid as a compromise under this section, and the warranty in the former transaction is a part of the consideration for the new one, and is enforceable. Standing Stone Nat'l Bank v. Walser, 162 N.C. 53, 77 S.E. 1006 (1913).

Partnership Accounting. — Where a partnership in real estate held for rentals had title to land purchased with partnership funds and, after demand by one of the two partners for an accounting, one of the pieces of real estate was conveyed to him with the verbal statement that it was in complete settlement, the retention of the deed and the collection of rentals would constitute a settlement regardless of the intent of the grantee partner if he accepted the deed as conveying the property to him in his individual capacity and collected the rentals on the basis of individual ownership, but would not constitute a settlement if he merely retained title for the partnership, offering to account for the rents and profits in the settlement of the partnership affairs. Prentzas v. Prentzas, 260 N.C. 101, 131 S.E.2d 678 (1963).

§ 1-540.1. Effect of release of original wrongdoer on liability of physicians and surgeons for malpractice.

The compromise settlement or release of a cause of action against a person responsible for a personal injury to another shall not operate as a bar to an action by the injured party against a physician or surgeon or other professional practitioner treating such injury for the negligent treatment thereof, unless the express terms of the compromise, settlement or release agreement given by the injured party to the person responsible for the initial injury provide otherwise. (1961, c. 212.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — Section does not violate N.C. Const., Art. I, § 1. Galloway v. Lawrence, 263 N.C. 433, 139 S.E.2d 761 (1965).

This section on its face applies only to actions for personal injury. Simmons v. Wilder, 6 N.C. App. 179, 169 S.E.2d 480 (1969).

Actions for wrongful death are not included in the terms of this section. Simmons v. Wilder, 6 N.C. App. 179, 169 S.E.2d 480 (1969).

Former Law. — Prior to October 1, 1961, a release executed in favor of one responsible for the original injury protected a physician or surgeon against a claim based on negligent treatment of the injury. Simmons v. Wilder, 6 N.C. App. 179, 169 S.E.2d 480 (1969).

§ 1-540.2. Settlement of property damage claims arising from motor vehicle collisions or accidents; same not to constitute admission of liability, nor bar party seeking damages for bodily injury or death.

In any claim, civil action, or potential civil action which arises out of a motor vehicle collision or accident, settlement of any property damage claim arising from such collision or accident, whether such settlement be made by an individual, a self-insurer, or by an insurance carrier under a policy of insurance, shall not constitute an admission of liability on the part of the person, self-insurer or insurance carrier making such settlement, which arises out of the same motor vehicle collision or accident. It shall be incompetent for any claimant or party plaintiff in the said civil action to offer into evidence, either by oral testimony or paper writing, the fact that a settlement of the property damage claim arising from such collision or accident has been made; provided further, that settlement made of such property damage claim arising out of a motor vehicle collision or accident shall not in and of itself act as a bar, release, accord and satisfaction, or discharge of any claims other than the property damage claim, unless by the written terms of a properly executed settlement agreement it is specifically stated that the acceptance of said settlement constitutes full settlement of all claims and causes of action arising out of the said motor vehicle collision or accident. (1967, c. 662, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Maintenance of Action Where Defendant's Release Relied on to Defeat Counterclaim. — This section, which provides that the settlement of a property damage claim does not constitute the admission of liability as to personal injury claims from an automobile accident, that it may not be used as evidence to that effect, and that, of itself, the settlement shall not act as a bar to any claim other than the property damage claim unless, by the terms of the settlement, all claims arising from the accident are covered, does not affect the rule that a plaintiff may not maintain an action for personal injuries while relying on a complete release given by defendant to defeat defendant's counterclaim for property damages. Leach v. Robertson, 49 N.C. App. 455, 271 S.E.2d 405 (1980).

§ 1-540.3. Advance payments.

(a) In any claim, potential civil action or action in which any person claims to have sustained bodily injuries, advance or partial payment or payments to any such person claiming to have sustained bodily injuries or to the personal representative of any person claimed to have sustained fatal injuries may be made to such person or such personal representative by the person or party against whom such claim is made or by the insurance carrier for the person, party, corporation, association or entity which is or may be liable for such injuries or death. Such advance or partial payment or payments shall not constitute an admission of liability on the part of the person, party, corporation, association or entity on whose behalf the payment or payments are made or by the insurance carrier making the payments. It shall be incompetent for any party in a civil action to offer into evidence, through any witness either by oral testimony or paper writing, the fact of the advance or partial payment or payments made by or on behalf of the opposing party. The receipt of the advance or partial payment or payments shall not in and of itself act as a bar, release, accord and satisfaction, or a discharge of any claims of the person or representative receiving the advance or partial payment or payments, unless by the terms of a properly executed settlement agreement it is specifically stated that the acceptance of said payment or payments constitutes full settlement of all claims and causes of action for personal injuries or wrongful death, as applicable.

(b) In any civil action for personal injuries or wrongful death the person or party against whom claim is made for such injuries or death and by or on whose behalf advance or partial payment or payments have been made to the party asserting the claim shall file with the Court and serve upon opposing counsel a motion setting out the date and amount of payment or payments and praying that said sums be credited upon any judgment recovered by the opposing party against the party on whose behalf the payment or payments were made. Prior to the entry of judgment, the trial judge shall conduct a hearing and may consider affidavits, oral testimony, depositions, and any other competent evidence, and shall enter his findings of fact and conclusions of law as to whether the advance or partial payment or payments were made by or on behalf of the person or party claiming to have made such payment(s) to the party asserting the claim for injuries or wrongful death. Upon a finding that the advance or partial payment or payments were made by or on behalf of the person or party claiming to have made such payment(s), all such payments shall be credited by the trial judge upon any judgment rendered in favor of the person or representative who received the payment or payments. Advance payments made by one joint tort-feasor shall not inure to the benefit or credit of any joint tort-feasor not making such payments.

No claim for reimbursement may be made or allowed by or on behalf of the person or party making such advance payment or payments against the person or party to whom such payment or payments are made except a claim based on fraud.

The making of any advance payment shall not affect in any way whatsoever the running of the statute of limitations. (1971, c. 854.)

CASE NOTES

Legislative Purpose. — The obvious purpose of the legislature in enacting this section was to alleviate the harsh consequences of application of the accord and satisfaction doctrine to personal injury cases and to encourage the making of partial payments to the claimant prior to an agreement on a final settlement. Thornburg v. Lancaster, 303 N.C. 89, 277 S.E.2d 423 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Daniels v. Montgomery Mut. Ins. Co., 320 N.C. 669, 360 S.E.2d 772 (1987).

Effect of Section. — As a result of this statute, seriously injured persons who require long-term medical treatment can now accept piecemeal payments from an insurer before any determination of liability, and those payments represent neither an admission of liability on the part of the insurer nor full satisfaction of the injured party's claims. Under the present law, acceptance of partial or advance payments, absent a properly executed full settlement agreement, does not bar the party receiving the payments from suing on the underlying claim. Thornburg v. Lancaster, 303 N.C. 89, 277 S.E.2d 423 (1981).

This section, by its express terms, applies only to partial or advance payment and prohibits claims for reimbursement only when the payment made was partial or advance; it does not affect the power of a trial judge to order reimbursement when the payment or payments made were in final settlement of all claims. Thornburg v. Lancaster, 303 N.C. 89, 277 S.E.2d 423 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Daniels v. Montgomery Mut. Ins. Co., 320 N.C. 669, 360 S.E.2d 772 (1987).

Intent of Parties Determines Whether Payment Is Partial or Final. — Although this section is concerned solely with advance or partial payments, it nowhere defines those terms or indicates how the character of the payment is to be determined. Whether the payment was partial or final under the statute depends upon the intent of the parties giving and receiving it. Thornburg v. Lancaster, 303 N.C. 89, 277 S.E.2d 423 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Daniels v. Montgomery Mut. Ins. Co., 320 N.C. 669, 360 S.E.2d 772 (1987).

And the determination of intent is a question of fact and, therefore, can be resolved only by the trier of fact unless the evidence of intent is undisputed. Thornburg v. Lancaster, 303 N.C. 89, 277 S.E.2d 423 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Daniels v. Montgomery Mut. Ins. Co., 320 N.C. 669, 360 S.E.2d 772 (1987).

Issue of Fact as to Intent Created Absent Settlement Agreement. — Absent a properly executed settlement agreement, a claimant's testimony that he or she, at the time of the agreement, intended the settlement to be partial or advance creates an issue of fact and is enough to take the case to the jury. Thornburg v. Lancaster, 303 N.C. 89, 277 S.E.2d 423 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Daniels v. Montgomery Mut. Ins. Co., 320 N.C. 669, 360 S.E.2d 772 (1987).

Reimbursement Order Held Improper Where Issue of Fact Existed. — In an action to recover for personal injuries sustained by plaintiff in an automobile accident, where there was an issue of fact as to whether a payment made to plaintiff by defendants' insurer was a partial or final settlement, the trial court's reimbursement order, with which plaintiff did not comply, was improperly entered, since under this section acceptance of partial or advance payments, absent a properly executed full settlement agreement, does not bar the party receiving the payments from suing on the underlying claims. Thornburg v. Lancaster, 303 N.C. 89, 277 S.E.2d 423 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Daniels v. Montgomery Mut. Ins. Co., 320 N.C. 669, 360 S.E.2d 772 (1987).

Insurer's Duty to Defend Insured Broader Than Duty to Indemnify. — Insurer's duty to defend its insured is separate from and broader than the insurer's duty to indemnify the insured. Brown v. Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co., 90 N.C. App. 464, 369 S.E.2d 367 (1988), aff'd, 326 N.C. 387, 390 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

Insurance company was required to continue defending insured until a settlement or judgment was reached despite having paid its policy limits under this section. Brown v. Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co., 90 N.C. App. 464, 369 S.E.2d 367 (1988), aff'd, 326 N.C. 387, 390 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

No claim for reimbursement may be made or allowed by the party making the advance payment against the recipient, except for fraud. Gunn v. Whichard, 707 F. Supp. 196 (E.D.N.C. 1988).

Stated in Thornburg v. Lancaster, 47 N.C. App. 131, 266 S.E.2d 738 (1980); Brown v. Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co., 326 N.C. 387, 390 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

Article 44A.

Tender.

§ 1-543.1. Service of order of tender; return.

In all matters in which it is proper or necessary to make or serve a tender, the clerk of the superior court in the county in which the tender is to be made shall, upon request of the tendering party, direct the sheriff of said county to serve an order of tender, together with the property to be tendered, upon the party or parties upon whom said tender is to be made. In the event said property is incapable of being manually tendered, said order of tender shall so state and service of said order tendering same shall have the same legal effect as if the property had been manually tendered. Within five days after receipt of the order, the sheriff shall make his return thereon, showing upon whom the same was served, the date and hour of service, the property tendered, and whether or not said tender was accepted, or that, after due diligence, the party or parties upon whom service was to be made could not be found within the county. He shall then return said order of tender to the clerk who issued it, and this shall constitute proper tender. Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent other methods of tender or tender by any party to an action in open court upon any other party to said action. (1965, c. 699.)

§§ 1-543.2 through 1-543.9: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 44B.

Structured Settlement Protection Act.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-367, s. 3, made this Article effective October 1, 1999, and applicable to any transfer of structured settlement payment rights under a transfer agreement entered into on or after that date, provided that this act shall not apply to any transfer of structured settlement payment rights under a structured settlement agreement entered into or effective prior to that date where the transfer does not contravene the terms of the structured settlement. Section 3 further provides: "Nothing contained herein shall imply that any transfer under a transfer agreement reached prior to October 1, 1999, is effective."

§ 1-543.12. Structured settlement payment rights.

No direct or indirect transfer of structured settlement payment rights shall be effective, and no structured settlement obligor or annuity issuer shall be required to make any payment directly or indirectly to any transferee of structured settlement payment rights unless the transfer has been authorized in advance in a final order of a court of competent jurisdiction or a responsible administrative authority based on express findings by such court or responsible administrative authority that:
(1) The transfer complies with the requirements of this Article [of] law;
(2) Not less than 10 days prior to the date on which the payee first incurred any obligation with respect to the transfer, the transferee has provided to the payee a disclosure statement in bold type, no smaller than 14 point setting forth:
   a. The amounts and due dates of the structured settlement payments to be transferred;
   b. The aggregate amount of such payments;
   c. The discounted present value of such payments;
   d. The gross amount payable to the payee in exchange for such payments;
   e. An itemized listing of all brokers' commissions, service charges, application fees, processing fees, closing costs, filing fees, administrative fees, legal fees, notary fees and other commissions, fees, costs, expenses, and charges payable by the payee or deductible from the gross amount otherwise payable to the payee;
   f. The net amount payable to the payee after deduction of all commissions, fees, costs, expenses, and charges described in sub-subdivision e. of this subdivision;
   g. The quotient (expressed as a percentage) obtained by dividing the net payment amount by the discounted present value of the payments;

h. The discount rate used by the transferee to determine the net amount payable to the payee for the structured settlement payments to be transferred; and

i. The amount of any penalty and the aggregate amount of any liquidated damages (inclusive of penalties) payable by the payee in the event of any breach of the transfer agreement by the payee;

(3) The transfer is in the best interest of the payee;

(4) The payee has received independent professional advice regarding the legal, tax, and financial implications of the transfer;

(5) The transferee has given written notice of the transferee's name, address, and taxpayer identification number to the annuity issuer and the structured settlement obligor and has filed a copy of such notice with the court or responsible administrative authority;

(6) The discount rate used in determining the net amount payable to the payee, as provided in subdivision (2) of this section, does not exceed an annual percentage rate of prime plus five percentage points calculated as if the net amount payable to the payee, as provided in sub-subdivision (2)f. of this section, was the principal of a consumer loan made by the transferee to the payee, and if the structured settlement payments to be transferred to the transferee were the payee's payments of principal plus interest on such loan. For purposes of this subdivision, the prime rate shall be as reported by the Federal Reserve Statistical Release H.15 on the first Monday of the month in which the transfer agreement is signed by both the payee and the transferee, except when the transfer agreement is signed prior to the first Monday of that month then the prime rate shall be as reported by the Federal Reserve Statistical Release H.15 on the first Monday of the preceding month;

(7) Any brokers' commissions, service charges, application fees, processing fees, closing costs, filing fees, administrative fees, notary fees and other commissions, fees, costs, expenses, and charges payable by the payee or deductible from the gross amount otherwise payable to the payee do not exceed two percent (2%) of the net amount payable to the payee;

(8) The transfer of structured settlement payment rights is fair and reasonable; and

(9) Notwithstanding a provision of the structured settlement agreement prohibiting an assignment by the payee, the court may order a transfer of periodic payment rights provided that the court finds that the provisions of this Article are satisfied.

If the court or responsible administrative authority authorizes the transfer pursuant to this section, the court or responsible administrative authority shall order the structured settlement obligor to execute an acknowledgment of assignment letter on behalf of the transferee for the amount of the structured settlement payment rights to be transferred; provided, however, structured settlement payment rights arising from a claim pursuant to Chapter 97 shall not be authorized. (1999-367, s. 1; 1999-456, s. 67.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-456, s. 67, effective August 13, 1999, added the language following "transferred" in the last paragraph of this section as enacted by Session Laws 1999-367, s. 1, effective October 1, 1999.

§ 1-543.13. Jurisdiction.

(a) Where the structured settlement agreement was entered into after commencement of litigation or administrative proceedings in this State, the court or administrative agency where the action was pending shall have exclusive jurisdiction over any application for authorization under this Article of a transfer of structured settlement payment rights.

(b) Where the structured settlement agreement was entered into prior to the commencement of litigation or administrative proceedings, or after the commencement of litigation outside this State, the Superior Court Division of the General Court of Justice shall have nonexclusive original jurisdiction over any application for authorization under this Article of a transfer of structured settlement payment rights. (1999-367, s. 1.)

§ 1-543.14. Procedure for approval of transfers.

(a) Where the structured settlement agreement was entered into after the commencement of litigation or administrative proceedings in this State, the application for authorization of a transfer of structured settlement rights shall be filed with the court or administrative agency where the settled claim was pending as a motion in the cause.

(b) Where the structured settlement agreement was entered into prior to the commencement of litigation or administrative proceedings, or after the commencement of litigation or administrative proceedings outside this State, the application for authorization of a transfer of structured settlement payment rights shall be filed in the superior court with proper venue pursuant to Article 7 of this Chapter. The nature of the action shall be a special proceeding governed by the provisions of Article 33 of this Chapter.

(c) Not less than 30 days prior to the scheduled hearing on any application for authorization of a transfer of structured settlement payment rights under this Article, the transferee shall file with the proper court or responsible administrative authority and serve on any other government authority which previously approved the structured settlement, on all interested parties as defined in G.S. 1-543.11(4), and on the Attorney General, a notice of the proposed transfer and the application for its authorization, including in such notice:

(1) A copy of the transferee's application;
(2) A copy of the transfer agreement;
(3) A copy of the disclosure statement required under G.S. 1-543.12(a)(2);
(4) Notification that any interested party is entitled to support, oppose, or otherwise respond to the transferee's application, either in person or by counsel, by submitting written comments to the court or responsible administrative authority or by participating in the hearing; and
(5) Notification of the time and place of the hearing and notification of the manner in which and the time by which written responses to the application must be filed in order to be considered by the court or responsible administrative authority.

(d) The Attorney General shall have standing to raise, appear, and be heard on any matter relating to an application for authorization of a transfer of structured settlement payment rights under this Article. (1999-367, s. 1.)

§ 1-543.15. No waiver; penalties.

(a) The provisions of this Article may not be waived.

(b) Any payee who has transferred structured settlement payment rights to a transferee without complying with this Article may bring an action against the transferee to recover actual monetary loss or for damages up to five thousand dollars ($5,000) for the violation by the transferee, or bring actions for both. The payee is entitled to attorneys" fees and costs incurred to enforce this Article. In addition, all unpaid structured settlement payment rights transferred in violation of this Article by any transferee shall be reconveyed to the payee.

(c) No payee who proposes to make a transfer of structured settlement payment rights shall incur any penalty, forfeit any application fee or other payment, or otherwise incur any liability to the proposed transferee based on any failure of such transfer to satisfy the conditions of this Article. (1999-367, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Effect of Article. — This Article provides that parties may agree in writing to submit to arbitration "any controversy" then existing between them or include in any written contract a provision for settlement by arbitration of "any controversy" arising between them relating to the contract or nonperformance thereof. Such agreement or provision is valid, enforceable and irrevocable except with the consent of the parties, without regard to the justiciable character of the controversy. Crutchley v. Crutchley, 306 N.C. 518, 293 S.E.2d 793 (1982).

This Article provides only two exceptions to which it will not apply: (1) any agreement or provision to arbitrate in which it is stipulated that it will not apply and (2) arbitration agreements between employers and employees or between their respective representatives, unless the agreement provides that it will apply. Crutchley v. Crutchley, 306 N.C. 518, 293 S.E.2d 793 (1982).

The purpose of arbitration is to reach a final settlement of disputed matters without litigation. McNeal v. Black, 61 N.C. App. 305, 300 S.E.2d 575 (1983).

The purpose of arbitration is to reach a final settlement of disputed matters without litigation, and it is well established that the parties, who have agreed to abide by the decision of a panel of arbitrators, will not generally be heard to attack the regularity or fairness of an award. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk,

Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

Read in its entirety, the Uniform Arbitration Act appears to create a system of problem resolution with minimal judicial intervention. This Act provides a means by which parties can agree contractually to limit judicial intervention into their disputes. Henderson v. Herman, 104 N.C. App. 482, 409 S.E.2d 739 (1991), cert. denied, 330 N.C. 851, 413 S.E.2d 551 (1992).

Legislative Intent. — Read as a whole, the Uniform Arbitration Act provides parties with a means to bypass the morass of judicial litigation, while still maintaining the judicial doors ajar for recalcitrant disputes. Hence, it would appear that the legislature intended the courts to send certain predetermined issues to arbitration and then to step back until the arbitration proceeding is complete. Henderson v. Herman, 104 N.C. App. 482, 409 S.E.2d 739 (1991), cert. denied, 330 N.C. 851, 413 S.E.2d 551 (1992).

Purpose Behind Enactment of Uniform Act. — The principle legislative purpose behind enactment of the Uniform Arbitration Act is to provide and encourage an expedited, efficient, relatively uncomplicated, alternative means of dispute resolution, with limited judicial intervention or participation, and without the primary expense of litigation — attorneys' fees. Nucor Corp. v. General Bearing Corp., 333 N.C. 148, 423 S.E.2d 747 (1992), reh'g denied, 333 N.C. 349, 426 S.E.2d 708 (1993).

Confirmation of Arbiter's Decision. — An agreement to arbitrate does not cut off a party's access to the courts. On the contrary, an action compelled to arbitration must have the arbiter's decision confirmed by the court. Henderson v. Herman, 104 N.C. App. 482, 409 S.E.2d 739 (1991), cert. denied, 330 N.C. 851, 413 S.E.2d 551 (1992).

Court Must Order Arbitration on Motion of Party. — As long as the statutory requirements of the Uniform Arbitration Act, (§§ 1-567.1 through 1-567.20) have been met and an order compelling arbitration would not prejudice a party to the contract who opposes the motion according to the standard set forth in this opinion, a court must order arbitration on motion of a party to the contract. Cyclone Roofing Co. v. David M. LaFave Co., 312 N.C. 224, 321 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

Filing of Pleadings Does Not Constitute Waiver of Arbitration Provision. — The mere filing of pleadings by both parties to a contract containing an arbitration agreement does not constitute waiver of the arbitration provision as a matter of law. Cyclone Roofing Co. v. David M. LaFave Co., 312 N.C. 224, 321 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

General contract law governs the issue of the existence of an agreement to arbitrate. Southern Spindle & Flyer Co. v. Milliken & Co., 53 N.C. App. 785, 281 S.E.2d 734 (1981), cert. denied, 304 N.C. 729, 288 S.E.2d 381 (1982).

Though the act requires that certain disputes be removed from direct judicial supervision, the court that compels arbitration does not lose jurisdiction. Henderson v. Herman, 104 N.C. App. 482, 409 S.E.2d 739 (1991), cert. denied, 330 N.C. 851, 413 S.E.2d 551 (1992).

"Hands-off" Period. — The act creates a process whereby the existence of an agreement to arbitrate requires a court to compel arbitration on one party's motion and then requires the court to step back and take a "hands-off" attitude during the arbitration proceeding. The trial court then reenters the dispute arena to confirm, modify, deny or vacate the arbiter's award. At no time does the trial court lose jurisdiction. However, during the "hands-off" period, the trial court must not interfere with the arbitration proceeding. Henderson v. Herman, 104 N.C. App. 482, 409 S.E.2d 739 (1991), cert. denied, 330 N.C. 851, 413 S.E.2d 551 (1992).

Binding arbitration is not available in this State by court order in a civil action for alimony, custody and child support. Crutchley v. Crutchley, 306 N.C. 518, 293 S.E.2d 793 (1982).

But May Be Had by Agreement. — Since the parties may settle spousal support by agreement, there exists no prohibition to their entering into binding arbitration under this Article to settle the issue of spousal support. Crutchley v. Crutchley, 306 N.C. 518, 293 S.E.2d 793 (1982).

Once a civil action has been filed and is pending, the court has no authority to order binding arbitration, even with the parties' consent. But ordinarily, with the parties' consent, the judge can refer these issues to a referee. Crutchley v. Crutchley, 306 N.C. 518, 293 S.E.2d 793 (1982).

While in the absence of court proceedings, parties may settle their disputes by arbitration, once the issues are brought into court, the court may not delegate its duty to resolve those issues to arbitration. Crutchley v. Crutchley, 306 N.C. 518, 293 S.E.2d 793 (1982).

Power of Court to Modify Award. — While provisions of a valid arbitration award concerning alimony may by agreement be made binding on the parties and nonmodifiable by the courts, provisions of the award concerning custody and child support continue to be within the court's jurisdiction and are modifiable pursuant to § 50-13.7. Crutchley v. Crutchley, 306 N.C. 518, 293 S.E.2d 793 (1982).

Just as parents cannot by agreement deprive the courts of their duty to promote the best interests of their children, they cannot do so by arbitration. Hence those provisions of an arbitration award concerning custody and child support, like those provisions in a separation agreement, will remain reviewable and modifiable by the court. Crutchley v. Crutchley, 306 N.C. 518, 293 S.E.2d 793 (1982).

Attempt to Frustrate Federal Arbitration by Filing State Action. — Where a construction contract contained a broad arbitration clause, the "reactive" filing of a state declaratory action by one party, asserting the nonarbitrability of a dispute before the other party had any real opportunity to seek arbitration, could not frustrate the right of the other party to an order of arbitration by the federal district court pursuant to the Federal Arbitration Act. Mercury Constr. Corp. v. Moses H. Cone Mem. Hosp., 656 F.2d 933 (4th Cir. 1981), rehearing denied, 664 F.2d 936 (4th Cir. 1981), aff'd, 460 U.S. 1, 103 S. Ct. 927, 74 L. Ed. 2d 765 (1983).

Strict Confidentiality Not Required. — Nothing in the North Carolina statutes governing arbitration requires strict confidentiality. Industrotech Constructors, Inc. v. Duke Univ., 67 N.C. App. 741, 314 S.E.2d 272 (1984).

Applied in Rustad v. Rustad, 68 N.C. App. 58, 314 S.E.2d 275 (1984); Bolton Corp. v. T.A. Loving Co., 94 N.C. App. 392, 380 S.E.2d 796 (1989); Palmer v. Duke Power Co., 129 N.C. App. 488, 499 S.E.2d 801 (1998).

§ 1-567.2. Arbitration agreements made valid, irrevocable and enforceable; scope.

(a) Two or more parties may agree in writing to submit to arbitration any controversy existing between them at the time of the agreement, or they may include in a written contract a provision for the settlement by arbitration of any controversy thereafter arising between them relating to such contract or the failure or refusal to perform the whole or any part thereof. Such agreement or provision shall be valid, enforceable, and irrevocable except with the consent of all the parties, without regard to the justiciable character of the controversy.

(b) This Article shall not apply to:

(1) Any agreement or provision to arbitrate in which it is stipulated that this Article shall not apply or to any arbitration or award thereunder;

(2) Arbitration agreements between employers and employees or between their respective representatives, unless the agreement provides that this Article shall apply. (1927, c. 94, s. 1; 1973, c. 676, s. 1; 1975, c. 19, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases cited below were decided under prior law.

Public Policy Favors Arbitration. — There exists in North Carolina a strong public policy in favor of settling disputes by arbitration. Prime S. Homes, Inc. v. Byrd, 102 N.C. App. 255, 401 S.E.2d 822 (1991).

There is a strong public policy favoring the settlement of disputes by arbitration, and doubts concerning the scope of arbitrable issues will be resolved in favor of the party seeking arbitration. Servomation Corp. v. Hickory Constr. Co., 316 N.C. 543, 342 S.E.2d 853 (1986).

Legislative Intent. — By enacting this Article the legislature intended to encourage parties to submit disputed matters to arbitration when it is feasible and expedient for them to do so. Thomas v. Howard, 51 N.C. App. 350, 276 S.E.2d 743 (1981).

Effect of Article. — This Article provides that parties may agree in writing to submit to arbitration "any controversy" then existing between them or include in any written contract a provision for settlement by arbitration of "any controversy" arising between them relating to the contract or nonperformance thereof. Such agreement or provision is valid, enforceable and irrevocable except with the consent of the parties, without regard to the justiciable character of the controversy. Crutchley v. Crutchley, 306 N.C. 518, 293 S.E.2d 793 (1982).

This section provides that a contract provision requiring that the parties settle disputes by arbitration is valid, enforceable, and irrevocable unless the parties agree to the contrary. Johnston County v. R.N. Rouse & Co., 331 N.C. 88, 414 S.E.2d 30 (1992).

Court Must Order Arbitration on Motion of Party. — As long as the statutory requirements of the Uniform Arbitration Act, (§§ 1-567.1 through 1-567.20) have been met and an order compelling arbitration would not prejudice a party to the contract who opposes the motion according to the standard set forth in this opinion, a court must order arbitration on motion of a party to the contract. Cyclone Roofing Co. v. David M. LaFave Co., 312 N.C. 224, 321 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

An agreement to arbitrate a dispute is not an unenforceable contract requiring waiver of a jury; thus, the trial court erred in concluding that because arbitration provision did not provide for trial of facts by a jury that it was unconscionable and unenforceable under § 22B-10, and in violation of N.C. Const., art. I, §§ 18 and 25. Miller v. Two State Constr. Co., 118 N.C. App. 412, 455 S.E.2d 678 (1995).

The Uniform Arbitration Act provides only two exceptions to which it will not apply: (1) Any agreement or provision to arbitrate in which it is stipulated that it will not apply and (2) Arbitration agreements between employers and employees or between their respective representatives, unless the agreement provides that it will apply. Crutchley v. Crutchley, 306 N.C. 518, 293 S.E.2d 793 (1982).

Agreements to arbitrate future disputes are now, by virtue of this section which was effective August 1, 1973, binding and irrevocable. Sims v. Ritter Constr., Inc., 62 N.C. App. 52, 302 S.E.2d 293 (1983).

Party Must Be Content with Results. — Public policy includes the judicial admonition that a party who has accepted this form of adjudication must be content with the results. Thomas v. Howard, 51 N.C. App. 350, 276 S.E.2d 743 (1981).

Valid Agreement Must Exist. — Public policy favors settling disputes by means of arbitration; however, before a dispute can be settled in this manner, there must first exist a valid agreement to arbitrate. Routh v. Snap-On Tools Corp., 108 N.C. App. 268, 423 S.E.2d 791 (1992).

Burden on Party Seeking Arbitration. — The party seeking arbitration must show that the parties mutually agreed to arbitrate their disputes. Routh v. Snap-On Tools Corp., 108 N.C. App. 268, 423 S.E.2d 791 (1992).

Valid Agreement Found. — Agreement in construction contract between general contractor to painting subcontractor held a valid written agreement to arbitrate disputes under this section. Miller v. Two State Constr. Co., 118 N.C. App. 412, 455 S.E.2d 678 (1995).

Where parties, as evidenced by their signatures on termite contract, agreed to submit any disputes for arbitration in clear and unambiguous language, a valid agreement to arbitrate existed despite the fact it was not independently negotiated. Red Springs Presbyterian Church v. Terminix Co., 119 N.C. App. 299, 458 S.E.2d 270 (1995).

Arbitration as Matter of Contract. — By statute, the right of arbitration is made a matter of contract; and it is only by agreement of the parties that a proceeding under it may be had. This is but the adoption of the common law in this respect, for it has been held uniformly in this State that a submission to arbitration was a contract resulting from the agreement to refer, and that it was governed by the general law concerning contracts. Sprinkle v. Sprinkle, 159 N.C. 81, 74 S.E. 739 (1912).

Where the contract between the parties contained an agreement to submit any controversy to arbitration, such agreement, pursuant to this section, was valid, enforceable and irrevocable. Therefore, it was error for the court to withdraw the matter from arbitration and place it on the trial calendar. Sims v. Ritter Constr., Inc., 62 N.C. App. 52, 302 S.E.2d 293 (1983).

The law of contracts governs the issue of whether there exists an agreement to arbitrate. Routh v. Snap-On Tools Corp., 108 N.C. App. 268, 423 S.E.2d 791 (1992).

Scope of Arbitration Topics. — There is no legislative bar to arbitrating claims which are based on tortious conduct or unfair and deceptive trade practices and claims for punitive damages as long as they arise out of or relate to a contract that provides for arbitration on its breach. Miller v. Two State Constr. Co., 118 N.C. App. 412, 455 S.E.2d 678 (1995).

Whether Claim Is Arbitrable Controlled by Language in Agreement. — The determination of whether a particular claim is arbitrable is controlled by the language of the parties' agreement. Ruffin Woody & Assocs. v. Person County, 92 N.C. App. 129, 374 S.E.2d 165 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 337, 378 S.E.2d 799 (1989).

But the Contract Is Not a Defense to the Cause of Action Itself. — The agreement of the parties to arbitrate is a contract. The relation of the parties is contractual. Their rights and liabilities are controlled by the law of contract. A breach of the contract may give rise to a cause of action for damages, but the contract itself is not a defense against a suit on the cause of action the parties agreed to arbitrate. In an action on the contract the courts will not decree specific performance of the agreement. Neither will they, by indirection, compel specific performance by refusing to entertain the suit until after arbitration is had under the agreement. Skinner v. Gaither Corp., 234 N.C. 385, 67 S.E.2d 267 (1951).

It is generally accepted that it is competent to contract that the amount of damages may be recovered, or the existence of any fact which may enter into the right to recover, shall be submitted to arbitration, provided the right of action is not embraced in the agreement. Nelson v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 157 N.C. 194, 72 S.E. 998 (1911).

An unfair and deceptive practices claim pursuant to § 75-1.1 is proper for arbitration. Rodgers Bldrs., Inc. v. McQueen, 76 N.C. App. 16, 331 S.E.2d 726 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 590, 341 S.E.2d 29 (1986).

There is no legislative bar to arbitration of claims based on tortious conduct or unfair and deceptive practices, or of claims for punitive damages, as long as they arise out of or relate to the contract or its breach. Rodgers Bldrs., Inc. v. McQueen, 76 N.C. App. 16, 331 S.E.2d 726 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 590, 341 S.E.2d 29 (1986).

The legislature has not indicated that the arbitration of claims for punitive damages is against public policy as it has not exempted such claims from the Uniform Arbitration Act. In light of the strong policy in this state favoring arbitration, such claims are arbitrable. Rodgers Bldrs., Inc. v. McQueen, 76 N.C. App. 16, 331 S.E.2d 726 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 590, 341 S.E.2d 29 (1986).

Arbitration Not Binding for Child Support or Custody. — Because all awards or orders concerning child support or custody are reviewable and modifiable, any arbitration concerning these issues is not binding. Cyclone Roofing Co. v. David M. LaFave Co., 312 N.C. 224, 321 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

Filing of Pleadings Does Not Constitute Waiver of Arbitration Provisions. — The mere filing of pleadings by both parties to a contract containing an arbitration agreement does not constitute waiver of the arbitration provision as a matter of law. Cyclone Roofing Co. v. David M. LaFave Co., 312 N.C. 224, 321 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

The mere filing of pleadings by both parties does not constitute waiver of an arbitration provision. Prime S. Homes, Inc. v. Byrd, 102 N.C. App. 255, 401 S.E.2d 822 (1991).

A party does not impliedly waive his right to arbitration when he pursues an action in court by filing a complaint. Adams v. Nelson, 313 N.C. 442, 329 S.E.2d 322 (1985).

Although arbitration is a contractual right which may be waived, the mere filing of a complaint or answer does not result in waiver of arbitration, absent evidence showing prejudice to the adverse party. Servomation Corp. v. Hickory Constr. Co., 316 N.C. 543, 342 S.E.2d 853 (1986).

Nor Does Filing a Claim of Lien. — Plaintiff's filing of a claim of lien and his institution of suit to enforce it does not prohibit him from pursuing his claim for arbitration. Prime S. Homes, Inc. v. Byrd, 102 N.C. App. 255, 401 S.E.2d 822 (1991).

A party waives arbitration when it engages in conduct inconsistent with arbitration which results in prejudice to the party opposing arbitration. Servomation Corp. v. Hickory Constr. Co., 316 N.C. 543, 342 S.E.2d 853 (1986).

Close Scrutiny of Waiver Required. — As North Carolina maintains a strong public policy favoring arbitration, courts must closely scrutinize any allegation of waiver of such a favored right. Sullivan v. Bright, 129 N.C. App. 84, 497 S.E.2d 118 (1998).

The party opposing arbitration must prove that it was prejudiced by its adversary's delay or by actions of the adversary which were incompatible with arbitration. Sullivan v. Bright, 129 N.C. App. 84, 497 S.E.2d 118 (1998).

A party may be prejudiced by his adversary's delay in seeking arbitration if (1) it is forced to bear the expense of a long trial, (2) it loses helpful evidence, (3) it takes steps in litigation to its detriment or expends significant amounts of money on the litigation, or (4) its opponent makes use of judicial discovery procedures not available in arbitration. Servomation Corp. v. Hickory Constr. Co., 316 N.C. 543, 342 S.E.2d 853 (1986).

In an action to vacate an arbitrator's award under § 301 of the Labor Management Relations Act of 1947, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 185, the most clearly analogous state statute of limitations was determined to be the 90-day limitation provided in § 1-567.13(b), for vacating an award, rather than the 10-day limitation set forth in § 95-36.9(c) for a stay of proceedings, notwithstanding the provision in this section that the Uniform Arbitration Act shall not apply "to arbitration agreements between employers and employees or between their respective representatives," since § 1-567.13(b) was the statute of limitations most analogous for the determination of timeliness. Gencorp, Inc. v. Local 850, United Rubber Workers of Am., 622 F. Supp. 216 (W.D.N.C. 1985).

Denial of Arbitration Held Proper. — Where defendants had been prejudiced by plaintiff's use of judicial discovery procedures and because defendants had expended significant amounts of money in defense of plaintiff's suit before plaintiff belatedly demanded arbitration trial, court did not err in denying arbitration. ## § 1-567.3. Proceedings to compel or stay arbitration.

(a) On application of a party showing an agreement described in G.S. 1-567.2; and the opposing party's refusal to arbitrate, the court shall order the parties to proceed with arbitration, but if the opposing party denies the existence of the agreement to arbitrate, the court shall proceed summarily to the determination of the issue so raised and shall order arbitration if found for the moving party, otherwise, the application shall be denied.

(b) On application, the court may stay an arbitration proceeding commenced or threatened on a showing that there is no agreement to arbitrate. Such an issue, when in substantial and bona fide dispute, shall be forthwith and summarily tried and the stay ordered if found for the moving party. If found for the opposing party, the court shall order the parties to proceed to arbitration.

(c) If an issue referable to arbitration under the alleged agreement is involved in an action or proceeding pending in a court having jurisdiction to hear applications under subsection (a) of this section, the application shall be made therein. Otherwise the application may be made in any court of competent jurisdiction.

(d) Any action or proceeding involving an issue subject to arbitration shall be stayed if an order for arbitration or an application therefor has been made under this section or, if the issue is severable, the stay may be with respect thereto only. When the application is made in such action or proceeding, the order for arbitration shall include such stay.

(e) An order for arbitration shall not be refused or a stay of arbitration granted on the ground that the claim in issue lacks merit or bona fides or because any fault or grounds for the claim sought to be arbitrated have not been shown. (1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

This section provides means for a party to seek court determination of whether an agreement to arbitrate exists. Blow v. Shaughnessy, 68 N.C. App. 1, 313 S.E.2d 868, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 751, 321 S.E.2d 127 (1984).

Effect of Section. — This section provides the means by which a party on notice of intent to arbitrate may object to or seek to stay a demand for arbitration on the grounds that there is no agreement to arbitrate. In re Boyte, 62 N.C. App. 682, 303 S.E.2d 418, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 309 N.C. 461, 307 S.E.2d 362 (1983).

The only prerequisite to invoking this Act is that there be a valid written agreement to arbitrate the dispute. Henderson v. Herman, 104 N.C. App. 482, 409 S.E.2d 739 (1991), cert. denied, 330 N.C. 851, 413 S.E.2d 551 (1992).

Judge Must Decide Whether Valid Arbi- tration Agreement Exists. — By the plain terms of this section the judge is required to summarily determine whether, as a matter of law, a valid arbitration agreement exists. The trial judge erred by applying a summary judgment standard of whether there was a genuine issue of material fact with regard to the validity and enforceability of the parties' agreement. Routh v. Snap-On Tools Corp., 101 N.C. App. 703, 400 S.E.2d 755 (1991).

Without Such Determination, Order Is Not Appealable. — Where the trial court had not yet summarily determined the issue of whether the parties had entered into an enforceable contract providing for arbitration, the trial court's order enjoining arbitration was not appealable. Lee County Bd. of Educ. v. Adams Elec., Inc., 106 N.C. App. 139, 415 S.E.2d 576 (1992).

The proper procedure for staying litigation and compelling arbitration is by a proper motion. Adams v. Nelson, 313 N.C. 442, 329 S.E.2d 322 (1985).

Court's inquiry under this section not limited to question of whether agreement to arbitrate exists. Blow v. Shaughnessy, 68 N.C. App. 1, 313 S.E.2d 868, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 751, 321 S.E.2d 127 (1984).

Upon proof of arbitration agreement the court may still determine preliminary questions of res judicata and the preliminary question of waiver. Cyclone Roofing Co. v. David M. LaFave Co., 67 N.C. App. 278, 312 S.E.2d 709, rev'd on other grounds, 312 N.C. 224, 321 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

The trial court has authority to act both before and after, rather than during the arbitration proceeding. This interpretation is supported by the fact that the act will not permit an arbitration proceeding to be stayed for any reason other than to determine whether the prerequisite agreement to arbitrate exists or if the contract was induced by fraud. Henderson v. Herman, 104 N.C. App. 482, 409 S.E.2d 739 (1991), cert. denied, 330 N.C. 851, 413 S.E.2d 551 (1992).

Issues Determinable by Court. — The scope of an arbitration award and its res judicata effect are issues properly determinable by the court and not the arbitrators. C & O Dev. Co. v. American Arbitration Ass'n, 48 N.C. App. 548, 269 S.E.2d 685 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 719, 274 S.E.2d 227 (1981).

It was within the authority of the trial court to determine whether the subject matter of the demand for arbitration had been previously litigated between the parties and reduced to a judgment binding upon them. C & O Dev. Co. v. American Arbitration Ass'n, 48 N.C. App. 548, 269 S.E.2d 685 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 719, 274 S.E.2d 227 (1981).

Retention of Jurisdiction. — For examples of situations in arbitration disputes in which the court retains jurisdiction over the proceeding, see this section. Sims v. Ritter Constr., Inc., 62 N.C. App. 52, 302 S.E.2d 293 (1983).

Application by defendants to the court for arbitration pursuant to this section would not "oust" the trial court of jurisdiction, as there is a distinction between a lack of jurisdiction and exercising existing jurisdiction to enforce an agreement under the Uniform Arbitration Act (§§ 1-567.1 through 1-567.20), and nothing contained in the language of the act indicates that the court does not retain jurisdiction once a party invokes his privilege to arbitrate. Adams v. Nelson, 313 N.C. 442, 329 S.E.2d 322 (1985).

A superior court judge cannot lift a stay granted by another superior court judge on a case which has been referred to arbitration by consent order and "discontinued." Henderson v. Herman, 104 N.C. App. 482, 409 S.E.2d 739 (1991), cert. denied, 330 N.C. 851, 413 S.E.2d 551 (1992).

Determination of Valid Arbitration Agreement Required. — The trial court erred in failing to summarily determine whether, as a matter of law, a valid arbitration agreement existed between partners to a joint venture, where the plaintiff partners brought an action against the defendant partners for statutory violations, fraud, unfair and deceptive trade practices, and breach of contract. Burke v. Wilkins, 131 N.C. App. 687, 507 S.E.2d 913 (1998).

Standard Form Provisions. — For discussion of interpretation of building contract containing standard form provisions issued by the American Institute of Architects (AIA) and the United States Department of Commerce Economic Development Administration (EDA), see Ruffin Woody & Assocs. v. Person County, 92 N.C. App. 129, 374 S.E.2d 165 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 337, 378 S.E.2d 799 (1989).

Limited Participation in Arbitration Not Waiver. — Where plaintiff filed its objection before the hearing was commenced and followed the correct procedure by applying for a court order to stay the arbitration proceeding pursuant to this section, plaintiff's limited participation in the arbitration before it filed its amended answer did not operate as a waiver of its right to object. Ruffin Woody & Assocs. v. Person County, 92 N.C. App. 129, 374 S.E.2d 165 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 337, 378 S.E.2d 799 (1989).

Filing of Pleadings Does Not Waive Arbitration Provision. — To hold that the mere filing of pleadings or other motions in a pending lawsuit constitutes waiver of a contractual arbitration provision would make parts of this section nonsensical. For example, subsection (c) of this section provides that if an issue subject to a contractual provision to arbitrate is involved in a pending lawsuit, any party to the contract can apply to the court for an order directing arbitration. This indicates that the General Assembly contemplated the possibility that a party would apply for arbitration after a lawsuit had begun. By expressly providing that a party may apply for an order compelling arbitration after suit has begun and by providing that in such a case the court must order arbitration in accordance with subsection (a) of this section, it is clear that the Legislature could not have intended that the mere filing of pleadings causes a waiver of a contractual arbitration provision. Cyclone Roofing Co. v. David M. LaFave Co., 312 N.C. 224, 321 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

Although Right to Arbitrate May Be Impliedly Waived. — Although subsections (a) and (d) of this section authorized the court to stay litigation and compel arbitration where parties have contracted to arbitrate their disputes, the right to arbitrate, as other contract rights, may be impliedly waived through the conduct of a party to the contract clearly indicating such purpose. Servomation Corp. v. Hickory Constr. Co., 70 N.C. App. 309, 318 S.E.2d 904 (1984), cert. granted and case remanded for reconsideration in light of Cyclone Roofing Co. v. La Fave Company, 312 N.C. 224, 321 S.E.2d 872 (1984), rev'd on other grounds,.

Participation in Mediation Not Implied Waiver. — When defendant pleaded the right to arbitration as an affirmative defense and moved for arbitration in his answer, defendant put plaintiff on notice that he was claiming the right, and defendant's subsequent participation in mediation, absent a specific waiver of arbitration, was not "inconsistent with arbitration" and did not constitute an implied waiver of arbitration. O'Neal Constr., Inc. v. Leonard S. Gibbs Grading, Inc., 121 N.C. App. 577, 468 S.E.2d 248 (1996).

How Right to Arbitration May Be Waived. — A party impliedly waives his contractual right to arbitration if by its delay or by actions it takes which are inconsistent with arbitration, another party to the contract is prejudiced by the order compelling arbitration. Adams v. Nelson, 313 N.C. 442, 329 S.E.2d 322 (1985).

Where defendants made no explicit reference to an arbitration clause in their answer to the breach of contract suit filed against them, and did not premise their motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) upon the existence of the arbitration clause, they failed to apply to the court for arbitration in order to exercise the contractual remedy to which they were entitled. Adams v. Nelson, 313 N.C. 442, 329 S.E.2d 322 (1985).

Effect of Participation in Arbitration Without Protest. — Consent to submission of a matter to arbitration and participation in the arbitration hearing, without making any objection, demand for jury trial or motion to stay the proceedings, results in a waiver of the right to subsequently challenge the arbitration process. McNeal v. Black, 61 N.C. App. 305, 300 S.E.2d 575 (1983).

Parties who agree to abide by the decision of a panel of arbitrators will not generally be heard to attack the regularity or fairness of an award. McNeal v. Black, 61 N.C. App. 305, 300 S.E.2d 575 (1983).

Objections to Arbitration. — This provision clearly contemplates that objections to arbitration proceedings may be raised after the institution of the proceedings. Ruffin Woody & Assocs. v. Person County, 92 N.C. App. 129, 374 S.E.2d 165 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 337, 378 S.E.2d 799 (1989).

Objection Held Timely. — Where plaintiff raised its objection before the hearing on the merits and before the selection of arbitrators was complete, the objection was timely. Ruffin Woody & Assocs. v. Person County, 92 N.C. App. 129, 374 S.E.2d 165 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 337, 378 S.E.2d 799 (1989).

Order compelling arbitration was interlocutory and did not affect a substantial right. North Carolina Elec. Membership Corp. v. Duke Power Co., 95 N.C. App. 123, 381 S.E.2d 896, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 709, 388 S.E.2d 461 (1989).

Denial of Arbitration Held Proper. — Where defendants had been prejudiced by plaintiff's use of judicial discovery procedures and because defendants had expended significant amounts of money in defense of plaintiff's suit before plaintiff belatedly demanded arbitration trial court did not err in denying arbitration. Prime S. Homes, Inc. v. Byrd, 102 N.C. App. 255, 401 S.E.2d 822 (1991).

§ 1-567.4. Appointment of arbitrators by court.

If the arbitration agreement provides a method of appointment of arbitrators, this method shall be followed. In the absence thereof, or if the agreed method fails or for any reason cannot be followed, or when an arbitrator appointed fails or is unable to act and his successor has not been duly appointed, the court on application of a party shall appoint one or more arbitrators. An arbitrator so appointed has all the powers of one specifically named in the agreement. (1927, c. 94, s. 4; 1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.5. Majority action by arbitrators.

The powers of the arbitrators may be exercised by a majority unless otherwise provided by the agreement or by this Article. (1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.6. Hearing.

Unless otherwise provided by the agreement:

(1) The arbitrators shall appoint a time and place for the hearing and cause notification to the parties to be served personally or by registered mail not less than five days before the hearing. Appearance at the hearing waives such notice. The arbitrators may adjourn the hearing from time to time as necessary and, on request of a party and for good cause, or upon their own motion may postpone the hearing to a time not later than the date fixed by the agreement for making the award unless the parties consent to a later date. The arbitrators may hear and determine the controversy upon the evidence produced notwithstanding the failure of a party duly notified to appear. The court on application may direct the arbitrators to proceed promptly with the hearing and determination of the controversy.

(2) The parties are entitled to be heard, to present evidence material to the controversy and to cross-examine witnesses appearing at the hearing.

(3) The hearing shall be conducted by all the arbitrators but a majority may determine any question and render a final award. If, during the course of the hearing, an arbitrator for any reason ceases to act, the remaining arbitrator or arbitrators appointed to act as neutrals may continue with the hearing and determination of the controversy.

(4) Upon the request of any party or any arbitrator, the arbitrators shall cause to be made a record of the testimony and evidence introduced at the hearing. (1927, c. 94, ss. 6, 7; 1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases cited below were decided under prior law.

The award on its face ought to show that the arbitrators have acted upon all the matters submitted. Crisp v. Love, 65 N.C. 126 (1871).

It has always been necessary for arbitrators to pass on all the points particularly referred to them. Osborne v. Calvart, 83 N.C. 365 (1880).

But if the submission covered all matters in difference without specifying them, the arbitrators could make an award of only such things as they had notice, and the award was good. Walker v. Walker, 60 N.C. 255 (1864).

Passing on Matters Not Submitted. — Matters passed on by the arbitrators but not submitted to them rendered the award void in the absence of waiver as by the voluntary introduction of evidence on matters not submitted. Robertson v. Marshall, 155 N.C. 167, 71 S.E. 67 (1911).

The power of the arbitrators is derived from the submission and the award must be made in strict accordance with it, and must not go beyond what is embraced in it. Cullifer v. Gilliam, 31 N.C. 126 (1848); Cutler v. Cutler, 169 N.C. 482, 86 S.E. 301 (1915).

Where the decision of submitted questions involved the decision of other questions not submitted, the decision of the latter was not error. Zell v. Johnston, 76 N.C. 302 (1877).

Arbitrators May Not Seek Evidence Outside Hearing. — The arbitrators have no right to consider facts excepting as submitted in the evidence at the hearings and it is misconduct for them to seek outside evidence by independent investigation. Carolina-Virginia Fashion Exhibitors, Inc. v. Gunter, 291 N.C. 208, 230 S.E.2d 380 (1976).

And Such Action Violates Arbitration Agreement. — Actions of the arbitrators in gathering evidence outside the scheduled hearings and without notice to the parties is a violation of this article and hence of the arbitration agreement. Carolina-Virginia Fashion Exhibitors, Inc. v. Gunter, 291 N.C. 208, 230 S.E.2d 380 (1976).

Right to Notice. — A party to an arbitration agreement has the right, both at common law and by statute, to notice and an opportunity to present evidence as to all matters submitted, and in the absence of notice the award is not binding upon him and does not estop him from instituting action in the superior court. Grimes v. Homes Ins. Co., 217 N.C. 259, 7 S.E.2d 557 (1940), decided under prior law.

Notice Found Sufficient to Alert Defendants of Joint and Several Liability. — Where defendants, who were general partners, were sued individually and the prayer for relief asked for enforcement of arbitration award against all defendants jointly and severally, the individual defendants were on notice that plaintiff's complaint sought to hold them liable for any award made in the arbitration. With that knowledge, defendants filed an answer requesting that the action be stayed pending determination of the claims in the arbitration proceeding. Therefore, defendants were on notice that the arbitration proceeding would affect them individually, and not only as partners, even though the defendants were not named individually in the arbitration proceeding. George W. Kane, Inc. v. Bolin Creek West Assocs., 95 N.C. App. 135, 381 S.E.2d 832 (1989).

Misconduct by Arbitrators Shown. — Appellants sufficiently met their heavy burden under § 1-567.13 in demonstrating arbitrator's misconduct where the evidence showed that during the arbitration of a construction contract dispute, the arbitration panel collectively harassed and badgered witness and appellant's attorney, refused to hear evidence, and constantly used profanity and sarcastic comments during the proceedings. Wildwoods of Lake Johnson Assocs. v. L.P. Cox Co., 88 N.C. App. 88, 362 S.E.2d 615 (1987), cert. denied, 322 N.C. 838, 371 S.E.2d 285 (1988).

Cited in McMillan v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 93 N.C. App. 748, 379 S.E.2d 88 (1989).

§ 1-567.7. Representation by attorney.

A party has the right to be represented by an attorney at any proceeding or hearing under this Article. A waiver thereof prior to the proceeding or hearing is ineffective. (1927, c. 94, s. 9; 1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.8. Witnesses; subpoenas; depositions.

(a) The arbitrators may issue subpoenas for the attendance of witnesses and for the production of books, records, documents and other evidence, and shall have the power to administer oaths. Subpoenas so issued shall be served, and upon application to the court by a party or the arbitrators, enforced, in the manner provided by law for the service and enforcement of subpoenas in a civil action.

(b) On application of a party and for use as evidence, the arbitrators may permit a deposition to be taken, in the manner and upon the terms designated by the arbitrators, of a witness who cannot be subpoenaed or is unable to attend the hearing.

(c) All provisions of law compelling a person under subpoena to testify are applicable.

(d) Fees for attendance as a witness shall be as provided in G.S. 7A-314. (1927, c. 94, ss. 10, 11; 1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

As to procedure under common law, see McCrae v. Robeson, 6 N.C. 127 (1812); Pierce v. Perkins, 17 N.C. 250 (1832); Hurdle v. Stallings, 109 N.C. 6, 13 S.E. 720 (1891).

An award is ordinarily presumed to be valid and the party trying to set aside the award has the burden of demonstrating an objective basis which supports his allegation that one of the arbitrators acted improperly. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk, Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

Discovery Limited. — Unless the parties specifically agree on a method of discovery in an arbitration proceeding, this section will govern the discovery process. Palmer v. Duke Power Co., 129 N.C. App. 488, 499 S.E.2d 801 (1998).

The discovery procedures available during arbitration are limited by statute. Prime S. Homes, Inc. v. Byrd, 102 N.C. App. 255, 401 S.E.2d 822 (1991).

Contrary to a civil case at law, where there exists a broad right to discovery, discovery during arbitration is at the discretion of the arbitrator and further requires that the deponent cannot be subpoenaed or is unable to attend the hearings. Prime S. Homes, Inc. v. Byrd, 102 N.C. App. 255, 401 S.E.2d 822 (1991).

§ 1-567.9. Award.

(a) The award shall be in writing and signed by the arbitrators joining in the award. The arbitrators shall deliver a copy to each party personally or by registered mail, or as provided in the agreement.

(b) An award shall be made within the time fixed therefor by the agreement or, if not so fixed, within such time as the court orders on application of a party. The parties may extend the time in writing either before or after the expiration thereof. A party waives the objection that an award was not made within the time required unless he notifies the arbitrators of his objection prior to the delivery of the award to him. (1927, c. 94, ss. 8, 14; 1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Procedure Must Be Strictly Followed. — Both statutory provisions (§§ 1-567.13 and 1-567.14) establish that an application for vacating or modifying an award must be made within 90 days after delivery of a copy of the award to the applicant. Service of the award must be by either personal delivery or registered mail. Where a statute prescribes a specific mode of notice, that method must be strictly followed where notice must be relied upon to divest the recipient of a right. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk, Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

As this section is a prerequisite to the vacating or modifying of the arbitrators' award, service of the award of arbitrators by regular mail did not commence the running of the 90-day period as prescribed by § 1-567.13. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk, Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

What Sums May Be Awarded. — On arbitration of claim of contractor for balance due, if any, on contract, and damages due by contractor and claimed by owner arising from deficiencies in design and construction of a building, the arbitrators had authority to award sums, costs of delays caused by owner, certain fees and expenses of arbitration, with the exception of attorney's fees, and compensation for transferring the proprietary right to the design of knitting and seaming vacuum system, under the provisions of the parties' contract and the Uniform Arbitration Act (§§ 1-567.1 through 1-567.20). G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co. v. Thorneburg Hosiery Co., 85 N.C. App. 684, 355 S.E.2d 815, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 75, aff'd, 94 N.C. App. 769, 381 S.E.2d 718 (1987).

Form of Award. — There has never been any requirement in this State as to the form of the award, this having been left to the choice of the arbitrators unless the agreement specified a form. Ball-Thrash Co. v. McCormack, 172 N.C. 677, 90 S.E. 916 (1916), decided under former law.

"Making" and "Delivery" of Award Distinguished. — The Uniform Arbitration Act treats the "making" of the award and the "delivery" of the award to the parties as two separate and distinct provisions. Poe & Sons v. University of N.C., 248 N.C. 617, 104 S.E.2d 189 (1958), decided under former law.

§ 1-567.10. Change of award by arbitrators.

On application of a party or, if an application to the court is pending under G.S. 1-567.12, 1-567.13 or 1-567.14, on submission to the arbitrators by the court under such conditions as the court may order, the arbitrators may modify or correct the award upon the grounds stated in subdivisions (1) and (3) of subsection (a) of G.S. 1-567.14, or for the purpose of clarifying the award. The application shall be made within 20 days after delivery of the award to the applicant. Written notice thereof shall be given forthwith to the opposing party, stating he must serve his objections thereto, if any, within 10 days from the notice. The award so modified or corrected is subject to the provisions of G.S. 1-567.12, 1-567.13 and 1-567.14. (1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Errors of law or fact are generally insufficient to invalidate an award fairly and honestly made. In re Boyte, 62 N.C. App. 682, 303 S.E.2d 418, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 309 N.C. 461, 307 S.E.2d 362 (1983).

Since the purpose of arbitration is to settle matters in controversy and avoid litigation, parties to an arbitration will not generally be heard to impeach the regularity or fairness of the award. Exceptions are limited to such situations as those involving fraud, misconduct, bias, exceeding of powers and clear illegality. In re Boyte, 62 N.C. App. 682, 303 S.E.2d 418, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 309 N.C. 461, 307 S.E.2d 362 (1983).

§ 1-567.11. Fees and expenses of arbitration.

Unless otherwise provided in the agreement to arbitrate, the arbitrators' expenses and fees, together with other expenses, not including counsel fees, incurred in the conduct of the arbitration, shall be paid as provided in the award. (1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Legislative Intent Regarding Attorneys' Fees. — The specific, uncomplicated language of this section clearly reflects the legislative intent that attorneys' fees are not to be awarded for work performed in arbitration proceedings, unless the parties specifically agree to and provide for such fees in the arbitration agreement. Nucor Corp. v. General Bearing Corp., 333 N.C. 148, 423 S.E.2d 747 (1992), reh'g denied, 333 N.C. 349, 426 S.E.2d 708 (1993).

Counsel fees are not a subject of arbitration, even where the contract provides that the owner will pay reasonable attorneys' fees incurred by the contractor for the collection of any defaulted payment due to the contractor by the owner as a result of the contract. In North Carolina, such attorneys' fees are collectible only under § 6-21.2. G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co. v. Thorneburg Hosiery Co., 85 N.C. App. 684, 355 S.E.2d 815, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 75, aff'd, 94 N.C. App. 769, 381 S.E.2d 718 (1987).

Attorneys' fees are not a subject of arbitration even if the contract in dispute provides for such fees. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk, Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

This section excludes attorneys' fees from an award to be rendered by the arbitrators since such fees are only collectible under § 6-21.2. An award of arbitration specifically awarded attorneys' fees and exceeded the arbitrators' authority. Therefore, the trial court properly denied motion to confirm the arbitrators' award. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk, Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

Attorney's Fees Not Included. — Since this section has no application to work performed by an attorney before a case is referred to arbitration, the award of attorney's fees under § 6-21.1 was proper. Lucas v. City of Charlotte, 123 N.C. App. 140, 472 S.E.2d 203 (1996).

Court May Not Expand Award to Include Attorneys' Fees. — The Arbitration Act does not permit an arbitration award, duly made under the act, to be expanded by the court of jurisdiction on confirmation to include attorneys' fees for work conducted in the arbitration proceeding. Nucor Corp. v. General Bearing Corp., 333 N.C. 148, 423 S.E.2d 747 (1992), reh'g denied, 333 N.C. 349, 426 S.E.2d 708 (1993).

Agreement Held Not to Provide for Attorneys' Fees. — Where the only mention of attorneys' fees in agreement was under a section which dealt solely with indemnification of either party in the event of incurred liability or obligation to a third party, the reference was not sufficient to show that the parties' "agreement to arbitrate" provided otherwise in negating the prohibition and exclusion of counsel fees contained in this section. Nucor Corp. v. General Bearing Corp., 333 N.C. 148, 423 S.E.2d 747 (1992), reh'g denied, 333 N.C. 349, 426 S.E.2d 708 (1993).

Applied in Cyclone Roofing Co. v. David M. LaFave Co., 312 N.C. 224, 321 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

§ 1-567.12. Confirmation of an award.

Upon application of a party, the court shall confirm an award, unless within the time limits hereinafter imposed grounds are urged for vacating or modifying or correcting the award, in which case the court shall proceed as provided in G.S. 1-567.13 and 1-567.14. (1927, c. 94, s. 15; 1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on the admission of an arbitrator's depositions and testimony to prove misconduct or fraud on the part of arbitrators, see 13 Wake Forest L. Rev. 803 (1977).

CASE NOTES

The purpose of arbitration is to reach a final settlement of disputed matters without litigation, and it is well established that the parties, who have agreed to abide by the decision of a panel of arbitrators, will not generally be heard to attack the regularity or fairness of an award. McNeal v. Black, 61 N.C. App. 305, 300 S.E.2d 575 (1983).

Arbitration Not Infallible. — While the public policy of this State favors confirmation of arbitration awards, such awards are not infallible. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk, Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

An award is conclusive on matters of law and fact if decided in accordance with the legal construction of the contract in which the arbitrators derive their authority. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk, Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

Errors of law or fact are generally insufficient to invalidate an award fairly and honestly made. In re Boyte, 62 N.C. App. 682, 303 S.E.2d 418, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 309 N.C. 461, 307 S.E.2d 362 (1983).

In as much as the purpose of arbitration is to settle matters in controversy and avoid litigation, parties to an arbitration will not generally be heard to impeach the regularity or fairness of the award. Exceptions are limited to such situations as those involving fraud, misconduct, bias, exceeding of powers and clear illegality. In re Boyte, 62 N.C. App. 682, 303 S.E.2d 418, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 309 N.C. 460, 307 S.E.2d 362 (1983).

The vacating of an arbitration award renders the consideration of an application to confirm moot. In re State, 72 N.C. App. 149, 323 S.E.2d 466 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 507, 329 S.E.2d 396 (1985).

Trial judge was required to either (1) confirm award in the appraisers' report, (2) vacate the award after finding one of the statutory grounds for vacating, or (3) modify the award so as to effect the intent of the parties and then confirm the award as modified. Hooper v. Allstate Ins. Co., 124 N.C. App. 185, 476 S.E.2d 380 (1996).

MSL Enters., Inc., 128 N.C. App. 252, 494 S.E.2d 613 (1998).

§ 1-567.13. Vacating an award.

(a) Upon application of a party, the court shall vacate an award where:

(1) The award was procured by corruption, fraud or other undue means;

(2) There was evident partiality by an arbitrator appointed as a neutral or corruption in any of the arbitrators or misconduct prejudicing the rights of any party;

(3) The arbitrators exceeded their powers;

(4) The arbitrators refused to postpone the hearing upon sufficient cause being shown therefor or refused to hear evidence material to the controversy or otherwise so conducted the hearing, contrary to the provisions of G.S. 1-567.6, as to prejudice substantially the rights of a party; or

(5) There was no arbitration agreement and the issue was not adversely determined in proceedings under G.S. 1-567.3 and the party did not participate in the arbitration hearing without raising the objection; but the fact that the relief was such that it could not or would not be granted by a court of law or equity is not ground for vacating or refusing to confirm the award.

(b) An application under this section shall be made within 90 days after delivery of a copy of the award to the applicant except that, if predicated upon corruption, fraud or other undue means, it shall be made within 90 days after such grounds are known or should have been known.

(c) In vacating the award on grounds other than stated in subdivision (5) of subsection (a) the court may order a rehearing before new arbitrators chosen as provided in the agreement, or in the absence thereof, by the court in accordance with G.S. 1-567.4, or, if the award is vacated on grounds set forth in subdivisions (3) or (4) of subsection (a) the court may order a rehearing before the arbitrators who made the award or their successors appointed in accordance with G.S. 1-567.4. The time within which the agreement requires the award to be made is applicable to the rehearing and commences from the date of the order.

(d) If the application to vacate is denied and no motion to modify or correct the award is pending, the court shall confirm the award. (1927, c. 94, s. 16; 1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

This section and § 1-567.14 provide exclusive grounds and procedures for vacating, modifying, or correcting an arbitration award. Crutchley v. Crutchley, 306 N.C. 518, 293 S.E.2d 793 (1982); G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co. v. Thorneburg Hosiery Co., 85 N.C. App. 684, 355 S.E.2d 815, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 75, aff'd, 94 N.C. App. 769, 381 S.E.2d 718 (1987); Sentry Bldg. Sys. v. Onslow County Bd. of Educ., 116 N.C. App. 442, 448 S.E.2d 145 (1994).

This section provides the exclusive grounds and procedure for vacating an award, while § 1-567.14 provides the exclusive grounds and procedure for modifying or correcting an award. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk, Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

Compliance with § 1-567.9 is mandatory. — Both statutory provisions (this section and § 1-567.14) establish that an application for vacating or modifying an award must be made within 90 days after delivery of a copy of the award to the applicant. Service of the award must be by either personal delivery or registered mail. Where a statute prescribes a specific mode of notice, that method must be strictly followed where notice must be relied upon to divest the recipient of a right. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk, Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

As § 1-567.9 is a prerequisite to the vacating or modifying of the arbitrators' award, service of the award of arbitrators by regular mail did not commence the running of the 90-day period as prescribed by this section. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk, Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

No Right of Appeal. — If an arbitrator makes a mistake, either as to law or fact, it is the misfortune of the party. There is no right of appeal, and the court has no power to revise the decisions of judges who are of the parties' own choosing. Turner v. Nicholson Properties, Inc., 80 N.C. App. 208, 341 S.E.2d 42, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 714, 347 S.E.2d 457 (1986).

Attacks on Regularity or Fairness of Awards Generally. — The purpose of arbitration is to reach a final settlement of disputed matters without litigation, and it is well established that the parties, who have agreed to abide by the decision of a panel of arbitrators, will not generally be heard to attack the regularity or fairness of an award. Thomas v. Howard, 51 N.C. App. 350, 276 S.E.2d 743 (1981); McNeal v. Black, 61 N.C. App. 305, 300 S.E.2d 575 (1983); In re Boyte, 62 N.C. App. 682, 303 S.E.2d 418, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 309 N.C. 461, 307 S.E.2d 362 (1983); G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co. v. Thorneburg Hosiery Co., 85 N.C. App. 684, 355 S.E.2d 815, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 75, aff'd, 94 N.C. App. 769, 381 S.E.2d 718 (1987).

Consent to submission of a matter to arbitration and participation in the arbitration hearing, without making any objection, demand for jury trial or motion to stay the proceedings, results in a waiver of the right to subsequently challenge the arbitration process. McNeal v. Black, 61 N.C. App. 305, 300 S.E.2d 575 (1983).

Arbitration is intended to be a final settlement of disputes without litigation. Parties agreeing to abide by a decision of a panel of arbitrators will not be heard to attack the fairness of such an award. Carteret County v. United Contractors, 120 N.C. App. 336, 462 S.E.2d 816 (1995).

Errors of law or fact are generally insufficient to invalidate an award fairly and honestly made. In re Boyte, 62 N.C. App. 682, 303 S.E.2d 418, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 309 N.C. 461, 307 S.E.2d 362 (1983).

Argument that an arbitrator who errs as a matter of law exceeds his powers and that as a result the award can be vacated was without merit, as such argument was inconsistent with the general rule that errors of law or fact, or an erroneous decision of matters submitted to arbitration, are insufficient to invalidate an award fairly and honestly made. Turner v. Nicholson Properties, Inc., 80 N.C. App. 208, 341 S.E.2d 42, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 714, 347 S.E.2d 457 (1986).

The discovery of new evidence is not grounds for vacating or refusing to enforce the arbitrator's award. Wilks v. American Bakeries Co., 563 F. Supp. 560 (W.D.N.C. 1983).

Only awards reflecting mathematical errors, errors relating to form, and errors resulting from arbitrators exceeding their authority shall be modified or corrected by reviewing courts. If an arbitrator makes a mistake, either as to law or fact, unless it is an evident mistake in the description of any person, thing or property referred to in the award, it is the misfortune of the party. There is no right of appeal and the court has no power to revise the decisions of judges who are of the parties own choosing. Cyclone Roofing Co. v. David M. LaFave Co., 312 N.C. 224, 321 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

An award is intended to settle the matter in controversy, and thus save the expense of litigation. If a mistake is a sufficient ground for setting aside an award, it opens the door for coming into court in almost every case; for in nine cases out of ten some mistake either of law or fact may be suggested by the dissatisfied party. Thus arbitration instead of ending would tend to increase litigation. Cyclone Roofing Co. v. David M. LaFave Co., 312 N.C. 224, 321 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

Grounds Alleged for Modification Held Not Proper. — Allegations of the "fundamental unfairnesss" of the panel's makeup are not proper grounds for modification under § 1-567.14. Carteret County v. United Contractors, 120 N.C. App. 336, 462 S.E.2d 816 (1995).

Plaintiff's failure to produce certain documents during discovery proceedings conducted before the agreement to arbitrate did not constitute fraud, corruption, or undue means that would provide the basis for vacating an arbitration award under this section. Palmer v. Duke Power Co., 129 N.C. App. 488, 499 S.E.2d 801 (1998).

An arbitration award is ordinarily presumed valid. Thomas v. Howard, 51 N.C. App. 350, 276 S.E.2d 743 (1981).

And the party seeking to set it aside has the burden of demonstrating an objective basis which supports his allegations that one of the arbitrators acted improperly. Thomas v. Howard, 51 N.C. App. 350, 276 S.E.2d 743 (1981).

An arbitration award is presumed valid and the burden of proving specific grounds for vacating an award rests on the party attacking it. Turner v. Nicholson Properties, Inc., 80 N.C. App. 208, 341 S.E.2d 42, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 714, 347 S.E.2d 457 (1986).

An award is ordinarily presumed to be valid, and the party seeking to set it aside has the burden of demonstrating an objective basis which supports his allegations that one of the grounds for setting it aside exists. G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co. v. Thorneburg Hosiery Co., 85 N.C. App. 684, 355 S.E.2d 815, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 75, aff'd, 94 N.C. App. 769, 381 S.E.2d 718 (1987).

Record Must Show That Arbitrators Exceeded Authority. — Before an award can be vacated on grounds that the arbitrators exceeded their authority, the record must objectively disclose that the arbitrators did exceed their authority in some respect. G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co. v. Thorneburg Hosiery Co., 85 N.C. App. 684, 355 S.E.2d 815, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 75, aff'd, 94 N.C. App. 769, 381 S.E.2d 718 (1987).

Arbitrators Generally Required to Be Impartial. — An arbitrator is a person selected by the mutual consent of the parties, to determine matters in controversy between them, whether they be matters of law or fact. He is invested with judicial functions, limited by the terms of the submission (and by statute), and he must be incorrupt and impartial, and not exceed or fall short of his duty; if he acts otherwise, his award may be set aside. Crisp v. Love, 65 N.C. 126 (1871), decided under prior law.

Public policy generally requires that arbitrators be impartial and that they have no connection with the parties involved or the subject matter of the dispute. Thomas v. Howard, 51 N.C. App. 350, 276 S.E.2d 743 (1981).

But May Be Acquainted with Case or Parties. — This section by its terms, does not necessarily prevent parties from accepting arbitrators who they know are acquainted in some way with the case or the parties. Thomas v. Howard, 51 N.C. App. 350, 276 S.E.2d 743 (1981).

Defendant was not entitled to have an arbitration award set aside under subdivision (a)(2) of this section because the arbitrator appointed by plaintiff had prior knowledge of the facts and a business connection with plaintiff where the written arbitration agreement between the parties shows that defendant accepted the arbitrator appointed by plaintiff with full knowledge of his business dealings with plaintiff and the possible bias that could result from that connection. Thomas v. Howard, 51 N.C. App. 350, 276 S.E.2d 743 (1981).

In a 1987 arbitration proceeding, where the neutral arbitrator's firm had done work for defendant in 1965 and 1968, and the arbitrator himself had performed some consulting work for defendant in 1979 and 1980 for a fee of $797.29, these facts, coupled with plaintiff's constructive knowledge of these contacts, would not require vacation of the award or deposition of the arbitrators. Ruffin Woody & Assocs. v. Person County, 92 N.C. App. 129, 374 S.E.2d 165 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 337, 378 S.E.2d 799 (1989).

Partiality of Arbitrator Not Appointed as Neutral. — This section does not provide relief from an award when there is "evident partiality" by an arbitrator who is not appointed as a neutral or umpire. Thomas v. Howard, 51 N.C. App. 350, 276 S.E.2d 743 (1981).

Fact that arbitrator had appeared as an expert witness for clients of opposing counsel's former law firm was alone insufficient to establish an objective basis for believing that the arbitrator was biased. Turner v. Nicholson Properties, Inc., 80 N.C. App. 208, 341 S.E.2d 42, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 714, 318 N.C. 287, 347 S.E.2d 457, 347 S.E.2d 457 (1986).

Inappropriate Relationships of Arbitrator. — Trial court erred in not granting motion to amend or open judgment under § 1A-1-59 where arbitrator failed to disclose numerous social, business, and professional relationships with partners in law firm representing insurance company. William C. Vick Constr. Co. v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Fed'n, 123 N.C. App. 97, 472 S.E.2d 346 (1996).

Waiver of Disability of Arbitrator. — The disability of an arbitrator is waived if the complaining party had prior knowledge of it. Thomas v. Howard, 51 N.C. App. 350, 276 S.E.2d 743 (1981).

Parties May Depose Arbitrators. — Where an objective basis exists for a reasonable belief that misconduct has occurred, the parties to the arbitration may depose the arbitrators relative to that misconduct. Carolina-Virginia Fashion Exhibitors, Inc. v. Gunter, 291 N.C. 208, 230 S.E.2d 380 (1976).

A party to an arbitration may depose the arbitrator relative to alleged misconduct only when an objective basis exists for a reasonable belief that misconduct has occurred. Turner v.

Nicholson Properties, Inc., 80 N.C. App. 208, 341 S.E.2d 42, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 714, 347 S.E.2d 457 (1986).

It was proper to depose arbitrator where there was a basis for believing that misconduct had occurred based on discovery of undisclosed relationship with attorney for insurance company. William C. Vick Constr. Co. v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Fed'n, 123 N.C. App. 97, 472 S.E.2d 346 (1996).

And such depositions are admissible in a proceeding under this section to vacate an award. Carolina-Virginia Fashion Exhibitors, Inc. v. Gunter, 291 N.C. 208, 230 S.E.2d 380 (1976).

An arbitrator must act within the scope of the authority conferred on him by the arbitration agreement, and his award is subject to attack on the ground that he exceeded his authority under a mistake of law and upon other grounds. Calvine Cotton Mills, Inc. v. Textile Workers Union, 238 N.C. 719, 79 S.E.2d 181 (1953), decided under former law.

An act of an arbitrator in gathering evidence outside the scheduled hearing and without notice to the parties would be in violation of the North Carolina Uniform Arbitration Act (§§ 1-567.1 through 1-567.20) and hence of the arbitration agreement. In re State, 72 N.C. App. 149, 323 S.E.2d 466 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 507, 329 S.E.2d 396 (1985).

The obligation of arbitrators is to act fairly and impartially and to determine the cause upon the evidence adduced before them at the hearing. They have no right to consider facts excepting as submitted in the evidence at the hearings and it is misconduct for them to seek outside evidence by independent investigation. An arbitrator acts in a quasi-judicial capacity and must render a faithful, honest and disinterested opinion upon the testimony submitted to him. In re State, 72 N.C. App. 149, 323 S.E.2d 466 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 507, 329 S.E.2d 396 (1985).

To establish grounds for vacating an arbitration award the moving party must prove not only the existence of fraudulent conduct, but also that the award was procured by corruption, fraud or other undue means. Trafalgar House Constr., Inc. v. MSL Enters., Inc., 128 N.C. App. 252, 494 S.E.2d 613 (1998).

Nexus Between Fraud and Decision. — It is appropriate to interpret this section as requiring a nexus between the alleged fraud and the basis for the panel's decision. Trafalgar House Constr., Inc. v. MSL Enters., Inc., 128 N.C. App. 252, 494 S.E.2d 613 (1998).

Ex parte acts by arbitrators constitute misconduct. In re State, 72 N.C. App. 149, 323 S.E.2d 466 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 507, 329 S.E.2d 396 (1985).

Misconduct of Arbitrators Shown. — Appellants sufficiently met their heavy burden under this section in demonstrating arbitrator's misconduct, where the evidence showed that during the arbitration of a construction contract dispute, the arbitration panel collectively harassed and badgered witness and appellant's attorney, refused to hear evidence, and constantly used profanity and sarcastic comments during the proceedings. Wildwoods of Lake Johnson Assocs. v. L.P. Cox Co., 88 N.C. App. 88, 362 S.E.2d 615 (1987), cert. denied, 322 N.C. 838, 371 S.E.2d 285 (1988).

Misconduct of Arbitrators Not Shown. — Defendants failed to carry their burden of proving that an arbitrator was partial, corrupt or acted in a way constituting misconduct, thus prejudicing the rights of defendants, when he made a casual remark to a witness outside the hearing room. Creative Homes & Millwork, Inc. v. Hinkle, 109 N.C. App. 259, 426 S.E.2d 480 (1993).

What Errors May Be Corrected on Review. — Only awards reflecting mathematical errors, errors relating to form, and errors resulting from arbitrators exceeding their authority shall be modified or corrected by reviewing courts. If an arbitrator makes a mistake, either as to law or fact, unless it is an evident mistake in the description of any person, thing or property referred to in the award, it is the misfortune of the party. There is no right of appeal and the court has no power to revise the decisions of judges who are of the parties own choosing. Cyclone Roofing Co. v. David M. LaFave Co., 312 N.C. 224, 321 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

Where a motion to vacate is granted, the determination of a motion to confirm an award is rendered moot. In re State, 72 N.C. App. 149, 323 S.E.2d 466 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 507, 329 S.E.2d 396 (1985).

The vacating of an arbitration award does not deny a motion to confirm, but renders the consideration of an application to confirm moot. In re State, 72 N.C. App. 149, 323 S.E.2d 466 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 507, 329 S.E.2d 396 (1985).

In an action to vacate an arbitrator's award under § 301 of the Labor Management Relations Act of 1947, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 185, the most clearly analogous state statute of limitations was determined to be the 90-day limitation provided in subsection (b), for vacating an award, rather than the 10-day limitation set forth in § 95-36.9(c) for a stay of proceedings, notwithstanding the provision in § 1-567.2 that the Uniform Arbitration Act shall not apply "to arbitration agreements between employers and employees or between their respective representatives," since subsection (b) was the statute of limitations most analogous for the determination of timeliness. Gencorp, Inc. v. Local 850, United Rubber Workers of Am., 622 F. Supp. 216 (W.D.N.C. 1985).

Confirmation of Arbitration Award Prior to 90 Day Period. — There was no error in trial court's granting defendant's motion to confirm an arbitration award prior to the expiration of the 90-day period prescribed in this section. Ruffin Woody & Assocs. v. Person County, 92 N.C. App. 129, 374 S.E.2d 165 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 337, 378 S.E.2d 799 (1989).

Award Contrary to Contract. — Arbitrators' decision to award interest at 8% per diem was inconsistent with the parties' contract. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk, Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

Trial judge was required to either (1) confirm award in the appraisers' report, (2) vacate the award after finding one of the statutory grounds for vacating, or (3) modify the award so as to effect the intent of the parties and then confirm the award as modified. Hooper v. Allstate Ins. Co., 124 N.C. App. 185, 476 S.E.2d 380 (1996).

Applied in Chambers v. McLean Trucking Co., 550 F. Supp. 1335 (M.D.N.C. 1981).

Stated in FCR Greensboro, Inc. v. C & M Invs. of High Point, Inc., 119 N.C. App. 575, 459 S.E.2d 292 (1995).

Cited in Nucor Corp. v. General Bearing Corp., 333 N.C. 148, 423 S.E.2d 747 (1992).

§ 1-567.14. Modification or correction of award.

(a) Upon application made within 90 days after delivery of a copy of the award to the applicant, the court shall modify or correct the award where:

(1) There was an evident miscalculation of figures or an evident mistake in the description of any person, thing or property referred to in the award;

(2) The arbitrators have awarded upon a matter not submitted to them and the award may be corrected without affecting the merits of the decision upon the issues submitted; or

(3) The award is imperfect in a matter of form, not affecting the merits of the controversy.

(b) If the application is granted, the court shall modify and correct the award so as to effect its intent and shall confirm the award as so modified and corrected. Otherwise, the court shall confirm the award as made.

(c) An application to modify or correct an award may be joined in the alternative with an application to vacate the award. (1927, c. 94, s. 17; 1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on the admission of an arbitrator's depositions and testimony to prove misconduct or fraud on the part of arbitrators, see 13 Wake Forest L. Rev. 803 (1977).

CASE NOTES

This section and § 1-567.13 provide exclusive grounds and procedures for vacating, modifying, or correcting an arbitration award. Crutchley v. Crutchley, 306 N.C. 518, 293 S.E.2d 793 (1982); G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co. v. Thorneburg Hosiery Co., 85 N.C. App. 684, 355 S.E.2d 815, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 75, aff'd, 94 N.C. App. 769, 381 S.E.2d 718 (1987); Sentry Bldg. Sys. v. Onslow County Bd. of Educ., 116 N.C. App. 442, 448 S.E.2d 145 (1994).

Section 1-567.13 provides the exclusive grounds and procedure for vacating an award while this section provides the exclusive grounds and procedure for modifying or correcting an award. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk, Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

To establish grounds for vacating an arbitration award the moving party must prove not only the existence of fraudulent conduct, but also that the award was procured by corruption, fraud or other undue means. Trafalgar House Constr., Inc. v. MSL Enters., Inc., 128 N.C. App. 252, 494 S.E.2d 613 (1998).

Strict Compliance with Notice Procedure is Required. — As § 1-567.9 is a prerequisite to the vacating or modifying of the arbitrators' award, service of the award of arbitrators by regular mail did not commence the running of the 90-day period as prescribed by § 1-567.13. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk, Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

Both this section and § 1-567.13 establish that an application for vacating or modifying an award must be made within 90 days after delivery of a copy of the award to the applicant. Service of the award must be by either personal delivery or registered mail. Where a statute prescribes a specific mode of notice, that method must be strictly followed where notice must be relied upon to divest the recipient of a right. J.M. Owen Bldg. Contractors v. College Walk, Ltd., 101 N.C. App. 483, 400 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

Scope of Judicial Review. — Judicial review of an arbitration award is confined to determination of whether there exists one of the specific grounds for vacation of an award under the arbitration statute. Carolina Va. Fashion Exhibitors, Inc. v. Gunter, 41 N.C. App. 407, 255 S.E.2d 414 (1979).

Errors of Law or Fact Generally Insufficient to Invalidate Award. — Ordinarily, an award is not vitiated or rendered subject to impeachment because of a mistake or error of the arbitrators as to the law or facts. The general rule is that errors of law of fact, or an erroneous decision of matters submitted to the judgment of the arbitrators, are insufficient to invalidate an award fairly and honestly made. Carolina Va. Fashion Exhibitors, Inc. v. Gunter, 41 N.C. App. 407, 255 S.E.2d 414 (1979); In re Boyte, 62 N.C. App. 682, 303 S.E.2d 418, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 309 N.C. 461, 307 S.E.2d 362 (1983).

What Errors May Be Corrected on Review. — Only awards reflecting mathematical errors, errors relating to form, and errors resulting from arbitrators exceeding their authority shall be modified or corrected by reviewing courts. If an arbitrator makes a mistake, either as to law or fact, unless it is an evident mistake in the description of any person, thing or property referred to in the award, it is the misfortune of the party. There is no right of appeal and the court has no power to revise the decisions of judges who are of the parties own choosing. Cyclone Roofing Co. v. David M. LaFave Co., 312 N.C. 224, 321 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

An award is intended to settle the matter in controversy, and thus save the expense of litigation. If a mistake is a sufficient ground for setting aside an award, it opens the door for coming into court in almost every case; for in nine cases out of ten some mistake either of law or fact may be suggested by the dissatisfied party. Thus arbitration instead of ending would tend to increase litigation. Cyclone Roofing Co. v. David M. LaFave Co., 312 N.C. 224, 321 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

Modification or Correction to Award Prejudgment Interest Not Authorized. — Where neither the arbitration agreement nor the arbitration award provided for prejudgment interest, the trial court was obligated to confirm the award as written and, accordingly, even if the arbitrator's failure to include prejudgment interest was a mistake of law or fact, such mistake could not be corrected by the trial court on a motion for modification or correction. Palmer v. Duke Power Co., 129 N.C. App. 488, 499 S.E.2d 801 (1998).

Court May Not Add Attorneys' Fees Not Contained in Award. — There is no provision or authority in this section or elsewhere in the Uniform Arbitration Act allowing a court to increase an award by adding attorneys' fees not contained in the award. Nucor Corp. v. General Bearing Corp., 333 N.C. 148, 423 S.E.2d 747 (1992), reh'g denied, 333 N.C. 349, 426 S.E.2d 708 (1993).

The obligation of arbitrators is to act fairly and impartially and to determine the cause upon the evidence adduced before them at the hearing. They have no right to consider facts excepting as submitted in the evidence at the hearings and it is misconduct for them to seek outside evidence by independent investigation. An arbitrator acts in a quasi-judicial capacity and must render a faithful, honest and disinterested opinion upon the testimony submitted to him. In re State, 72 N.C. App. 149, 323 S.E.2d 466 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 507, 329 S.E.2d 396 (1985).

An act of an arbitrator in gathering evidence outside the scheduled hearing and without notice to the parties would be in violation of the North Carolina Uniform Arbitration Act (§§ 1-567.1 through 1-567.20) and hence of the arbitration agreement. In re State, 72 N.C. App. 149, 323 S.E.2d 466 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 507, 329 S.E.2d 396 (1985).

Ex parte acts by arbitrators constitute misconduct. In re State, 72 N.C. App. 149, 323 S.E.2d 466 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 507, 329 S.E.2d 396 (1985).

Arbitrator Exceeded His Authority. — Arbitration agreement did not contemplate liquidated damages due for a delay in starting construction of facility and plaintiff never made a request for damages caused by a delay in beginning construction; therefore, defendant demonstrated an objective basis in the record for concluding that the arbitrator in fact exceeded his authority by awarding upon a matter not submitted to him, and the award would be modified accordingly. FCR Greensboro, Inc. v. C & M Invs. of High Point, Inc., 119 N.C. App. 575, 459 S.E.2d 292 (1995).

When Fairness or Regularity of Award May Be Impeached. — The purpose of arbitration is to settle matters in controversy and avoid litigation. It is well established that parties to an arbitration will not generally be heard to impeach the regularity or fairness of the award. Exceptions are limited to such situations as those involving fraud, misconduct, bias, exceeding of powers and clear illegality. Carolina Va. Fashion Exhibitors, Inc. v. Gunter, 41 N.C. App. 407, 255 S.E.2d 414 (1979); In re Boyte, 62 N.C. App. 682, 303 S.E.2d 418, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 309 N.C. 461, 307 S.E.2d 362 (1983).

The purpose of arbitration is to reach a final settlement of disputed matters without litigation, and the parties, who have agreed to abide by the decision of the arbitrators, will not generally be heard to attack the regularity or fairness of an award. G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co. v. Thorneburg Hosiery Co., 85 N.C. App. 684, 355 S.E.2d 815, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 75, aff'd, 94 N.C. App. 769, 381 S.E.2d 718 (1987).

Allegations of Unfairness Not Proper Grounds for Modification. — Allegations of the "fundamental unfairness" of the panel's makeup are not proper grounds for modification under this section. Carteret County v. United Contractors, 120 N.C. App. 336, 462 S.E.2d 816 (1995).

Burden of Proving Invalidity of Award. — An award is ordinarily presumed to be valid, and the party seeking to set it aside has the burden of demonstrating an objective basis which supports his allegations that one of the grounds for setting it aside exists. G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co. v. Thorneburg Hosiery Co., 85 N.C. App. 684, 355 S.E.2d 815, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 75, aff'd, 94 N.C. App. 769, 381 S.E.2d 718 (1987).

Subdivision (a)(1) Directed Toward Mathematical Errors Only. — In providing in this section that awards could be modified or corrected for "evident miscalculation of figures," the legislature had reference only to mathematical errors committed by arbitrators which would be patently clear to a reviewing court. This section is not an avenue for litigants to persuade courts to review the evidence and then reach a different result because it might be interpreted differently; such an interpretation of the statute would completely frustrate the underlying purposes of the arbitration process. Carolina Va. Fashion Exhibitors, Inc. v. Gunter, 41 N.C. App. 407, 255 S.E.2d 414 (1979).

Court's Power Under Subdivision (a)(3) Limited. — The provision of this section which allows courts to modify or correct an award which is "imperfect in a matter of form" does not permit the court to substitute its interpretation for that of the arbitrators. Carolina Va. Fashion Exhibitors, Inc. v. Gunter, 41 N.C. App. 407, 255 S.E.2d 414 (1979).

Waiver After 90-Day Period. — Where plaintiff filed a motion requesting modification of an order confirming an arbitration award and the award itself so as to increase the amount for alimony and child support more than 90 days after delivery of a copy of the award, he waived his ability to contend that the award was imperfect. Crutchley v. Crutchley, 53 N.C. App. 732, 281 S.E.2d 744 (1981), rev'd on other grounds, 306 N.C. 518, 293 S.E.2d 793 (1982).

Trial judge was required to either (1) confirm award in the appraisers' report, (2) vacate the award after finding one of the statutory grounds for vacating, or (3) modify the award so as to effect the intent of the parties and then confirm the award as modified. Hooper v. Allstate Ins. Co., 124 N.C. App. 185, 476 S.E.2d 380 (1996).

Refusal to Modify Award Upheld. — Where neither party requested an explanation of award prior to the appointment of the arbitrators and plaintiff did not allege in its motion to modify that modification was necessary to correct any clerical, typographical, technical, or computational errors under Arbitration Rule 44, the court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to modify or clarify the award. Trafalgar House Constr., Inc. v. MSL Enters., Inc., 128 N.C. App. 252, 494 S.E.2d 613 (1998).

Cited in In re Cohoon, 60 N.C. App. 226, 298 S.E.2d 729 (1983).

§ 1-567.15. Judgment or decree on award.

Upon the granting of an order confirming, modifying or correcting an award, judgment or decree shall be entered in conformity therewith and be docketed and enforced as any other judgment or decree. Costs of the application and of the proceedings subsequent thereto, and disbursements may be awarded by the court. (1927, c. 94, ss. 19, 21; 1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

The purpose of arbitration is to reach a final settlement of disputed matters without litigation, and it is well established that the parties, who have agreed to abide by the decision of a panel of arbitrators, will not generally be heard to attack the regularity or fairness of an award. McNeal v. Black, 61 N.C. App. 305, 300 S.E.2d 575 (1983).

The scope of an arbitration award and its res judicata effect are matters for judicial determination. Rodgers Bldrs., Inc. v. McQueen, 76 N.C. App. 16, 331 S.E.2d 726

(1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 590, 341 S.E.2d 29 (1986).

The doctrine of res judicata applies to a judgment entered on an arbitration award as it does to any other final judgment. Thus, a judgment entered on an arbitration award is conclusive of all rights, questions, and facts in issue, as to the parties and their privies, and as to them, constitutes an absolute bar to a subsequent action arising out of the same cause of action or dispute. Rodgers Bldrs., Inc. v. McQueen, 76 N.C. App. 16, 331 S.E.2d 726 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 590, 341 S.E.2d 29 (1986).

And Judgment Operates as an Estoppel. — A judgment entered on an arbitration award, like any other final judgment, operates as an estoppel not only as to all matters actually determined or litigated in the prior proceeding, but also as to all relevant and material matters within the scope of the proceeding which the parties, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, could and should have brought forward for determination. Rodgers Bldrs., Inc. v. McQueen, 76 N.C. App. 16, 331 S.E.2d 726 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 590, 341 S.E.2d 29 (1986).

Cited in Carolina Va. Fashion Exhibitors, Inc. v. Gunter, 41 N.C. App. 407, 255 S.E.2d 414 (1979).

§ 1-567.16. Applications to court.

Except as otherwise provided, an application to the court under this Article shall be by motion and shall be heard in the manner and upon the notice provided by law or rule of court for the making and hearing of motions. Unless the parties have agreed otherwise, notice of an initial application for an order shall be served in the manner provided by law for the service of a summons in an action. (1927, c. 94, s. 5; 1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

The purpose of arbitration is to reach a final settlement of disputed matters without litigation, and it is well established that the parties, who have agreed to abide by the decision of a panel of arbitrators, will not generally be heard to attack the regularity or fairness of an award. McNeal v. Black, 61 N.C. App. 305, 300 S.E.2d 575 (1983).

The proper procedure for staying litigation and compelling arbitration is by a proper motion. Adams v. Nelson, 313 N.C. 442, 329 S.E.2d 322 (1985).

Failure to Apply for Arbitration. — Where defendants made no explicit reference to an arbitration clause in their answer to the breach of contract suit filed against them, and did not premise their motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) upon the existence of the arbitration clause, they failed to apply to the court for arbitration in order to exercise the contractual remedy to which they were entitled. Adams v. Nelson, 313 N.C. 442, 329 S.E.2d 322 (1985).

Service. — Although service is required to be made by registered mail or certified mail return receipt requested, plaintiff's motion, based on improper service, to dismiss defendants' appeal from an arbitration award was dismissed where plaintiff was not prejudiced by service, which was accomplished through first-class mail. Palmer v. Duke Power Co., 129 N.C. App. 488, 499 S.E.2d 801 (1998).

Cited in County of Durham v. Richards & Assocs., 742 F.2d 811 (4th Cir. 1984).

§ 1-567.17. Court; jurisdiction.

The term "court" means any court of competent jurisdiction of this State. The making in this State of an agreement described in G.S. 1-567.12, or any agreement providing for arbitration in this State or under the laws thereof, confers jurisdiction on the court to enforce the agreement under this Article and to enter judgment on an award thereunder. (1927, c. 94, s. 3; 1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — It would appear that by the reference in this section to an agreement described in G.S. 1-567.12, an arbitration agreement under § 1-567.2 was intended.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited below were decided under prior law.

Contracts to submit future disputes to arbitration, and thus oust the jurisdiction of the courts, are invalid, and the courts will not specifically, or by indirection, compel performance of such contracts by refusing to entertain a suit until after arbitration. McDonough Constr. Co. v. Hanner, 232 F. Supp. 887 (M.D.N.C. 1964).

When a cause of action has arisen the courts cannot be ousted of their jurisdiction by an agreement, previously entered into, to submit the rights and liabilities of the parties to arbitration or to some other tribunal named in the agreement. Skinner v. Gaither Corp., 234 N.C. 385, 67 S.E.2d 267 (1951); McDonough Constr. Co. v. Hanner, 232 F. Supp. 887 (M.D.N.C. 1964).

Courts have uniformly held to the doctrine that when a cause of action has arisen, the courts cannot be ousted of their jurisdiction by agreements, previously entered into, to submit the liabilities and rights of the parties to the determination of other tribunals named in the agreement; but it has been also generally held that the agreement to submit the particular question of the amount of loss or damage of the assured under an insurance policy is not against public policy and is sustained. That is simply a method for the ascertainment of a single fact, and not the determination of the legal liability of the insurer. Pioneer Mfg. Co. v. Phoenix Assurance Co., 106 N.C. 28, 10 S.E. 1057 (1890); Braddy v. New York Bowery Fire Ins. Co., 115 N.C. 354, 20 S.E. 477 (1894); Kelly v. Trimont Lodge, No. 249, 154 N.C. 97, 69 S.E. 764 (1910).

Application by defendants to the court for arbitration pursuant to § 1-567.3 would not "oust" the trial court of jurisdiction, as there is a distinction between a lack of jurisdiction and exercising existing jurisdiction to enforce an agreement under the Uniform Arbitration Act (§§ 1-567.1 through 1-567.20), and nothing contained in the language of the act indicates that the court does not retain jurisdiction once a party invokes his privilege to arbitrate. Adams v. Nelson, 313 N.C. 442, 329 S.E.2d 322 (1985).

§ 1-567.18. Appeals.

(a) An appeal may be taken from:

(1) An order denying an application to compel arbitration made under G.S. 1-567.3;

(2) An order granting an application to stay arbitration made under G.S. 1-567.3(b);

(3) An order confirming or denying confirmation of an award;

(4) An order modifying or correcting an award;

(5) An order vacating an award without directing a rehearing; or

(6) A judgment or decree entered pursuant to the provisions of this Article.

(b) The appeal shall be taken in the manner and to the same extent as from orders or judgments in a civil action. (1927, c. 94, s. 22; 1973, c. 676, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "The Substantial Right Doctrine and Interlocutory Appeals," see 17 Campbell L. Rev. 71 (1995).

CASE NOTES

Legislative Intent. — The Legislature did not intend for an appeal to lie from an arbitration order which vacates an award, but directs a rehearing. In re State, 72 N.C. App. 149, 323 S.E.2d 466 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 507, 329 S.E.2d 396 (1985).

The right to appeal from an order staying arbitration has no greater latitude than the right to appeal from any other civil judgment or order. Peloquin Assocs. v. Polcaro, 61 N.C. App. 345, 300 S.E.2d 477 (1983).

No Right to Appeal from Denial of Application to Stay Arbitration. — This section does not permit an appeal to be taken from the denial of an application to stay arbitration. Ruffin Woody & Assocs. v. Person County, 92 N.C. App. 129, 374 S.E.2d 165 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 337, 378 S.E.2d 799 (1989).

Presumption on Appeal. — Where parties to an action in ejectment consented to arbitration on questions of boundaries and an order was made accordingly, but the record disclosed no evidence upon which the arbitrators based their decision, the courts would assume that there was evidence to support their action. Bryson v. Higdon, 222 N.C. 17, 21 S.E.2d 836 (1942), decided under former law.

Determination As to Existence of Enforceable Contract Must Be Made. — Where the trial court had not yet summarily determined the issue of whether the parties had entered into an enforceable contract providing for arbitration, the trial court's order enjoining arbitration was not appealable. Lee County Bd. of Educ. v. Adams Elec., Inc., 106 N.C. App. 139, 415 S.E.2d 576 (1992).

Article 45B.

International Commercial Arbitration and Conciliation.

Part 1. General Provisions.

§ 1-567.30. Preamble and short title.

It is the policy of the State of North Carolina to promote and facilitate international trade and commerce, and to provide a forum for the resolution of disputes that may arise from participation therein. Pursuant to this policy, the purpose of this Article is to encourage the use of arbitration or conciliation as a means of resolving such disputes, to provide rules for the conduct of arbitration or conciliation proceedings, and to assure access to the courts of this State for legal proceedings ancillary to such arbitration or conciliation.

This Article shall be known as the North Carolina International Commercial Arbitration and Conciliation Act. (1991, c. 292, s. 1; 1997-368, ss. 1, 2, 5.)

§ 1-567.31. Scope of application.

(a) This Article applies to international commercial arbitration and conciliation, subject to any applicable international agreement in force between the United States of America and any other nation or nations, or any federal statute.

(b) The provisions of this Article, except G.S. 1-567.38, 1-567.39, and 1-567.65, apply only if the place of arbitration is in this State.

(c) An arbitration or conciliation is international if:

(1) The parties to the arbitration or conciliation agreement have their places of business in different nations when the agreement is concluded; or

(2) One or more of the following places is situated outside the nations in which the parties have their places of business:

a. The place of arbitration or conciliation if determined pursuant to the arbitration agreement;

b. Any place where a substantial part of the obligations of the commercial relationship is to be performed; or

c. The place with which the subject matter of the dispute is most closely connected; or

(3) The parties have expressly agreed that the subject matter of the arbitration or conciliation agreement relates to more than one nation.

(d) For the purposes of subsection (c) of this section:

(1) If a party has more than one place of business, the place of business is that which has the closest relationship to the arbitration or conciliation agreement;

(2) If a party does not have a place of business, reference is to be made to the party's domicile.

(e) An arbitration or conciliation, respectively, is deemed commercial for the purposes of this Article if it arises out of a relationship of a commercial nature, including, but not limited to the following:

(1) A transaction for the exchange of goods and services;

(2) A distribution agreement;

(3) A commercial representation or agency;

(4) An exploitation agreement or concession;

(5) A joint venture or other related form of industrial or business cooperation;

(6) The carriage of goods or passengers by air, sea, land, or road;

(7) A contract or agreement relating to construction, insurance, licensing, factoring, leasing, consulting, engineering, financing, or banking;

(8) The transfer of data or technology;

(9) The use or transfer of intellectual or industrial property, including trade secrets, trademarks, trade names, patents, copyrights, and software programs;

(10) A contract for the provision of any type of professional service, whether provided by an employee or an independent contractor.

(f) This Article shall not affect any other law in force by virtue of which certain disputes may not be submitted to arbitration, conciliation, or mediation, or may be submitted to arbitration, conciliation, or mediation only according to provisions other than those of this Article.

(g) This Article shall not apply to any agreement providing explicitly that it shall not be subject to the North Carolina International Commercial Arbitration and Conciliation Act. This Article shall not apply to any agreement executed prior to June 13, 1991. (1991, c. 292, s. 1; 1997-141, s. 1; 1997-368, s. 6.)

§ 1-567.32. Definitions and rules of interpretation.

(a) For the purposes of this Article:

(1) "Arbitral award" means any decision of an arbitral tribunal on the substance of a dispute submitted to it, and includes an interlocutory, or partial award;

(2) "Arbitral tribunal" means a sole arbitrator or a panel of arbitrators;

(3) "Arbitration" means any arbitration whether or not administered by a permanent arbitral institution;

(4) "Party" means a party to an arbitration agreement;

(5) "Superior court" means the superior court of any county in this State selected pursuant to G.S. 1-567.36.

(b) Where a provision of this Article, except G.S. 1-567.58, leaves the parties free to determine a certain issue, such freedom includes the right of the parties to authorize a third party, including an institution, to make that determination.

(c) Where a provision of this Article refers to the fact that the parties have agreed or that they may agree or in any other way refers to an agreement of the parties, such agreement includes any arbitration rules referred to in that agreement.

(d) Where a provision of this Article, other than in G.S. 1-567.55(1) and G.S. 1-567.62(b)(1), refers to a claim, it also applies to a counterclaim, and where it refers to a defense, it also applies to a defense to such counterclaim. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.33. Receipt of written communications or submissions.

(a) Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, any written communication or submission is deemed to have been received if it is delivered to the addressee personally or if it is delivered at the addressee's place of business, domicile or mailing address and the communication or submission is deemed to have been received on the day it is so delivered. Delivery by facsimile transmission shall constitute valid receipt if the communication or submission is in fact received.

(b) If none of the places referred to in subsection (a) can be found after making reasonable inquiry, a written communication or submission is deemed to have been received if it is sent to the addressee's last known place of business, domicile or mailing address by registered mail or any other means which provide a record of the attempt to deliver it.

(c) The provisions of this Article do not apply to a written communication or submission relating to a court, administrative or special proceeding. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.33A. Severability.

In the event any provision of this act is held to be invalid, the court's holding as to that provision shall not affect the validity or operation of other provisions of the act; and to that end the provisions of the act are severable. (1991, c. 292, s. 1; 1997-368, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly codified as § 1-567.68. It was recodified as § 1-567.33A by Session Laws 1997-368, s. 3, effective October 1, 1997, and applicable to any international commercial disputes that are subject on or after that date to conciliation pursuant to Article 45B of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes, as amended by that act.

Part 2. International Commercial Arbitration.

§ 1-567.34. Waiver of right to object.

A party who knows that any provision of this Article or any requirement under the arbitration agreement has not been complied with and yet proceeds with the arbitration without stating an objection to such noncompliance without undue delay or, if a time limit is provided therefor, within that period of time, shall be deemed to have waived any right to object. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.35. Extent of court intervention.

In matters governed by this Article, no court shall intervene except where so provided in this Article or applicable federal law or any applicable international agreement in force between the United States of America and any other nation or nations. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.36. Venue and jurisdiction of courts.

(a) The functions referred to in G.S. 1-567.41(c) and (d), 1-567.43(a), 1-567.44(b), 1-567.46(c), and 1-567.57 shall be performed by the superior court in:

(1) The county where the arbitration agreement is to be performed or was made;

(2) If the arbitration agreement does not specify a county where the agreement is to be performed and the agreement was not made in any county in the State of North Carolina, the county where any party to the court proceeding resides or has a place of business;

(3) In any case not covered by subdivisions (1) or (2) of this subsection, in any county in the State of North Carolina.

(b) All other functions assigned by this Article to the superior court shall be performed by the superior court of the county in which the place of arbitration is located. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.37. Definition and form of arbitration agreement.

(a) An "arbitration agreement" is an agreement by the parties to submit to arbitration all or certain disputes which have arisen or which may arise between them in respect of a defined legal relationship, whether or not contractual. An arbitration agreement may be in the form of an arbitration clause in a contract or in the form of a separate agreement.

(b) The arbitration agreement shall be in writing. An agreement is in writing if it is contained in a document signed by the parties or in an exchange of letters, telex, telegrams, facsimile transmission, or other means of telecommunication which provide a record of the agreement, or in an exchange of statements of claim and defense in which the existence of an agreement is alleged by one party and not denied by another. The reference in a contract to a document containing an arbitration clause constitutes an arbitration agreement provided that the contract is in writing and the reference is such as to make that clause part of the contract.

(c) Such arbitration agreement shall be valid, enforceable and irrevocable, except with the consent of all the parties, without regard to the justiciable character of the controversy. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.38. Arbitration agreement and substantive claim before court.

(a) When a party to an international commercial arbitration agreement as defined in this Article commences judicial proceedings seeking relief with respect to a matter covered by the agreement to arbitrate, any other party to the agreement may apply to the superior court for an order to stay the proceedings and compel arbitration.

(b) Arbitration proceedings may begin or continue, and an award may be made, while an action described in subsection (a) is pending before the court. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.39. Interim relief and the enforcement of interim measures.

(a) In the case of an arbitration where the arbitrator or arbitrators have not been appointed, or where the arbitrator or arbitrators are unavailable, a party may seek interim relief directly from the superior court as provided in subsection (c). Enforcement shall be granted as provided by the law applicable to the type of interim relief sought.

(b) In all other cases, a party shall seek interim measures under G.S. 1-567.47 from the arbitral tribunal and shall have no right to seek interim relief from the superior court, except that a party to an arbitration governed by this Article may request from the superior court enforcement of an order of an arbitral tribunal granting interim measures under G.S. 1-567.47.

(c) In connection with an agreement to arbitrate or a pending arbitration, the superior court may grant, pursuant to subsection (a) of this section:

(1) An order of attachment of garnishment;
(2) A temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction;
(3) An order for claim and delivery;
(4) The appointment of a receiver;
(5) Delivery of money or other property into court;
(6) Any other order that may be necessary to ensure the preservation or availability either of assets or of documents, the destruction or absence of which would be likely to prejudice the conduct or effectiveness of the arbitration.

(d) In considering a request for interim relief or the enforcement of interim measures, the court shall give preclusive effect to any finding of fact of the arbitral tribunal in the proceeding, including the probable validity of the claim that is the subject of the interim relief sought or the interim measures granted.

(e) Where the arbitral tribunal has not ruled on an objection to its jurisdiction, the court shall not grant preclusive effect to the tribunal's findings until the court has made an independent finding as to the jurisdiction of the arbitral tribunal. If the court rules that the arbitral tribunal did not have jurisdiction, the application for interim relief or the enforcement of interim measures shall be denied. Such a ruling by the court that the arbitral tribunal lacks jurisdiction is not binding on the arbitral tribunal or subsequent judicial proceedings.

(f) The availability of interim relief under this section may be limited by prior written agreement of the parties. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.40. Number of arbitrators.

There shall be one arbitrator unless the parties agree on a greater number of arbitrators. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.41. Appointment of arbitrators.

(a) A person of any nationality may be an arbitrator.

(b) The parties may agree on a procedure of appointing the arbitral tribunal subject to the provisions of subsections (d) and (e) of this section.

(c)(1) If an agreement is not made under subsection (b) of this section, in an arbitration with three arbitrators, each party shall appoint one arbitrator, and the two arbitrators thus appointed shall appoint the third arbitrator; if a party fails to appoint the arbitrator within 30 days of receipt of a request to do so from the other party, or if the two arbitrators fail to agree on the third arbitrator within 30 days of their appointment, the appointment shall be made, upon request of a party, by the superior court.

(2) In an arbitration with a sole arbitrator, if the parties are unable to agree on the arbitrator, a sole arbitrator shall be appointed, upon request of a party, by the superior court.

(3) In an arbitration involving more than two parties, if no agreement is reached under subsection (b) of this section, the superior court, on request of a party, shall appoint one or more arbitrators, as provided in G.S. 1-567.40.

(d) The superior court, on request of any party, may take the necessary measures, unless the agreement on the appointment procedure provides other means for securing the appointment, if, under an appointment procedure agreed upon by the parties:

(1) A party fails to act as required under such procedure; or

(2) The parties, or two arbitrators, are unable to reach an agreement expected of them under such procedure; or

(3) A third party, including an institution, fails to perform any function entrusted to it under such procedure.

(e) A decision of the superior court on a matter entrusted by subsection (c) or (d) of this section shall be final and not subject to appeal.

(f) The superior court, in appointing an arbitrator, shall consider:

(1) Any qualifications required of the arbitrator by the agreement of the parties;

(2) Such other considerations as are likely to secure the appointment of an independent and impartial arbitrator;

(3) In the case of a sole or third arbitrator, the advisability of appointing an arbitrator of a nationality other than those of the parties.

(g) The parties may agree to employ an established arbitration institution to conduct the arbitration. If they do not so agree, the superior court may in its discretion designate an established arbitration institution to conduct the arbitration.

(h) Unless otherwise agreed, an arbitrator shall be entitled to compensation at an hourly or daily rate which reflects the size and complexity of the case, and the experience of the arbitrator. If the parties are unable to agree on such a rate, the rate shall be determined by the arbitral institution chosen pursuant to subsection (g) of this section or by the arbitral tribunal, in either case subject to the review of the superior court upon the motion of any dissenting party. (1991, c. 292, s. 1; 1993, c. 553, s. 6.)

§ 1-567.42. Grounds for challenge.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this Article, all persons whose names have been submitted for consideration for appointment or designation as arbitrators, or who have been appointed or designated as such, shall make a disclosure to the parties within 15 days of such submission, appointment, or designation of any information which might cause their impartiality to be questioned including, but not limited to, any of the following instances:

(1) The person has a personal bias or prejudice concerning a party, or personal knowledge of disputed evidentiary facts concerning the proceeding;

(2) The person served as a lawyer in the matter in controversy, or the person is or has been associated with another who has participated in the matter during such association, or has been a material witness concerning it;

(3) The person served as an arbitrator in another proceeding involving one or more of the parties to the proceeding;

(4) The person, individually or as a fiduciary, or such person's spouse or minor child residing in such person's household, has a financial interest in the subject matter in controversy or in a party to the proceeding, or any other interest that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding;

(5) The person, his or her spouse, or a person within the third degree of relationship to either of them, or the spouse of such a person meets any of the following conditions:

a. The person is or has been a party to the proceeding, or an officer, director, or trustee of a party;

b. The person is acting or has acted as a lawyer in the proceeding;

c. The person is known to have an interest that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding;

d. The person is likely to be a material witness in the proceeding;

(6) The person has a close personal or professional relationship with a person who meets any of the following conditions:

a. The person is or has been a party to the proceeding, or an officer, director, or trustee of a party;

b. The person is acting or has acted as a lawyer or representative in the proceeding;

c. The person is or expects to be nominated as an arbitrator or conciliator in the proceeding;

d. The person is known to have an interest that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding;

e. The person is likely to be a material witness in the proceeding.

(b) The obligation to disclose information set forth in subsection (a) of this section is mandatory and cannot be waived as to the parties with respect to persons serving either as sole arbitrator or as the chief or prevailing arbitrator. The parties may otherwise agree to waive such disclosure.

(c) From the time of appointment and throughout the arbitral proceedings, an arbitrator shall disclose to the parties without delay any circumstances referred to in subsection (a) of this section which were not previously disclosed.

(d) Unless otherwise agreed by the parties or the rules governing the arbitration, an arbitrator may be challenged only if circumstances exist that give rise to justifiable doubts as to his or her independence or impartiality, or as to his or her possession of the qualifications upon which the parties have agreed.

(e) A party may challenge an arbitrator appointed by it, or in whose appointment it has participated only for reasons of which it becomes aware after the appointment has been made. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.43. Challenge procedure.

(a) The parties may agree on a procedure for challenging an arbitrator, subject to the provisions of subsection (c) of this section.

(b) If there is no agreement under subsection (a) of this section, a party challenging an arbitrator shall, within 15 days after becoming aware of the constitution of the arbitral tribunal or after becoming aware of any circumstance referred to in G.S. 1-567.42(a), send a written statement of the reasons for the challenge to the arbitral tribunal. Unless the challenged arbitrator withdraws or the other party agrees to the challenge, the arbitral tribunal shall decide on the challenge.

(c) If a challenge under any procedure agreed upon by the parties or under the procedure of subsection (b) of this section is not successful, the challenging party may, within 30 days after having received notice of the decision rejecting the challenge, request the superior court to decide on the challenge, which decision shall be final and subject to no appeal. While such a request is pending, the arbitral tribunal, including the challenged arbitrator, may continue to conduct the arbitral proceedings and make an award. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.44. Failure or impossibility to act.

(a) The mandate of an arbitrator terminates if the arbitrator becomes unable to perform the arbitrator's functions or for other reasons fails to act without undue delay or the arbitrator withdraws or the parties agree to the termination.

(b) If a controversy remains concerning any of the grounds referred to in subsection (a) of this section, a party may request the superior court to decide on the termination of the mandate. The decision of the superior court shall be final and not subject to appeal.

(c) If under this section or under G.S. 1-567.43, an arbitrator withdraws or otherwise agrees to the termination of his or her mandate, no acceptance of the validity of any ground referred to in this section or G.S. 1-567.43(b) shall be implied in consequence of such action. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.45. Appointment of substitute arbitrator.

(a) Where the mandate of an arbitrator terminates for any reason, a substitute arbitrator shall be appointed according to the rules that were applicable to the appointment of the arbitrator being replaced.

(b) Unless otherwise agreed by the parties:

(1) Where the number of arbitrators is less than three and an arbitrator is replaced, any hearings previously held shall be repeated;

(2) Where the presiding arbitrator is replaced, any hearings previously held shall be repeated;

(3) Where the number of arbitrators is three or more and an arbitrator other than the presiding arbitrator is replaced, any hearings previously held may be repeated at the discretion of the arbitral tribunal.

(c) Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, an order or ruling of the arbitral tribunal made prior to the replacement of an arbitrator under this section is not invalid because there has been a change in the composition of the tribunal. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.46. Competence of arbitral tribunal to rule on its jurisdiction.

(a) The arbitral tribunal may rule on its own jurisdiction, including any objections with respect to the existence or validity of the arbitration agreement. For that purpose, an arbitration clause which forms a part of a contract shall be treated as an agreement independent of the other terms of the contract. A decision by the arbitral tribunal that the contract is null and void shall not entail ipso jure the invalidity of the arbitration clause, unless the arbitral tribunal finds that the arbitration clause was obtained by fraud, whether in the inducement or in the factum.

(b) A plea that the arbitral tribunal does not have jurisdiction shall be raised not later than the submission of the statement of defense. However, a party is not precluded from raising such a plea by the fact that the party has appointed, or participated in the appointment of, an arbitrator. A plea that the arbitral tribunal is exceeding the scope of its authority shall be raised as soon as the matter alleged to be beyond the scope of its authority is raised during the arbitral proceedings. In either case, the arbitral tribunal may admit a later plea if it considers the delay justified.

(c) The arbitral tribunal may rule on a plea referred to in subsection (b) of this section either as a preliminary question or in an award on the merits. If the arbitral tribunal rules as a preliminary question that it has jurisdiction, after having received notice of that ruling, any party may request the superior court to decide the matter. The decision of the superior court shall be final and not subject to appeal. While such a request is pending, the arbitral tribunal may continue the arbitral proceedings and make an award. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.47. Power of arbitral tribunal to order interim measures.

Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, the arbitral tribunal may, at the request of a party, order any party to take such interim measure of protection as the arbitral tribunal may consider necessary in respect of the subject matter of the dispute, including an interim measure analogous to any type of interim relief specified in G.S. 1-567.39(c). The arbitral tribunal may require any party to provide appropriate security, including security for costs as provided in G.S. 1-567.61(h)(2), in connection with such measure. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.48. Equal treatment of parties; representation by attorney.

(a) The parties shall be treated with equality and each party shall be given a full opportunity to present its case.

(b) A party has the right to be represented by an attorney at any proceeding or hearing under this Article. A waiver of this right prior to the proceeding or hearing is ineffective. (1991, c. 292, s. 1; 1997-141, s. 2.)

§ 1-567.49. Determination of rules of procedure.

(a) Subject to the provisions of this Article, the parties may agree on the procedure to be followed by the arbitral tribunal in conducting the proceedings.

(b) If there is no agreement under subsection (a) of this section, the arbitral tribunal may, subject to the provisions of this Article, conduct the arbitration in such manner as it considers appropriate. The power conferred upon the arbitral tribunal includes the power to order such discovery as it deems necessary and to determine the admissibility, relevance, materiality, and weight of any evidence. Evidence need not be limited by the rules of evidence applicable in judicial proceedings, except as to immunities and privilege. Each party shall have the burden of proving the facts relied on to support its claim, setoff, or defense. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.50. Place of arbitration.

(a) The parties may agree on the place of arbitration. If the parties do not agree, the place of arbitration shall be determined by the arbitral tribunal having regard to the circumstances of the case, including the convenience of the parties.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) of this section, the arbitral tribunal may, unless otherwise agreed by the parties, meet at any place it considers appropriate for consultation among its members, for hearing witnesses, experts or the parties, or for inspection of goods, other property, or documents. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.51. Commencement of arbitral proceedings.

Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, the arbitral proceedings in respect of a particular dispute shall commence on the date on which a request for that dispute to be referred to arbitration is received by the respondent. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.52. Language.

(a) The parties may agree on the language or languages to be used in the arbitral proceedings. If the parties do not agree, the arbitral tribunal shall determine the language or languages to be used in the proceedings. This agreement or determination, unless otherwise specified therein, shall apply to any written statement by a party, any hearing and any award, decision, or other communication by the arbitral tribunal.

(b) The arbitral tribunal may order that any documentary evidence shall be accompanied by a translation into the language or languages agreed upon by the parties or determined by the arbitral tribunal.

(c) The arbitral tribunal may employ one or more translators at the expense of the parties. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.53. Statements of claim and defense.

(a) Within the period of time agreed by the parties or determined by the arbitral tribunal, the claimant shall state the facts supporting its claim, the points at issue and the relief or remedy sought, and the respondent shall state its defenses and counterclaims or setoffs in respect of these particulars, unless the parties have otherwise agreed as to the required elements of such statements. The parties may submit with their statements all documents they consider to be relevant or may add a reference to the documents or other evidence the party will submit.

(b) Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, either party may amend or supplement a claim or defense during the course of the arbitral proceedings, unless the arbitral tribunal considers it inappropriate to allow such amendment having regard to the delay in making it.

(c) If there are more than two parties to the arbitration, each party shall state its claims, setoffs, and defenses as provided in subsection (a) of this section. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.54. Hearings and written proceedings.

(a) Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, the arbitral tribunal shall decide whether to hold oral hearings for the presentation of evidence or for oral argument, or whether the proceedings shall be conducted on the basis of documents and other materials. Unless the parties have agreed that no hearings shall be held, the arbitral tribunal shall hold such hearings at an appropriate stage of the proceedings, if so requested by a party.

(b) The parties shall be given sufficient advance notice of any hearing and of any meeting of the arbitral tribunal for the purposes of inspection of goods, other property, or documents.

(c) All statements, documents, or other information supplied to the arbitral tribunal by one party shall be served on the other party and any expert report or evidentiary document on which the arbitral tribunal may rely in making its decision shall be served on the parties. The arbitral tribunal shall direct the timing of such service to protect the parties from undue surprise.

(d) Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, all oral hearings and meetings in arbitral proceedings shall be held in camera. Confidential information disclosed during the proceedings by the parties or by witnesses shall not be divulged by the arbitrator or arbitrators. Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, or required by applicable law, the arbitral tribunal and the parties shall keep confidential all matters relating to the arbitration and the award.

(e) The parties may agree on:

(1) The attendance of a court reporter,

(2) The creation of a transcript of proceedings, or

(3) The making of an audio or video record of proceedings, at the expense of the parties.

Any party may provide for any of the actions specified in subdivisions (1) through (3) of this subsection at that party's own expense.

(f) After asking the parties if they have any further testimony or evidentiary submissions and upon receiving negative replies or being satisfied that the record is complete, the arbitral tribunal may declare the hearings closed. The arbitral tribunal may reopen the hearings, upon terms it considers just, at any time before the award is made. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.55. Default of a party.

Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, where, without showing sufficient cause:

(1) The claimant fails to submit a statement of claim in accordance with G.S. 1-567.53(a), the arbitral tribunal shall terminate the proceedings;

(2) The respondent fails to submit a statement of defense in accordance with G.S. 1-567.53(c), the arbitral tribunal shall continue to conduct the proceedings without treating such failure in itself as an admission of the claimant's allegations;

(3) Any party fails to appear at a hearing or to produce documentary evidence as directed by the arbitral tribunal, the arbitral tribunal may continue to conduct the proceedings and make the award on the evidence before it. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.56. Expert appointed by arbitral tribunal.

(a) Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, the arbitral tribunal:

(1) May appoint one or more experts to report to it on specific issues to be determined by the arbitral tribunal;

(2) May require a party to give the expert any relevant information or to produce, or to provide access to, any relevant documents, goods, or other property for the expert's inspection.

(b) Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, if a party so requests or if the arbitral tribunal considers it necessary, the expert shall, after delivery of his written or oral report, participate in an oral hearing where the parties have the opportunity to question the expert and to present expert witnesses on the points at issue. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.57. Court assistance in obtaining discovery and taking evidence.

(a) The arbitral tribunal or a party with the approval of the arbitral tribunal may request from the superior court assistance in obtaining discovery and taking evidence. The court may execute the request within its competence and according to its rules on discovery and taking evidence, and may impose sanctions for failure to comply with its orders. A subpoena may be issued as provided by G.S. 8-59, in which case the witness compensation provisions of G.S. 6-51, 6-53, and 7A-314 shall apply.

(b) If the parties to two or more arbitration agreements agree, in their respective arbitration agreements or otherwise, to consolidate the arbitrations arising out of those agreements, the superior court, upon application by a party, may do any of the following:

(1) Order the arbitrations to be consolidated on terms the court considers just and necessary;

(2) If all the parties cannot agree on an arbitral tribunal for the consolidated arbitration, appoint an arbitral tribunal as provided by G.S. 1-567.41; and

(3) If all the parties cannot agree on any other matter necessary to conduct the consolidated arbitration, make any other order it considers necessary. (1991, c. 292, s. 1; 1999-185, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-185, s. 2, effective October 1, 1999, in subsection (b), substituted "upon" for "on," and substituted "a party, may do any of the following" for "one party with the consent of all the other parties to those arbitration agreements, may."

§ 1-567.58. Rules applicable to substance of dispute.

(a) The arbitral tribunal shall decide the dispute in accordance with such rules of law as are chosen by the parties as applicable to the substance of the dispute. Any designation of the law or legal system of a given country or political subdivision thereof shall be construed, unless otherwise expressed, as directly referring to the substantive law of that country or political subdivision and not to its conflict of laws rules.

(b) Failing any designation by the parties, the arbitral tribunal shall apply the law determined by the conflict of laws rules which it considers applicable.

(c) The arbitral tribunal shall decide ex aequo et bono (on the basis of fundamental fairness), or as amiable compositeur (as an "amicable compounder"), only if the parties have expressly authorized it to do so.

(d) In all cases, the arbitral tribunal shall decide in accordance with the terms of the contract and shall take into account the usages of the trade applicable to the transaction. (1991, c. 292, s. 1; c. 761, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.59. Decision making by panel of arbitrators.

Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, in arbitral proceedings with more than one arbitrator, any decision of the arbitral tribunal shall be made by a majority of all its members. However, questions of procedure may be decided by a presiding arbitrator, is authorized by the parties or all members of the arbitral tribunal. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.60. Settlement.

(a) An arbitral tribunal may encourage settlement of the dispute and, with the agreement of the parties, may use mediation, conciliation, or other procedures at any time during the arbitral proceedings to encourage settlement.

(b) If, during arbitral proceedings, the parties settle the dispute, the arbitral tribunal shall terminate the proceedings and, if requested by the parties and not objected to by the arbitral tribunal, record the settlement in the form of an arbitral award on agreed terms.

(c) An award on agreed terms shall be made in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 1-567.61 and shall state that it is an arbitral award. Such an award shall have the same status and effect as any other award on the substance of the dispute. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.61. Form and contents of award.

(a) The award shall be made in writing and shall be signed by the arbitrator or arbitrators. In arbitral proceedings with more than one arbitrator, the signatures of the majority of all members of the arbitral tribunal shall suffice, provided that the reason for any omitted signature is stated.

(b) The award shall not state the reasons upon which it is based, unless the parties have agreed that reasons are to be given.

(c) The award shall state its date and the place of arbitration as determined in accordance with G.S. 1-567.50. The award shall be considered to have been made at that place.

(d) After the award is made, a copy signed by the arbitrator or arbitrators in accordance with subsection (a) of this section shall be delivered to each party.

(e) The award may be denominated in foreign currency, by agreement of the parties or in the discretion of the arbitral tribunal if the parties are unable to agree.

(f) Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, the arbitral tribunal may award interest.

(g) The arbitral tribunal may award specific performance in its discretion to a party requesting an award of specific performance.

(h)(1) Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, the awarding of costs of an arbitration shall be at the discretion of the arbitral tribunal.

(2) In making an order for costs, the arbitral tribunal may include as costs:

a. The fees and expenses of the arbitrator or arbitrators, expert witnesses, and translators;

b. Fees and expenses of counsel and of the institution supervising the arbitration, if any; and

c. Any other expenses incurred in connection with the arbitral proceedings.

(3) In making an order for costs, the arbitral tribunal may specify:

a. The party entitled to costs;

b. The party who shall pay the costs;

c. The amount of costs or method of determining that amount; and

d. The manner in which the costs shall be paid. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.62. Termination of proceedings.

(a) The arbitral proceedings are terminated by the final award or by an order of the arbitral tribunal in accordance with subsection (b) of this section.

(b) The arbitral tribunal shall issue an order for the termination of the arbitral proceedings if:

(1) The claimant withdraws the claim, unless the respondent objects to the order and the arbitral tribunal recognizes a legitimate interest on the respondent's part in obtaining a final settlement of the dispute;

(2) The parties agree on the termination of the proceedings; or
(3) The arbitral tribunal finds that the continuation of the proceedings has for any other reason become unnecessary or impossible.

(c) Subject to the provisions of G.S. 1-567.63, the mandate of the arbitral tribunal terminates with the termination of the arbitral proceedings. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.63. Correction and interpretation of awards; additional awards.

(a) Within 30 days of receipt of the award, unless another period of time has been agreed upon by the parties:
(1) A party may request the arbitral tribunal to correct in the award any computation, clerical or typographical errors or other errors of a similar nature;
(2) A party may request the arbitral tribunal to give an interpretation of a specific point or part of the award.

If the arbitral tribunal considers such request to be justified, it shall make the correction or give the interpretation within 30 days of receipt of the request. Such correction or interpretation shall become part of the award.

(b) The arbitral tribunal may correct any error of the type referred to in subsection (a) of its own initiative within 30 days of the date of the award.

(c) Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, within 30 days of receipt of the award, a party may request the arbitral tribunal to make an additional award as to claims presented in the arbitral proceedings but omitted from the award. If the arbitral tribunal considers the request to be justified, it shall make the additional award within 60 days after the date of receipt of the request.

(d) The arbitral tribunal may extend, if necessary, the period within which it shall make a correction interpretation, or an additional award under subsection (a) or (c).

(e) The provisions of G.S. 1-567.61 shall apply to a correction or interpretation of the award or to an additional award made under this section. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.64. Modifying or vacating of awards.

Subject to the relevant provisions of federal law or any applicable international agreement in force between the United States of America and any other nation or nations, an arbitral award may be vacated by a court only upon a showing that the award is tainted by illegality, or substantial unfairness in the conduct of the arbitral proceedings. In determining whether an award is so tainted, the superior court shall have regard to the provisions of this Article, and of G.S. 1-567.13 and G.S. 1-567.14, but shall not engage in de novo review of the subject matter of the dispute giving rise to the arbitration proceedings. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.65. Confirmation and enforcement of awards.

Subject to the relevant provisions of federal law or any applicable international agreement in force between the United States of America and any other nation or nations, upon application of a party, the superior court shall confirm an arbitral award, unless it finds grounds for modifying or vacating the award under G.S. 1-567.64. An award shall not be confirmed unless the time for correction and interpretation of awards prescribed by G.S. 1-567.63 shall have expired or been waived by all the parties. Upon the granting of an order confirming, modifying, or correcting an award, judgment or decree shall be entered in conformity therewith and enforced as any other judgment or decree. The superior court may award costs of the application and of the subsequent proceedings. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.66. Applications to superior court.

Except as otherwise provided, an application to the superior court under this Article shall be by motion and shall be heard in the manner and upon the notice provided by law or rule of court for the making and hearing of motions. Unless the parties have agreed otherwise, notice of an initial application for an order shall be served in the manner provided by law for the service of a summons in an action. (1991, c. 292, s. 1.)

§ 1-567.67. Appeals.

(a) An appeal may be taken from:

The conciliator shall be guided by principles of objectivity, fairness, and justice and shall give consideration to, among other things, the rights and obligations of the parties, the usages of the trade concerned, and the circumstances surrounding the dispute, including any previous practices between the parties.

(c) The conciliator may conduct the conciliation proceedings in a manner that the conciliator considers appropriate, considering the circumstances of the case, the wishes of the parties, and the desirability of a prompt settlement of the dispute. Except as otherwise provided by this Article, other provisions of the law of this State governing procedural matters do not apply to conciliation proceedings brought under this Part. (a) Evidence of anything said or of an admission made in the course of a conciliation is not admissible, and disclosure of that evidence shall not be compelled in any arbitration or civil action in which, under law, testimony may be compelled to be given. This subsection does not limit the admissibility of evidence when all parties participating in conciliation consent to its disclosure.

(b) If evidence is offered in violation of this section, the arbitral tribunal or the court shall make any order it considers appropriate to deal with the matter, including an order restricting the introduction of evidence or dismissing the case.

(c) Unless the document otherwise provides, a document prepared for the purpose of, in the course of, or pursuant to the conciliation, or a copy of such document, is not admissible in evidence, and disclosure of the document shall not be compelled in any arbitration or civil action in which, under law, testimony may be compelled. ## Article 50.

General Provisions as to Legal Advertising.

§ 1-595. Advertisement of public sales.

When a statute or written instrument stipulates that an advertisement of a sale shall be made for any certain number of weeks, a publication once a week for the number of weeks so indicated is a sufficient compliance with the requirement, unless contrary provision is expressly made by the terms of the instrument. (1909, cc. 794, 875; C.S., s. 924.)

CASE NOTES

Notice of Sale Under Mortgage Essential. — Powers of sale in a mortgage are contractual, and it is essential to the validity of a sale under a power to comply fully with the requirements of giving notice of the sale. Jenkins v. Griffin, 175 N.C. 184, 95 S.E. 166 (1918).

Where a mortgage of lands provided that notice of the sale under the power thereof given in the conveyance should be published in a newspaper, etc., "for a time not less than thirty days prior to the date of the sale," by the agreement the advertisement should have been inserted in the newspaper once a week for four consecutive weeks, and not consecutively for 30 days, and an allowance made in the superior court for an advertisement for 30 consecutive days was erroneous. Raleigh Sav. Bank & Trust Co. v. Leach, 169 N.C. 706, 86 S.E. 701 (1915).

Burden of Proof. — The presumption of law is in favor of regularity in the execution of the power of sale; and if there was any failure to advertise properly, the burden of showing such failure is on the person setting it up. Jenkins v. Griffin, 175 N.C. 184, 95 S.E. 166 (1918).

§ 1-596. Charges for legal advertising.

The publication of all advertising required by law to be made in newspapers in this State shall be paid for at not to exceed the local commercial rate of the newspapers selected. Any public or municipal officer or board created by or existing under the laws of this State that is now or may hereafter be authorized by law to enter into contracts for the publication of legal advertisements is hereby authorized to pay therefor prices not exceeding said rates.

No newspaper in this State shall accept or print any legal advertising until said newspaper shall have first filed with the clerk of the superior court of the county in which it is published a sworn statement of its current commercial rate for the several classes of advertising regularly carried by said publication, and any owner or manager of a newspaper violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. (1919, c. 45, ss. 1, 2; C.S., s.

2586; 1945, c. 635; 1949, c. 205, s. 1½; 1993, c. 539, s. 3; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 24, s. 14(c).)

Local Modification. — Nash: 1949, c. 205, s. 2. Mitchell: 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1170.

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Legal advertisements published in a newspaper which failed to file the rate schedule required by this section are not invalidated because of the failure to file. See opinion of Attorney General to Grady Joseph Wheeler, Jr., City Attorney, Graham, North Carolina, 54 N.C.A.G. 36 (1985).

§ 1-597. Regulations for newspaper publication of legal notices, advertisements, etc.

Whenever a notice or any other paper, document or legal advertisement of any kind or description shall be authorized or required by any of the laws of the State of North Carolina, heretofore or hereafter enacted, or by any order or judgment of any court of this State to be published or advertised in a newspaper, such publication, advertisement or notice shall be of no force and effect unless it shall be published in a newspaper with a general circulation to actual paid subscribers which newspaper at the time of such publication, advertisement or notice, shall have been admitted to the United States mails in the Periodicals class in the county or political subdivision where such publication, advertisement or notice is required to be published, and which shall have been regularly and continuously issued in the county in which the publication, advertisement or notice is authorized or required to be published, at least one day in each calendar week for at least 25 of the 26 consecutive weeks immediately preceding the date of the first publication of such advertisement, publication or notice; provided that in the event that a newspaper otherwise meeting the qualifications and having the characteristics prescribed by G.S. 1-597 to 1-599, should fail for a period not exceeding four weeks in any calendar year to publish one or more of its issues such newspaper shall nevertheless be deemed to have complied with the requirements of regularity and continuity of publication prescribed herein. Provided further, that where any city or town is located in two or more adjoining counties, any newspaper published in such city or town shall, for the purposes of G.S. 1-597 to 1-599, be deemed to be admitted to the mails, issued and published in all such counties in which such town or city of publication is located, and every publication, advertisement or notice required to be published in any such city or town or in any of the counties where such city or town is located shall be valid if published in a newspaper published, issued and admitted to the mails anywhere within any such city or town, regardless of whether the newspaper's plant or the post office where the newspaper is admitted to the mails is in such county or not, if the newspaper otherwise meets the qualifications and requirements of G.S. 1-597 to 1-599. This provision shall be retroactive to May 1, 1940, and all publications, advertisements and notices published in accordance with this provision since May 1, 1940, are hereby validated.

Notwithstanding the provisions of G.S. 1-599, whenever a notice or any other paper, document or legal advertisement of any kind or description shall be authorized or required by any of the laws of the State of North Carolina, heretofore or hereafter enacted, or by any order or judgment of any court of this State to be published or advertised in a newspaper qualified for legal advertising in a county and there is no newspaper qualified for legal advertising as defined in this section in such county, then it shall be deemed sufficient compliance with such laws, order or judgment by publication of such notice or any other such paper, document or legal advertisement of any kind or description in a newspaper published in an adjoining county or in a county within the same district court district as defined in G.S. 7A-133 or superior court district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1, as the case may be; provided, if the clerk of the superior court finds as a fact that such newspaper otherwise meets the requirements of this section and has a general circulation in such county where no newspaper is published meeting the requirements of this section. (1939, c. 170, s. 1; 1941, c. 96; 1959, c. 350; 1985, c. 689, s. 1; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 41; 1997-9, s. 1.)

Local Modification. — Chatham: 1981, c. 893; McDowell: 1981, c. 893; towns of Mint Hill and Matthews: 1987, c. 425; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1042, s. 5.

CASE NOTES

Legislative Intent. — The legislature intended that this section apply to all legal notices required to be published in newspapers. Great S. Media, Inc. v. McDowell County, 304 N.C. 427, 284 S.E.2d 457 (1981).

The term "general circulation," when applied to newspapers, refers not so much to the numerical or geographic distribution of the newspaper as it does to the contents of the paper itself. The primary consideration is whether the newspaper contains information of general interest. Great S. Media, Inc. v. McDowell County, 304 N.C. 427, 284 S.E.2d 457 (1981).

A newspaper of general circulation is a publication to which the general public would resort in order to be informed of the news and intelligence of the day, editorial opinions, and advertisements, and thereby to render it probable that a "notice" would be brought to the attention of the general public. Great S. Media, Inc. v. McDowell County, 50 N.C. App. 705, 275 S.E.2d 226, aff'd, 304 N.C. 427, 284 S.E.2d 457 (1981).

Whether a newspaper is one of general circulation is not determined merely by the number of its subscribers, but by the diversity of those subscribers, and even if the newspaper is of particular interest to a particular class of persons, if it contains news of a general character and interest to the community, although that news may be limited in amount, the newspaper qualifies as one of general circulation. Great S. Media, Inc. v. McDowell County, 50 N.C. App. 705, 275 S.E.2d 226, aff'd, 304 N.C. 427, 284 S.E.2d 457 (1981).

The "general circulation" provision in former subsection (d) of § 105-369 (see now subsection (c)) does not conflict with its counterpart in this section. It simply specifies the geographic area, i.e., "the taxing unit" in which there must be a newspaper of general circulation and the times at which publication must be made. Great S. Media, Inc. v. McDowell County, 304 N.C. 427, 284 S.E.2d 457 (1981).

What Newspapers May Publish Notices of Tax Lien Sales. — In order to qualify to publish notices of tax lien sales a newspaper must meet the "general circulation" requirements of both former subsection (d) of § 105-369 (see now subsection (c)) and this section. Great S. Media, Inc. v. McDowell County, 304 N.C. 427, 284 S.E.2d 457 (1981).

Reading both this section and former subsection (d) of § 105-369 (see now subsection (c)) together and giving effect to each, in order for a newspaper to qualify to publish notices of tax lien sales it must be a newspaper of "general circulation to actual paid subscribers" in the taxing unit. Great S. Media, Inc. v. McDowell County, 304 N.C. 427, 284 S.E.2d 457 (1981).

For a newspaper to be one of general circulation to actual paid subscribers in the taxing unit, as is required by this section and former subsection (d) of § 105-369 (see now subsection (c)), it must meet a four-pronged test: first, it must have a content that appeals to the public generally; second, it must have more than a de minimis number of actual paid subscribers in the taxing unit; third, its paid subscriber distribution must not be entirely limited geographically to one community, or section, of the taxing unit; fourth, it must be available to anyone in the taxing unit who wishes to subscribe to it. Great S. Media, Inc. v. McDowell County, 304 N.C. 427, 284 S.E.2d 457 (1981).

Notice Ineffective Unless Published as Provided. — The publication of a notice of sale under a power contained in a deed of trust is wholly ineffective unless it is published in a newspaper having a general circulation within the county where the land to be sold is located to subscribers who have actually paid the subscription price therefor. Jones v. Percy, 237 N.C. 239, 74 S.E.2d 700 (1953), decided under former law.

Quoted in Haas v. Warren, 341 N.C. 148, 459 S.E.2d 254 (1995).

§ 1-598. Sworn statement prima facie evidence of qualifications; affidavit of publication.

Whenever any owner, partner, publisher, or other authorized officer or employee of any newspaper which has published a notice or any other paper, document or legal advertisement within the meaning of G.S. 1-597 has made a written statement under oath taken before any notary public or other officer or person authorized by law to administer oaths, stating that the newspaper in which such notice, paper, document, or legal advertisement was published, was, at the time of such publication, a newspaper meeting all of the requirements and qualifications prescribed by G.S. 1-597, such sworn written statement shall be received in all courts in this State as prima facie evidence that such newspaper was at the time stated therein a newspaper meeting the requirements and qualifications of G.S. 1-597. When filed in the office of the clerk of the superior court of any county in which the publication of such notice, paper, document or legal advertisement was required or authorized, any such sworn statement shall be deemed to be a record of the court, and such record or a copy thereof duly certified by the clerk shall be prima facie evidence that the newspaper named was at the time stated therein a qualified newspaper within the meaning of G.S. 1-597. Nothing in this section shall preclude proof that a newspaper was or is a qualified newspaper within the meaning of G.S. 1-597 by any other competent evidence. Any such sworn written statement shall be prima facie evidence of the qualifications on any newspaper at the time of any publication of any notice, paper, document, or legal advertisement published in such newspaper at any time from and after the first day of May, 1940.

The owner, a partner, publisher or other authorized officer or employee of any newspaper in which such notice, paper, document or legal advertisement is published, when such newspaper is a qualified newspaper within the meaning of G.S. 1-597, shall include in the affidavit of publication of such notice, paper, document or legal advertisement a statement that at the time of such publication such newspaper was a qualified newspaper within the meaning of G.S. 1-597. (1939, c. 170, s. 1½; 1947, c. 213, ss. 1, 2.)

§ 1-599. Application of two preceding sections.

The provisions of G.S. 1-597 and G.S. 1-598 shall not apply in counties wherein only one newspaper is published, although it may not be a newspaper having the qualifications prescribed by G.S. 1-597; nor shall the provisions of G.S. 1-597 and G.S. 1-598 apply in any county wherein none of the newspapers published in such county has the qualifications and characteristics prescribed in G.S. 1-597. CASE NOTES

Quoted in Great S. Media, Inc. v. McDowell County, 304 N.C. 427, 284 S.E.2d 457 (1981).

§ 1-600. Proof of publication of notice in newspaper; prima facie evidence.

(a) Publication of any notice permitted or required by law to be published in a newspaper may be proved by a printed copy of the notice together with an affidavit made before some person authorized to administer oaths, of the publisher, proprietor, editor, managing editor, business or circulation manager, advertising, classified advertising or any other advertising manager or foreman of the newspaper, showing that the notice has been printed therein and the date or dates of publication. If the newspaper is published by a corporation, the affidavit may be made by one of the persons hereinbefore designated or by the president, vice president, secretary, assistant secretary, treasurer, or assistant treasurer of the corporation.

(b) Such affidavit and copy of the notice shall constitute prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein concerning publication of such notice.

(c) The method of proof of publication of a notice provided for in this section is not exclusive, and the facts concerning such publication may be proved by any competent evidence. (1951, c. 1005, s. 2; 1957, c. 204.)

§ 1-601. Certain legal advertisements validated.

Legal advertisements published prior to June 1, 1983, by a newspaper that met every requirement for publication of legal notices and advertisements under G.S. 1-597 when the advertisement was published except that the newspaper had a second class United States mail permit in a county adjacent to the county in which the advertisement was published instead of the county in which it was published may not be held to be invalid because of the lack of a second class United States mail permit in the proper county. (1983, c. 582, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — The official Comments printed under the individual Rules in this Chapter have been printed by the publisher as received, without editorial change. However, official Comments have not been received in conjunction with all amendments to the Rules, and therefore, subsequent amendments to the Rules may not be reflected in some instances.

Chapter 1A of the General Statutes was added by Session Laws 1967, c. 954. Sections 5, 6 and 7 of c. 954 read as follows:

"Sec. 5. All those portions of chapter 1 of the General Statutes of North Carolina not repealed by this act, not amended by this act, or not in conflict with this act, are hereby reenacted.

"Sec. 6. All provisions of the General Statutes of North Carolina which refer to sections repealed or amended by this act shall be deemed, insofar as possible, to refer to those provisions of this act which accomplish the same or an equivalent purpose.

"Sec. 7. None of the provisions of this act providing for the repeal of certain sections of the General Statutes shall constitute a reenactment of the common law."

Session Laws 1969, c. 803, amended Session Laws 1967, c. 954, s. 10, to read as follows: "Sec. 10. This act shall be in full force and effect on and after January 1, 1970, and shall apply to actions and proceedings pending on that date as well as to actions and proceedings commenced on and after that date."

ARTICLE 1.

Scope of Rules—One Form of Action.

Rule 1. Scope of rules.

These rules shall govern the procedure in the superior and district courts of the State of North Carolina in all actions and proceedings of a civil nature except when a differing procedure is prescribed by statute. They shall also govern the procedure in tort actions brought before the Industrial Commission except when a differing procedure is prescribed by statute. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1971, c. 818.)

COMMENT

This rule gives literal expression to the scope of intended application, but that scope can be appreciated only by a consideration of the rules themselves and the new jurisdiction statute (§ 1-75.1 et seq.), the statutes left undisturbed by Session Laws 1967, c. 954, the statutes amended in s. 3 of c. 954, and those statutes repealed in s. 4 of c. 954. In general it can be said that to the extent a specialized procedure has heretofore governed, it will continue to do so.

CASE NOTES

Applicability of Rules. — The North Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure do not apply to actions brought pursuant to the provisions of §§ 128-16 through 128-20. State ex rel. Leonard v. Huskey, 65 N.C. App. 550, 309 S.E.2d 726 (1983).

Application of Rules to All Cases from Effective Date. — The clear intent of the General Assembly in Session Laws 1969, c. 803, was to apply the new rules from the effective date to all civil cases, and not to permit the confusion which would be attendant upon trying to apply different procedures to cases begun before and to cases begun after the effective date. Schoolfield v. Collins, 281 N.C. 604, 189 S.E.2d 208 (1972).

The rules are the same in both district and superior courts and the inherent powers of these courts are the same as far as procedural matters are concerned. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 N.C. App. 40, 187 S.E.2d 420 (1972).

The canon of interpretation of the rules is one of liberality, and the general policy of the rules is to disregard technicalities and form and determine the rights of litigants on the merits. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 N.C. App. 40, 187 S.E.2d 420 (1972).

The North Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure are modeled after the federal rules. In most instances they are verbatim copies with the same enumerations. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970).

Consideration of Decisions Under Federal Rules and New York Rules. — Since the federal and, presumably, the New York rules are the source of these rules, the Supreme Court will look to the decisions of those jurisdictions for enlightenment and guidance to develop the philosophy of the new rules. Brewer v. Harris, 279 N.C. 288, 182 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Although these rules differ somewhat from the federal rules, the federal rules are one of the sources of the North Carolina rules; and decisions under them are pertinent for guidance and enlightenment to develop the philosophy of the new rules. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 N.C. App. 40, 187 S.E.2d 420 (1972).

Section 8-83 is not a "differing procedure" from that of § 1A-1, Rule 32 within the contemplation of the language of this rule. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

Actions for Alimony. — Actions for permanent alimony are unquestionably of a civil nature, and there is no "differing procedure" prescribed by statute which governs the action. Quick v. Quick, 305 N.C. 446, 290 S.E.2d 653 (1982).

Revenue Proceedings. — The Rules of Civil Procedure do not apply to proceedings before the State Board of Assessment (now Department of Revenue). In re Valuation of Property Located at 411-417 W. Fourth St., 282 N.C. 71, 191 S.E.2d 692 (1972).

Foreclosure of Deed of Trust. — Foreclosure of a deed of trust under the power of sale contained therein is not an action or proceeding subject to the Rules of Civil Procedure. Furst v.

Loftin, 29 N.C. App. 248, 224 S.E.2d 641 (1976), overruled on other grounds, Connolly v. Potts, 63 N.C. App. 547, 306 S.E.2d 123 (1983).

Dismissal of a Teacher. — The procedures prescribed by former § 115-142 (now § 115C-325) for the dismissal of a career teacher are essentially administrative rather than judicial. The board is not bound by the formal rules of evidence which would ordinarily obtain in a proceeding in a trial court; nor are the Rules of Civil Procedure applicable. Baxter v. Poe, 42 N.C. App. 404, 257 S.E.2d 71, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 293, 259 S.E.2d 298 (1979).

Adoption Proceedings. — The Rules of Civil Procedure and the provisions of § 1-393 et seq., apply to adoption proceedings. In re Clark, 95 N.C. App. 1, 381 S.E.2d 835 (1989), rehearing denied, 327 N.C. 488, 397 S.E.2d 214 (1990).

Juvenile Proceedings. — Actions under the Juvenile Code, § 7A-516 et seq. [see now § 7B-100], are in the nature of civil actions. As such, proceedings in juvenile matters are to be governed by the Rules of Civil Procedure, unless otherwise provided by the Juvenile Code or some other statute. In re Bullabough, 89 N.C. App. 171, 365 S.E.2d 642 (1988).

Procedural validity of a dispositional order in a juvenile proceeding would be evaluated in light of the Rules of Civil Procedure and § 7A-651 [see now §§ 7B-905 and 7B-2512]. In re Bullabough, 89 N.C. App. 171, 365 S.E.2d 642 (1988).

Private Condemnation Proceedings. — Section 40A-12, together with § 1-393, gives trial courts clear authority to apply the Rules of Civil Procedure in private condemnation proceedings, at least to the extent that those rules do not directly conflict with procedures specifically mandated by Chapter 40A. VEPCO v. Tillett, 316 N.C. 73, 340 S.E.2d 62 (1986).

Special Proceedings. — Even where an action is a special proceeding, the Rules of Civil Procedure are made applicable by § 1-393, which provides that the Rules of Civil Procedure and the provisions of Chapter 1 on civil procedure are applicable to special proceedings, except as otherwise provided. VEPCO v. Tillett, 316 N.C. 73, 340 S.E.2d 62 (1986).

The Rules of Civil Procedure apply to special proceedings, just as they do to civil actions, unless the governing statute sets out a different procedure. Charns v. Brown, 129 N.C. App. 635, 502 S.E.2d 7 (1998), cert. denied, 349 N.C. 228, 515 S.E.2d 701 (1998), cert. denied, 349 N.C. 353, — S.E.2d — (1998).

Removal of Officers. — The North Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure do not apply to actions brought pursuant to the provisions of §§ 128-16 through 128-20, relating to removal of unfit officers. State ex rel. Leonard v. Huskey, 65 N.C. App. 550, 309 S.E.2d 726 (1983).

Rules of Civil Procedure are not strictly applicable to proceedings under the Workers' Compensation Act, § 97-1 et seq. Hogan v. Cone Mills Corp., 315 N.C. 127, 337 S.E.2d 477 (1985).

Applied in Branch v. Branch, 282 N.C. 133, 191 S.E.2d 671 (1972); In re Will of Mucci, 287 N.C. 26, 213 S.E.2d 207 (1975); Gardner v. Gardner, 294 N.C. 172, 240 S.E.2d 399 (1978); In re Underwood, 38 N.C. App. 344, 247 S.E.2d 778 (1978); Campbell v. City of Greensboro, 70 N.C. ## Rule 2. One form of action.

There shall be in this State but one form of action for the enforcement or protection of private rights or the redress of private wrongs, which shall be denominated a civil action. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

This rule, drawn substantially without change from North Carolina Const., Art. IV, § 1, and from former § 1-9, preserves the fundamental reform of 1868, providing for the abolition of the forms of action and for the fusion of law and equity.

I. IN GENERAL.

Application of Section. — The argument that the general rule establishing one form of action requires that a lien be enforced by commencing an action under this rule overlooks the familiar rule of construction that a particular statute controls a general one with reference to the same subject matter. For example, § 44A-13(a) specifically directs that a lien against property vested in a trustee in bankruptcy shall be enforced in accordance with the orders of the bankruptcy court. Therefore, § 44A-13(a) controls over this rule. RDC, Inc. v. Brookleigh Bldrs., Inc., 309 N.C. 182, 305 S.E.2d 722 (1983).

Sections 45-21.34 and 45-21.35 must be considered in pari materia with § 1A-1, Rules 2, 3, and 65. Swindell v. Overton, 62 N.C. App. 160, 302 S.E.2d 841 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 310 N.C. 707, 314 S.E.2d 512 (1984).

II. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 1-9.*

One Form of Action for Torts and Contracts. — Although there is but one form of action, there are still torts and contracts just as there were prior to the Code of Civil Procedure, but there are not several forms of action as there used to be, and pleadings are not suited for different forms of action as they used to be, but are all suited to one form, whether the subject of the action be a tort or a contract. Bitting v. Thaxton, 72 N.C. 541 (1875).

Separate Legal and Equitable Principles. — Although one tribunal deals out both law and equity, the principles of law and equity remain separate and distinct, and it is just as important to keep them separate. Jordan v. Lanier, 73 N.C. 90 (1875). See Kiff v. Weaver, 94 N.C. 274 (1886).

The plaintiff can allege a legal or an equitable cause of action, or can combine them as he may elect. Wilson v. Waldo, 221 F. 505 (W.D.N.C. 1915), rev'd on other grounds, 231 F. 654 ((4th Cir. 1916)).

Any defense, either legal or equitable, may be set up by the defendant in an action by the endorsee upon a nonnegotiable note. Thompson v. Osborne, 152 N.C. 408, 67 S.E. 1029 (1910).

Common-Law Forms Immaterial. — Since the old technical distinctions in the forms of actions were abolished by former § 1-9, it was immaterial whether the plaintiff's remedy under the old practice was trespass or case. Sneeden v. Harris, 109 N.C. 349, 13 S.E. 920 (1891).

An exception to a complaint that it was for money had and received and as such could not be maintained unless the money had been actually received by the defendant was not maintainable under former § 1-9, regardless of the common-law practice. Staton v. Webb, 137 N.C. 35, 49 S.E. 55 (1904).

ARTICLE 2.

Commencement of Action; Service of Process, Pleadings, Motions, and Orders.

Rule 3. Commencement of action.

(a) A civil action is commenced by filing a complaint with the court. The clerk shall enter the date of filing on the original complaint, and such entry shall be prima facie evidence of the date of filing.

A civil action may also be commenced by the issuance of a summons when

(1) A person makes application to the court stating the nature and purpose of his action and requesting permission to file his complaint within 20 days and
(2) The court makes an order stating the nature and purpose of the action and granting the requested permission.

The summons and the court's order shall be served in accordance with the provisions of Rule 4. When the complaint is filed it shall be served in accordance with the provisions of Rule 4 or by registered mail if the plaintiff so elects. If the complaint is not filed within the period specified in the clerk's order, the action shall abate.

(b) The clerk shall maintain as prescribed by the Administrative Office of the Courts a separate index of all medical malpractice actions, as defined in G.S. 90-21.11. Upon the commencement of a medical malpractice action, the clerk shall provide a current copy of the index to the senior regular resident judge of the district in which the action is pending. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1987, c. 859, s. 2.)

COMMENT

Any system of procedure must provide an easily identifiable moment in time when it is possible definitely to say that an action has been "commenced." Under prior practice, former §§ 1-14 and 1-88 combined to say that in most cases an action was commenced with the issuance of summons. The exceptions related to actions in which service of summons was made by publication or was made outside the State pursuant to former §§ 1-98 and 1-104. In those cases, actions were deemed commenced when the affidavit required by these sections was filed. Under the federal rules, an action is commenced with the filing of a complaint with the court.

As can be seen, the General Statutes Commission preferred for the usual case the federal rule. The commission did so because it wished to take away the special consideration then accorded out-of-state defendants. But more importantly the Commission wished to remove a potential trap for an unwary plaintiff in a North Carolina federal court. A recent case in the Eastern District is illustrative. A plaintiff filed a complaint in the federal court for wrongful death five days before the statute of limitations had run. Because of a failure to post the required bond, summons was not issued until over a month later. The defendant moved to dismiss, relying on the statute. The plaintiff, of course, was relying on the federal rule as he was plainly in time if that rule applied. But the federal court quite properly held that the federal rule did not apply and that North Carolina practice as to when an action was commenced would govern. Thus the action was dismissed. Rios v. Drennan, 209 F. Supp. 927 (E.D.N.C. 1962). The court was faithfully following the United States Supreme Court's decision in Erie R.R. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 114 A.L.R. 1487 (1938), and its progeny, particularly Ragan v. Merchants Transf. & Whse. Co., 337 U.S. 530, 69 S. Ct. 1233, 93 L. Ed. 1520 (1949). The basic notion of the Rios and Ragan cases is that a federal court, irrespective of the federal rules, cannot give to a claim in a diversity action a "longer life . . . than it would have had in the state court. . . ." While one may sympathize with the plaintiff in the Rios case in his reliance on the federal rule, still it is clear that his reliance was misplaced. The trap which ensnared him would exist so long as the federal and State practices varied. The Commission believed this variance should be eliminated.

The Commission was not unmindful of the fact that there may be emergencies in which there is no time to prepare a complaint. To take care of these situations, the Commission incorporated in the second paragraph the essence of the first part of former § 1-121, allowing the commencement of an action by the issuance of a summons on application for permission to delay filing of a complaint and an appropriate order by the clerk.

It will be observed that the Commission did not at this point make any provision for discovery prior to filing a complaint. That problem is dealt with in Rule 27 (b) which provides in appropriate cases for discovery without action.

The second sentence of the first paragraph provides the same method formerly provided by § 1-88.1 for making a prima facie case in respect to the date of filing of the complaint. Rule 4(a) makes that method available also in respect to the date of issuance of a summons.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Commencement By Issuance of Summons.
III. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

Sections 45-21.34 and 45-21.35 must be considered in pari materia with § 1A-1, Rules 2, 3, and 65. Swindell v. Overton, 62 N.C. App. 160, 302 S.E.2d 841 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 310 N.C. 707, 314 S.E.2d 512 (1984).

Due process requires that a party be properly notified of the proceeding against him. Everhart v. Sowers, 63 N.C. App. 747, 306 S.E.2d 472 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Hazelwood v. Bailey, 339 N.C. 578, 453 S.E.2d 522 (1995).

This rule requires only filing of the complaint, not service, within the 20-day period. Childress v. Forsyth County Hosp. Auth., 70 N.C. App. 281, 319 S.E.2d 329 (1984), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 796, 325 S.E.2d 484 (1985).

The delayed service of complaint does not constitute a link in the chain of process. Childress v. Forsyth County Hosp. Auth., 70 N.C. App. 281, 319 S.E.2d 329 (1984), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 796, 325 S.E.2d 484 (1985).

Complaint or Summons as Condition Precedent to Issuance of Injunction. — The filing of a complaint or the issuance of summons pursuant to this rule is a condition precedent to the issuance of an injunction or restraining order. Carolina Freight Carriers Corp. v. Local 61, 11 N.C. App. 159, 180 S.E.2d 461, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 701, 181 S.E.2d 601 (1971).

This rule and § 1A-1, Rule 65(b) must be construed in pari materia; temporary restraining order procedure under § 1A-1, Rule 65(b) is permissible only after an action is commenced as provided by this rule. Carolina Freight Carriers Corp. v. Local 61, 11 N.C. App. 159, 180 S.E.2d 461, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 701, 181 S.E.2d 601 (1971).

Where there was no complaint and the record failed to disclose that a summons was ever issued, an action was not properly instituted and the superior court did not have jurisdiction; therefore, the court's temporary restraining order was void, and disobedience of it was not punishable. Carolina Freight Carriers Corp. v. Local 61, 11 N.C. App. 159, 180 S.E.2d 461, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 701, 181 S.E.2d 601 (1971).

Under North Carolina statutes and procedure, an injunction is not a cause of action or a lawsuit in and of itself, but is a remedy which is ancillary to a pending suit; where no complaint or summons has been filed, no action has been instituted, and there is no pending action to which an injunction can be ancillary. Lynch v. Snepp, 350 F. Supp. 1134 (W.D.N.C. 1972), cert. denied, 415 U.S. 983, 94 S. Ct. 1576, 39 L. Ed. 2d 880 (1974), rev'd on other grounds, 472 F.2d 769 (4th Cir. 1973).

"Affidavit" Not a Complaint. — A document denominated an affidavit did not purport to be a complaint and could not be held to be one, where, among other things, (1) it was not properly captioned as required by § 1A-1, Rule 10(a); (2) it was not signed by an attorney of record as required by § 1A-1, Rule 11(a); and (3) there was no demand for relief made in the document as required by § 1A-1, Rule 8(a)(2). Carolina Freight Carriers Corp. v. Local 61, 11 N.C. App. 159, 180 S.E.2d 461, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 701, 181 S.E.2d 601 (1971).

Where plaintiff commenced an action by issuance of summons in accordance with former procedure, but had not yet filed a complaint, the subsequent enactment of the Rules of Civil Procedure, under which an action is commenced by filing a complaint, did not require that she recommence her action in accordance with this rule. Williams v. Blount, 14 N.C. App. 139, 187 S.E.2d 464 (1972).

The usual and most frequently employed methods for service of process on a natural person are personal service and substituted personal service. Sink v. Easter, 284 N.C. 555, 202 S.E.2d 138 (1974).

Filing of Action to Enforce Lien Against Bankrupt. — By filing its claim of lien in a bankruptcy proceeding within 180 days after last providing labor or materials, construction company satisfied the requirement of § 44A-13(a) that the action for enforcement of the lien be commenced within the 180-day period. RDC, Inc. v. Brookleigh Builders, Inc., 309 N.C. 182, 305 S.E.2d 722 (1983).

The actions of a state officer pursuant to this rule cannot operate to extend the statute of limitations as provided for by Congress in Section 10(b) of the National Labor Relations Act, 29 U.S.C. § 160(b), and applied by the Supreme Court. Cannon v. Kroger Co., 647 F. Supp. 82 (M.D.N.C. 1986), aff'd, 832 F.2d 303 (4th Cir. 1987), rehearing denied, 837 F.2d 660 (4th Cir. 1988).

Extension of Time. — Plaintiff commenced the action before the statute of limitations expired, by filing an application and order extending time to file a complaint. Wooten v. Warren ex rel. Gilmer, 117 N.C. App. 350, 451 S.E.2d 342 (1994).

Expiration of Time Extension. — When plaintiffs failed to file their complaint before the extension of time expired, their action abated, and the three-year statute of limitations had run. The trial court could not extend their time in which to file their complaint under N.C.R.Civ.P., Rule 6(b) thus reviving the original action and avoiding the statute of limitations. Osborne v. Walton, 110 N.C. App. 850, 431 S.E.2d 496 (1993).

Period for Filing in Federal Court Not Extended Under This Section. — Statutory period for filing an action in federal district court alleging that an employer has breached its contractual obligations toward an employee under a collective bargaining agreement in violation of § 301 of the Labor Management Relations Act, 29 U.S.C. § 185, and that the employee's union, by failing to protect its member's rights, has failed to satisfy the duty of fair representation implied by the National Labor Relations Act, 29 U.S.C. § 151 et seq., could not be extended by the alternative means of commencing an action available under this rule. Cannon v. Kroger Co., 832 F.2d 303 (4th Cir. 1987), rehearing denied, 837 F.2d 660 (4th Cir. 1988).

A voluntary dismissal of negligence action without prejudice did not toll the statute of limitations in a case in which the plaintiff, seeing the statute of limitations about to run out, received an order extending the time for filing a complaint but failed to serve defendant with civil summons and the order. The defective service of process discontinued plaintiff's original action, and the trial court properly treated the voluntary dismissal as if it had never been filed and the statute of limitations as if it had not been tolled. Plaintiff's second complaint, therefore, constituted a new action which plaintiff failed to file within the three years required by the statute of limitations. Latham v. Cherry, 111 N.C. App. 871, 433 S.E.2d 478 (1993), cert. denied, 335 N.C. 556, 441 S.E.2d 116 (1994).

Applied in Bradley v. Bradley, 12 N.C. App. 8, 182 S.E.2d 201 (1971); Gower v. Aetna Ins. Co., 13 N.C. App. 368, 185 S.E.2d 722 (1972); Atkinson v. Tarheel Homes & Realty Co., 14 N.C. ## II. COMMENCEMENT BY ISSUANCE OF SUMMONS.

The intent of this rule is to require plaintiff to alert defendant by giving preliminary notice of the nature of the claim and the purpose of the suit; the ultimate factual averments will follow in a complaint to be filed later. Morris v. Dickson, 14 N.C. App. 122, 187 S.E.2d 409 (1972).

The requirement that a summons be issued and served in accordance with § 1A-1, Rule 4, along with the court's order granting permission to file a complaint within 20 days, is intended to ensure that the defendant will have notice of the commencement of an action against him. Estrada v. Burnham, 316 N.C. 318, 341 S.E.2d 538 (1986).

This rule appears to incorporate the provisions of former § 1-121. Morris v. Dickson, 14 N.C. App. 122, 187 S.E.2d 409 (1972).

And Procedure Under This Rule and Former Statute Is Similar. — Although this rule is phrased differently from former § 1-121, the procedure for serving a summons with an order allowing a delay in filing the complaint is very similar under both the rule and the former statute. Hasty v. Carpenter, 40 N.C. App. 261, 252 S.E.2d 274, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 453, 256 S.E.2d 806 (1979).

In order for a summons to serve as proper notification, it must be issued and served in the manner prescribed by statute. Everhart v. Sowers, 63 N.C. App. 747, 306 S.E.2d 472 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Hazelwood v. Bailey, 339 N.C. 578, 453 S.E.2d 522 (1995).

Failure to Serve Complaint Does Not Result in Abatement. — This rule provides that the action shall abate if the complaint is not filed within the period specified in the clerk's order. It does not provide that the action shall abate if the complaint is not served on the defendant. Hasty v. Carpenter, 40 N.C. App. 261, 252 S.E.2d 274, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 453, 256 S.E.2d 806 (1979).

But Defendant Need Not Plead Until Complaint Is Served. — This rule has not overruled Braswell v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 233 N.C. 640, 65 S.E.2d 226 (1951), which held that when the complaint is filed within the prescribed time the action is not subject to be dismissed, but a defendant is not compelled to plead until the complaint is served on him, and no default judgment may be had until the complaint is served. Hasty v. Carpenter, 40 N.C. App. 261, 252 S.E.2d 274, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 453, 256 S.E.2d 806 (1979).

The order under this rule extending time for filing the complaint need not be served with each subsequent summons to constitute effective process. Section 1A-1, Rule 4 does ordinarily require the service of the summons and the complaint together. By extension, then, service "in accordance with the provisions of § 1A-1, Rule 4" would require service of the summons and order together. However, to continue to slavishly apply this rule long after filing of the complaint would entirely ignore the purpose of the rules and the functions of the various forms of process. Childress v. Forsyth County Hosp. Auth., 70 N.C. App. 281, 319 S.E.2d 329 (1984), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 796, 325 S.E.2d 484 (1985).

Validity of Order Extending Time for Filing Complaint. — An order extending the time within which to file a complaint was not rendered invalid by the fact that the application for the extension did not request permission to file the complaint "within 20 days" and that the order did not state the nature and purpose of the action. Morris v. Dickson, 14 N.C. App. 122, 187 S.E.2d 409 (1972).

An alias or pluries summons is not ineffective where it does not refer back to the process next preceding it, the delayed service of complaint, but refers instead to the original summons. The General Assembly, by adopting a less stringent standard of service for complaints filed under the late-filing provisions of this rule, clearly did not intend the delayed service of the complaint to be a link in the chain of process. This is especially true in light of the fact that the present option of service by mail for the late complaint constitutes a departure from the former practice requiring formal service. Childress v. Forsyth County Hosp. Auth., 70 N.C. App. 281, 319 S.E.2d 329 (1984), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 796, 325 S.E.2d 484 (1985).

Designation of incorrect county in summons rendered the summons voidable rather than void. The incorrect county designation amounted to an irregularity or error in form which could be corrected by amendment, and the trial court erred in granting defendant's motion to dismiss plaintiff's claim due to the incorrect designation of the county on the civil summons form. Hazelwood v. Bailey, 339 N.C. 578, 453 S.E.2d 522 (1995).

III. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-14, 1-88 and 1-89.

As to meaning of word "issue" in relation to summons as affecting commencement of actions, see Williams v. Bray, 273 N.C. 198, 159 S.E.2d 556 (1968), decided under former § 1-88.

The issuance of a summons is not a judicial act which must be performed by the clerk in person, but is rather a ministerial act which may be done in his name by a deputy. Beck v. Voncannon, 237 N.C. 707, 75 S.E.2d 895 (1953), decided under former § 1-89.

When Summons Sufficient to Confer Jurisdiction. — To confer jurisdiction, the process relied on must in fact issue from the court and show upon its face that it emanated therefrom and was intended to bring the defendant into court to answer the complaint of the plaintiff. And when this is clearly shown by evidence appearing on the face of the summons, ordinarily the writ will be deemed sufficient to meet the requirements of due process and bring the party served into court, and formal defects appearing on the face of the record will be treated as nonjurisdictional irregularities, subject to amendment. If, however, there is nothing upon the face of the paper which stamps upon it unmistakably an official character, it is not a defective summons, but no summons at all. Beck v. Voncannon, 237 N.C. 707, 75 S.E.2d 895 (1953), decided under former § 1-89.

If there has been no service of summons and no waiver by appearance, the court has no jurisdiction, and any judgment rendered would be void. B-W Acceptance Corp. v. Spencer, 268 N.C. 1, 149 S.E.2d 570 (1966), decided under former § 1-14.

But Personal Service, Acceptance of Service or Voluntary Appearance Gives Jurisdiction. — When the defendant has been duly served with summons personally within the State, or has accepted service, or has voluntarily appeared in court, jurisdiction over the person exists, and the court may proceed to render a personal judgment against the defendant. B-W Acceptance Corp. v. Spencer, 268 N.C. 1, 149 S.E.2d 570 (1966), decided under former § 1-14.

Conflict of Laws. — In an action in a United States district court in North Carolina for wrongful death under the Louisiana wrongful death statute, the procedural law of North Carolina and not the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure determined when the action was commenced. Rios v. Drennan, 209 F. Supp. 927 (E.D.N.C. 1962), decided under former § 1-14.

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

In order for a court to revoke an irrevocable preneed contract a civil action must be initiated by the filing of a complaint with the necessary parties being the purchaser, the preneed funeral home license and, if other than the purchaser, the preneed funeral contract beneficiary. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. William R. Hoke, Attorney for the North Carolina State Board of Mortuary Science, — N.C.A.G. — (November 3, 1995).

Rule 4. Process.

(a) Summons — Issuance; who may serve. — Upon the filing of the complaint, summons shall be issued forthwith, and in any event within five days. The complaint and summons shall be delivered to some proper person for service. In this State, such proper person shall be the sheriff of the county where service is to be made or some other person duly authorized by law to serve summons. Outside this State, such proper person shall be anyone who is not a party and is not less than 21 years of age or anyone duly authorized to serve summons by the law of the place where service is to be made. Upon request of the plaintiff separate or additional summons shall be issued against any defendants. A summons is issued when, after being filled out and dated, it is signed by the officer having authority to do so. The date the summons bears shall be prima facie evidence of the date of issue.

(b) Summons — Contents. — The summons shall run in the name of the State and be dated and signed by the clerk, assistant clerk, or deputy clerk of the court in the county in which the action is commenced. It shall contain the title of the cause and the name of the court and county wherein the action has been commenced. It shall be directed to the defendant or defendants and shall notify each defendant to appear and answer within 30 days after its service upon him and further that if he fails so to appear, the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in the complaint. It shall set forth the name and address of plaintiff's attorney, or if there be none, the name and address of plaintiff. If a request for admission is served with the summons, the summons shall so state.

(c) Summons — Return. — Personal service or substituted personal service of summons as prescribed by Rule 4(j)(1) a and b must be made within 30 days after the date of the issuance of summons, except that in tax and assessment foreclosures under G.S. 47-108.25 or G.S. 105-374 the time allowed for service is 60 days. When a summons has been served upon every party named in the summons, it shall be returned immediately to the clerk who issued it, with notation thereon of its service.

Failure to make service within the time allowed or failure to return a summons to the clerk after it has been served on every party named in the summons shall not invalidate the summons. If the summons is not served within the time allowed upon every party named in the summons, it shall be returned immediately upon the expiration of such time by the officer to the clerk of the court who issued it with notation thereon of its nonservice and the reasons therefor as to every such party not served, but failure to comply with this requirement shall not invalidate the summons.

(d) Summons — Extension; endorsement, alias and pluries. — When any defendant in a civil action is not served within the time allowed for service, the action may be continued in existence as to such defendant by either of the following methods of extension:

(1) The plaintiff may secure an endorsement upon the original summons for an extension of time within which to complete service of process. Return of the summons so endorsed shall be in the same manner as the original process. Such endorsement may be secured within 90 days after the issuance of summons or the date of the last prior endorsement, or

(2) The plaintiff may sue out an alias or pluries summons returnable in the same manner as the original process. Such alias or pluries summons may be sued out at any time within 90 days after the date of issue of the last preceding summons in the chain of summonses or within 90 days of the last prior endorsement.

Provided, in tax and assessment foreclosures under G.S. 47-108.25 and G.S. 105-374, the first endorsement may be made at any time within two years after the issuance of the original summons, and subsequent endorsements may thereafter be made as in other actions; or an alias or pluries summons may be sued out at any time within two years after the issuance of the original summons, and after the issuance of such alias or pluries summons, the chain of summonses may be kept up as in any other action.

Provided, for service upon a defendant in a place not within the United States, the first endorsement may be made at any time within two years after the issuance of the original summons, and subsequent endorsements may thereafter be made at least once every two years; or an alias or pluries summons may be sued out at any time within two years after the issuance of the original summons, and after the issuance of such alias or pluries summons, the chain of summonses may be kept up as in any other action if sued out within two years of the last preceding summons in the chain of summonses or within two years of the last prior endorsement.

Provided, further, the methods of extension may be used interchangeably in any case and regardless of the form of the preceding extension.

(e) Summons — Discontinuance. — When there is neither endorsement by the clerk nor issuance of alias or pluries summons within the time specified in Rule 4(d), the action is discontinued as to any defendant not theretofore served with summons within the time allowed. Thereafter, alias or pluries summons may issue, or an extension be endorsed by the clerk, but, as to such defendant, the action shall be deemed to have commenced on the date of such issuance or endorsement.

(f) Summons — Date of multiple summonses. — If the plaintiff shall cause separate or additional summonses to be issued as provided in Rule 4(a), the date of issuance of such separate or additional summonses shall be considered the same as that of the original summons for purposes of endorsement or alias summons under Rule 4(d).

(g) Summons — Docketing by clerk. — The clerk shall keep a record in which he shall note the day and hour of issuance of every summons, whether original, alias, pluries, or endorsement thereon. When the summons is returned, the clerk shall note on the record the date of the return and the fact as to service or non-service.

(h) Summons — When proper officer not available. — If at any time there is not in a county a proper officer, capable of executing process, to whom summons or other process can be delivered for service, or if a proper officer refuses or neglects to execute such process, or if such officer is a party to or otherwise interested in the action or proceeding, the clerk of the issuing court, upon the facts being verified before him by written affidavit of the plaintiff or his agent or attorney, shall appoint some suitable person who, after he accepts such process for service, shall execute such process in the same manner, with like effect, and subject to the same liabilities, as if such person were a proper officer regularly serving process in that county.

(h1) Summons — When process returned unexecuted. — If a proper officer returns a summons or other process unexecuted, the plaintiff or his agent or attorney may cause service to be made by anyone who is not less than 21 years of age, who is not a party to the action, and who is not related by blood or marriage to a party to the action or to a person upon whom service is to be made. This subsection shall not apply to executions pursuant to Article 28 of Chapter 1 or summary ejectment pursuant to Article 3 of Chapter 42 of the General Statutes.

(i) Summons — Amendment. — At any time, before or after judgment, in its discretion and upon such terms as it deems just, the court may allow any process or proof of service thereof to be amended, unless it clearly appears that material prejudice would result to substantial rights of the party against whom the process issued.

(j) Process — Manner of service to exercise personal jurisdiction. — In any action commenced in a court of this State having jurisdiction of the subject matter and grounds for personal jurisdiction as provided in G.S. 1-75.4, the manner of service of process within or without the State shall be as follows:

(1) Natural Person. — Except as provided in subsection (2) below, upon a natural person:
   a. By delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to him or by leaving copies thereof at the defendant's dwelling house or usual place of abode with some person of suitable age and discretion then residing therein; or
   b. By delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to an agent authorized by appointment or by law to be served or to accept service of process or by serving process upon such agent or the party in a manner specified by any statute.
   c. By mailing a copy of the summons and of the complaint, registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, addressed to the party to be served, and delivering to the addressee.

(2) Natural Person under Disability. — Upon a natural person under disability by serving process in any manner prescribed in this section

(j) for service upon a natural person and, in addition, where required by paragraph a or b below, upon a person therein designated.

a. Where the person under disability is a minor, process shall be served separately in any manner prescribed for service upon a natural person upon a parent or guardian having custody of the child, or if there be none, upon any other person having the care and control of the child. If there is no parent, guardian, or other person having care and control of the child when service is made upon the child, then service of process must also be made upon a guardian ad litem who has been appointed pursuant to Rule 17.

b. If the plaintiff actually knows that a person under disability is under guardianship of any kind, process shall be served separately upon his guardian in any manner applicable and appropriate under this section (j). If the plaintiff does not actually know that a guardian has been appointed when service is made upon a person known to him to be incompetent to have charge of his affairs, then service of process must be made upon a guardian ad litem who has been appointed pursuant to Rule 17.

(3) The State. — Upon the State by personally delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to the Attorney General or to a deputy or assistant attorney general or by mailing a copy of the summons and of the complaint, registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, addressed to the Attorney General or to a deputy or assistant attorney general.

(4) An Agency of the State. —

a. Upon an agency of the State by personally delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to the process agent appointed by the agency in the manner hereinafter provided or by mailing a copy of the summons and of the complaint, registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, addressed to said process agent.

b. Every agency of the State shall appoint a process agent by filing with the Attorney General the name and address of an agent upon whom process may be served.

c. If any agency of the State fails to comply with paragraph b above, then service upon such agency may be made by personally delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to the Attorney General or to a deputy or assistant attorney general or by mailing a copy of the summons and of the complaint, registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, addressed to the Attorney General, or to a deputy or assistant attorney general.

d. For purposes of this rule, the term "agency of the State" includes every agency, institution, board, commission, bureau, department, division, council, member of Council of State, or officer of the State government of the State of North Carolina, but does not include counties, cities, towns, villages, other municipal corporations or political subdivisions of the State, county or city boards of education, other local public districts, units, or bodies of any kind, or private corporations created by act of the General Assembly.

(5) Counties, Cities, Towns, Villages and Other Local Public Bodies. —

a. Upon a city, town, or village by personally delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to its mayor, city manager or clerk or by mailing a copy of the summons and of the complaint, registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, addressed to its mayor, city manager or clerk.

b. Upon a county by personally delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to its county manager or to the chairman, clerk or any member of the board of commissioners for such county or by mailing a copy of the summons and of the complaint, registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, addressed to its county manager or to the chairman, clerk, or any member of this board of commissioners for such county.

c. Upon any other political subdivision of the State, any county or city board of education, or other local public district, unit, or body of any kind (i) by personally delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to an officer or director thereof, or (ii) by personally delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to an agent or attorney-in-fact authorized by appointment or by statute to be served or to accept service in its behalf, or (iii) by mailing a copy of the summons and of the complaint, registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, addressed to the officer, director, agent, or attorney-in-fact as specified in (i) and (ii).

d. In any case where none of the officials, officers or directors specified in paragraphs a, b and c can, after due diligence, be found in the State, and that fact appears by affidavit to the satisfaction of the court, or a judge thereof, such court or judge may grant an order that service upon the party sought to be served may be made by personally delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to the Attorney General or any deputy or assistant attorney general of the State of North Carolina, or by mailing a copy of the summons and of the complaint, registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, addressed to the Attorney General or any deputy or assistant attorney general of the State of North Carolina.

(6) Domestic or Foreign Corporation. — Upon a domestic or foreign corporation:

a. By delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation or by leaving copies thereof in the office of such officer, director, or managing agent with the person who is apparently in charge of the office; or

b. By delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to an agent authorized by appointment or by law to be served or to accept service or [of] process or by serving process upon such agent or the party in a manner specified by any statute.

c. By mailing a copy of the summons and of the complaint, registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, addressed to the officer, director or agent to be served as specified in paragraphs a and b.

(7) Partnerships. — Upon a general or limited partnership:

a. By delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to any general partner, or to any attorney-in-fact or agent authorized by appointment or by law to be served or to accept service of process in its behalf, or by mailing a copy of the summons and of the complaint, registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, addressed to any general partner, or to any attorney-in-fact or agent authorized by appointment or by law to be served or to accept service of process in its behalf, or by leaving copies thereof in the office of such general partner, attorney-in-fact or agent with the person who is apparently in charge of the office.

b. If relief is sought against a partner specifically, a copy of the summons and of the complaint must be served on such partner as provided in this section (j).

(8) Other Unincorporated Associations and Their Officers. — Upon any unincorporated association, organization, or society other than a partnership:

a. By delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to an officer, director, managing agent or member of the governing body of the unincorporated association, organization or society, or by leaving copies thereof in the office of such officer, director, managing agent or member of the governing body with the person who is apparently in charge of the office; or

b. By delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to an agent authorized by appointment or by law to be served or to accept service of process or by serving process upon such agent or the party in a manner specified by any statute.

c. By mailing a copy of the summons and of the complaint, registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, addressed to the officer, director, agent or member of the governing body to be served as specified in paragraphs a and b.

(9) Service upon a foreign state or a political subdivision, agency, or instrumentality thereof shall be effected pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1608.

(j1) Service by publication on party that cannot otherwise be served. — A party that cannot with due diligence be served by personal delivery or registered or certified mail may be served by publication. Except in actions involving jurisdiction in rem or quasi in rem as provided in section (k), service of process by publication shall consist of publishing a notice of service of process by publication once a week for three successive weeks in a newspaper that is qualified for legal advertising in accordance with G.S. 1-597 and G.S. 1-598 and circulated in the area where the party to be served is believed by the serving party to be located, or if there is no reliable information concerning the location of the party then in a newspaper circulated in the county where the action is pending. If the party's post-office address is known or can with reasonable diligence be ascertained, there shall be mailed to the party at or immediately prior to the first publication a copy of the notice of service of process by publication. The mailing may be omitted if the post-office address cannot be ascertained with reasonable diligence. Upon completion of such service there shall be filed with the court an affidavit showing the publication and mailing in accordance with the requirements of G.S. 1-75.10(2), the circumstances warranting the use of service by publication, and information, if any, regarding the location of the party served.

The notice of service of process by publication shall (i) designate the court in which the action has been commenced and the title of the action, which title may be indicated sufficiently by the name of the first plaintiff and the first defendant; (ii) be directed to the defendant sought to be served; (iii) state either that a pleading seeking relief against the person to be served has been filed or has been required to be filed therein not later than a date specified in the notice; (iv) state the nature of the relief being sought; (v) require the defendant being so served to make defense to such pleading within 40 days after a date stated in the notice, exclusive of such date, which date so stated shall be the date of the first publication of notice, or the date when the complaint is required to be filed, whichever is later, and notify the defendant that upon his failure to do so the party seeking service of process by publication will apply to the court for the relief sought; (vi) in cases of attachment, state the information required by G.S. 1-440.14; (vii) be subscribed by the party seeking service or his attorney and give the post-office address of such party or his attorney; and (viii) be substantially in the following form:

NOTICE OF SERVICE OF PROCESS BY PUBLICATION
STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA _____ COUNTY

In the _____ Court

[Title of action or special proceeding] To [Person to be served]:

Take notice that a pleading seeking relief against you (has been filed) (is required to be filed not later than _____, ____) in the above-entitled (action) (special proceeding). The nature of the relief being sought is as follows: (State nature.)

You are required to make defense to such pleading not later than (_____, ____) and upon your failure to do so the party seeking service against you will apply to the court for the relief sought.

This, the _____ day of _____, ____

_____ (Attorney) (Party)
_____ (Address)

(j2) Proof of service. — Proof of service of process shall be as follows:

(1) Personal Service. — Before judgment by default may be had on personal service, proof of service must be provided in accordance with the requirements of G.S. 1-75.10(1).

(2) Registered or Certified Mail. — Before judgment by default may be had on service by registered or certified mail, the serving party shall file an affidavit with the court showing proof of such service in accordance with the requirements of G.S. 1-75.10(4). This affidavit together with the return receipt signed by the person who received the mail if not the addressee raises a presumption that the person who received the mail and signed the receipt was an agent of the addressee authorized by appointment or by law to be served or to accept service of process or was a person of suitable age and discretion residing in the addressee's dwelling house or usual place of abode. In the event the presumption described in the preceding sentence is rebutted by proof that the person who received the receipt at the addressee's dwelling house or usual place of abode was not a person of suitable age and discretion residing therein, the statute of limitation may not be pleaded as a defense if the action was initially commenced within the period of limitation and service of process is completed within 60 days from the date the service is declared invalid. Service shall be complete on the day the summons and complaint are delivered to the address.

(3) Publication. — Before judgment by default may be had on service by publication, the serving party shall file an affidavit with the court showing the circumstances warranting the use of service by publication, information, if any, regarding the location of the party served which was used in determining the area in which service by publication was printed and proof of service in accordance with G.S. 1-75.10(2).

(j3) Service in a foreign country. — Unless otherwise provided by federal law, service upon a defendant, other than an infant or an incompetent person, may be effected in a place not within the United States:

(1) By any internationally agreed means reasonably calculated to give notice, such as those means authorized by the Hague Convention on the Service Abroad of Judicial and Extrajudicial Documents; or

(2) If there is no internationally agreed means of service or the applicable international agreement allows other means of service, provided that service is reasonably calculated to give notice:

a. In the manner prescribed by the law of the foreign country for service in that country in an action in any of its courts of general jurisdiction;

b. As directed by the foreign authority in response to a letter rogatory or letter of request; or

c. Unless prohibited by the law of the foreign country, by

1. Delivery to the individual personally of a copy of the summons and the complaint and, upon a corporation, partnership, association or other such entity, by delivery to an officer or a managing or general agent;

2. Any form of mail requiring a signed receipt, to be addressed and dispatched by the clerk of the court to the party to be served; or

(3) By other means not prohibited by international agreement as may be directed by the court.

Service under subdivision (2)c.1. or (3) of this subsection may be made by any person authorized by subsection (a) of this Rule or who is designated by order of the court or by the foreign court.

On request, the clerk shall deliver the summons to the plaintiff for transmission to the person or the foreign court or officer who will make the service. Proof of service may be made as prescribed in G.S. 1-75.10, by the order of the court, or by the law of the foreign country.

Proof of service by mail shall include an affidavit or certificate of addressing and mailing by the clerk of court.

(j4) Process or judgment by default not to be attacked on certain grounds. — No party may attack service of process or a judgment of default on the basis that service should or could have been effected by personal service rather than service by registered or certified mail. No party that receives timely actual notice may attack a judgment by default on the basis that the statutory requirement of due diligence as a condition precedent to service by publication was not met.

(j5) Personal jurisdiction by acceptance of service. — Any party personally, or through the persons provided in Rule 4(j), may accept service of process by notation of acceptance of service together with the signature of the party accepting service and the date thereof on an original or copy of a summons, and such acceptance shall have the same force and effect as would exist had the process been served by delivery of copy and summons and complaint to the person signing said acceptance.

(k) Process — Manner of service to exercise jurisdiction in rem or quasi in rem. — In any action commenced in a court of this State having jurisdiction of the subject matter and grounds for the exercise of jurisdiction in rem or quasi in rem as provided in G.S. 1-75.8, the manner of service of process shall be as follows:

(1) Defendant Known. — If the defendant is known, he may be served in the appropriate manner prescribed for service of process in section (j), or, if otherwise appropriate section (j1); except that the requirement for service by publication in (j1) shall be satisfied if made in the county where the action is pending and proof of service is made in accordance with section (j2).

(2) Defendant Unknown. — If the defendant is unknown, he may be designated by description and process may be served by publication in the manner provided in section (j1), except that the requirement for service by publication in (j1) shall be satisfied if made in the county where the action is pending and proof of service is made in accordance with section (j2). ## COMMENT

Comment to Original Rule. — Preliminarily, it should be remarked that this rule is complementary to the jurisdiction statute (§ 1-75.1 et seq.) which the General Statutes Commission proposed for consideration contemporaneously with these rules. Both the statute and this rule are designed to take full advantage of the fairly recent developments in the law of jurisdiction. Generally, the statute prescribes the occasions on which North Carolina courts may exercise jurisdiction or, in other words, the grounds of jurisdiction. This rule, on the other hand, deals with the manner in which jurisdiction is exercised or asserted.

Section (a). — This section contemplates a continuance of the present practice of ordinarily having summons issue simultaneously with the filing of the complaint. The five-day period was inserted to mark the outer limits of tolerance in respect to delay in issuing the summons.

The first two sentences avoid any suggestion that the clerk shall personally deliver the summons to a process officer. North Carolina has operated successfully heretofore under language similar to that in the section and presumably will continue to be able to do so. The words "be issued" are inserted in lieu of the word "issue" for consistency.

Since under section (b) the summons is to be directed to the defendant rather than to a process officer, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to select the appropriate process officer. It will further be observed that no change is made as to who is a process officer in North Carolina.

For service outside the State, it seemed that the Commission might safely rely on the law of the place where service is attempted. Thus, in New York, where private service of process is permissible, a North Carolina plaintiff could employ a private person to serve process.

It should be noticed that no formalities of any kind are necessary to authorize service anywhere, in or out of the State.

Section (b). — The Commission has mentioned already the principal change in the content of the summons; that is, that it shall be directed to the defendant rather than to a process officer. This makes it possible for one version of the summons to suffice wherever it is served, whether in this State or beyond its bounds. Service, however, must still be made by a proper person as defined by section (a).

Other changes are minor. The Commission abandoned the requirement contained in former § 1-89 that summons operative outside the county of issuance bear the seal of the issuing court. The Commission added specific requirements that summons bear the title of the action, the name of the issuing court, and the name and address of the plaintiff's attorney or, if there is no attorney, the name and address of the plaintiff.

Section (c). — The provisions for the return of summons are the same as those now prescribed except that the Commission extended the time in which a summons may be served to thirty (30) days whereas former § 1-89 prescribed a period of only twenty (20) days. The Commission entertained some question of whether or not the period for service might be still further enlarged but in any event it agreed that it would serve the interest of convenience for the summons to retain its full effectiveness for at least thirty (30) days. Thereby, the unnecessary exertion of securing an alias or pluries summons can frequently be avoided.

Section (d). — This section preserves unchanged the essence of former § 1-95. Alternative methods, either endorsement or the issuance of alias or pluries summons, are provided for continuing the life of an action after the time for service of summons has expired. The same time limits for securing the endorsement or alias or pluries summons are prescribed and the special treatment accorded tax suits is retained.

Section (e). — This section is similar to former § 1-96. Accordingly, an action will be discontinued under the new rules just as formerly. It will be observed that while under Rule 3 the commencement of an action is ordinarily tied to the filing of a complaint, the discontinuance of an action is tied to the failure in apt time to secure an endorsement or an alias or pluries summons. Further, it will be observed that in the special case of an action in which endorsement or the issuance of an alias or pluries summons is secured after the ninety (90) day period, in that case the action will be deemed commenced with the endorsement or the issuance of summons rather than with the filing of a complaint.

Section (f). — Self-explanatory.

Section (g). — Self-explanatory.

Section (h). — This section deals with the problem of the proper person to make service when for stated reasons action by the sheriff in a particular county may not be satisfactory. Formerly, § 1-91 provided for service by the sheriff of an adjoining county when there was not in the county where service was expected to be made a "proper officer" for service or in the case where a sheriff "neglects or refuses" to make service. Section 152-8 empowers the coroner when there is no person "qualified to act as sheriff" to execute all process. While the Commission proposed to leave § 152-8 in effect (§ 1-91 is repealed) it believed that the problem could be taken care of generally by the simple provisions of this section. The procedure outlined by the section does not differ in kind from that prescribed by § 152-8 when the coroner is interested in any action.

Section (i). — This section, in terms, does not provide for any greater liberality of amendment than did former § 1-163, which authorized the court to "amend any . . . process . . . by correcting a mistake in the name of a party, or a mistake in any other respect. . . ." But it does direct attention to what in the Commission's judgment should be the controlling factor: Is there material prejudice to substantial rights?

Section (j). — Some substantial changes were proposed in respect to the manner of service to exercise personal jurisdiction and they cannot be fully understood without considering the jurisdiction statute (§ 1-75.1 et seq.) and the ideas advanced in the commentary thereto. But it perhaps bears emphasis that in the vast majority of cases service is accomplished just as it then was; that is, by a sheriff or his deputy personally delivering a copy of the summons to the defendant and to an officer, director, managing agent or process agent when a partnership or corporation is the defendant.

Subsection (1)a. — This deals with natural persons except those under a disability. As indicated above, the normal procedure, when service is made within this State, will be delivery of summons and complaint to the defendant personally by the sheriff or other proper person as defined in section (a). When service is made outside the State, then service will be accomplished on delivery to the defendant personally of a copy of the summons and complaint by one authorized to serve process under the law of the place of service. Thus, if grounds exist under the jurisdiction statute (§ 1-75.1 et seq.) for the exercise or jurisdiction by a court of this State and if the defendant is in New York, since New York permits service by anyone over 18 years of age, the summons and complaint can be effectively served in New York by such a person. In the familiar case of the nonresident motorist, for example, the plaintiff's lawyer would simply place the summons and complaint in the hands of a New York process server. No special prayer for permission to make service in this manner is required nor is there any requirement that service be made on any functionary in North Carolina.

Subsection (1)b. — Here there is limited authorization for substituted service. While no permission of the court is required for resort to this type of service, it cannot be overemphasized that this type of service is available only when service cannot "with reasonable diligence" be made under paragraph a. A party would thus, if at all possible, prefer to effect service under paragraph a. If he does not, he faces the hazard in those cases where the defendant makes no appearance that a court will later find that service could "with reasonable diligence" have been made under paragraph a and the voiding of any judgment obtained. But although a party is faced with some uncertainty when he resorts to paragraph b, he surely would prefer this uncertainty to not being able to sue at all. Nor, in the absence of the defendant, is it possible altogether to relieve the uncertainty.

Subsection (1)c. — This is a continuation of the basic theme of giving the best notice to a defendant consistent with "reasonable diligence." If service may not be had under either paragraph a or paragraph b, then resort may be had to publication and mailing. Again, it is not necessary to have the court's permission for such service, but there must be filed with the court an affidavit that the defendant cannot be served under paragraphs a or b.

It will be observed that the defendant has until forty days after publication of the notice to answer. This will be the controlling time regulation, irrespective of Rule 12(a). The action will have commenced, of course, with the filing of the complaint.

Subsection (1)d. — Self-explanatory.

Subsection (2). — This subsection attempts to insure that a person under disability and anyone who may have custody of such person shall both be served except in the case of a minor 14 years of age and older. Paragraph b is an attempt to alleviate the situation where there is an unknown guardian. This section requires of the plaintiff what current decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States do. See Covey v. Town of Somers, 351 U.S. 141, 76 S. Ct. 724, 100 L. Ed. 1021 (1956).

Subsection (3). — Self-explanatory.

Subsection (4). — The Commission here proposed that State agencies be required to appoint process agents. The utility of this requirement is obvious. The definition of the term "agency of the State" gave the Commission some difficulty but the Commission believes the definition arrived at is a workable one.

Subsection (5). — Only paragraph d would seem to require comment. Isolated cases had been reported to the Commission where such a provision would be useful.

Subsection (6). — It should be emphasized that this subsection, along with the rest of this rule, is to be read in conjunction with the jurisdiction statute (§ 1-75.1 et seq.). Here we are dealing only with the manner of asserting jurisdiction. Service of a corporate officer within this State or elsewhere will not suffice to give jurisdiction unless there is a ground for jurisdiction as specified by the jurisdiction statute.

Paragraphs c and d in essence make available all present methods of obtaining service.

Subsection (7). — Self-explanatory.

Subsection (8). — It perhaps should be said here that this subsection does not deal in any way with the problem of capacity to be sued.

Section (k). — Here it will be seen that for in rem jurisdiction, as well as for in personam jurisdiction, the Commission proposed the best notice possible to the defendant consistent with "reasonable diligence." Thus, personal service is required where reasonably possible. If it is not reasonably possible, then substituted service may be resorted to. If substituted service is not possible, then service by publication may be had.

Comment to 1969 Amendment. — These amendments are designed to simplify service of process especially substituted service upon parties outside this State.

Section (a). — Personal service outside the State is generally made by someone authorized by the law of the place where service is made. This section now also permits service outside the State to be made by anyone not a party and not less than 21 years of age. Sometimes a party (or his attorney) will find it more convenient to make service himself or through an agent rather than to employ a foreign process server. The option is given, since there is no constitutional impediment. It should be exercised with discretion, however, since the word of a disinterested official would probably be given more credence in a dispute as to whether service was validly made.

Section (j). — This section, which governs the specific manner in which service upon a party is to be made, has been substantially amended with respect to substituted service upon parties outside this State. The section is divided into eight subsections, each of which details the manner of service upon a particular type of party. A new ninth subsection governs all service outside this State.

Subsection (1)a. — A process server is no longer required to make a diligent effort to serve a natural person personally. If the party is not at home, copies of the summons and the complaint may be left at his abode with some person of suitable age and discretion then residing therein.

Subsection (1)b. — This subsection now provides that a party or his agent may alternatively be served in any manner specified by any statute.

Subsection (2). — The exception to this subsection for a minor 14 years of age or older has been excised. Thus, all minors are persons under disability for purposes of the subsection.

Subsection (6)b. — This subsection now provides that a corporation or its agent may alternatively be served in a manner specified by any statute.

Subsection (8)b. — See comment to subsection (6)b.

Subsection (9). — This subsection governs all service of process upon parties not inhabitant of or found within this State or which cannot otherwise be diligently served within this State. Such parties may, at the option of the party seeking to make service, be served personally outside this State, as provided in paragraph a, or be served by registered mail as provided in paragraph b. If the party's address, whereabouts, dwelling house or usual place of abode is unknown and cannot with due diligence be ascertained, or there has been a diligent but unsuccessful attempt to serve the party personally or by registered mail, the party may alternatively be served by publication as provided in paragraph c. When service is to be made in a foreign country, the alternative provisions of paragraph d may be employed. Except as provided in paragraph d, permission of the court to make service outside this State is never required.

Subsection (9)a. — Personal service outside this State is to be made in the same way as personal service within this State. Before judgment by default may be had on such service, the party seeking the judgment must file an affidavit with the court containing proof of such service and showing the circumstances warranting its usage.

Subsection (9)b. — This paragraph replaces, in effect, the service provisions of the now repealed nonresident motor vehicles act. It applies, however, to all parties and not just to nonresident motor vehicle tort-feasors. Copies of the summons and the complaint are to be sent registered mail, return receipt requested, directly to the party to be served, and not to any state official or other intermediary. Service by registered mail is not effected unless the letter is actually delivered to the party. Ordinarily, proof of delivery will be the signed returned receipt itself. Any other evidence of actual delivery is also acceptable. If the mailing is returned stamped "delivery refused," "letter unclaimed," "addressee unknown at the address," or "addressee moved and left no forwarding address," service has not been effected. Before judgment by default may be had on such service, the party seeking the judgment must file with the court an affidavit containing proof of such service and showing the circumstances warranting its usage.

Subsection (9)c. — The mechanics of service by publication have not been substantially changed. The notice is to be published in a newspaper that is qualified for legal advertising in accordance with N.C.G.S. §§ 1-579 [now repealed], 1-598 and is published in the county where the action is pending. If no newspaper in the county qualifies, a qualified newspaper in an adjoining county or the same judicial district may be chosen. If the party's address is known or can with reasonable diligence be ascertained, a copy of the published notice is to be mailed to him. Upon completion of the publication, an affidavit containing proof of such service and showing the circumstances warranting its usage is to be filed with the court.

Subsection (9)d. — This paragraph establishes alternative procedures when service is to be made in a foreign country. It is based upon rule 4(i) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which is itself drawn from Section 2.01 of the Uniform Interstate and International Procedure Act. Under this paragraph one may enlist the assistance of a foreign government and its laws in making service on a defendant found within its territory, in order to insure the validity of the service and to avoid any objection by the foreign government that efforts to make service there constitute an encroachment on its sovereignty.

Subsection (9)e. — This paragraph prohibits a direct or collateral attack upon a default judgment obtained after service under this subsection (9) on the grounds that the subsection, or any other provision of section (j), required a different method of substituted or personal service. Since the various methods of substituted service provided for are all reasonably calculated to give notice of the pendency of the action, a party is not constitutionally entitled to be served under one rather than another, even though the statute itself so requires. Thus, to challenge an incorrect choice of a method of service under the statute, the party must appear in the action before judgment by default is rendered. Otherwise, the error is waived. Since this paragraph does not seek to bar constitutional objections to the service of process, it should be accorded full faith and credit by other states.

I. IN GENERAL.

Due process requires that a party be properly notified of the proceeding against him. Everhart v. Sowers, 63 N.C. App. 747, 306 S.E.2d 472 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Hazelwood v. Bailey, 339 N.C. 578, 453 S.E.2d 522 (1995).

The purpose of service of a summons is to give notice to the party against whom the proceeding or action is commenced, and any notification which reasonably accomplishes that purpose answers the claims of law and justice. Farr v. City of Rocky Mount, 10 N.C. App. 128, 177 S.E.2d 763 (1970), cert. denied, 277 N.C. 725, 178 S.E.2d 831 (1971).

The purpose of a summons is to give notice to a person to appear at a certain place and time to answer a complaint against him. Wearring v. Belk Bros., 38 N.C. App. 375, 248 S.E.2d 90 (1978).

A suit at law is not a children's game, but a serious effort on the part of adult human beings to administer justice; and the purpose of process is to bring parties into court. If it names them in such terms that every intelligent person understands who is meant, it has fulfilled its purpose. Harris v. Maready, 64 N.C. App. 1, 306 S.E.2d 799 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

The § 1A-1, Rule 3 requirement that a summons be issued and served in accordance with this rule, along with the court's order granting permission to file a complaint within 20 days, is intended to ensure that the defendant will have notice of the commencement of an action against him. Estrada v. Burnham, 316 N.C. 318, 341 S.E.2d 538 (1986).

The primary purpose of Rule 4 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which is similar to this rule, is to provide the mechanisms for bringing notice of the commencement of an action to a defendant's attention and to provide a ritual that marks the court's assertion of jurisdiction over the lawsuit. Wiles v. Welparnel Constr. Co., 295 N.C. 81, 243 S.E.2d 756 (1978).

The purpose behind this rule and § 1-52(5) is to give notice to the party against whom an action is commenced within a reasonable time after the accrual of the cause of action. Adams v. Brooks, 73 N.C. App. 624, 327 S.E.2d 19 (1985), overruled on other grounds, Smith v. Starnes, 317 N.C. 613, 346 S.E.2d 424 (1986).

Special Proceedings. — A summons is required for all contested special proceedings. Charns v. Brown, 129 N.C. App. 635, 502 S.E.2d 7 (1998), cert. denied, 349 N.C. 228, 515 S.E.2d 701 (1998), cert. denied, 349 N.C. 353, — S.E.2d — (1998).

Compliance with Statutory Requirements Essential to Valid Service. — Where a statute provides for service of summons or notice in the progress of a cause by certain persons or by designated methods, the specified requirements must be complied with or there is no valid service. Guthrie v. Ray, 293 N.C. 67, 235 S.E.2d 146 (1977); Cromer v. Cromer, 49 N.C. App. 403, 271 S.E.2d 541 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 303 N.C. 307, 278 S.E.2d 518 (1981).

Process must be issued and served in the manner prescribed by statute, and failure to do so makes the service invalid even though a defendant had actual notice of the lawsuit. Roshelli v. Sperry, 57 N.C. App. 305, 291 S.E.2d 355 (1982).

If a statute specifies that certain requirements must be complied with in the process of serving summons, failure to follow these requirements results in a failure of service. Park v. Sleepy Creek Turkeys, Inc., 60 N.C. App. 545, 299 S.E.2d 670 (1983).

In order for a summons to serve as proper notification, it must be issued and served in the manner prescribed by statute. Everhart v. Sowers, 63 N.C. App. 747, 306 S.E.2d 472 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Hazelwood v. Bailey, 339 N.C. 578, 453 S.E.2d 522 (1995).

Failure to serve process in the manner prescribed by statute makes the service invalid, even though a defendant has actual notice of the lawsuit. Hunter v. Hunter, 69 N.C. App. 659, 317 S.E.2d 910 (1984). But see Harris v. Maready, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

When service of process is made pursuant to the forum state's law, both the service of process requirements and the personal jurisdiction requirements of state law must be met. Waller v. Butkovich, 584 F. Supp. 909 (M.D.N.C. 1984).

Although actual notice given in a manner other than that prescribed by statute cannot supply constitutional validity, if it names the parties in such terms that every intelligent person understands who is meant, it has fulfilled its purpose; and courts should not put themselves in the position of failing to recognize what is apparent to everyone else. Harris v. Maready, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

Summons delivered to each of two defendants directing the other defendant, rather than the defendant to whom delivered, to appear and answer was not service in accord with the statutory rules and as such was fatally defective, and no jurisdiction over defendants was obtained. Although both defendants may have had actual notice of the lawsuit, such notice cannot supply constitutional validity to service unless the service is in the manner prescribed by statute. Stone v. Hicks, 45 N.C. App. 66, 262 S.E.2d 318 (1980).

Summons Must Be Served Within 30 Days. — Under this rule, a summons must be served within 30 days of its issuance. Dozier v. Crandall, 105 N.C. App. 74, 411 S.E.2d 635, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 480, 420 S.E.2d 826 (1992).

Basis for 30 Day Delivery. — This rule does not require delivery of the summons to the sheriff within thirty days of its issuance in order that the summons may later serve as a basis for the issuance of an alias or pluries summons. Robinson v. Parker, 124 N.C. App. 164, 476 S.E.2d 406 (1996).

Multiple Attempts at Service Within 30 Days Permitted. — A successful service of process occurring within 30 days after issuance of a summons is valid even if there has been a prior unsuccessful attempt at serving that same summons. An endorsement, alias summons or pluries summons are not necessary. Shiloh Methodist Church v. Keever Heating & Cooling Co., 127 N.C. App. 619, 492 S.E.2d 380 (1997).

Where summons is not served within the statutory period, it loses its vitality and does not confer jurisdiction over the person of the defendant. There is no statutory authority for service of summons after the date fixed for its return. Cole v. Cole, 37 N.C. App. 737, 247 S.E.2d 16 (1978).

A summons must be served within 30 days after the date of the issuance of the summons. However, the failure to make service within the time allowed does not invalidate the summons. The action may continue to exist as to the unserved defendant by two methods. First, within 90 days after the issuance of the summons or the date of the last prior endorsement, the plaintiff may secure an endorsement upon the original summons for an extension of time within which to complete service of process. Secondly, the plaintiff may sue out an alias or pluries summons at any time within 90 days after the date of issue of the last preceding summons in the chain of summonses or within 90 days of the last prior endorsement. If the 90-day period expires without the summons being served within the first 30 days or revived within the remaining 60 days, the action is discontinued. If a new summons is issued, it begins a new action. County of Wayne ex rel. Williams v. Whitley, 72 N.C. App. 155, 323 S.E.2d 458 (1984).

A summons not served within 30 days loses its vitality and becomes functus officio, and service obtained thereafter does not confer jurisdiction on the trial court over the defendant. Dozier v. Crandall, 105 N.C. App. 74, 411 S.E.2d 635, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 480, 420 S.E.2d 826 (1992).

Although a summons not served within 30 days becomes dormant and unservable, under Rule 4(c) it is not invalidated nor is the action discontinued. Dozier v. Crandall, 105 N.C. App. 74, 411 S.E.2d 635, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 480, 420 S.E.2d 826 (1992).

Failure to Deliver Summons to Sheriff. — There is no requirement under this rule that plaintiffs must prove good faith, excusable neglect, or even give any reason at all to justify their failure to promptly deliver the summons to the sheriff. Robinson v. Parker, 124 N.C. App. 164, 476 S.E.2d 406 (1996).

Five Day Time Limit for Issuance of Summons Under Section (a). — The purpose of the provision in section (a) of this rule, requiring that the summons be issued "in any event within five days," and the legislative intent as reflected in the comment following this rule, was to establish an outer limit of five days after filing the complaint for issuance of summons. Roshelli v. Sperry, 57 N.C. App. 305, 291 S.E.2d 355 (1982).

Where a complaint has been filed and proper summons does not issue within the five days allowed under this rule, the action is deemed never to have commenced. Everhart v. Sowers, 63 N.C. App. 747, 306 S.E.2d 472 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Hazelwood v. Bailey, 339 N.C. 578, 453 S.E.2d 522 (1995).

Although section (a) is clear and unambiguous in its requirement that upon the filing of the complaint, summons shall be issued forthwith, and in any event, within five days, the North Carolina Supreme Court has recognized that a properly issued and served second summons can revive and commence a new action on the date of its issuance. Stokes v. Wilson & Redding Law Firm, 72 N.C. App. 107, 323 S.E.2d 470 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 612, 332 S.E.2d 83 (1985).

Under section (a) of this rule, a summons must be issued within five days of the filing of the complaint. Where a complaint has been filed and a proper summons does not issue within the five days allowed under the rule, the action is deemed never to have commenced.

County of Wayne ex rel. Williams v. Whitley, 72 N.C. App. 155, 323 S.E.2d 458 (1984).

Irregularity in Summons. — Where there was no confusion as to the identity of the actual defendant, as evidenced by the complaint and the caption of the summons, a slight irregularity was not fatal because the summons was properly directed to the city, and the city was properly named as the defendant. Steffey v. Mazza Constr. Group, Inc., 113 N.C. App. 538, 439 S.E.2d 241, cert. improvidently granted and appeal dismissed, 339 N.C. 734, 455 S.E.2d 155 (1995).

Service on Thirty-first Day Insufficient Under Section (c). — A pluries summons which was issued on June 16, 1977, and served on defendants on July 19, 1977, was insufficient to bring defendants into court, and entry of default on them was therefore invalid, as service was made on the thirty-first day, as computed under § 1A-1, Rule 6, rather than within 30 days, as required by section (c) of this rule. Carolina Narrow Fabric Co. v. Alexandria Spinning Mills, Inc., 42 N.C. App. 722, 257 S.E.2d 654 (1979).

Presumption of Service from Return of Officer. — When the return shows legal service by an authorized officer, nothing else appearing, the law presumes service. The service is deemed established unless, upon motion in the cause, the legal presumption is rebutted by evidence upon which a finding of nonservice is properly based. Guthrie v. Ray, 293 N.C. 67, 235 S.E.2d 146 (1977).

Return Not Set Aside on Testimony of One Witness. — An officer's return or a judgment based thereon may not be set aside unless the evidence consists of more than a single contradictory affidavit or the contradictory testimony of one witness and is clear and unequivocal. This does not place an undue burden on a person who in truth has not been legally served. Guthrie v. Ray, 293 N.C. 67, 235 S.E.2d 146 (1977).

Nor on Affidavit of Person Allegedly Served. — The sheriff's return imports truth, and it cannot be overthrown or shown to be false by the affidavit, merely, of the person upon whom the service is alleged to have been made. Guthrie v. Ray, 293 N.C. 67, 235 S.E.2d 146 (1977).

Attack on Return Failing to Show Where Papers Were Left. — Homeowners were entitled to attack foreclosure proceeding against their property either by a motion in the cause or by an independent action where the officer's return was insufficient on its face to show service upon homeowner husband in that the return did not show the place where the papers were left. However, such defect was not necessarily fatal to the foreclosure proceedings, and the matter would be remanded for the trial judge to determine within his discretion whether the sheriff's return ought to be amended so as to comport with facts regarding the place and manner of service. Hassell v. Wilson, 301 N.C. 307, 272 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

Sheriff may be permitted to amend proof of service unless it clearly appears that material prejudice would result to substantial rights of the party against whom the process issued. Williams v. Burroughs Wellcome Co., 46 N.C. App. 459, 265 S.E.2d 633 (1980).

A court may obtain personal jurisdiction over a defendant only by the issuance of summons and service of process by one of the statutorily specified methods. Glover v. Farmer, 127 N.C. App. 488, 490 S.E.2d 576 (1997), review denied, 347 N.C. 575, 502 S.E.2d 590 (1998).

Mistake in Name of Party Not Always Fatal. — Although service of process should correctly state the name of the parties, a mistake in the names is not always a fatal error, and as a general rule a mistake in the given name of a party who is served will not deprive the court of jurisdiction. Names are to designate persons, and where the identity is certain a variance in the name is immaterial. Also, error or defects in the pleadings not affecting substantial rights are to be disregarded. Jones v. Whitaker, 59 N.C. App. 223, 296 S.E.2d 27 (1982).

If the misnomer or misdescription does not leave in doubt the identity of the party intended to be sued, or even where there is room for doubt as to identity, if service of process is made on the party intended to be sued, the misnomer or misdescription may be corrected by amendment at any stage of the suit. Harris v. Maready, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

Substitution in the case of a misnomer is not considered a substitution of new parties but merely a correction in the description of the party or parties actually served. Harris v. Maready, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

Deletion of "P.A." at end of law firm's name is a correction in the description of a party actually served instead of a substitution of new parties. Certainly the misdescription of the law firm as a "P.A." did not leave in doubt the identity of the party intended to be sued. Harris v. Maready, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

Correction of Mistake by Serving Officer. — The fact that the summons and complaint were directed to "Sherrie Sapp Whitaker" and the deputy sheriff changed the name from "Sherrie" to "Shirley" when he served the defendant was of no legal significance since the proper party was actually served. Under these circumstances, the defendant could not have suffered any prejudice. All that was required was that the proper party be properly served. Jones v. Whitaker, 59 N.C. App. 223, 296 S.E.2d 27 (1982).

Notice of Additional Claims to Party in Default. — A party who is in default for failure to appear is ordinarily not entitled to notice of additional pleadings in the case, but where a new or additional claim is asserted, service on the party, even though in default, is required in the same manner as provided by this rule for the service of summons. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Rolfe, 83 N.C. App. 625, 351 S.E.2d 117 (1986).

Plaintiff who defaulted on original complaint which alleged that she was a resident of this State was entitled to notice of subsequent motion to declare that none of her property was exempt by virtue of non-residency, and an opportunity to contest the factual allegations as to her non-residency. Where she was given neither notice nor an opportunity to be heard, in violation of statutory and constitutional provisions, the order declaring that her property was not exempt was invalid, and she was entitled to relief therefrom pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 60(b)(4). First Union Nat'l Bank v. Rolfe, 83 N.C. App. 625, 351 S.E.2d 117 (1986).

It is the service of process and not the return of the officer which confers jurisdiction on the court. Parris v. Garner Com. Disposal, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 282, 253 S.E.2d 29, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 455, 256 S.E.2d 808 (1979).

Challenge to Court's Determination of Jurisdiction and Authority. — When a defendant challenges the authority of a court on the ground that it has not acquired personal jurisdiction, the court's determination of its own jurisdiction may be questioned only by appeal and not collaterally. Gower v. Aetna Ins. Co., 281 N.C. 577, 189 S.E.2d 165 (1972).

A judgment by a court determining its statutory authority to dismiss an action in such a way as not to bar further litigation on the merits therein may be questioned only by appeal and not collaterally. Gower v. Aetna Ins. Co., 281 N.C. 577, 189 S.E.2d 165 (1972).

As to service on a nonresident motor vehicle operator involved in an accident under former subsection (j)(9) of this rule or § 1-105, see House v. House, 22 N.C. App. 686, 207 S.E.2d 339 (1974).

What Service Required Where Party Intervenes. — An intervenor party who is granted permission to intervene pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 24(b)(2) is not required to then issue a summons and complaint pursuant to this rule. The service, pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 5, of the motion to intervene accompanied with the complaint is sufficient service upon the party against whom relief is sought or denied in the intervenor's pleading and is sufficient process to acquire jurisdiction over the party if all other requisites for jurisdiction over the party are met. Kahan v. Longiotti, 45 N.C. App. 367, 263 S.E.2d 345, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 374, 267 S.E.2d 675 (1980), overruled on other grounds in Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141 (1982).

Service of the motion and proposed complaint pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 5 is sufficient service of process on defendant where the intervenor's complaint is not entirely independent of the original complaint and there is no objection that the intervenor's complaint could not be properly served on defendant in this jurisdiction. Kahan v. Longiotti, 45 N.C. App. 367, 263 S.E.2d 345, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 374, 267 S.E.2d 675 (1980), overruled on other grounds in Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141 (1982).

A party who intervenes pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 24 is not required to issue a summons and complaint pursuant to this rule. In re Baby Boy Shamp, 82 N.C. App. 606, 347 S.E.2d 848 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 695, 351 S.E.2d 750 (1987).

Service of Notice of Motion for Enforcement of Alimony. — A plaintiff seeking enforcement of an order for alimony need not serve defendant with a new summons. Simply serving him with notice of the motion for enforcement is sufficient. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, § 1A-1, Rule 5(b) allows service of notice of written motions by service on defendant's attorney of record. Miller v. Miller, 98 N.C. App. 221, 390 S.E.2d 352 (1990).

Notice Held Insufficient. — Institution of an action for "alimony without divorce" did not constitute notice that plaintiff was seeking a determination of the respective rights of plaintiff and defendant in a surplus that might result in the event of a foreclosure of a deed of trust. Koob v. Koob, 283 N.C. 129, 195 S.E.2d 552 (1973).

The order under § 1A-1, Rule 3 extending time for filing the complaint need not be served with each subsequent summons to constitute effective process. This rule does ordinarily require the service of the summons and the complaint together. By extension, then, service "in accordance with the provisions of Rule 4" would require service of the summons and order together. However, to continue to slavishly apply this rule long after filing of the complaint would entirely ignore the purpose of the rules and the functions of the various forms of process. Childress v. Forsyth County Hosp. Auth., 70 N.C. App. 281, 319 S.E.2d 329 (1984), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 796, 325 S.E.2d 484 (1985).

Section 1A-1, Rule 3 requires only filing of the complaint, not service, within the 20-day period. Childress v. Forsyth County Hosp. Auth., 70 N.C. App. 281, 319 S.E.2d 329 (1984), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 796, 325 S.E.2d 484 (1985).

The delayed service of complaint does not constitute a link in the chain of process. Childress v. Forsyth County Hosp. Auth., 70 N.C. App. 281, 319 S.E.2d 329 (1984), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 796, 325 S.E.2d 484 (1985).

Delay in Substituting Correct Name Not Fatal. — Where plaintiffs sued and served the appropriate party, their delay in substituting the correct name of that party was not fatal. Tyson v. L'eggs Prods., Inc., 84 N.C. App. 1, 351 S.E.2d 834 (1987).

The purpose of section (d) of this rule is only to keep the action alive by means of an endorsement on the original summons or by issuance of an alias or pluries summons in situations where the original, properly directed summons was not yet served. Roshelli v. Sperry, 63 N.C. App. 509, 305 S.E.2d 218, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 633, 308 S.E.2d 716 (1983).

An alias or pluries summons is not ineffective where it does not refer back to the process next preceding it, the delayed service of complaint, but referred instead to the original summons. The General Assembly, by adopting a less stringent standard of service for complaints filed under the late-filing provisions of § 1A-1, Rule 3, clearly did not intend the delayed service of the complaint to be a link in the chain of process. This is especially true in light of the fact that the present option of service by mail for the late complaint constitutes a departure from the former practice requiring formal service. Childress v. Forsyth County Hosp. Auth., 70 N.C. App. 281, 319 S.E.2d 329 (1984), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 796, 325 S.E.2d 484 (1985).

Summons Held Valid. — Summons was valid process under this rule, whether the court treated the summons with which defendants were eventually served as an original summons or as an alias and pluries summons. CBP Resources, Inc. v. Ingredient Resource Corp., 954 F. Supp. 1106 (M.D.N.C. 1996).

Neglect Required for Appointment of Private Process Server. — Something more than mere failure to act is needed for conduct to constitute neglect under paragraph (h) of this rule. Williams v. Williams, 113 N.C. App. 226, 437 S.E.2d 884 (1994), aff'd, 339 N.C. 608, 453 S.E.2d 165 (1995).

Alias Summons Against State. — A civil action may be continued in existence against any defendant by suing out an alias summons within 90 days of the last preceding summons. No special attention to this rule appears for suits against the State. The State, once it has consented to suit, occupies the same position as any other litigant. Barrus Constr. Co. v. North Carolina Dep't of Transp., 71 N.C. App. 700, 324 S.E.2d 1 (1984).

Service by Publication Prior to Issuance of Alias Summons. — In personam jurisdiction can be obtained over a defendant through service of process by publication within 90 days of the issuance of the original summons, but before any issuance of an alias or pluries summons. County of Wayne ex rel. Williams v. Whitley, 72 N.C. App. 155, 323 S.E.2d 458 (1984).

Defense of Insufficient Service on "John Doe" Defendant Not Available to Insurance Company. — Where respondent was provided with appropriate notice of the action below, it could not attempt to defend its prior election not to provide a defense to a John Doe defendant by alleging that service of process on "John Doe" was insufficient. Sparks v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 99 N.C. App. 148, 392 S.E.2d 415 (1990).

Issuance of Second Summons. — Although summons was not properly issued at first, the issuance of a second summons commenced a new action on the date it was issued. Duncan v. Duncan, 102 N.C. App. 107, 401 S.E.2d 398 (1991).

60 Day "Saving Provision" in Subdivision (j2)(2). — A careful review of this saving provision indicates it is limited in scope and may only be employed where: (1) the original service was made by registered or certified mail upon a person residing in the addressee's dwelling house or usual place of abode; and (2) it later appears "the person who received the receipt at the addressee's dwelling house or usual place of abode was not a person of suitable age and discretion residing therein." Hanover Ins. Co. v. Amana Refrigeration, Inc., 106 N.C. App. 79, 415 S.E.2d 99, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 344, 421 S.E.2d 147 (1992).

The circumstance of the summons being placed in the court file subsequent to entry of judgment by default is insufficient to affect validity of either the summons or the judgment itself. Hocke v. Hanyane, 118 N.C. App. 630, 456 S.E.2d 858 (1995).

Mailing of Process. — In child custody cases where actual notice has been received, service of process is proper notwithstanding a person other than the clerk's office mailing the process. Tataragasi v. Tataragasi, 124 N.C. App. 255, 477 S.E.2d 239 (1996).

II. PERSONAL SERVICE ON NATURAL PERSONS.

A. In General.

The purpose of section (d) of this rule is only to keep the action alive by means of an endorsement on the original summons or by issuance of an alias or pluries summons in situations where the original, properly directed summons was not yet served. Roshelli v. Sperry, 63 N.C. App. 509, 305 S.E.2d 218, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 633, 308 S.E.2d 716 (1983).

Section (j) of this rule is tied closely to the new jurisdiction statute, § 1-75.1 et seq., and the two are complementary to one another. While the jurisdiction statute greatly liberalizes the grounds for jurisdiction, the rules regarding service of process are tightened, to ensure, as much as possible, that the defendant receives actual notice of the controversy. Edwards v. Edwards, 13 N.C. App. 166, 185 S.E.2d 20 (1971).

The service of process requirements of section (j) of this rule are mandatory. Harris v. Maready, 64 N.C. App. 1, 306 S.E.2d 799 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

Subdivision (j)(1)a must be strictly construed, and the prescribed procedure must be strictly followed; unless the specified requirements are complied with, there is no valid service. Guthrie v. Ray, 31 N.C. App. 142, 228 S.E.2d 471 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 293 N.C. 67, 235 S.E.2d 146 (1977).

Rebuttable Presumption from Return Showing Legal Service Under Subdivision (j)(1)a. — When the officer's return on the summons shows legal service under subdivision (j)(1)a, a rebuttable presumption of valid service of process is credited. Guthrie v. Ray, 31 N.C. App. 142, 228 S.E.2d 471 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 293 N.C. 67, 235 S.E.2d 146 (1977).

When the officer's return of the summons shows legal service a presumption of valid service of process is created. Greenup v. Register, 104 N.C. App. 618, 410 S.E.2d 398 (1991).

Absent valid service of process, a court does not acquire personal jurisdiction over the defendant and the action must be dismissed. Glover v. Farmer, 127 N.C. App. 488, 490 S.E.2d 576 (1997), review denied, 347 N.C. 575, 502 S.E.2d 590 (1998).

Minimum Contacts Analysis Not Necessary When Defendant Is Served Within State. — Although the minimum contacts analysis has been consistently applied to cases in which nonresident defendants were served with process outside this State, such minimum contacts analysis is not necessary when the defendant is personally served while present within this State. Lockert v. Breedlove, 321 N.C. 66, 361 S.E.2d 581 (1987).

Personal Service on Nonresident Within This State Is Sufficient. — The rule continues to be that personal service on a nonresident party, at a time when that party is present in the forum state, suffices in and of itself to confer personal jurisdiction over that party. Lockert v. Breedlove, 321 N.C. 66, 361 S.E.2d 581 (1987).

Service While Visiting Parents. — Service made at defendant's parents' house while defendant was visiting her parents was valid as defendant was "residing" at her parents home. Glover v. Farmer, 127 N.C. App. 488, 490 S.E.2d 576 (1997), review denied, 347 N.C. 575, 502 S.E.2d 590 (1998).

Service on Sole Proprietorship. — Service of process was defective where plaintiff failed to comply with the mandatory requirements of subdivision (j)(1) of this rule for service of process on a sole proprietorship, and attempted service instead on such proprietorship as an association under subdivision (j)(8) of this rule by delivering the complaint and summons by registered mail addressed to executive manager. The fact that executive manager signed the registered mail receipt and may have thereafter acquired actual notice of the lawsuit does not remedy the failure of plaintiff to comply with subdivision (j)(1) of this rule. Park v. Sleepy Creek Turkeys, Inc., 60 N.C. App. 545, 299 S.E.2d 670 (1983).

Service on Partners — Purpose of Subdivision (j)(7)b. — The purpose of subdivision (j)(7)b of this rule is to provide notice of the commencement of an action to the individual partner, so that he may protect his interests, and to provide a ritual that marks the court's assertion of jurisdiction over the lawsuit. Stevens v. Nimocks, 82 N.C. App. 350, 346 S.E.2d 180, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 511, 349 S.E.2d 873 (1986), reconsideration denied, 318 N.C. 702, 351 S.E.2d 760 (1987).

Same — Service of Summons Prerequisite to Individual Liability. — Actual notice of a suit against the partnership will not cure the requirement that a partner must be served with a summons to be held individually liable. Stevens v. Nimocks, 82 N.C. App. 350, 346 S.E.2d 180, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 511, 349 S.E.2d 873 (1986), reconsideration denied, 318 N.C. 702, 351 S.E.2d 760 (1987).

Each partner in a partnership is jointly and severally liable for a tort committed in the course of the partnership business, and the injured party may sue all members of the partnership or any one of them at his election. But a partner who is not served with summons is not bound beyond his partnership assets. Stevens v. Nimocks, 82 N.C. App. 350, 346 S.E.2d 180, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 511, 349 S.E.2d 873 (1986), reconsideration denied, 318 N.C. 702, 351 S.E.2d 760 (1987).

General partner who was not made a party to the defendant's counterclaim or served with a copy of a summons, could not be held personally liable for a judgment against the partnership. Post & Front Properties, Ltd. v. Roanoke Constr. Co., 117 N.C. App. 93, 449 S.E.2d 765 (1994).

Same — Effect of Verification of Answer. — Defendant partner's verification of original answer where he was sued in his partnership capacity did not subject him to individual liability. Stevens v. Nimocks, 82 N.C. App. 350, 346 S.E.2d 180, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 511, 349 S.E.2d 873 (1986), reconsideration denied, 318 N.C. 702, 351 S.E.2d 760 (1987).

Same — Effect of Participation in Suit. — A partner who participates in a malpractice suit by acquainting himself with the facts of the pending suit and notifying his insurance carrier of the suit does not subject himself to individual liability when the Rules of Civil Procedure require that he be served with process individually before being held individually liable. Stevens v. Nimocks, 82 N.C. App. 350, 346 S.E.2d 180, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 511, 349 S.E.2d 873 (1986), reconsideration denied, 318 N.C. 702, 351 S.E.2d 760 (1987).

Alias and pluries summons served personally on a nonresident defendant while present in this State were held not to be issued on a different person and therefore related back to the original summons where the original summons had been properly served upon the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles pursuant to § 1-105. Smith v. Schraffenberger, 90 N.C. App. 589, 369 S.E.2d 90, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 366, 373 S.E.2d 549 (1988).

General Appearance by Defendant Conferred Jurisdiction. — Even if the court had not already obtained jurisdiction over defendant by serving him with process by registered mail in compliance with this rule, by contesting both the notice to take his deposition and the show cause motion on grounds other than the court's lack of jurisdiction over him, defendant made a general appearance in the proceeding and thus submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the court. M.G. Newell Co. v. Wyrick, 91 N.C. App. 98, 370 S.E.2d 431 (1988).

Nonresident Motorists. — In suits involving nonresident drivers of motor vehicles, service upon the nonresident driver may be accomplished by personal service pursuant to subsection (j) of this rule or by service upon the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles under § 1-105. Smith v. Schraffenberger, 90 N.C. App. 589, 369 S.E.2d 90, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 366, 373 S.E.2d 549 (1988).

Where individuals are doing business as a partnership under a firm name, such firm is described in an action as a corporation, and process is served on a member of the partnership, members of the partnership may be substituted by amending the process and allowing the pleading to be amended. Harris v. Maready, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

Defendant was personally served with a summons, although that summons was addressed to another defendant, the caption of which listed his name first among the defendants being sued, and in fact his name appeared twice in the caption as he was named both individually and as a part of the law firm. Any person served in this manner would make further inquiry personally or through counsel if he had any doubt that he was being sued and would be required to answer the complaint when it was filed, which would have revealed the existence of a summons directed to him and purporting on its face to have been served upon him and would have established his duty to appear and answer. Harris v. Maready, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

Personal Out-of-State Service by Summons Upheld. — Where a third-party defendant, resident of California, allegedly committed a tort while working in North Carolina, personal service by summons delivered to him by a U.S. Marshall in California according to §§ 1-75.3, 1-75.4 and subdivision (j)(1)a and former subdivision (j)(9)a of this rule satisfied the traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice required by the due process clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. Bowdach v. Frontierland, Inc., 347 F. Supp. 233 (W.D.N.C. 1972).

Separate Houses on Same Farm. — Defendant and his parents shared the same dwelling and place of abode, for purposes of subdivision (j)(1)a of this rule, where they lived on the same farm, owned by the parents, although they occupied separate houses, about 60 to 100 yards apart. Bowers v. Billings, 80 N.C. App. 330, 342 S.E.2d 58 (1986).

Actions Constituting Effectual Service. — The placing of envelope addressed to defendant and containing summons and complaint on the seat of a nearby pickup truck, presumed to be defendant's but actually one driven by his employee, as defendant watched, after defendant refused to accept service of same, where defendant's employee found the envelope and delivered it to defendant's wife the next day, constituted effectual service on defendant, in view of the fact that service had previously been attempted upon him by certified mail, restricted delivery, which service had been refused. Currie v. Wood, 112 F.R.D. 408 (E.D.N.C. 1986).

Evidence was sufficient to find that the plaintiff exercised due diligence in attempting to ascertain the address or whereabouts of defendant where plaintiff's counsel attempted service at two available addresses, consulted the local telephone directory and the department of motor vehicles to obtain information, contacted the defendant's insurer and attorney seeking information as to defendant's whereabouts and finally wrote the California Department of Motor Vehicles based on a statement by defendant's sister that he was "out west, possibly California." Winter v. Williams, 108 N.C. App. 739, 425 S.E.2d 458 (1993).

Waiver of Right to Challenge Jurisdiction. — Assuming, without deciding, that the service required by former § 55-71(c), relating to determining the validity of the election or appointment of corporate directors or officers, had to be made in the manner required by section (j) of this rule, respondents waived their right to challenge personal jurisdiction where they each received a copy of the petition and notice of hearing from petitioner's counsel more than 10 days prior to the hearing, made a joint response to the petition requesting that the court declare the entire election void, but did not assert any defense of insufficiency of service of process, and appeared at the hearing and participated fully. Stancil v. Bruce Stancil Refrigeration, Inc., 81 N.C. App. 567, 344 S.E.2d 789, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 418, 349 S.E.2d 601 (1986), appeal dismissed, 94 N.C. App. 760, 381 S.E.2d 720 (1989).

Service Held Insufficient. — Where plaintiff apparently undertook to have defendant served pursuant to subdivision (j)(1) of this rule, but the receipt for certified mail included in the record stated that notice was sent to her in care of McBess Industries, and the record did not disclose that McBess Industries was an agent of defendant or that the receipt was signed by defendant or McBess Industries, defendant did not have proper notice of plaintiff's motion for summary judgment, and the judgment against her would be vacated. Oak Island Southwind Realty, Inc. v. Pruitt, 89 N.C. App. 471, 366 S.E.2d 489 (1988).

Where plaintiff did not deliver endorsed summons to some proper person for service as required by section (a) of this rule, unconscionable delay was most critical to defendant, and there was no contention that defendant was unavailable for service, the trial judge properly dismissed plaintiff's action pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 41(b) based upon plaintiff's violation of section (a) of this rule for the purposes of delay and in order to gain an unfair advantage over the defendant. Smith v. Quinn, 324 N.C. 316, 378 S.E.2d 28 (1989).

B. Delivery to Person Residing at Defendant's Usual Abode.

Where service is had by leaving summons and complaint with a person other than named defendant, the substitute person must be a "person of suitable age and discretion," who lives with defendant in his "dwelling house or usual place of abode," and the summons must be left with the substitute person at such usual place of abode. If delivery is made elsewhere, the service is invalid. Guthrie v. Ray, 293 N.C. 67, 235 S.E.2d 146 (1977).

More Than One Dwelling House or Usual Place of Abode Possible. — It is unrealistic to interpret subdivision (j)(1)a of this rule so that the person to be served only has one dwelling house or usual place of abode at which process may be left. Van Buren v. Glasco, 27 N.C. App. 1, 217 S.E.2d 579 (1975), overruled on other grounds in Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141 (1982).

Separate Houses on Same Farm. — Defendant and his parents shared the same dwelling and place of abode, for purposes of subdivision (j)(1)a of this rule, where they lived on the same farm, owned by the parents, although they occupied separate houses, about 60 to 100 yards apart. Bowers v. Billings, 80 N.C. App. 330, 342 S.E.2d 58 (1986).

As to fifteen-year-old boy being "person of suitable age and discretion" within subdivision (j)(1)a of this rule, see Van Buren v. Glasco, 27 N.C. App. 1, 217 S.E.2d 579 (1975), overruled on other grounds in Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141 (1982).

Delivery to Relation of Defendants at Place of Business. — Delivery of summons to a person who was the son of one defendant and brother of the other at defendants' place of business instead of defendants' respective residences was not in compliance with subdivision (j)(1)a, and jurisdiction over defendants was not thereby obtained. Hall v. Lassiter, 44 N.C. App. 23, 260 S.E.2d 155 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 330, 265 S.E.2d 395 (1980).

Delivery to Mother in Another County. — Service of process on one defendant was invalid where summons and complaint were handed to his mother, also a defendant, with whom he resided in Union County, after she voluntarily accompanied a deputy sheriff from her residence to Mecklenburg County where she was served with process herself. Williams v. Hartis, 18 N.C. App. 89, 195 S.E.2d 806 (1973).

Delivery to Sister. — Where the evidence tended to show that service upon one of the individual defendants was attempted by delivering copies of the summons and complaint to his sister, who neither resided with him nor was present in his home when the papers were delivered to her, such evidence was sufficient to support the trial court's findings that defendant was not properly served. Tinkham v. Hall, 47 N.C. App. 651, 267 S.E.2d 588 (1980).

Delivery to Brother. — Testimony of deputy and his two returns of service were competent evidence which would support the trial court's finding that defendant resided at the address in question with his brother, and that his brother was a person of suitable age and discretion to accept service. Olschesky v. Houston, 84 N.C. App. 415, 352 S.E.2d 884 (1987).

Attempted service on defendant's wife at hospital at which defendant was a patient rather than at his dwelling house or usual place of abode failed to comply with subdivision (j)(1)a of this rule and was invalid. Stone v. Hicks, 45 N.C. App. 66, 262 S.E.2d 318 (1980).

C. Service by Registered or Certified Mail.

Service by Registered Mail Complies with Due Process. — Service by registered mail is reasonably calculated to apprise interested parties of the pendency of the action and afford them an opportunity to present their objections, and therefore complies with due process requirements. Chadbourn, Inc. v. Katz, 285 N.C. 700, 208 S.E.2d 676 (1974).

Contempt Statute Requirement Satisfied by Service Under Subdivision (j)(1)c. — Where, pursuant to subdivision (j)(1)c, court issued an order notifying a foreign attorney of contempt charges and allowing him 60 days to respond to the charges, and mailed the order to the attorney at the address he gave the court in a motion to be admitted in a case pro hac vice, this method of service was proper to comply with the requirement of § 5A-15(a) that a copy of the order must be furnished to the person charged, where the court had personal jurisdiction as provided in § 1-75.4. In re Smith, 45 N.C. App. 123, 263 S.E.2d 23, rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 621, 272 S.E.2d 834 (1980).

The language of former subdivision (j)(1)c and subsection (j)(9) of this rule makes no reference to home or office; it requires simply that a complaint sent by certified mail be addressed to the party to be served, and be delivered to the addressee only. Waller v. Butkovich, 584 F. Supp. 909 (M.D.N.C. 1984).

Service of Process by Registered Mail Held Proper. — Where the trial court had jurisdiction over nonresident defendant by reason of a contract to convey land situated in North Carolina, substituted service of process by registered mail, return receipt requested, was a proper means of acquiring personal jurisdiction over defendant, and the requirements of due process and notice were afforded him. Chadbourn, Inc. v. Katz, 21 N.C. App. 284, 204 S.E.2d 201, aff'd, 285 N.C. 700, 208 S.E.2d 676 (1974).

Presumption of Service of Request Proper. — Plaintiff was presumed to have been properly served with request for admissions, despite denying receipt, where defendants presented a copy of a return receipt signed by the defendant's husband, plaintiff conceded it was sent to the correct address, and plaintiff made no attempt to rebut receipt when questioned by the trial court. Goins v. Puleo, 350 N.C. 277, 512 S.E.2d 748 (1999).

Service by Certified Letter Insufficient. — Where plaintiff's sole attempt at personal service of notice consisted of a certified letter mailed to the business address of a partnership, a postal box number, this solitary venture constituted neither application of "due diligence" as required by subsection (j1) nor a "reasonable and diligent effort" as required by § 45-21.16(a). Barclays American/Mortgage Corp. v. BECA Enters., 116 N.C. App. 100, 446 S.E.2d 883 (1994).

Affidavit Mandatory. — Requirement of an affidavit containing information showing the circumstances warranting the use of service by registered mail under former subdivision (j)(9)b, which affidavit constituted proof of service, was mandatory. Dawkins v. Dawkins, 32 N.C. App. 497, 232 S.E.2d 456 (1977).

Service in Foreign Countries. — Service of summons addressed to the defendant in care of his mother at an address in South Africa, the home of defendant's brother, was sufficient where clerk's certificate reflected that the return receipt indicated the complaint and summons were in fact received at the stated address by the individual whose signature appeared thereon. Hocke v. Hanyane, 118 N.C. App. 630, 456 S.E.2d 858 (1995).

Reception by Agent. — The requirements for service of process were met, where service of process by certified mail addressed to the defendant at his law office was received and signed for by his employee and then directed to the defendant. Fender v. Deaton, 130 N.C. App. 657, 503 S.E.2d 707 (1998).

For case holding that one can be held to answer without production of actual registry return receipt, see Sparrow v. Goodman, 376 F. Supp. 1268 (W.D.N.C. 1974), decided under former subsection (j)(9).

III. SERVICE ON COUNTIES, MUNICIPALITIES AND OTHER LOCAL PUBLIC BODIES.

Substituted Personal Service. — Subsection (j)(5) of this rule does not provide for substituted personal process on any persons other than those named in provisions (j)(5)a and (j)(5)d. Johnson v. City of Raleigh, 98 N.C. App. 147, 389 S.E.2d 849.

County attorney is not authorized to accept service for the county. Service on the county manager or on the chairman, clerk or any member of the board of commissioners is necessary for service upon the county to be effective. In re Brunswick County, 81 N.C. App. 391, 344 S.E.2d 584 (1986).

County Hospital Authority. — Defendant hospital's motion to dismiss for insufficiency of process and insufficiency of service of process would be denied without prejudice to file a renewed motion if plaintiffs did not properly serve defendant within ten days of filing of court's order, where defendant was misnamed, in that the caption read "Onslow Memorial Hospital, Incorporated," while defendant's actual name was the "Onslow County Hospital Authority," and where the complaint was served on the hospital administrator, who was not authorized to accept service for the hospital, since dismissal is not justified where it appears that service can be properly made. Coastal Neuro-Psychiatric Assocs. v. Onslow County Hosp. Auth., 607 F. Supp. 49 (E.D.N.C. 1985).

Leaving Process with Spouse Not Permitted Under Subdivision (j)(5)c. — The service of process in subdivision (j)(5)c of this rule explicitly requires personal service on certain named officials or agents, and does not permit leaving the process with other persons, even spouses, as is allowed where the action is against a "natural" person. Long v. Cabarrus County Bd. of Educ., 52 N.C. App. 625, 279 S.E.2d 95 (1981).

IV. SERVICE ON CORPORATIONS.

Subdivision (j)(6)a is like federal Rule 4(d)(3) in that it provides for service on a foreign corporation by delivery of the summons to a "managing agent." Witcher v. Mac Tools, Inc., 62 F.R.D. 708 (M.D.N.C. 1974).

Subdivision (j)(6)a has the same scope as federal Rule 4(d)(3), as it only covers "managing agent," and not any other agent, either expressly or impliedly authorized. Witcher v. Mac Tools, Inc., 62 F.R.D. 708 (M.D.N.C. 1974).

Subdivision (j)(6)b Contrasted with Federal Rule. — While subdivision (j)(6)b of this rule permits service on a corporation by serving process upon an agent authorized by appointment or by law in a manner specified by any statute, the federal rule requires service on the corporation itself, "in the manner prescribed by any statute." Thus, under North Carolina law any statute setting forth alternative means of serving such an agent may be considered, while under federal law consideration is limited to statutes providing means of serving corporations. Great Dane Trailers, Inc. v. North Brook Poultry, Inc., 35 N.C. App. 752, 242 S.E.2d 533 (1978).

To Whom Process May Be Delivered for Service on Corporation. -- When service of process is made upon a corporation, the summons must be served upon a person who is either an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation, or one managing his office at the time, an agent expressly or impliedly appointed by the corporation to receive process, an agent specified by statute to receive service, an agent implied in law, or an agent by estoppel. Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974).

When the name of the defendant is sufficiently stated in the caption of the summons and in the complaint, such that it is clear that the corporation, rather than the officer or agent receiving service, is the entity being sued, the summons, when properly served upon an officer, director or agent is adequate to bring the corporate defendant within the trial court's jurisdiction. Harris v. Maready, 64 N.C. App. 1, 306 S.E.2d 799 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

Amendment of Process to Change Party from Corporation to Individual. — In general, courts are more reluctant to permit amendment of process or pleadings to change a description of a party as an individual or partnership to that of a corporation than they are to permit amendment to change the description of a party as a corporation to that of an individual or partnership, because of the prescribed statutory method of serving a corporation. Harris v. Maready, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

Subsection (j)(6) contemplates service on agents either expressly or impliedly appointed by the corporation as agents to receive process. Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 18 N.C. App. 188, 196 S.E.2d 545 (1973), rev'd on other grounds, 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974).

The phrase "an agent authorized . . . by law to be served" includes within its scope State statutes vesting authority in certain persons to receive process, agencies implied in law, and agencies by estoppel. Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 18 N.C. App. 188, 196 S.E.2d 545 (1973), rev'd on other grounds, 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974).

Subdivision (j)(6)a does not require that the person upon whom summons is served be in fact in charge of the office of the officer, director or managing agent of the corporation, but merely that the person be "apparently in charge." Williams v. Burroughs Wellcome Co., 46 N.C. App. 459, 265 S.E.2d 633 (1980).

Under this rule, service may be had on a corporation by leaving a copy of the summons and complaint in the office of the president of the corporation with the person who is apparently in charge of the office. Carolina Paper Co. v. Bouchelle, 285 N.C. 56, 203 S.E.2d 1 (1974).

Who Is "Managing Agent". — The question of who may be a "managing agent" upon whom service of process is authorized depends upon the facts and circumstances of the particular case, and the trial court's finding that a personnel manager was an employee in a "management position" of defendant does not resolve that question. Williams v. Burroughs Wellcome Co., 46 N.C. App. 459, 265 S.E.2d 633 (1980).

A general or managing agent must be invested with powers of discretion and must exercise judgment in his duties, rather than being under direct superior control as to the extent of his duty and the manner in which he executes it. Witcher v. Mac Tools, Inc., 62 F.R.D. 708 (M.D.N.C. 1974).

Managing Agent Must Have More Than Sporadic Authority. — It is reasonable to expect that a managing agent will have broad executive responsibilities and that his relationship will reflect a degree of continuity. Authority to act as agent sporadically or in a single transaction ordinarily does not satisfy this provision of the rule. Witcher v. Mac Tools, Inc., 62 F.R.D. 708 (M.D.N.C. 1974).

Local Distributor Not Managing Agent. — The role played by a local distributor in assigning territory and assisting the distributors within his overall territory, from whose sales he receives a commission as an independent contractor, does not make him a "managing agent" within the meaning of this rule. Witcher v. Mac Tools, Inc., 62 F.R.D. 708 (M.D.N.C. 1974).

Service on Security Officer of Corporation-Owned Store. — Attempted service upon defendant corporation in an assault action by delivery of summons and complaint to a security officer who was standing near a cash register in defendant's place of business, whom deputy sheriff had seen as a court witness for defendant, and on whom the deputy had served subpoenas on prior occasions, was void, and the trial court did not obtain jurisdiction over defendant thereby, since the security officer was not an officer, director or managing agent of defendant's store, nor was he a person apparently in charge in the manager's office, an agent authorized to accept service by appointment or an agent authorized to accept service by law under subsection (j)(6) of this rule. Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 18 N.C. App. 188, 196 S.E.2d 545 (1973), rev'd on other grounds, 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974).

Substitute Service Improper. — Where plaintiff's attorney had actual knowledge of an address where defendant could be served and did not attempt to serve defendant at the known address, substitute service of process on the Secretary of State was ineffective and violated defendant's due process rights. Interior Distribs., Inc. v. Hartland Constr. Co., 116 N.C. App. 627, 449 S.E.2d 193 (1994).

Service on Division of Corporation Not Service on Corporation. — Complaint and summons directed to a defendant named as "MICHIGAN TOOL COMPANY, A Division of Ex-Cell-O Corporation" is not service on the entity Ex-Cell-O Corporation, even if the complaint and summons reach the hands of someone obligated to receive service in behalf of Ex-Cell-O, since Ex-Cell-O was not a named party defendant. Crawford v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 44 N.C. App. 368, 261 S.E.2d 25 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 329, 265 S.E.2d 394 (1980).

Service Held Invalid. — Where the evidence tended to show that service of process upon corporate defendant was attempted by delivering copies of the summons and complaint to an individual who at that time was neither the agent of the corporate defendant nor authorized to receive service of process in its behalf, such evidence was sufficient to support the trial court's findings that defendant was not properly served. Tinkham v. Hall, 47 N.C. App. 651, 267 S.E.2d 588 (1980).

Determining Party to Whom Summons Directed. — Fundamental fairness requires that a summons should be of sufficient particularity so as to leave no reasonable doubt as to whom it is directed. However, this requirement does not force the courts to overlook the obvious when determining the validity of a summons. Wearring v. Belk Bros., 38 N.C. App. 375, 248 S.E.2d 90 (1978).

Where although the proper defendant in the case was misnamed in the captions on the summons and complaint as Inter-Regional Financial Group Leasing Company (an apparently nonexisting company), the summons was properly directed to IFG Leasing Company, and that was the enterprise that copies of the summons and complaint were properly served on three times, the misstatement of defendant's name in the captions was a harmless misnomer and without jurisdictional significance, and the court did not err in permitting the misnomer to be corrected by appropriate amendments. Paramore v. Inter-Regional Fin. Group Leasing Co., 68 N.C. App. 659, 316 S.E.2d 90 (1984).

Name of Corporate Defendant to Be Sufficiently Stated. — When the name of the defendant is sufficiently stated in the caption of the summons and in the complaint, such that it is clear that the corporation, rather than the officer or agent receiving service, is the entity being sued, the summons, when properly served upon an officer, director or agent specified in subsection (j)(6) is adequate to bring the corporate defendant within the trial court's jurisdiction. Wiles v. Welparnel Constr. Co., 295 N.C. 81, 243 S.E.2d 756 (1978), overruling the line of cases represented by Plemmons v. Improvement Co., 108 N.C. 614, 13 S.E. 188 (1891); Hassell v. Steamboat Co., 168 N.C. 296, 84 S.E. 363 (1915); Russell Manufacturing Co., 266 N.C. 531, 146 S.E.2d 459 (1966) and Ready Mix Concrete v. Sales Corp., 30 N.C. App. 526, 227 S.E.2d 301 (1976), to the extent that such cases are inconsistent with this holding; Gro-Mar Pub. Relations, Inc. v. Billy Jack Enter., Inc., 36 N.C. App. 673, 245 S.E.2d 782 (1978).

Process Held Sufficient to Show Suit Against Corporation. — In a negligence action against a corporation, there was no insufficiency in the service of process even though the directory paragraph of the summons contained the name of an officer of the corporation, where the caption of the summons and the complaint clearly indicated that the corporation was being sued. Wearring v. Belk Bros., 38 N.C. App. 375, 248 S.E.2d 90 (1978).

Where defendant insurance corporation's statutory agent for service of process in Connecticut was served with a copy of summons, service of process was sufficient to apprise defendant that it was the party being sued. Thus, if the court had jurisdiction over the defendant, the service of process was sufficient under subsection (j)(6) of this rule. Parris v. Garner Com. Disposal, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 282, 253 S.E.2d 29, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 455, 256 S.E.2d 808 (1979).

Service on Wrong Agent Properly Kept Alive. — Suit which was properly instituted against corporate defendant within the statute of limitations period but which was served on the wrong agent was properly kept alive by alias and pluries summons until service was properly made upon a corporate officer. Tyson v. L'eggs Prods., Inc., 84 N.C. App. 1, 351 S.E.2d 834 (1987).

When Service Binds Corporation. — Service of process upon a corporation's registered agent binds that corporation when the agent is served, not when the service actually comes to the attention of an officer or agent charged with defending actions against the corporation. Anderson Trucking Serv., Inc. v. Key Way Transp., Inc., 94 N.C. App. 36, 379 S.E.2d 665 (1989).

Initial Receipt of Summons by Employee. — Service upon registered agent was effective service upon company; it made no difference that the summons and complaint addressed to registered agent were initially received by employee of registered agent, since employee was authorized by registered agent to receive mail on his behalf. Anderson Trucking Serv., Inc. v. Key Way Transp., Inc., 94 N.C. App. 36, 379 S.E.2d 665 (1989).

Service on Agent Under Assumed Corporate Name. — Where at the time that plaintiffs instituted their action, corporation had not complied with § 66-68, but was actively conducting business under an assumed name and holding itself out to the public and to its employees under that name, and where service of process was accomplished upon a corporate agent who might have been expected to know that the assumed name was a name used by the corporation, corporation was adequately served with sufficient legal process under its assumed name, and the trial court had jurisdiction. Tyson v. L'eggs Prods., Inc., 84 N.C. App. 1, 351 S.E.2d 834 (1987).

Extraterritorial Service. — Since subsection (j)(6) of this rule permits out-of-state service of process, a plaintiff in a federal court case in North Carolina is entitled to reach beyond North Carolina borders to serve a corporate defendant. Southern Pride, Inc. v. Turbo Tek Enters., Inc., 117 F.R.D. 566 (M.D.N.C. 1987).

While plaintiff, after an unsuccessful attempt at federal mail service, was limited to the federal method of personal service, plaintiff was nonetheless permitted, under FRCP, Rule 4(e), to rely on subdivision (j)(6) of this rule as authority for extraterritorial service on defendant. Southern Pride, Inc. v. Turbo Tek Enters., Inc., 117 F.R.D. 566 (M.D.N.C. 1987).

Service on Franchisor Not Service on Franchisee. — Where complaint and summons named as defendant "Ramada Inn, Inc." (the franchisor), and not "Ramada Inn" (the trade name used by franchisee, a separate corporate entity), and service of process was accomplished upon the registered agent of Ramada Inn, Inc., such service could not be deemed to constitute service upon franchisee. Under these circumstances, franchisee was never made a party to the action. Hayman v. Ramada Inn, Inc., 86 N.C. App. 274, 357 S.E.2d 394, petition denied as to additional issues, 320 N.C. 631, 360 S.E.2d 87 (1987).

Defective Service Defense Not Waived. — Where, after defendant was served, its counsel immediately notified plaintiff of defect in service, invited proper service upon it, and advised it how a correction could be made, and where a default judgment had not yet been entered, but only entry of default, plaintiff's claim that defendant had waived any defenses it might have had to lack of jurisdiction by reason of defective service would be rejected. United States ex rel. Combustion Sys. Sales, Inc. v. Eastern Metal Prods. & Fabricators, Inc., 112 F.R.D. 685 (M.D.N.C. 1986).

V. SERVICE BY PUBLICATION.

Service of process by publication is in derogation of the common law. Edwards v. Edwards, 13 N.C. App. 166, 185 S.E.2d 20 (1971); Sink v. Easter, 284 N.C. 555, 202 S.E.2d 138 (1974); Emanuel v. Fellows, 47 N.C. App. 340, 267 S.E.2d 368, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 87, 273 S.E.2d 296 (1980).

Statutes authorizing substituted service of process, service of publication, or other particular methods of service are in derogation of the common law, are strictly construed, and must be followed with particularity. Hunter v. Hunter, 69 N.C. App. 659, 317 S.E.2d 910 (1984).

Thus, statutes authorizing service of process by publication are strictly construed, both as grants of authority and in determining whether service has been made in conformity with the statute. Edwards v. Edwards, 13 N.C. App. 166, 185 S.E.2d 20 (1971); Sink v. Easter, 284 N.C. 555, 202 S.E.2d 138 (1974); Emanuel v. Fellows, 47 N.C. App. 340, 267 S.E.2d 368, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 87, 273 S.E.2d 296 (1980).

This rule is appropriate only where a civil litigant's whereabouts are unknown, and the due diligence requirement contained therein is clear. In re Clark, 76 N.C. App. 83, 332 S.E.2d 196, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 665, 335 S.E.2d 322 (1985).

Publication in County Where Action Is Pending. — Whereas defendant's last know address was in Wake County and despite reasonable efforts, plaintiff had "no reliable information" as to the defendant's whereabouts, publication was proper in the county in which the action was pending. Winter v. Williams, 108 N.C. App. 739, 425 S.E.2d 458 (1993).

Issuance of a summons is not essential to validity of service of process by publication upon a party to a civil action whose address, whereabouts, dwellinghouse or usual place of abode is unknown and cannot with due diligence be ascertained. McCoy v. McCoy, 29 N.C. App. 109, 223 S.E.2d 513 (1976), decided under former subdivision (j)(9)c.

Service by publication, begun more than 90 days after the last alias and pluries summons, will not revive an otherwise discontinued action. County of Wayne ex rel. Williams v. Whitley, 72 N.C. App. 155, 323 S.E.2d 458 (1984).

A change has been made by this rule in regard to the requirements of a mailing. Under the prior law the clerk of court, rather than the plaintiff, was the person required to mail a copy of the notice of service of process by publication to the defendant. Sink v. Easter, 284 N.C. 555, 202 S.E.2d 138 (1974).

When Mailing Notice of Service May Be Omitted. — The mailing of the notice of service of process by publication to defendant's address may be omitted only if the post-office address cannot be ascertained in the exercise of reasonable diligence. Sink v. Easter, 284 N.C. 555, 202 S.E.2d 138 (1974).

This rule does not require an order of publication to be supported by an affidavit. Edwards v. Edwards, 13 N.C. App. 166, 185 S.E.2d 20 (1971).

But Plaintiff Must File Affidavit Showing Circumstances Warranting Service by Publication. — While this rule does not require an order of publication supported by an affidavit, in order to utilize service of process by publication it is necessary that plaintiff file with the court an affidavit showing the circumstances warranting such use. Edwards v. Edwards, 13 N.C. App. 166, 185 S.E.2d 20 (1971).

Filing of Affidavit "Upon Completion of Such Service". — Where no prejudice to defendant was shown, an affidavit showing publication and mailing in accordance with § 1-75.10(2) was filed "upon completion of such service," even though the affidavit was not filed until after a motion to quash had been filed and some six months after the last day of publication. Philpott v. Johnson, 38 N.C. App. 380, 247 S.E.2d 781 (1978).

Service by Publication Invalid Where Personal Service Possible. — Where plaintiff could have effected personal service of process by leaving copies of the summons and court order at defendant's residence with a person of suitable age and discretion living there, but chose instead to institute service of process by publication, defendant was not subject to service of process by publication under former subdivision (j)(9)c of this rule, and the attempted service of process by means of publication was void. Sink v. Easter, 284 N.C. 555, 202 S.E.2d 138 (1974).

Parental Rights Termination Case. — Where the "name or identity" of a respondent parent is known, but his or her whereabouts are unknown, the petitioner in a parental rights termination case must proceed under G.S. 7A-289.27 [see now § 7B-1106] and must comply with section (j1) as regards service by publication, and specifically, with the due diligence requirement contained therein. In re Clark, 76 N.C. App. 83, 332 S.E.2d 196, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 665, 335 S.E.2d 322 (1985).

Failure to attach custody order to petition to terminate parental rights or include statements within petition explaining petitioner's efforts to find parent, as required by § 7A-289.25 [see now § 7B-1104], where service was by publication, was not error which resulted in any prejudice to respondent, where service by publication complied with subdivision (j1) of this rule and informed respondent of the petition filed against her, her need to answer, the availability of counsel if she was indigent, and the telephone number of the Clerk of Juvenile Court if she needed further information. In re Joseph Children, 122 N.C. App. 468, 470 S.E.2d 539 (1996).

Service of petition and summons to terminate parental rights by publication must comply with § 7A-289.27 [see now § 7B-1106] and subdivision (j1) of this rule. In re Joseph Children, 122 N.C. App. 468, 470 S.E.2d 539 (1996).

Purported service by publication on respondent in a proceeding to terminate parental rights was invalid where petitioner filed no affidavit showing publication and mailing in accordance with § 1-75.10(2) and the circumstances warranting the use of service by publication, and the trial court found merely that it appeared to be "impractical" to obtain personal service and that the sheriff was unable to find respondent at his last known address in the county, there being no determination that respondent could not after due diligence be served or that his whereabouts or usual abode and his post-office address could not be determined with due diligence. In re Philips, 18 N.C. App. 65, 196 S.E.2d 59 (1973).

Divorce Decree Held Invalid for Violation of Mailing Requirements. — In an action to set aside a divorce decree, where plaintiff failed to mail a copy of the notice of service by publication to the defendant at her Virginia residence, plaintiff violated the technical requirements of former subdivision (j)(9)c and this defect was sufficient to render the resulting divorce decree invalid. Thomas v. Thomas, 43 N.C. App. 638, 260 S.E.2d 163 (1979).

Personal Notice to Purported Adverse Possessor Not Required. — Where a city, in a foreclosure action, gave personal notice to all the record owners of the property in question and notice by publication to all others having an interest in the disputed property who could not with due diligence be located, it was not required to give personal notice to a purported adverse possessor whose purported interest was not recorded. Overstreet v. City of Raleigh, 75 N.C. App. 351, 330 S.E.2d 643 (1985).

Service by publication was void where plaintiff did not use diligence to ascertain addresses of the defendants, which were available to the plaintiff. See Fountain v. Patrick, 44 N.C. App. 584, 261 S.E.2d 514 (1980); In re Clark, 76 N.C. App. 83, 332 S.E.2d 196, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 665, 335 S.E.2d 322 (1985).

VI. AMENDMENT OF SUMMONS.

This rule does not provide for any greater liberality of amendment than did former § 1-163. Grace v. Johnson, 21 N.C. App. 432, 204 S.E.2d 723 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Hazelwood v. Bailey, 339 N.C. 578, 453 S.E.2d 522 (1995).

The power of the court to allow amendment of process is discretionary and permits amendment to correct a misnomer or mistake in the name of a party. Franklin v. Winn Dixie Raleigh, Inc., 117 N.C. App. 28, 450 S.E.2d 24 (1994), aff'd, 342 N.C. 404, 464 S.E.2d 46 (1995).

Limitation on Court's Discretion Under Section (i). — The broad discretionary power given the court by section (i) does not extend so far as to permit the court by amendment of its process to acquire jurisdiction over the person of a defendant where no jurisdiction had yet been acquired. Carl Rose & Sons Ready Mix Concrete v. Thorp Sales Corp., 30 N.C. App. 526, 227 S.E.2d 301 (1976), overruled on other grounds, Wiles v. Welparnel Constr. Co., 295 N.C. 81, 243 S.E.2d 756 (1978).

When Amendment of Summons Allowed. — Section (i) empowers the court to allow amendment of the summons at any time, in its discretion, unless it clearly appears that material prejudice would result to substantial rights of the party against whom the process issued. Grace v. Johnson, 21 N.C. App. 432, 204 S.E.2d 723 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Hazelwood v. Bailey, 339 N.C. 578, 453 S.E.2d 522 (1995).

Amendment Improper. — The named defendant in the original summons and complaint, "Winn Dixie Store, Inc.", was not a mistake or misdescription permitting the amendment of the summons where the name was the correct name of the wrong corporate party defendant, this was a substantive mistake which was fatal to the action. Franklin v. Winn Dixie Raleigh, Inc., 117 N.C. App. 28, 450 S.E.2d 24 (1994), aff'd, 342 N.C. 404, 464 S.E.2d 46 (1995).

An amended summons which adds a new party-defendant must be served upon each of the defendants. Harris v. Maready, 64 N.C. App. 1, 306 S.E.2d 799 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

Amendment Held Appropriate — Trial court failed to exercise its discretion in denying plaintiff's motion to amend his summons under subsection (1) to substitute the correct county on the summons when there was no showing of any material prejudice to defendants; therefore the case was remanded to the Court of Appeals. Hazelwood v. Bailey, 339 N.C. 578, 453 S.E.2d 522 (1995).

VII. DISCONTINUANCE AND EXTENSIONS.

Extensions, Generally. — Section (c) of this rule requires that service of process occur within 30 days after the issuance of the summons. The validity of the summons for service of process may be extended under section (d) of this rule by endorsement of the original summons or issuance of an alias or pluries summons within 90 days of the issuance or last prior endorsement of the original summons. As long as this chain of summonses is maintained, the service of summons will relate back to the original date of issuance. In re Searle, 74 N.C. App. 61, 327 S.E.2d 315 (1985).

This rule specifically provides that where there is neither endorsement nor issuance of alias or pluries summons within 90 days after issuance of the last preceding summons, the action is discontinued as to any defendant not served within the time allowed and treated as if it had never been filed. Dozier v. Crandall, 105 N.C. App. 74, 411 S.E.2d 635, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 480, 420 S.E.2d 826 (1992).

Section (e) of this rule controls in determining when an action is discontinued. Smith v. Starnes, 317 N.C. 613, 346 S.E.2d 424 (1986).

Section 1A-1, Rule 6(b) gives the trial courts the discretion to extend the time provided in section (c) of this rule for service of a summons. Lemons v. Old Hickory Council, 322 N.C. 271, 367 S.E.2d 655, rehearing denied, 322 N.C. 610, 370 S.E.2d 247 (1988).

By adopting § 1A-1, Rule 6(b), the General Assembly has given the trial courts authority to breathe new life and effectiveness into a summons retroactively after it has become functus officio by virtue of not being served within the time prescribed. Lemons v. Old Hickory Council, 322 N.C. 271, 367 S.E.2d 655, rehearing denied, 322 N.C. 610, 370 S.E.2d 247 (1988).

Section 1A-1, Rule 41(b) and section (e) of this rule are not in conflict, and both can be given effect. Gower v. Aetna Ins. Co., 13 N.C. App. 368, 185 S.E.2d 722, aff'd, 281 N.C. 577, 189 S.E.2d 165 (1972).

Discretion of Court. — It is within the discretion of the trial court to extend time to amend a defective summons; thus, as plaintiff failed to show the trial court abused its discretion, the trial court's refusal to extend time was not error. Integon Gen. Ins. Co. v. Martin, 127 N.C. App. 440, 490 S.E.2d 242 (1997).

Chain of Summonses. — Case law has interpreted this section's reference to the chain of summonses as an implicit requirement that an alias or pluries summons contain a reference in its body to indicate its alleged relation to the original. Integon Gen. Ins. Co. v. Martin, 127 N.C. App. 440, 490 S.E.2d 242 (1997).

Where none of the succeeding summonses on their face referred to the original summons and the only indication that the succeeding summonses related to the original summons was that a copy of the complaint was attached to each of the summonses, the attached complaint did not cure the defective summons. Integon Gen. Ins. Co. v. Martin, 127 N.C. App. 440, 490 S.E.2d 242 (1997).

"Discontinuance" is a term of art whose only application in the context of service of process is to an action that must cease for failure of the party to comply with section (d) of this rule. Thereafter a new action may be filed, but the date for purposes of the statute of limitations is that of the later filing. Snead v. Foxx, 329 N.C. 669, 406 S.E.2d 829 (1991).

Discontinuance Under Section (e) Not Analogous to Dismissal Under § 1A-1, Rule 41(b). — A discontinuance under section (e) of this rule is not analogous to a dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 41(b). Central Sys. v. General Heating & Air Conditioning Co., 48 N.C. App. 198, 268 S.E.2d 822, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 400, 273 S.E.2d 445 (1980).

Subsequent Action Not Barred by Discontinuance Under Section (e). — The fact that an action was discontinued under section (e) of this rule for failure to serve defendant with summons within the time allowed after plaintiff had taken a voluntary dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 41 did not bar plaintiff from bringing another action for the same cause. Central Sys. v. General Heating & Air Conditioning Co., 48 N.C. App. 198, 268 S.E.2d 822, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 400, 273 S.E.2d 445 (1980).

The commencement of service by publication pursuant to subsection (j)(1) of this rule is not sufficient to satisfy the requirements of section (e) of this rule. Brown v. Overby, 61 N.C. App. 329, 300 S.E.2d 565 (1983).

A discontinuance breaks the chain of summonses, and a summons endorsed more than 90 days after the issuance of the original summons does not relate back to the original date of filing of the complaint. In re Searle, 74 N.C. App. 61, 327 S.E.2d 315 (1985).

Where alias summons was issued more than 90 days after the date the original summons was issued, it did not comply with subsection (d)(2) of this rule, and thus the original summons could not serve as the basis for the issuance of an alias or pluries summons necessary to maintain an unbroken continuation of the action. Thus, under section (e) of this rule, the action would be deemed to have commenced against defendant on the date of issuance of the alias summons. Huggins v. Hallmark Enters., Inc., 84 N.C. App. 15, 351 S.E.2d 779 (1987).

Relation Back After Ninety Days. — A summons issued more than 90 days after the issuance or endorsement of the previous summons does not relate back to the date of the prior summons, and, rather, issuance of the new summons commences an entirely new action. Reese v. Barbee, 129 N.C. App. 823, 501 S.E.2d 698 (1998), aff'd, 350 N.C. 60, 510 S.E.2d 374 (1999).

Discontinuance on Failure to Secure Extension of Time for Service. — Where plaintiff, presented with the return of her summons unserved, failed to continue her action by securing an endorsement upon the original summons for an extension of time within which to complete service of process pursuant to subsection (d)(1) of this rule, and did not sue out an alias or pluries summons returnable in the same manner as the original process pursuant to subsection (d)(2), the plaintiff's action was consequently discontinued 90 days after the date the original summons was issued. Snead v. Foxx, 329 N.C. 669, 406 S.E.2d 829 (1991), holding that plaintiff's action was barred by the statute of limitations.

Filing of a motion for change of venue or dismissal of the action did not revive an action discontinued by operation of law. Robertson v. Smith, 45 N.C. App. 535, 263

This rule mandates that something be done in the clerk's office to revive a discontinued action, namely, obtaining an alias or pluries summons or an endorsement to the original summons. Byrd v. Trustees of Watts Hosp., 29 N.C. App. 564, 225 S.E.2d 329 (1976); Brown v. Overby, 61 N.C. App. 329, 300 S.E.2d 565 (1983).

Service of Dormant Summons. — Where defendant was served with a dormant summons within the 90-day limit, rather than notice of a discontinued action, the trial court had the authority pursuant to the language of subsection (b) to extend the time for service of process under subsection (c), "to permit the act to be done where the failure to do the act was the result of excusable neglect." Hollowell v. Carlisle, 115 N.C. App. 364, 444 S.E.2d 681 (1994).

Use of Endorsement or Alias or Pluries Summons. — The provisions in section (d) of this rule for an endorsement on the original summons or issuance of an alias or pluries summons apply only when the original summons was not served, and their purpose is to keep the action alive until service can be made. They are not applicable where the original summons was not issued for service on a defendant, but on a person not a party to the action. Roshelli v. Sperry, 57 N.C. App. 305, 291 S.E.2d 355 (1982).

Trial court erred in ruling that alias summons issued more than 90 days after original summons could relate back to the date of issue of the original summons where there had been neither endorsement by the clerk nor issuance of alias summons within the time specified by section (d) of this rule, with the result that the original action was discontinued as to the defendant. Thereafter an alias summons could be issued, but under section (e) of this rule the action would be deemed to have commenced on the date of such issuance. Lackey v. Cook, 40 N.C. App. 522, 253 S.E.2d 335, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 610, 257 S.E.2d 218 (1979).

Failure to Deliver Summons to Defendant in Bad Faith. — Where plaintiff violated section (a) by failing to deliver summons to proper person for service, and where this was done in bad faith and with intent to delay and gain unfair advantage over defendant, trial court properly dismissed plaintiff's action pursuant to Rule 41(b) based upon plaintiff's violation of Rule 4(a) for purposes of delay and in order to gain an unfair advantage over the defendant. Smith v. Quinn, 324 N.C. 316, 378 S.E.2d 28 (1989).

Duly Issued Summons as Basis for Alias or Pluries Summons. — A duly issued summons not served or delivered to the sheriff for service within 30 days of its issuance may nevertheless serve as the basis for an alias or pluries summons so as to toll the statute of limitations. Smith v. Starnes, 317 N.C. 613, 346 S.E.2d 424 (1986).

The case of Deaton v. Thomas, 262 N.C. 565, 138 S.E.2d 201 (1964), which held that a summons issued by the clerk but never delivered to the sheriff to whom it was directed for service may not serve as the basis for the issuance of an alias process or the extension of time for service, was decided under the old rules of civil procedure and relied, in part, on earlier decisions which held that a summons was not issued until it was delivered to the sheriff for service. Those cases are no longer controlling on the question of when a summons is issued. Smith v. Starnes, 317 N.C. 613, 346 S.E.2d 424 (1986).

Tolling of Statute Stops Where Plaintiff Fails to Keep Action Alive. — While the statute of limitations is tolled when suit is properly instituted, and it stays tolled as long as the action is alive, the tolling stops if the suit is discontinued by operation of law because of the plaintiff's failure to keep the action alive in an authorized manner after the original summons has lost its efficacy by not being served within the time allowed. Long v. Fink, 80 N.C. App. 482, 342 S.E.2d 557 (1986).

Time to Answer Not Extended. — Plaintiffs' motions for entry of default and default judgment were made after defendant's time to answer had expired, as although summons and complaint were served upon defendant by mail, § 1A-1, Rule 6(e) did not apply to extend his time to answer to 33 days, because the 30 days defendant had under § 1A-1, Rule 12 to answer the complaint began running when defendant was served with the summons and complaint, not when plaintiff mailed it. Williams v. Moore, 95 N.C. App. 601, 383 S.E.2d 416 (1989).

Summons Need Not Be Delivered to Sheriff Within 30 Days to Be Kept Alive. — In light of the clear language of section (e) of this rule on the discontinuance of a summons, there is no justification for construing the rule to require delivery of the summons to the sheriff within 30 days of its issuance to keep the summons alive. Smith v. Starnes, 317 N.C. 613, 346 S.E.2d 424 (1986).

The case of Adams v. Brooks, 73 N.C. App. 624, 327 S.E.2d 19, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 596, 332 S.E.2d 177 (1985), holding that plaintiff's summons could not be used as a basis for an extension of time for service since the summons was not delivered to the sheriff for service on defendant within 30 days of its issuance, is overruled. Smith v. Starnes, 317 N.C. 613, 346 S.E.2d 424 (1986).

Unserved Dormant Summons Not Basis of Jurisdiction. — Where summons was returned unserved by sheriff's department on October 17, 1982, (within 30 days of its issuance), and plaintiff served the original summons upon the Secretary of State's office on November 3, 1982, without having revived it under section (d) of this rule, this dormant summons could not and did not subject defendant to the jurisdiction of the court. Huggins v. Hallmark Enters., Inc., 84 N.C. App. 15, 351 S.E.2d 779 (1987).

Allowance of Voluntary Dismissal Held Nugatory. — Where an action was discontinued by operation of law under section (e) of this rule, the statute of limitations having thereafter immediately run its remaining course, the judge's subsequent order of voluntary dismissal allowing plaintiff another year within which to refile the action was nugatory. Long v. Fink, 80 N.C. App. 482, 342 S.E.2d 557 (1986).

A voluntary dismissal of negligence action without prejudice did not toll the statute of limitations in a case in which the plaintiff, seeing the statute of limitations about to run, received an order extending the time for filing a complaint but failed to serve defendant with civil summons and the order. The defective service of process discontinued plaintiff's original action, and the trial court properly treated the voluntary dismissal as if it had never been filed and the statute of limitations as if it had not been tolled. Plaintiff's second complaint, therefore, constituted a new action which plaintiff failed to file within the three years required by the statute of limitations. Latham v. Cherry, 111 N.C. App. 871, 433 S.E.2d 478 (1993), cert. denied, 335 N.C. 556, 441 S.E.2d 116 (1994).

VIII. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-14, 1-65, 1-88, 1-88.1, 1-89, 1-94, 1-95, 1-96, and 1-105.

Requirements of Due Process. — Due process of law requires that a defendant be properly notified of the proceeding against him and have an opportunity to be present and to be heard. B-W Acceptance Corp. v. Spencer, 268 N.C. 1, 149 S.E.2d 570 (1966).

Purpose of Service of Summons. — The purpose of service of summons is to give notice to the party against whom the proceedings or action is commenced, and any notification which reasonably accomplishes that purpose answers the claims of law and justice. Morton v. Blue Ridge Ins. Co., 250 N.C. 722, 110 S.E.2d 330 (1959), citing Jester v. Baltimore Steam Packet Co., 131 N.C. 54, 42 S.E. 447 (1902).

Service of summons, unless waived, is a jurisdictional requirement. Kleinfeldt v. Shoney's of Charlotte, Inc., 257 N.C. 791, 127 S.E.2d 573 (1962).

Service Not Waived by Appearance Under Order for Pretrial Examination. — The appearance of a party under order of court for the purpose of a pretrial examination does not amount to a waiver of service of summons, since the appearance is not voluntary. B-W Acceptance Corp. v. Spencer, 268 N.C. 1, 149 S.E.2d 570 (1966).

As to service by rural policeman for sheriff, see Griffin v. Barnes, 242 N.C. 306, 87 S.E.2d 560 (1955).

Where process issued to the sheriff of one county was returned without any notation thereon, but with an accompanying letter stating that the defendant named was in another county, the act of the clerk in marking through the name of the first county and writing above it the name of the second county, so that the process was directed to the sheriff of the second county, amounted to the issuance of new process and instituted a new action as of the date of the later issuance, and service by the sheriff of the second county met all the requirements of the law. Morton v. Blue Ridge Ins. Co., 250 N.C. 722, 110 S.E.2d 330 (1959).

Effect of Substituting Counties in Original Summons. — Substituting "Mecklenburg" for "Cleveland" County in the original summons and sending such summons to the sheriff of Mecklenburg County worked a discontinuance of the action commenced by issuance of summons to Cleveland County. Morton v. Blue Ridge Ins. Co., 250 N.C. 722, 110 S.E.2d 330 (1959).

Signature of Sheriff. — Where process issued to the sheriff of one county was returned and the clerk struck through the name of the county and inserted the name of a second county, so that the process was directed to the sheriff of the second county, the fact that the sheriff of the second county signed it at the place for the signature of the sheriff of the first county was immaterial, it appearing from the affidavit of the clerk that the summons was served by the sheriff of the second county, and further, the court would take judicial notice of the person who was the sheriff of the county. Morton v. Blue Ridge Ins. Co., 250 N.C. 722, 110 S.E.2d 330 (1959).

Summons Signed by Deputy. — Where a summons, otherwise complete and regular, was signed by the deputy clerk and thereupon served, the summons was not void. The failure of the deputy to sign the name of his principal was a nonjurisdictional irregularity. Beck v. Voncannon, 237 N.C. 707, 75 S.E.2d 895 (1953).

Want of Signature of Clerk. — The want of a signature of the clerk on a summons otherwise complete with seal does not render the summons fatally defective and ineffectual to confer jurisdiction, but merely irregular and subject to amendment; for any defect or omission of a formal character which would be waived or remedied by a general appearance or an answer upon the merits may be treated as a matter which can be remedied by amendment.

The imprint of the seal furnishes internal evidence of the official origin of the summons. Beck v. Voncannon, 237 N.C. 707, 75 S.E.2d 895 (1953).

Return as Evidence of Service. — Where it is sought to condemn the lands of an infant, such infant must defend by general guardian where one has been appointed; and where service of process was made upon the general guardian, and it appeared from the officer's return of notice that service had been executed upon the infant, such return was sufficient evidence of its service to take the case to the jury upon the question involved in the issue. Long v. Town of Rockingham, 187 N.C. 199, 121 S.E. 461 (1924).

Service Held Insufficient. — Delivery of a copy of summons and the complaint to defendant husband with instructions to him to deliver it to defendant wife was not valid service on the wife. Harrington v. Rice, 245 N.C. 640, 97 S.E.2d 239 (1957).

Where, apparently through inadvertence, the order for service of process upon a nonresident motorist was directed to the sheriff of one county, but was forwarded by the plaintiff's attorneys to the sheriff of another county and by him served upon the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, service was insufficient, notwithstanding that notice of service of process upon the Commissioner and a copy thereof did reach the defendant by registered mail. Byrd v. Pawlick, 362 F.2d 390 (4th Cir. 1966).

A summons was held patently defective under former § 1-105 when it was directed not to the nonresident defendants as required by this rule but to the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, who was summoned and notified to appear and answer the complaint. Philpott v. Kerns, 285 N.C. 225, 203 S.E.2d 778 (1974).

Motion to Set Aside Default Judgment for Want of Service. — A meritorious defense is not essential or relevant on a motion to set aside a default judgment for want of jurisdiction by reason of want of service of summons. Kleinfeldt v. Shoney's of Charlotte, Inc., 257 N.C. 791, 127 S.E.2d 573 (1962).

Summons a Nullity If Not Served Within Prescribed Time. — The service of summons after the date fixed for its return, there being no endorsement by the clerk extending the time for service, is a nullity. Webb v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 268 N.C. 552, 151 S.E.2d 19 (1966).

Purpose of Keeping Up Chain of Summonses. — The real purpose of the provisions of law with respect to keeping up the chain of summonses is to maintain the original date of the commencement of the action where the suit may be affected by the running of a statute of limitations, the pendency of another action or the time limit of an enabling act. Morton v. Blue Ridge Ins. Co., 250 N.C. 722, 110 S.E.2d 330 (1959).

The true office of an alias summons is to continue the action referable to its original date of institution, when the first summons issued has not been served. Rogerson v. Leggett, 145 N.C. 7, 58 S.E. 596 (1907); Powell v. Dail, 172 N.C. 261, 90 S.E. 194 (1916); McGuire v. Montvale Lumber Co., 190 N.C. 806, 131 S.E. 274 (1925). See also, Green v. Chrismon, 223 N.C. 724, 28 S.E.2d 215 (1943).

An alias summons issues only when the original summons has not been served upon a party defendant named therein. Cherry v. Woolard, 244 N.C. 603, 94 S.E.2d 562 (1956).

Former § 1-95 related solely to the maintenance of chain of process against an original defendant not properly served, and had no application to the service of process upon an additional party after service had been had on the original defendant. Cherry v. Woolard, 244 N.C. 603, 94 S.E.2d 562 (1956).

Alias summons must be sued out within ninety days next after the date of the original summons. Mintz v. Frink, 217 N.C. 101, 6 S.E.2d 804 (1940).

An alias or pluries summons must be served within ninety days after the date of issue of the next proceeding summons in the chain of summonses, if the plaintiff wishes to avoid a discontinuance. Green v. Chrismon, 223 N.C. 724, 28 S.E.2d 215 (1943).

To "sue out" means "to obtain by application; to petition for and take out." McIntyre v. Austin, 232 N.C. 189, 59 S.E.2d 586 (1950).

Suing Out Alias or Pluries Summons to Prevent Discontinuance. — The failure of service of the original summons in an action must be followed by an alias or pluries writ or a summons successively and properly issued in order to preserve a continuous single action referable to the date of its issue, for otherwise it is a discontinuance as to the defendant. Hatch v. Alamance R.R., 183 N.C. 617, 112 S.E. 529 (1922).

In order to bring a defendant into court and hold him bound by its decree in the absence of waiver or voluntary appearance, a summons must be issued by the clerk and timely served upon him by the officer; if not timely served, the summons must be returned, with proper notation, and alias or pluries summons issued and served, or the original summons will lose its vitality and become functus officio and void. Green v. Chrismon, 223 N.C. 724, 28 S.E.2d 215 (1943).

In a civil action or special proceeding where a defendant has not been served with the original summons, the proper issuance of alias and pluries summons keeps the cause of action alive, and prevents its discontinuance. Sizemore v. Maroney, 263 N.C. 14, 138 S.E.2d 803 (1964).

The duty is placed upon plaintiff to sue out the alias or pluries summons, if preceding writs have proved ineffectual, in order to avoid a discontinuance of the action. Williams v. Bray, 273 N.C. 198, 159 S.E.2d 556 (1968).

The duty is imposed upon the plaintiff to sue out an alias summons if the original writ failed of its purpose or proved ineffectual, and likewise to sue out a pluries summons when the preceding writs have proved ineffectual, or there will be a discontinuance of the action. McIntyre v. Austin, 232 N.C. 189, 59 S.E.2d 586 (1950).

Where plaintiff, who has commenced his action prior to the bar of the statute of limitations, fails to obtain valid service upon defendant, he is required to sue out alias or pluries summons if he desires to prevent a discontinuance. Hodges v. Home Ins. Co., 233 N.C. 289, 63 S.E.2d 819 (1951).

A discontinuance occurs only when the summons has not been served. Rogerson v. Leggett, 145 N.C. 7, 58 S.E. 596 (1907); Gomer v. Clayton, 214 N.C. 309, 199 S.E. 77 (1938), modified on rehearing, 215 N.C. 82, 1 S.E.2d 133 (1939).

Break in Chain of Summonses Works a Discontinuance. — Where in a civil action alias or pluries summonses are issued in the event of nonservice of the original, a break in the chain of summonses works a discontinuance. Neely v. Minus, 196 N.C. 345, 145 S.E. 771 (1928).

Effect of Issuance of Alias and Pluries Summonses. — If the alias or pluries summons contains sufficient information in the body thereof to show its relation to the original summons, the legal service of such writ will be effective from the date of the original process. McIntyre v. Austin, 232 N.C. 189, 59 S.E.2d 586 (1950).

Where the original process was kept alive by the proper issuance of alias and pluries summonses, a second action instituted subsequent to the issuance of the original process in the first would not be dismissed, notwithstanding the fact that process in the subsequent action was actually served prior to the service of pluries summons in the first. McIntyre v. Austin, 232 N.C. 189, 59 S.E.2d 586 (1950).

Plaintiff may apply orally or in writing to the clerk of the superior court for an alias or pluries summons, and upon such application it is the duty of the clerk of the superior court to issue the writ. No order of court is necessary to authorize the clerk to issue an alias or pluries summons. McIntyre v. Austin, 232 N.C. 189, 59 S.E.2d 586 (1950); Williams v. Bray, 273 N.C. 198, 159 S.E.2d 556 (1968).

An ordinary summons cannot be effective as an alias or pluries summons by mere endorsement of the words "alias" or "pluries" thereon. McIntyre v. Austin, 232 N.C. 189, 59 S.E.2d 586 (1950).

Sufficiency of Alias or Pluries Summons. — Where there is nothing upon a paper writing to indicate that it is an alias or pluries summons or that it relates to any original process, such paper writing, even though sufficient to constitute an original summons, cannot constitute an alias or pluries summons. Webb v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 268 N.C. 552, 151 S.E.2d 19 (1966).

Return Showing Late Service as Sufficient Evidence of Nonservice. — Where the sheriff served summons more than ten days after its issuance, his return was sufficient evidence of nonservice to enable plaintiff to sue out an alias summons. Atwood v. Atwood, 233 N.C. 208, 63 S.E.2d 103 (1951).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Service of Process upon Defendant in Divorce Action by Leaving Copies with Defendant's Mother at Defendant's Address Is Sufficient Service and Is Sufficient for Nonjury Trial. — See opinion of Attorney General to the Honorable John S. Gardner, District Court Judge, Sixteenth Judicial District, 41 N.C.A.G. 473 (1971).

Service of process pursuant to §§ 1-105 and 1-105.1 upon the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles may be made by leaving a copy thereof with a fee of three dollars ($3.00) in the hands of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, or in his office. Service by Sheriff or Marshall is not required. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. J.M. Penny, Deputy Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, 55 N.C.A.G. 26 (1985).

Service upon the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, in a manner consistent with this rule, meets the requirement of § 1-105. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. J.M. Penny, Deputy Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, 55 N.C.A.G. 26 (1985).

Summary Ejectment Proceedings. — Because § 7A-217(4) states that the procedure found in § 42-29 can be used in summary ejectment cases only, and because summary ejectment is in the nature of an in rem proceeding, an in personam money damages claim cannot be heard and a money judgment cannot be entered in an action where service of process is effected through the alternative method under § 42-29. The requirements for actual service of process found elsewhere in G.S. § 7A-213 and in this rule would still apply to the claim for rents and other money damages. See opinion of Attorney General to Hon. Thomas N. Hix, Chief District Court Judge, 29th Judicial Circuit, 60 N.C.A.G. 95 (1992).

Rule 5. Service and filing of pleadings and other papers.

(a) Service — When required. — Every order required by its terms to be served, every pleading subsequent to the original complaint unless the court otherwise orders because of numerous defendants, every paper relating to discovery required to be served upon a party unless the court otherwise orders, every written motion other than one which may be heard ex parte, and every written notice, appearance, demand, offer of judgment and similar paper shall be served upon each of the parties, but no service need be made on parties in default for failure to appear except that pleadings asserting new or additional claims for relief against them shall be served upon them in the manner provided for service of summons in Rule 4.

(b) Service — How made. — A pleading setting forth a counterclaim or cross claim shall be filed with the court and a copy thereof shall be served on the party against whom it is asserted or on his attorney of record. With respect to all pleadings subsequent to the original complaint and other papers required or permitted to be served, service with due return may be made in the manner provided for service and return of process in Rule 4 and may be made upon either the party or, unless service upon the party himself is ordered by the court, upon his attorney of record. With respect to such other pleadings and papers, service upon the attorney or upon a party may also be made by delivering a copy to him or by mailing it to him at his last known address or, if no address is known, by filing it with the clerk of court. Delivery of a copy within this rule means handing it to the attorney or to the party; or leaving it at the attorney's office with a partner or employee. Service by mail shall be complete upon deposit of the pleading or paper enclosed in a post-paid, properly addressed wrapper in a post office or official depository under the exclusive care and custody of the United States Postal Service.

(c) Service — Numerous defendants. — In any action in which there are unusually large numbers of defendants, the court, upon motion or of its own initiative, may order that service of the pleadings of the defendants and replies thereto need not be made as between the defendants and that any crossclaim, counterclaim, or matter constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense contained therein shall be deemed to be denied or avoided by all other parties and that the filing of any such pleading and service thereof upon the plaintiff constitutes due notice of it to the parties. A copy of every such order shall be served upon the parties in such manner and form as the court directs.

(d) Filing. — All pleadings subsequent to the complaint shall be filed with the court. All other papers required to be served upon a party, including requests for admissions, shall be filed with the court either before service or within five days thereafter, except that depositions, interrogatories, requests for documents, and answers and responses to those requests may not be filed unless ordered by the court or until used in the proceeding. The party taking a deposition or obtaining material through discovery is responsible for its preservation and delivery to the court if needed or so ordered. With respect to all pleadings and other papers as to which service and return has not been made in the manner provided in Rule 4, proof of service shall be made by filing with the court a certificate either by the attorney or the party that the paper was served in the manner prescribed by this rule, or a certificate of acceptance of service by the attorney or the party to be served. Such certificate shall show the date and method of service or the date of acceptance of service.

(e)(1) Filing with the court defined. — The filing of pleadings and other papers with the court as required by these rules shall be made by filing them with the clerk of the court, except that the judge may permit the papers to be filed with him, in which event he shall note thereon the filing date and forthwith transmit them to the office of the clerk.

(2) Filing by telefacsimile transmission. — If, pursuant to G.S. 7A-34 and G.S. 7A-343, the Supreme Court and the Administrative Officer of the Courts establish uniform rules, regulations, procedures and specifications for the filing of pleadings or other court papers by telefacsimile transmission, filing may be made by the transmission when, in the manner, and to the extent provided therein. ## COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — Section (a). This section is based upon the federal rule and incorporates part of the West Virginia rule.

Former § 1-125 required that a copy of the answer be mailed to the plaintiff or his attorney of record by the clerk and prohibited the clerk from allowing the answer to be filed without a copy for that purpose. Former § 1-140 stated that if no copy of an answer containing a counterclaim was served upon the plaintiff or his attorney, the allegations in the counterclaim should be denied as a matter of law. Other statutes dealing with serving of notice included: former § 1-578, providing that no motion might be heard and no orders in the cause might be made outside the county where the action was pending unless notice of motion was served on the opposing party in accordance with the provisions of § 1-581; former § 1-568.13, service of order upon person to be examined under adverse party examination statutes; former § 1-568.14, notice to all other parties; former § 8-89, inspection of writings; former § 8-90, production of documents; former §§ 8-71 and 72, depositions; former § 1-153, motion to strike; and § 40-17, notice to parties in eminent domain proceedings.

This section is intended to include all such motions and orders. The phrase "and similar paper" indicates that the enumeration of papers is not exhaustive.

Section (b). — This section is based upon the federal rule but does not track the exact language of the federal rule. The section preserves the requirement of former § 1-140 that a counterclaim or crossclaim be served on the party against whom it is asserted or on his attorney of record.

Former §§ 1-585, 586, and 587 prescribed the form of notices and method of service, which was similar to this section. These provisions permit service upon a party or his attorney unless otherwise provided.

No statutory provision providing heretofore for notice by mail has been found, but such notice by mail was upheld by the court in a case where defendant filed a written motion to strike portions of the complaint and the court found that copies of the motion had been mailed to and received by plaintiff's attorneys. The court said in such circumstances plaintiff was not entitled to have notice of the motion to strike served on her by an officer. Heffner v. Jefferson Std. Life Ins. Co., 214 N.C. 359, 199 S.E. 293 (1938).

Section (c). — This section tracks the language of the federal rule. It should be pointed out that the rule is permissive and applies only when the court makes an order under the rule. If such an order is made, a copy of the order must be served upon all parties. If such an order is made, each defendant prepares his answer to the complaint in which he may state his defenses to the complaint, counterclaims against the plaintiff, and cross actions against any or all of the defendants. Each defendant must serve his answer upon the plaintiff within the time prescribed by Rule 12 (a) and file it with the court. The plaintiff is not required to serve and file replies to counterclaims stated in any of the answers of the defendants, and no defendant need serve and file an answer to a crossclaim asserted against him in any of the answers of the defendants. Any counterclaim, crossclaim, or matter constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense contained in any of the answers of the defendants shall be deemed denied. It should be noted that this section dispenses with service of replies to counterclaims and answers to crossclaims only. Other pleadings and all motions must be served as in other cases.

This section also provides that "the filing of any such pleading and service thereof on the plaintiff constitutes due notice of it to the parties." In all cases where an order is entered under the provisions of this section the defendant or his attorney would be required to examine the court file to determine if any crossclaim had been filed against him.

Former § 1-140 provided that if an answer containing a counterclaim was not served on the plaintiff or his attorney, the counterclaim should be deemed denied. The second paragraph of the same statute provided that if a defendant asserted a crossclaim against a codefendant, no judgment by default might be entered against such codefendant unless he had been served with a notice together with a copy of such crossclaim. Thus, the statute did not require that a counterclaim or crossclaim be "served"; it merely denied certain kinds of relief (default judgment) if such was not served.

Default provisions such as Rule 55 would obviously be inoperative if the judge made an order under this section.

Section (d). — Although this section incorporates most of the federal rule, federal Rule 5 (d) was deemed insufficient for North Carolina practice. Consequently, this section is more detailed than the federal rule. The section also incorporates part of the West Virginia rule but does not track the language of that rule. There is no provision in the federal rule with respect to acceptance of service or of a certificate indicating the method of service. It is believed that this section is more in line with North Carolina practice with respect to service or acceptance of service of summons and other process.

This section will not affect the provisions of certain other rules with respect to filing of papers, such as Rule 3, which requires the complaint to be filed before service.

In substance, this section requires the filing with the court of all papers which are required to be served. There are also papers which are not required to be served, which must also be filed, such as motions which may be heard ex parte. Good practice would indicate that all papers relating to the action should be filed with the court whether required by these rules or not.

Section (e). — This section tracks the federal rule. It reflects prior North Carolina practice.

Comment to the 1975 Amendment. — The amendment adds the words "every paper relating to discovery required to be served upon a party unless the court otherwise orders." It, therefore, makes it clear that all papers relating to discovery required to be served on any party must be served on all parties, unless the court orders otherwise. The language of the former rule expressly included notices and demands, but was not explicit as to answers or responses under Rules 33, 34, and 36. The court is given the power to vary the requirement if in a given case it proves needlessly onerous, such as where the papers are voluminous or where there are numerous parties.

CASE NOTES

This rule is not applicable to motions of counsel to withdraw. Hensgen v. Hensgen, 53 N.C. App. 331, 280 S.E.2d 766 (1981).

This rule has no applicability to service of case on appeal. Thurston v. Salisbury Zoning Bd. of Adjustment, 24 N.C. App. 288, 210 S.E.2d 275 (1974).

Section (b) applies to the service of notice of appeal from a magistrate to the district court. Ball Photo Supply Co. v. McClain, 30 N.C. App. 132, 226 S.E.2d 178 (1976).

Written motion to set aside a default judgment is not one which might be heard ex parte. Doxol Gas of Angier, Inc. v. Barefoot, 10 N.C. App. 703, 179 S.E.2d 890 (1971).

A report of commissioners is a "similar paper" within the contemplation of this rule and must be "served" upon each of the interested parties. Macon v. Edinger, 303 N.C. 274, 278 S.E.2d 256 (1981).

Sufficient notice of the filing of a report of commissioners is given to a party to a partition proceeding when a copy of the report is duly mailed as provided by section (b) of this rule. Macon v. Edinger, 303 N.C. 274, 278 S.E.2d 256 (1981).

Where the report of the commissioners in a partition proceeding became final, in that all errors were waived if exceptions were not filed within 10 days after filing, the report was held to be a "similar paper" under this rule, which had to be served upon each of the parties, since it is the purpose of this rule that every party be given due process and a reasonable opportunity to be heard. Macon v. Edinger, 49 N.C. App. 624, 272 S.E.2d 411 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 303 N.C. 274, 278 S.E.2d 256.

What Service Required Where Party Intervenes. — An intervenor party who is granted permission to intervene pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 24(b)(2) is not required to then issue a summons and complaint pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 4. The service pursuant to this rule of the motion to intervene accompanied with the complaint is sufficient service upon the party against whom relief is sought or denied in the intervenor's pleading and is sufficient process to acquire jurisdiction over the party if all other requisites for jurisdiction over the party are met. Kahan v. Longiotti, 45 N.C. App. 367, 263 S.E.2d 345, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 374, 267 S.E.2d 675 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141 (1982).

Service of the motion and proposed complaint pursuant to this rule is sufficient service of process on defendant where the intervenor's complaint is not entirely independent of the original complaint and there is no objection that the intervenor's complaint could not be properly served on defendant in this jurisdiction. Kahan v. Longiotti, 45 N.C. App. 367, 263 S.E.2d 345, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 374, 267 S.E.2d 675 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141 (1982).

Service, pursuant to this rule, of the motion accompanied with the pleading is sufficient service upon the party against whom relief is sought or denied in the intervenor's pleading and is sufficient process to acquire jurisdiction over the party if all other requisites for jurisdiction are met. In re Baby Boy Shamp, 82 N.C. App. 606, 347 S.E.2d 848 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 695, 351 S.E.2d 750 (1987).

Time for Service. — Section 1A-1, Rule 59(b), when construed with section (a) of this rule, means that service must be made within 10 days when service is required. Hennessee v. Cogburn, 39 N.C. App. 627, 251 S.E.2d 623 (1979), cert. denied, 297 N.C. 300, 254 S.E.2d 919 (1979).

Notice of Additional Claims to Party in Default. — A party who is in default for failure to appear is ordinarily not entitled to notice of additional pleadings in the case, but where a new or additional claim is asserted, service on the party, even though in default, is required in the same manner as provided by § 1A-1, Rule 4 for the service of summons. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Rolfe, 83 N.C. App. 625, 351 S.E.2d 117 (1986).

Plaintiff, who defaulted on original complaint which alleged that she was a resident of this State, was entitled to notice of subsequent motion to declare that none of her property was exempt by virtue of non-residency, and an opportunity to contest the factual allegations as to her non-residency. Where she was given neither notice nor an opportunity to be heard, in violation of statutory and constitutional provisions, the order declaring that her property was not exempt was invalid, and she was entitled to relief therefrom pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 60(b)(4). First Union Nat'l Bank v. Rolfe, 83 N.C. App. 625, 351 S.E.2d 117 (1986).

Failure of Tenant in Common to Answer Not Cause for Entry of Default. — Where a respondent in a partition proceeding failed to answer the petition for partition because he was satisfied that the interests of the tenants in common were correctly alleged and was satisfied that the relief prayed for was appropriate, his rights were not adversely affected by his failure to plead, and petitioners were not entitled to an entry of default; respondents were therefore not "in default" under § 1A-1, Rule 55, and the provision of section (a) of this rule, which obviates the need for service on parties who are "in default," did not apply. Macon v. Edinger, 49 N.C. App. 624, 272 S.E.2d 411 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 303 N.C. 274, 278 S.E.2d 256.

Notice may be served on the attorney of record, and such notice is notice to the party. Griffith v. Griffith, 38 N.C. App. 25, 247 S.E.2d 30, cert. denied, 296 N.C. 106, 249 S.E.2d 804 (1978).

Failure to Send Notice to Attorney Not Violation. — Although attorney should have honored defense counsel's request to be notified of calendar notices and instead served defendants directly, he did not violate the Code of Professional Responsibility or the Rules of Civil Procedure. Williams v. Hinton, 127 N.C. App. 421, 490 S.E.2d 239 (1997).

The relationship between a party and his attorney of record continues so long as the opposing party may enter a motion in the matter or apply to the court for further relief. Griffith v. Griffith, 38 N.C. App. 25, 247 S.E.2d 30, cert. denied, 296 N.C. 106, 249 S.E.2d 804 (1978).

Presumption of Service of Request Proper. — Plaintiff was presumed to have been properly served with request for admissions, despite denying receipt, where defendants presented a copy of a return receipt signed by the defendant's husband, plaintiff conceded it was sent to the correct address, and plaintiff made no attempt to rebut receipt when questioned by the trial court. Goins v. Puleo, 350 N.C. 277, 512 S.E.2d 748 (1999).

Service of Contempt Order in Alimony Action by Delivery to Attorney. — By filing an answer and counterclaim, defendant made a general appearance in an alimony and child custody and support action, and a contempt show cause order was properly served on him by hand delivery to his attorney. Brown v. Brown, 47 N.C. App. 323, 267 S.E.2d 345 (1980).

Service of Defendant's Attorney with Notice of Motion for Enforcement of Alimony. — A plaintiff seeking enforcement of an order for alimony need not serve defendant with a new summons. Simply serving him with notice of the motion for enforcement is sufficient. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, subsection (b) of this rule allows service of notice of written motions by service on defendant's attorney of record. Miller v. Miller, 98 N.C. App. 221, 390 S.E.2d 352 (1990), cert. denied, 327 N.C. 637, 399 S.E.2d 124 (1990).

Service of defendant's attorney of record in divorce case in 1976 with copies of motion for assignment of wages and show cause order of 1988 was proper, despite defendant's contention that attorney was hired only to protect defendant's interest in the dissolution of his marriage in 1976. Miller v. Miller, 98 N.C. App. 221, 390 S.E.2d 352 (1990), cert. denied, 327 N.C. 637, 399 S.E.2d 124 (1990).

Service on Attorney of Motion to Reduce Support Payments to Judgment. — Defendant in an action for unpaid child support could not complain of inadequate notice of plaintiff's motion to reduce to judgment support payments alleged to be in arrears where defendant's attorney of record was properly served with notice. Griffith v. Griffith, 38 N.C. App. 25, 247 S.E.2d 30, cert. denied, 296 N.C. 106, 249 S.E.2d 804 (1978).

Where motion for alimony did not specify a date for a hearing, but was served, by being deposited in the mail, properly addressed to defendant's attorney, at least five days before an already scheduled hearing, plaintiff properly proceeded to apply for alimony. McCarley v. McCarley, 289 N.C. 109, 221 S.E.2d 490 (1976).

Effect of Failure to Serve Copy of Answer. — The requirement in section (b) that a counterclaim or cross claim be filed with the court and a copy sent to the opposing party does not make a new or separate litigation out of a counterclaim or cross claim which arises out of the same transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim. Therefore, whatever other consequences may flow from failure to serve a copy of the answer, such failure does not result in causing the statute of limitations to run against the claim until such service is accomplished. In re Foreclosure of Deed of Trust, 20 N.C. App. 610, 202 S.E.2d 318 (1974).

Filing of Answer Within 30 Days Not Required Under Section (d). — While § 1A-1, Rule 12(a)(1) requires that the defendant serve his answer within 30 days, there is nothing in section (d) of this rule that requires the defendant to file his answer with the court within 30 days as well. Section (d) does not provide any period in which the filing must take place. Quaker Furn. House, Inc. v. Ball, 31 N.C. App. 140, 228 S.E.2d 475 (1976).

Requests for Monetary Relief. — A request for monetary relief sought must be served, and the request must also be filed with the court unless it can be shown to be a discovery document of the type specifically excepted in subdivision (d) of this rule. Cottle v. Thompson, 123 N.C. App. 147, 472 S.E.2d 189 (1996).

Trial court erred in dismissing plaintiff's action for failing to file a statement of monetary relief sought where no request for a statement of monetary relief sought was ever filed with the court. Cottle v. Thompson, 123 N.C. App. 147, 472 S.E.2d 189 (1996).

A request for a statement of monetary relief sought cannot be considered a discovery document of the type specifically excepted in subdivision (d) of this rule. Cottle v. Thompson, 123 N.C. App. 147, 472 S.E.2d 189 (1996).

Affidavit Served Prior to Hearing. — Plaintiff's affidavit was served on defendant's attorney within the meaning of subsection (b), when it was mailed prior to hearing even though opposition did not see it until at the hearing. Hedrick v. Rains, 344 N.C. 729, 477 S.E.2d 171 (1996).

Applied in North Brook Farm Lines v. McBrayer, 35 N.C. App. 34, 241 S.E.2d 74 (1978); Fungaroli v. Fungaroli, 40 N.C. App. 397, 252 S.E.2d 849 (1979); Phillips v. Phillips, 46 N.C. App. 558, 265 S.E.2d 441 (1980); Cromer v. Cromer, 49 N.C. App. 403, 271 S.E.2d 541 (1980).

Quoted in Towne v. Cope, 32 N.C. App. 660, 233 S.E.2d 624 (1977); Estrada v. Burnham, 316 N.C. 318, 341 S.E.2d 538 (1986).

Rule 6. Time.

(a) Computation. — In computing any period of time prescribed or allowed by these rules, by order of court, or by any applicable statute, including rules, orders or statutes respecting publication of notices, the day of the act, event, default or publication after which the designated period of time begins to run is not to be included. The last day of the period so computed is to be included, unless it is a Saturday, Sunday or a legal holiday, in which event the period runs until the end of the next day which is not a Saturday, Sunday, or a legal holiday. When the period of time prescribed or allowed is less than seven days, intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays shall be excluded in the computation. A half holiday shall be considered as other days and not as a holiday.

(b) Enlargement. — When by these rules or by a notice given thereunder or by order of court an act is required or allowed to be done at or within a specified time, the court for cause shown may at any time in its discretion with or without motion or notice order the period enlarged if request therefor is made before the expiration of the period originally prescribed or as extended by a previous order. Upon motion made after the expiration of the specified period, the judge may permit the act to be done where the failure to act was the result of excusable neglect. Notwithstanding any other provisions of this rule, the parties may enter into binding stipulations without approval of the court enlarging the time, not to exceed in the aggregate 30 days, within which an act is required or allowed to be done under these rules, provided, however, that neither the court nor the parties may extend the time for taking any action under Rules 50(b), 52, 59(b), (d), (e), 60(b), except to the extent and under the conditions stated in them.

(c) Unaffected by expiration of session. — The period of time provided for the doing of any act or the taking of any proceeding is not affected or limited by the continued existence or expiration of a session of court. The continued existence or expiration of a session of court in no way affects the power of a court to do any act or take any proceeding, but no issue of fact shall be submitted to a jury out of session.

(d) For motions, affidavits. — A written motion, other than one which may be heard ex parte, and notice of the hearing thereof shall be served not later than five days before the time specified for the hearing, unless a different period is fixed by these rules or by order of the court. Such an order may for cause shown be made on ex parte application. When a motion is supported by affidavit, the affidavit shall be served with the motion; and except as otherwise provided in Rule 59(c), opposing affidavits may unless the court permits them to be served at some other time be served not later than one day before the hearing.

(e) Additional time after service by mail. — Whenever a party has the right to do some act or take some proceedings within a prescribed period after the service of a notice or other paper upon him and the notice or paper is served upon him by mail, three days shall be added to the prescribed period. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Section (a). — The basic rule of excluding the first and including the last day is presently embodied in § 1-593 as to the time within which an act is to be done, and in § 1-594 as to publication of notices. Section 1-593 excludes the last day if it is a Sunday or a legal holiday. The federal rule and this section also exclude Saturdays. This section also conforms publication period time requirements to other time computations.

One other significant change is wrought by adoption of this provision. Formerly, intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays were included in computing the time, no matter how short the period was. The federal rule makes allowance for the shorter periods of time by providing that if the period is seven days or less, intermediate Saturdays, Sundays or holidays shall not be included.

Section (b). — This section, based upon the federal rule, is more detailed than former statutory provisions. However, there is no basic change in procedure. Former § 1-125 permitted the clerk to extend the time for filing answer or demurrer for a period of time not exceeding 20 days. Former § 1-152 permitted the judge in his discretion to enlarge the time for the doing of any act. Former § 1-220 permitted the clerk or the judge to relieve a party from a judgment, order, verdict or other proceeding taken against him through his mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, and to supply an omission in any proceeding.

Section (c). — Self-explanatory.

Section (d). — Former § 1-581 provided for 10 days' notice of motion. Thus, adoption of this section results in halving the normal period of notice.

Section (e). — There is no present statutory equivalent to this section. As to service of notice, the statutes do not contemplate service by mail. However, service of notice on plaintiff's attorneys by mail was upheld in Heffner v. Jefferson Std. Life Ins. Co., 214 N.C. 359, 199 S.E. 293 (1938). There are other instances in which service by mail is possible.

VI. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

The 30-day provision in § 1A-1, Rule 41(d) should not be read in conjunction with subsection (b) of this rule. Sanford v. Starlite Disco, Inc., 66 N.C. App. 470, 311 S.E.2d 67 (1984).

Construction With Other Provisions. — The trial court had no authority under this rule to extend the time plaintiff had to file petition for review of annexation ordinance, because the thirty day time limitation is not a time limitation contained in the Rules of Civil Procedure, but a mandate set by the legislature in § 160A-38. Chicora Country Club, Inc. v. Town of Erwin, 128 N.C. App. 101, 493 S.E.2d 797 (1997).

A paper writing is deemed to be filed when it is delivered for that purpose to the proper officer and received by him. Peebles v. Moore, 302 N.C. 351, 275 S.E.2d 833 (1981).

Responsibility to Pay Fee. — Failure to pay the filing fees would not be excused because counsel relied upon the statement of an anonymous Assistant Clerk of Court that no fee was required, and when the notice of appeal was filed with the county clerk's office, no fee was assessed. Riverview Mobile Home Park v. Bradshaw, 119 N.C. App. 585, 459 S.E.2d 283 (1995).

Applied in Spartan Leasing, Inc. v. Brown, 14 N.C. App. 383, 188 S.E.2d 574 (1972); Atkinson v. Tarheel Homes & Realty Co., 14 N.C. App. 638, 188 S.E.2d 703 (1972); Crotts v. ## II. ENLARGEMENT OF TIME.

This rule gives the court discretionary authority to enlarge time required for something to be done by the rules or a notice given under the rules or order of court. Cheshire v. Bensen Aircraft Corp., 17 N.C. App. 74, 193 S.E.2d 362 (1972).

Section (b) Inapplicable to Amend Entered Judgments. — Section (b) is applicable to enlargement of time for filing pleadings, motions, interrogatories, the taking of depositions, etc. It was not intended to have the effect of giving the court the discretion to amend a final order entered under the mandatory directive of a statute, nor to be applied for the purpose of amending a judgment that has been entered. Cheshire v. Bensen Aircraft Corp., 17 N.C. App. 74, 193 S.E.2d 362 (1972).

A motion to enlarge time for filing a pleading is addressed to the discretion of the trial court. Privette v. Privette, 30 N.C. App. 41, 226 S.E.2d 188 (1976).

What Time Limits May Be Extended. — The statutory language of section (b) of this rule is clear, and provides that the trial court may extend the time for performance of any acts except those expressly mentioned in the proviso to the rules. By setting out these specific exceptions to the trial court's discretionary power to extend the time specified for doing any act, the General Assembly implicitly excluded all other exceptions. Lemons v. Old Hickory Council, 322 N.C. 271, 367 S.E.2d 655, rehearing denied, 322 N.C. 610, 370 S.E.2d 247 (1988).

Magistrate did not have the authority under § 1A-1, Rule 60(b) to extend the time provided in § 7A-228 for party to pay appeal fees. Riverview Mobile Home Park v. Bradshaw, 119 N.C. App. 585, 459 S.E.2d 283 (1995).

Service of Summons. — Section (b) of this rule gives the trial courts the discretion to extend the time provided in § 1A-1, Rule 4(c) for service of a summons. Lemons v. Old Hickory Council, 322 N.C. 271, 367 S.E.2d 655, rehearing denied, 322 N.C. 610, 370 S.E.2d 247 (1988).

By adopting section (b) of this rule, the General Assembly has given the trial courts authority to breathe new life and effectiveness into a summons retroactively after it has become functus officio by virtue of not being served within the time prescribed. Lemons v. Old Hickory Council, 322 N.C. 271, 367 S.E.2d 655, rehearing denied, 322 N.C. 610, 370 S.E.2d 247 (1988).

Extending Time in Which to File Complaint. — The clerk represents and is the court by virtue of § 1-7 and has the authority to exercise the discretionary powers conferred by this rule for the purpose of extending additional time in which to file a complaint. Williams v. Jennette, 77 N.C. App. 283, 335 S.E.2d 191 (1985).

Enlarging Time for Filing Answer. — Section (b) of this rule gives the trial court the discretionary authority to enlarge the time period for filing an answer. Norris v. West, 35 N.C. App. 21, 239 S.E.2d 715 (1978).

Where a party seeks an extension of time to answer after the expiration of the 30-day limit, the judge may permit the answer if he finds that the failure to act was the result of excusable neglect. Byrd v. Mortenson, 60 N.C. App.

85, 298 S.E.2d 170 (1982), aff'd, 308 N.C. 536, 302 S.E.2d 809 (1983).

Failure to File Within Extended Time. — Where plaintiffs filed for an extension of time to file their complaint for medical malpractice and loss of consortium, which the court granted, but plaintiffs did not file their complaint until 19 days later, when plaintiffs failed to file their complaint before the extension of time expired, their action abated, and the three-year statute of limitations had run. The trial court could not extend the time in which to file their complaint under section (b) of this Rule, thus reviving the original action and avoiding the statute of limitations. Osborne v. Walton, 110 N.C. App. 850, 431 S.E.2d 496 (1993).

Court's Discretion Is Not Unrestrained. — Section (b) gives the trial court wide discretionary authority to enlarge the time within which an act may be done; however, the discretion to be exercised is a judicial discretion, not an unrestrained one. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Chantos, 21 N.C. App. 129, 203 S.E.2d 421 (1974).

When Discretion Can Be Exercised. — The discretion given the court to enlarge time can be exercised upon request prior to expiration of the time where the failure to act within the time prescribed was the result of excusable neglect. Cheshire v. Bensen Aircraft Corp., 17 N.C. App. 74, 193 S.E.2d 362 (1972); Johnson v. Hooks, 21 N.C. App. 585, 205 S.E.2d 796, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 660, 207 S.E.2d 754 (1974).

Showing of Excusable Neglect Necessary Where Request Untimely. — If the request under this rule for enlargement of time in which to do an act is made after the expiration of the period of time within which the act should have been done, there must be a showing of excusable neglect. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Chantos, 21 N.C. App. 129, 203 S.E.2d 421 (1974).

If the request for an enlargement of the time period for filing an answer is made after the expiration of the time to file, the court may enlarge the time period for filing if the failure to file was the result of excusable neglect. Norris v. West, 35 N.C. App. 21, 239 S.E.2d 715 (1978).

Securing Extension of Time as General Appearance. — By securing an extension of time in which to answer or otherwise plead, defendant made a general appearance which rendered service of summons upon it unnecessary. Spartan Leasing, Inc. v. Brown, 285 N.C. 689, 208 S.E.2d 649 (1974).

Delayed Signing and Filing of Order Made at Hearing. — Where the decision to tax plaintiff with defendant's costs was made and announced at hearing, the delayed signing and filing of the order taxing plaintiff with costs had no effect on the authority of the trial judge to enter this order. Daniels v. Montgomery Mut. Ins. Co., 320 N.C. 669, 360 S.E.2d 772 (1987).

Motion Did Not Waive Right to Make § 1A-1, Rule 12(b) Defenses. — Defendant's motion for an extension of time in no way waived his right to make any of the § 1A-1, Rule 12(b) defenses allowed by motion. Mosley v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 19 N.C. App. 137, 198 S.E.2d 36, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 121, 199 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Waiver Under § 1A-1, Rule 12(h) Not Applicable to Motion for Enlargement of Time. — While § 1A-1, Rule 12(h) provides for waiver of the defense of improper venue when not joined in a motion made under that rule, such waiver is not applicable to a motion for enlargement of time made under this rule. Moseley v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 19 N.C. App. 137, 198 S.E.2d 36, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 121, 199 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Refusal to Accept Late Affidavits Upheld. — While sections (b) and (d) give the trial court discretion to allow the late filing of affidavits in opposition to a motion for summary judgment, the court does not abuse its discretion when it refuses to accept late affidavits absent a showing of excusable neglect. Rockingham Square Shopping Center, Inc. v. Integon Life Ins. Corp., 52 N.C. App. 633, 279 S.E.2d 918, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 196, 285 S.E.2d 101 (1981).

Motion Held Unnecessary. — Where, upon concluding that defendant's failure to answer was a result of "excusable neglect," the court set aside entry of default and ordered that defendant's answer be filed and remain of record, it was not necessary that defendant file a section (b) motion for enlargement of time to file answer, though that would have been the better practice. Hubbard v. Lumley, 17 N.C. App. 649, 195 S.E.2d 330 (1973).

Time for Making and Ruling on Motion to Amend Judgment. — Section 1A-1, Rule 59(e) and section (b) of this rule do not circumscribe the trial court's authority to rule on a timely motion to alter or amend a judgment; they merely require that a party make such a motion within 10 days after judgment or require that a trial court acting on its own motion amend judgment within 10 days after its entry. It is not required that trial court's ruling on a timely motion by a party must also be made within 10 days after entry of the original judgment. Housing, Inc. v. Weaver, 305 N.C. 428, 290 S.E.2d 642 (1982).

A section 1A-1, Rule 12(b) defense contained in an answer is not the same as a 1A-1, Rule 12(b) defense raised in a motion, and affidavits filed in support of a 1A-1, Rule 12(b) defense contained in an answer is not governed by the time constraints found in subsection (d) of this rule. Ryals v. Hall-Lane Moving & Storage Co., 122 N.C. App. 242, 468 S.E.2d 600 (1996).

III. EFFECT OF EXPIRATION OF SESSION.

This rule clearly allows a written order to be signed out of term, especially when such an act merely documents a decision made and announced before the expiration of the term. Feibus & Co. v. Godley Constr. Co., 301 N.C. 294, 271 S.E.2d 385 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981); Pinckney v. Van Damme, 116 N.C. App. 139, 447 S.E.2d 825 (1994).

This rule clearly allows a superior court judge to sign a written order out of session without the consent of the parties so long as the hearing to which the order relates was held in term. Ward v. Ward, 116 N.C. App. 643, 448 S.E.2d 862 (1994).

Entry of Orders Out of Session. — Judges did not lack subject matter jurisdiction to enter equitable distribution judgment and permanent alimony order where both were entered out of session. Ward v. Ward, 116 N.C. App. 643, 448 S.E.2d 862 (1994).

Documentation of Summary Judgment Order After Term. — Where the trial judge denied defendant's motion for summary judgment during term, under section (c) of this rule he could thereafter simply document his decision by signing the order and mailing it to the clerk of court after the term had expired. Feibus & Co. v. Godley Constr. Co., 44 N.C. App. 133, 260 S.E.2d 665 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 294, 271 S.E.2d 385 (1980).

There was both statutory and common law authority for the trial court's entry of its supplemental judgment, because § 7A-47.1 and this rule both authorize the entry of judgment out of session. Buford v. GMC, 339 N.C. 396, 451 S.E.2d 293 (1994).

IV. SERVICE OF MOTIONS AND AFFIDAVITS.

Section (d) of this rule relates only to the hearing of motions. In re Estate of Tucci, 104 N.C. App. 142, 408 S.E.2d 859 (1991), cert. dismissed, 331 N.C. 748, 417 S.E.2d 236 (1992).

Defendant does not have an absolute right to the notice requirement of this rule. Jenkins v. Jenkins, 27 N.C. App. 205, 218 S.E.2d 518 (1975).

A party entitled to notice of a motion may waive such notice. Brandon v. Brandon, 10 N.C. App. 457, 179 S.E.2d 177 (1971); Jenkins v. Jenkins, 27 N.C. App. 205, 218 S.E.2d 518 (1975); Story v. Story, 27 N.C. App. 349, 219 S.E.2d 245 (1975).

And ordinarily does this by attending the hearing of the motion and participating in it. Brandon v. Brandon, 10 N.C. App. 457, 179 S.E.2d 177 (1971); Story v. Story, 27 N.C. App. 349, 219 S.E.2d 245 (1975).

Where defendant corporation suggested no additional testimony that would have available to it at a later hearing and did not show how it would have benefited from a later hearing, then even if notice of a motion was improperly given, defendant waived the notice requirement by attending the hearing of the motion and participating in it. J.D. Dawson Co. v. Robertson Mktg., Inc., 93 N.C. App. 62, 376 S.E.2d 254 (1989).

Service of Affidavits Supporting Summary Judgment. — The provision of section (d) which requires that supporting affidavits be served with a motion applies to affidavits in support of a § 1A-1, Rule 56 motion for summary judgment. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Chantos, 21 N.C. App. 129, 203 S.E.2d 421 (1974), distinguishing Millsaps v. Wilkes Contracting Co., 14 N.C. App. 321, 188 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 623, 190 S.E.2d 466 (1972), in which case affidavits in opposition to motion for summary judgment were at issue.

Subsection (d) of this rule requires that an affidavit in support of a § 1A-1, Rule 56 motion be served with the motion at least 10 days prior to hearing. The trial court may exercise its discretionary powers under section (b) of this rule to order the time within which to file and serve the affidavits enlarged if the request is made prior to making the motion for summary judgment. If the request is made after the motion for summary judgment has been served, there must be a showing of excusable neglect. Gillis v. Whitley's Disct. Auto Sales, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 270, 319 S.E.2d 661 (1984).

Although affidavits in support of a motion for summary judgment are required by section (d) of this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 56(c) to be filed and served with the motion, § 1A-1, Rule 56(e) grants to the trial judge wide discretion to permit further affidavits to supplement those which have already been served. Rolling Fashion Mart, Inc. v. Mainor, 80 N.C. App. 213, 341 S.E.2d 61 (1986).

Extension of Time for Filing Affidavits Supporting Summary Judgment. — Despite the specific language of § 1A-1, Rule 56(c) requiring affidavits to be filed prior to the day of hearing, the trial court may in some instances permit the filing of the affidavits at a later time. If a request for permission to file affidavits at some later time is made before the date of the summary judgment hearing, the trial court may in its discretion order the period for filing affidavits to be enlarged. Battle v. Nash Technical College, 103 N.C. App. 120, 404 S.E.2d 703 (1991).

Filing of Affidavits on Day of Summary Judgment Hearing. — If a request for permission to file affidavits in support of a motion under § 1A-1, Rule 56 is made on the day of the summary judgment hearing, the trial court may permit the act to be done where the failure to act was the result of excusable neglect.

Battle v. Nash Technical College, 103 N.C. App. 120, 404 S.E.2d 703 (1991).

Where there was no request for enlargement of time within which to file and serve any affidavits made by the plaintiff prior to the day of the hearing of the motion on summary judgment and there was no finding or a request by the plaintiff for a finding of excusable neglect in failing to serve the affidavits prior to the date of the summary judgment hearing, because the plaintiff failed to proceed in a manner that would permit the trial court to exercise its discretion to permit the filing of plaintiff's proffered affidavit, the plaintiff could not on appeal complain about its exclusion. Battle v. Nash Technical College, 103 N.C. App. 120, 404 S.E.2d 703 (1991).

Notice of Counterclaim. — Counterclaim for specific performance of separation agreement was void where the husband filed his answer and counterclaim to petition for post-separation support and alimony a week before trial, without serving notice to hear the counterclaim. Wells v. Wells, — N.C. App. —, 512 S.E.2d 468 (1999).

Notice of Custody Hearing. — Ordinarily a parent is entitled to at least five days' notice (an intervening Saturday or Sunday excluded) of a hearing involving the custody of a child; but this is not an absolute right, and is subject to the rule relating to waiver of notice and to the rule that a new trial will not be granted for mere technical error which could not have affected the result, but only for error which is prejudicial, amounting to the denial of a substantial right. Brandon v. Brandon, 10 N.C. App. 457, 179 S.E.2d 177 (1971).

Notice of Hearing on Issue of Incompetency. — Five days' notice would be appropriate for hearing on the issue of incompetency when appointment of a guardian ad litem is proposed, unless the court, for good cause, should prescribe a shorter period. Rutledge v. Rutledge, 10 N.C. App. 427, 179 S.E.2d 163 (1971).

Where motion for alimony did not specify a date for hearing, but was served, by being deposited in the mail, properly addressed to defendant's attorney, at least five days before an already scheduled hearing, plaintiff properly proceeded to apply for alimony. McCarley v. McCarley, 289 N.C. 109, 221 S.E.2d 490 (1976).

Constructive Notice of Orders and Motions Made During Session. — Where an oral motion is appropriately made under § 1A-1, Rule 7, the doctrine that a party to an action has constructive notice of all orders and motions made in the cause during the session of court at which the cause is regularly calendared is preserved in § 1A-1, Rules 6 and 7. Wood v. Wood, 297 N.C. 1, 252 S.E.2d 799 (1979).

Motion that court vacate divorce judgment entered at same session of court was not subject to actual notice requirement of section (d), which requires that written motions be served at least 5 days prior to the date set for hearing. Wood v. Wood, 297 N.C. 1, 252 S.E.2d 799 (1979).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying plaintiffs' motion, where plaintiffs did not comply with the requirements of section (d) of this rule, but waited to file their motion until the very day that they wished it heard, and allowing it would have been unfair and prejudicial to defendants. Duncan v. Ammons Constr. Co., 87 N.C. App. 597, 361 S.E.2d 906 (1987).

V. ADDITIONAL TIME AFTER SERVICE BY MAIL.

Effect of Section (e). — Section (e), in effect, extends the minimum 10 day notice period to 13 days when the notice is by mail. This rule serves to alleviate the disparity between constructive and actual notice when the mailing of notice begins a designated period of time for the performance of some right. Planters Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Rush, 17 N.C. App. 564, 195 S.E.2d 96 (1973).

Section (e) does not apply to appeals from an Employment Security Commission adjudicator, so as to give the appealing party, in addition to the 10-day period prescribed by § 96-15(b)(2), three additional days within which to file an appeal. Smith v. Daniels Int'l, 64 N.C. App. 381, 307 S.E.2d 434 (1983).

No Reversible Error Where Defendants Not Prejudiced by Untimely Notice. — Trial court did not commit reversible error in granting summary judgment in favor of plaintiff although plaintiff failed to give timely notice to appellants of said motion pursuant to section (e) of this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 56(c). Plaintiff conceded that the Notice of the Summary Judgment Hearing was served by mail only nine days prior to the hearing instead of 13 days as required; however, defendants failed to demonstrate any prejudice caused them by the untimely notice. Symons Corp. v. Quality Concrete Constr., Inc., 108 N.C. App. 17, 422 S.E.2d 365 (1992).

Section (e) Held Inapplicable. — Plaintiffs' motions for entry of default and default judgment, which were filed 31 days after service of summons and complaint on defendant, were made after defendant's time to answer had expired, as although summons and complaint were served upon defendant by mail, section (e) of this rule did not apply to extend his time to answer to 33 days, because the 30 days defendant had under § 1A-1, Rule 12 to answer the complaint began running when defendant was served with the summons and complaint, not when plaintiff mailed it. Williams v. Moore, 95 N.C. App. 601, 383 S.E.2d 416 (1989).

VI. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 1-152.

Inherent Power to Extend Time. — The superior court possesses an inherent discretionary power to amend pleadings or to allow them to be filed at any time, unless prohibited by some statute or unless vested rights are interfered with. Gilchrist v. Kitchen, 86 N.C. 20 (1882); Rich v. Norfolk S. Ry., 244 N.C. 175, 92 S.E.2d 768 (1956).

A judge of the superior court in this State has inherent power in his discretion and in furtherance of justice to extend the time for filing a complaint, and he is also vested with such authority by statute. Deanes v. Clark, 261 N.C. 467, 135 S.E.2d 6 (1964).

The right to amend pleadings in a case and to allow answers or other pleadings to be filed at any time is an inherent and statutory power of the superior courts, which they may exercise at their discretion, unless prohibited by some statutory enactment or unless vested rights are interfered with. State Hwy. Comm'n v. Hemphill, 269 N.C. 535, 153 S.E.2d 22 (1967).

Where amended complaint was filed after expiration of the time allowed in order permitting filing of amendment, the trial court had the discretionary power to enter an order extending the time for the filing of the amendment to the date of the hearing and to overrule defendant's motion to strike on the ground that the amendment was filed after the expiration of the time allowed. Alexander v. Brown, 236 N.C. 212, 72 S.E.2d 522 (1952).

Defendants were not entitled to dismissal as a matter of right for plaintiff's failure to file complaint in due time, since the judge, in his discretion, could enlarge the time for pleading. Early v. Eley, 243 N.C. 695, 91 S.E.2d 919 (1956).

Power to Enlarge Time for Filing Answer. — The judge of the superior court has the discretionary power to enlarge the time in which answer may be filed beyond that limited before the clerk, upon such terms as may be just, by an order to that effect. Aldridge v. Greensboro Fire Ins. Co., 194 N.C. 683, 140 S.E. 706 (1927); Harmon v. Harmon, 245 N.C. 83, 95 S.E.2d 355 (1956).

When a complaint states a cause of action, the court, in the exercise of its discretion, may extend defendant's time to plead. Walker v. Nicholson, 257 N.C. 744, 127 S.E.2d 564 (1962).

Motion to Strike. — When a motion to strike is not made in apt time, the court has discretionary power to allow or deny such motion, and its ruling will not be disturbed on appeal in the absence of an abuse of discretion. McDaniel v. Fordham, 264 N.C. 62, 140 S.E.2d 736 (1965).

Section 136-107 as Exception to General Rule. — Section 136-107, limiting the time for the filing of answer in condemnation proceedings instituted by the Highway Commission, must be construed as an exception to the general power of the court to extend the time for the filing of pleadings, so that the court has no discretionary power to allow the filing of an answer after the time limited in the condemnation statute. State Hwy. Comm'n v. Hemphill, 269 N.C. 535, 153 S.E.2d 22 (1967).

Exercise of Discretion Not Generally Subject to Review. — It is generally held that whenever the judge is vested with a discretion, his doing or refusal to do the act in question is not reviewable upon appeal. Beck v. Bellamy, 93 N.C. 129 (1885); Best v. British & Am. Mtg. Co., 131 N.C. 70, 42 S.E. 456 (1902); Wilmington v. McDonald, 133 N.C. 548, 45 S.E. 864 (1903); United Am. Free-will Baptist Church, N.E. Conference v. United Am. Free-will Baptist Church, N.W. Conference, 158 N.C. 564, 74 S.E. 14 (1912); Early v. Eley, 243 N.C. 695, 91 S.E.2d 919 (1956); Harmon v. Harmon, 245 N.C. 83, 95 S.E.2d 355 (1956).

Absent Abuse of Discretion. — A judgment or order rendered by a judge of the superior court in the exercise of a discretionary power is not subjected to review by appeal to the Supreme Court, unless there has been an abuse of discretion on his part. State Hwy. Comm'n v. Hemphill, 269 N.C. 535, 153 S.E.2d 22 (1967).

If exercise of a discretionary power is refused upon the ground that the court has no power to grant a motion addressed to its discretion, the ruling of the court is reviewable. State Hwy. Comm'n v. Hemphill, 269 N.C. 535, 153 S.E.2d 22 (1967).

ARTICLE 3.

Pleadings and Motions.

Rule 7. Pleadings allowed; form of motions.

(a) Pleadings. — There shall be a complaint and an answer; a reply to a counterclaim denominated as such; an answer to a crossclaim, if the answer contains a crossclaim; a third-party complaint if a person who was not an original party is summoned under the provisions of Rule 14; and a third-party answer, if a third-party complaint is served. If the answer alleges contributory negligence, a party may serve a reply alleging last clear chance. No other pleading shall be allowed except that the court may order a reply to an answer or a third-party answer.

(b) Motions and other papers. —

(1) An application to the court for an order shall be by motion which, unless made during a hearing or trial or at a session at which a cause is on the calendar for that session, shall be made in writing, shall state the grounds therefor, and shall set forth the relief or order sought. The requirement of writing is fulfilled if the motion is stated in a written notice of the hearing of the motion.

(2) The rules applicable to captions, signing, and other matters of form of pleadings apply to all motions and other papers provided for by these rules.

(3) A motion to transfer under G.S. 7A-258 shall comply with the directives therein specified but the relief thereby obtainable may also be sought in a responsive pleading pursuant to Rule 12(b).

(c) Demurrers, pleas, etc., abolished. — Demurrers, pleas, and exceptions for insufficiency shall not be used.

(d) Pleadings not read to jury. — Unless otherwise ordered by the judge, pleadings shall not be read to the jury. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1971, c. 1156, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Section (a). — This section defines the total permissible range of pleadings, following long established code procedure by making the reply the terminal permissible pleading in the traditional exchange between plaintiff and defendant. Furthermore, this section makes specific that which has been evolved without literal sanction under the Code, that an answer is to be filed to a crossclaim and that where additional defendants are summoned, third party complaint and answer are to be filed. The only time reply is actually required, aside from when ordered by the court, is to a counterclaim actually so denominated. This is an improvement over code procedure, which requires a reply to any counterclaim at peril of admitting its allegations, thereby putting an unjustifiable burden on the plaintiff to ascertain at his peril whether answers containing affirmative defenses may be construed to involve counterclaims. Whether or not a reply is necessary is presently extremely difficult to determine in other contexts. Compare, e.g. Little v. Stevens, 267 N.C. 328, 148 S.E.2d 201 (1966), and former § 1-159. Finally, following code practice, authority is given the courts to order replies to noncounterclaiming answers and third party answers, thus rounding out the total list of permissible pleadings under all circumstances.

Section (b)(1). — This section makes more explicit as a matter of literal statement the motion practice actually followed under present code practice. The specification that written motions shall state their grounds and the relief sought is a helpful directive. And the provision for combining the motion with the notice thereof actually gives literal sanction to a procedure of convenience frequently indulged in State court practice without such direct authorization.

Section (c). — This section rounds out the exclusive listing of pleadings and motions allowable under this approach, by making explicit what a long tradition might have resisted, that those other traditional pretrial stage procedural devices, the demurrer and the special pleas, are abolished from the practice. There are to be only the listed pleadings, and motions shaped functionally to accomplish various specific pretrial purposes formerly served by motions, demurrers and pleas. The abolition of these devices by name does not, of course, automatically do away with the possibility that the functions served by these shall continue to be served. This section must be read in the light of Rule 12, wherein the new procedure by which these functions are served is spelled out.

Section (d). — The purpose of this section is to end the practice of reading pleadings to the jury. The Commission contemplated that a brief opening statement would generally be substituted.

II. Pleadings.
III. Motions and Other Papers.
IV. Abolition of Demurrers, Pleas, etc.

I. IN GENERAL.

The only effect and purpose of section (d) of this rule is to eliminate the former practice of introducing cases to the jury by reading the pleadings; it is not concerned with the admissibility of evidence, one of the basic principles of which, under the adversary system of litigation, is that anything a litigant says about his case, if relevant and not otherwise rendered inadmissible, can be put in evidence against him. Stilwell v. Walden, 70 N.C. App. 543, 320 S.E.2d 329 (1984).

As to propriety of hearing motions for preliminary injunctions on affidavits when proceeding under § 1-485(1) for a preliminary injunction, see State ex rel. Morgan v. Dare to Be Great, Inc., 15 N.C. App. 275, 189 S.E.2d 802 (1972).

North Carolina Sch. of Arts, 125 N.C. App. 386, 481 S.E.2d 336 (1997).

II. PLEADINGS.

The function of a reply is to deny the new matter alleged in the answer or affirmative defenses which the plaintiff does not admit. A reply may not state a cause of action. Other matters within a reply outside of this scope may properly be stricken on motion. Miller v. Ruth's of N.C., Inc., 69 N.C. App. 153, 316 S.E.2d 622, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 494, 322 S.E.2d 557 (1984).

"Counterclaim Denominated as Such". — This rule, in providing that a reply must be filed "to a counterclaim denominated as such," implies there will be counterclaims not so denominated. McCarley v. McCarley, 289 N.C. 109, 221 S.E.2d 490 (1976).

No Reply Required to "Counterclaim" Merely Asserting Affirmative Defense. — Plaintiff's failure to file a reply to defendant's purported "counterclaim" did not operate as an admission of the facts alleged therein where defendant's pleading did nothing more than raise an affirmative defense to plaintiff's cause of action to which a reply was neither required nor permitted by section (a). Eubanks v. First Protection Life Ins. Co., 44 N.C. App. 224, 261 S.E.2d 28 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 735, 267 S.E.2d 661 (1980).

Reply Alleging Last Clear Chance Not Exclusive Pleading Alternative. — While the recommended pleading practice is for the plaintiff to file a reply alleging last clear chance, it is not the exclusive pleading alternative. Vernon v. Crist, 291 N.C. 646, 231 S.E.2d 591 (1977).

Doctrine of Last Clear Chance Need Not Be Pleaded by Name. — While the plaintiff must plead the facts making the doctrine of last clear chance applicable on order to rely upon it, it is not required that he plead the doctrine by its generally accepted name. Vernon v. Crist, 291 N.C. 646, 231 S.E.2d 591 (1977).

But Some Pleading Alleging Last Clear Chance Is Necessary. — The words "may serve a reply" in section (a) could be misleading if a plaintiff construed the "may" as permissive and the failure to file a reply as not foreclosing any rights. When section (a) is read in conjunction with § 1A-1, Rule 8(d), it is evident that some pleading alleging last clear chance is necessary if a plaintiff seeks to prove the avoidance at trial, because § 1A-1, Rule 8(d) only deems affirmative defenses appearing in the answer as denied or avoided if a responsive pleading is neither required nor permitted. Vernon v. Crist, 291 N.C. 646, 231 S.E.2d 591 (1977).

Where the plaintiff in a negligence action did not exercise the option of filing a reply alleging last clear chance, nor plead facts in his complaint sufficient to invoke the doctrine, the pleadings were not sufficient to raise the defense. Meadows v. Lawrence, 75 N.C. App. 86, 330 S.E.2d 47 (1985), aff'd, 315 N.C. 383, 337 S.E.2d 851 (1986).

Until a pleading is withdrawn or changed with court's approval, it is a binding judicial admission of any fact stated therein; and the fact that that the pleading was signed only by lawyer makes no difference, unless it is made to appear that the party's attorney acted without authority. Stilwell v. Walden, 70 N.C. App. 543, 320 S.E.2d 329 (1984).

Procedure at Trial Where Party Not Permitted to File Responsive Pleading. — A party who is not permitted to file a responsive pleading may meet the allegations at trial in any manner that would have been proper had a reply been allowed. Malloy v. Malloy, 33 N.C. App. 56, 234 S.E.2d 199 (1977).

The right to amend the pleadings of a cause and allow answers or other pleadings to be filed at any time is an inherent power of the district and superior courts, which they may exercise at their discretion, unless prohibited by some statutory enactment or unless vested rights are interfered with. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 N.C. App. 40, 187 S.E.2d 420 (1972).

Joining Request for Equitable Distribution in a Reply. — A plaintiff in a divorce action may admit to a claim for equitable distribution in a reply, and join in the claims for an equitable distribution of the marital property through a reply pleading. The defendant is precluded, by principles of equitable estoppel, from defeating plaintiff's right to equitable distribution by submitting to a voluntary dismissal of his counterclaim. Hunt v. Hunt, 117 N.C. App. 280, 450 S.E.2d 558 (1994).

Pleading Damages to Jury. — Notwithstanding section (a) of this rule, it is still the practice in this State for counsel for both sides to suggest in argument to the jury, if they wish, lump-sum amounts for the jury's consideration on the personal injury damage issue. Trial judges, for example, ordinarily instruct juries on this issue as follows: "I instruct you that if you reach this issue, you are not to be governed by the amount of damages suggested by the parties or their attorneys, but you are to be governed exclusively by the evidence in the case and the rules of law I have given you with respect to the measure of damages." Weeks v. Holsclaw, 306 N.C. 655, 295 S.E.2d 596 (1982), rehearing denied, 307 N.C. 273, 302 S.E.2d 884 (1983).

III. MOTIONS AND OTHER PAPERS.

Similar Meaning of "Application" in Subsection (b)(1) and § 50-16.8(b) and (d). — The word "application" as used in subsection (b)(1) of this rule and in former subsections (b) and (d) of § 50-16.8 has reference to the same kind of procedure. McCarley v. McCarley, 289 N.C. 109, 221 S.E.2d 490 (1976).

Under this rule, an application for default judgment is considered a motion in a civil action. Miller v. Belk, 18 N.C. App. 70, 196 S.E.2d 44, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 665, 197 S.E.2d 874 (1973).

A motion for involuntary dismissal may not be properly made pursuant to this rule, because this rule merely defines the form of motions made to the court. Smith v. Smith, 17 N.C. App. 416, 194 S.E.2d 568 (1973).

Oral motion made during the session of court at which a case is calendared is permitted by this rule. Wood v. Wood, 297 N.C. 1, 252 S.E.2d 799 (1979).

This rule clearly allows continuation of pre-rules practice under which oral motions to which no actual notice provision applied were allowed in an action during the session of court at which it was regularly calendared. Wood v. Wood, 297 N.C. 1, 252 S.E.2d 799 (1979).

A motion need not be made in writing if made during the session at which the cause is calendared for trial. Sims v. Oakwood Trailer Sales Corp., 18 N.C. App. 726, 198 S.E.2d 73, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 754, 198 S.E.2d 723 (1973).

Constructive Notice of Oral Motions. — Where an oral motion is appropriately made under this rule, the doctrine that a party to an action has constructive notice of all orders and motions made in the cause during the session of court at which the cause is regularly calendared is preserved in § 1A-1, Rule 6 and this rule. Wood v. Wood, 297 N.C. 1, 252 S.E.2d 799 (1979).

Waiver of Notice. — Where the content of plaintiff's notice of hearing to modify custody, seeking "such relief as to the court may seem just and proper," was insufficient to comply with the requirement that the motion state the grounds therefor and the relief or order sought, but defendant's attorney failed to object, defendant waived proper notice of plaintiff's motion to modify custody. Dobos v. Dobos, 111 N.C. App. 222, 431 S.E.2d 861 (1993).

Pre-answer Motion to Dismiss was not a responsible pleading within the confines of Rule 12 of the North Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure, preventing the entry of default judgment pursuant to Rule 55 of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Eden's Gate, Ltd. v. Leeper, 121 N.C. App. 171, 464 S.E.2d 696 (1995).

A bare-bones motion, which neither states the grounds therefor nor specifies the relief sought, fails to inform either the court or the adverse party of what the movant wants. Such complete failure to give notice cannot fairly be passed off as a technical defect, for where court and adverse cannot comprehend the basis of a motion, they are rendered powerless to respond to it. Dusenberry v. Dusenberry, 87 N.C. App. 490, 361 S.E.2d 605 (1987).

Name and Number of Rule Pursuant to Which Motion Is Made. — While failure to give the number of the rule to which a motion is made is not necessarily fatal, it would be of great benefit to the trial court and the appellate court for counsel to name and number the rule pursuant to which a motion is made. Home Health & Hospice Care, Inc. v. Meyer, 88 N.C. App. 257, 362 S.E.2d 870 (1987).

While failure to give the number of the rule under which a motion is made is not necessarily fatal, the grounds for the motion and the relief sought must be consistent with the Rules of Civil Procedure. Gallbronner v. Mason, 101 N.C. App. 362, 399 S.E.2d 139, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 268, 407 S.E.2d 835 (1991), appeal dismissed, 333 N.C. 167, 399 S.E.2d 139 (1992).

Motion to Alter or Amend Judgment. — In order to suspend the running of the appeal clock, a § 1A-1, Rule 59(e) motion must not only be timely served, but it must also meet the demands of section (b) of this rule. Dusenberry v. Dusenberry, 87 N.C. App. 490, 361 S.E.2d 605 (1987).

If a § 1A-1, Rule 59(e) motion fails to comply with the requirements of section (b) of this rule, it is ipso facto ineffective to suspend the running of appeal time. Dusenberry v. Dusenberry, 87 N.C. App. 490, 361 S.E.2d 605 (1987).

Trial court erred in granting a motion captioned "Motion to Forfeit Security Deposit" in a landlord-tenant dispute, where the motion was in essence an attempt to amend the complaint, which made no reference to a security deposit, and judgment had been entered in the case. Gallbronner v. Mason, 101 N.C. App. 362, 399 S.E.2d 139, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 268, 407 S.E.2d 835 (1991), appeal dismissed, 333 N.C. 167, 399 S.E.2d 139 (1992).

Timeliness of Responsive Pleading. — Although plaintiff had no right to file a responsive pleading to the answer under this rule, plaintiff did have a continuing duty to review the appropriateness of persisting in litigating a claim which was alleged to be time-barred. Sunamerica Fin. Corp. v. Bonham, 328 N.C. 254, 400 S.E.2d 435 (1991).

IV. ABOLITION OF DEMURRERS, PLEAS, ETC.

"Pleas" Abolished. — Under section (c) of this rule, "pleas" are specifically abolished. Lehrer v. Edgecombe Mfg. Co., 13 N.C. App. 412, 185 S.E.2d 727 (1972).

Concept of "Defective Statement of a Good Cause of Action" Abolished. — When section (c) of this rule abolished demurrers and decreed that pleas "for insufficiency shall not be used," it also abolished the concept of "a defective statement of a good cause of action." Cassels v. Ford Motor Co., 10 N.C. App. 51, 178 S.E.2d 12 (1970); Forrester v. Garrett, 280 N.C. 117, 184 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

Section (c) of this rule abolished demurrers, and with them the concept of a defective statement of a good cause of action. Dale v. Lattimore, 12 N.C. App. 348, 183 S.E.2d 417, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

Motion to Dismiss May Be Interposed to Defective Claim. — Generally speaking, the motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) may be successfully interposed to a complaint which states a defective claim or cause of action. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970); Forrester v. Garrett, 280 N.C. 117, 184 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

But Not to Defective Statement of Good Claim. — The motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) may not be successfully interposed to a complaint which was formerly labeled a "defective statement of a good cause of action." For such complaint, other provisions of § 1A-1, Rule 12, the rules governing discovery, and the motion for summary judgment provide procedures adequate to supply information not furnished by the complaint. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970); Forrester v. Garrett, 280 N.C. 117, 184 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

Rule 8. General rules of pleadings.

(a) Claims for relief. — A pleading which sets forth a claim for relief, whether an original claim, counterclaim, crossclaim, or third-party claim shall contain

(1) A short and plain statement of the claim sufficiently particular to give the court and the parties notice of the transactions, occurrences, or series of transactions or occurrences, intended to be proved showing that the pleader is entitled to relief, and

(2) A demand for judgment for the relief to which he deems himself entitled. Relief in the alternative or of several different types may be demanded. In all negligence actions, and in all claims for punitive damages in any civil action, wherein the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of ten thousand dollars ($10,000), the pleading shall not state the demand for monetary relief, but shall state that the relief demanded is for damages incurred or to be incurred in excess of ten thousand dollars ($10,000). However, at any time after service of the claim for relief, any party may request of the claimant a written statement of the monetary relief sought, and the claimant shall, within 30 days after such service, provide such statement, which shall not be filed with the clerk until the action has been called for trial or entry of default entered. Such statement may be amended in the manner and at times as provided by Rule 15.

(b) Defenses; form of denials. — A party shall state in short and plain terms his defenses to each claim asserted and shall admit or deny the averments upon which the adverse party relies. If he is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of an averment, he shall so state and this has the effect of a denial. Denials shall fairly meet the substance of the averments denied. When a pleader intends in good faith to deny only a part of or a qualification of an averment, he shall specify so much of it as is true and material and shall deny only the remainder. Unless the pleader intends in good faith to controvert all the averments of the preceding pleading, he may make his denials as specific denials of designated averments or paragraphs, or he may generally deny all the averments except such designated averments or paragraphs as he expressly admits; but, when he does so intend to controvert all its averments, he may do so by general denial subject to the obligations set forth in Rule 11.

(c) Affirmative defenses. — In pleading to a preceding pleading, a party shall set forth affirmatively accord and satisfaction, arbitration and award, assumption of risk, contributory negligence, discharge in bankruptcy, duress, estoppel, failure of consideration, fraud, illegality, injury by fellow servant, laches, license, payment, release, res judicata, statute of frauds, statute of limitations, truth in actions for defamation, usury, waiver, and any other matter constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense. Such pleading shall contain a short and plain statement of any matter constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense sufficiently particular to give the court and the parties notice of the transactions, occurrences, or series of transactions or occurrences, intended to be proved. When a party has mistakenly designated a defense as a counterclaim or a counterclaim as a defense, the court, on terms, if justice so requires, shall treat the pleading as if there had been a proper designation.

(d) Effect of failure to deny. — Averments in a pleading to which a responsive pleading is required, other than those as to the amount of damage, are admitted when not denied in the responsive pleading. Averments in a pleading to which no responsive pleading is required or permitted shall be taken as denied or avoided.

(e) Pleading to be concise and direct; consistency. —

(1) Each averment of a pleading shall be simple, concise, and direct. No technical forms of pleading or motions are required.

(2) A party may set forth two or more statements of a claim or defense alternatively or hypothetically, either in one count or defense or in separate counts or defenses. When two or more statements are made in the alternative and one of them if made independently would be sufficient, the pleading is not made insufficient by the insufficiency of one or more of the alternative statements. A party may also state as many separate claims or defenses as he has regardless of consistency and whether based on legal or on equitable grounds or on both. All statements shall be made subject to the obligations set forth in Rule 11.

(f) Construction of pleadings. — All pleadings shall be so construed as to do substantial justice. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 977, s. 5; 1979, ch. 654, s. 4; 1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 1027, s. 56; 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 995, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Section (a). — In prescribing what a complaint is to contain, it will be observed that while the Commission abandoned the code formulation of "a plain and concise statement of the facts constituting a cause of action," it did not adopt without change the federal rules formula, "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." The statement must be "sufficiently particular to give the court and the parties notice of the transactions or occurrences, intended to be proved. . . ."

The Commission's objective may be summarized as follows: 1. By omitting any requirement in terms that a complaint state "facts," the Commission sought to put behind it the sterile dispute as to whether an allegation states evidentiary or ultimate facts or conclusions of law. Of course, in order to show that he is entitled to relief, a pleader will be compelled to be factual, but the new formulation saved him from foundering on the ancient distinctions.

2. By omitting any reference to "cause of action," and directing attention to the notice-giving functions served by the complaint, the Commission sought a new start on the problem of how much specificity is desirable in a complaint. It can fairly be argued, of course, that when the Commission substituted "claim" for "cause of action" that it was merely exchanging one conundrum for another. But changing the formulation does have the advantage of enabling the courts to approach the problem of specificity unembarrassed by prior decisions and with an eye to the functions that pleading can properly serve. Moreover, the new approach can take into account other procedures provided by these rules — the pretrial conference, the broadened discovery, the summary judgment.

3. By specifically requiring a degree of particularity the Commission sought to put at rest any notion that the mere assertion of a grievance will be sufficient under these rules. In this connection, the forms provided in Rule 84 should be examined. The Commission's prescription suggests that not only is it permissible under these rules for a pleader to so plead as to obviate the need for a pretrial conference or resort to the discovery procedures but that it will frequently be his duty to do so.

Section (b). — This section sets forth the basic directive for defensive pleading. It follows the basic code pattern of requiring either denials or admissions of all specific averments of the claimant for affirmative relief, or the pleading of affirmative defenses in avoidance. It is interesting to reflect that here, too, is a plain indication that Rule § 1A-1, 8(a) contemplates factual pleading, else the directive to admit or deny averments is meaningless. Sanction is given as in existing State practice to obtain the effect of a denial by stating lack of sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief. The traditional prohibition against negative pregnant pleading is stated in terms of fairly meeting the substance of averments denied.

The fairly detailed specification of the different forms that partial denials and admissions may take is a helpful one and does not appear in the code. An innovation from the standpoint of existing State practice is involved in the allowance of a true general denial, or a qualified general denial not directed specifically to each separate paragraph, which is the largest unit that may be generally denied under judicial interpretation of the Code.

Section (c) contains a helpful specific listing of numerous traditional defenses which must be specially pleaded. This enumeration is beneficial in avoiding questions as to whether this or that defense is an "affirmative defense" required to be pleaded to allow evidence in its proof. At least one change in existing law is involved in the inclusion of the defense of statute of frauds in this listing. Added to the federal listing are truth in defamation actions, and usury, to reflect existing State practice.

Section (d) states existing State practice.

Section (e)(1) contains a general homily eschewing the old technical forms of pleading and admonishing directness rather than the pomposity which frequently creeps into common law and Code pleading.

Section (e)(2) directly sanctions alternative and hypothetical pleadings, which are not literally sanctioned under the code, but generally permitted within limits. More significantly this rule directly authorizes the pleading of inconsistent claims as well as defenses. While inconsistent defenses are now permissible under the code, inconsistent affirmative claims of some types have been held to require election when their underlying legal theories (as opposed to factual theories) were substantively inconsistent.

Section (f) states a homily similarly expressed under the Code in former § 1-151.

I. IN GENERAL.

Section (b) of this rule is virtually identical to FRCP, Rule 8(b). Georgia-Pacific Corp. v. Bondurant, 81 N.C. App. 362, 344 S.E.2d 302 (1986).

Taken together, § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) and section (a) of this rule suggest pleadings should be limited to those facts or descriptions of transactions, occurrences, or series of transactions or occurrences, intended to be proved. Bowlin v. Duke Univ., 108 N.C. App. 145, 423 S.E.2d 320 (1992), cert. denied, 333 N.C. 461, 427 S.E.2d 618 (1993).

Purpose of Section (a). — The purpose of section (a) is to establish that the plaintiff will be entitled to some form of relief should he prevail on the claim raised by the factual allegations in his complaint. Holloway v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 339 N.C. 338, 452 S.E.2d 233 (1994).

The right to amend the pleadings of a cause and allow answers or other pleadings to be filed at any time is an inherent power of the district and superior courts, which they may exercise at their discretion, unless prohibited by some statutory enactment or unless vested rights are interfered with. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 N.C. App. 40, 187 S.E.2d 420 (1972).

A motion to amend an answer is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and he has broad discretion in permitting or denying amendments. Hinson v. Brown, 80 N.C. App. 661, 343 S.E.2d 284, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 318 N.C. 282, 348 S.E.2d 138 (1986).

This rule did not remove all requirements of particularity. Thus, mere assertion of a grievance will not suffice, but the pleader must plead with sufficient particularity to identify the legal issues and to allow the other party to frame a responsive pleading. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

The policy behind the notice theory of the present rules is to resolve controversies on the merits, following opportunity for discovery, rather than resolving them on technicalities of pleading. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

A pleading cannot give notice of occurrences that take place a year after filing of the pleading. Gordon v. Gordon, 7 N.C. App. 206, 171 S.E.2d 805 (1970).

Admissions in the pleadings and stipulations by the parties have the same effect as jury findings; the jury is not required to find the existence of such facts, and nothing else appearing, they are conclusive and binding upon the parties and the trial judge. Crowder v. Jenkins, 11 N.C. App. 57, 180 S.E.2d 482 (1971). See Alston v. Monk, 92 N.C. App. 59, 373 S.E.2d 463 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 246, 378 S.E.2d 420 (1989).

Answer Treated as Counterclaim. — In a suit for absolute divorce, where defendant admitted the allegations of the complaint and prayed for an absolute divorce on the same grounds, the fact that defendant's pleading was labelled an "answer" did not preclude its being treated also as a counterclaim. McCarley v. McCarley, 289 N.C. 109, 221 S.E.2d 490 (1976).

Sanctions for Violations. — Although a dismissal with prejudice pursuant to subsection (b) is available as a sanction for a violation of subdivision (a)(2), it is not the only available sanction and should be imposed only where the trial court determines that less drastic sanctions are insufficient; therefore, the trial court did not err in only striking the punitive damages award in the slander case as a sanction. McLean v. Mechanic, 116 N.C. App. 271, 447 S.E.2d 459 (1994), review denied, 339 N.C. 738, 454 S.E.2d 654, cert. denied, 339 N.C. 738, 454 S.E.2d 653 (1995).

II. PLEADINGS; GENERALLY.

This rule did not remove all requirements of particularity. Thus, mere assertion of a grievance will not suffice, but the pleader must plead with sufficient particularity to identify the legal issues and to allow the other party to frame a responsive pleading. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

The requirement of particularity in § 1A-1, Rule 9(b) must be reconciled with this rule, which requires a short and concise statement of claims, and with the general notice pleading theory of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Cunningham v. Brown, 51 N.C. App. 264, 276 S.E.2d 718 (1981).

Phrases "Cause of Action" and "Claim for Relief" Not Substantially Different. — While neither the North Carolina nor the federal rules incorporate the phrase "cause of action," in the manner of their use, there is no substantial difference in the meaning of "cause of action" and "claim for relief." Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970).

As to the use of precedent under New York and federal rules in construing this section, see Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970); Manning v. Manning, 20 N.C. App. 149, 201 S.E.2d 46 (1973).

Concept of "Notice Pleading" Adopted. — By repealing § 1-122, which required a complaint to state "the facts constituting a cause of action," and substituting in lieu thereof the requirement that a "claim for relief" shall be stated with sufficient particularity to give notice of the events intended to be proved showing that the pleader is entitled to relief, the legislature intended to relax somewhat the strict requirements of detailed fact pleading and to adopt the concept of "notice pleading." Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970).

By repealing former section which required a complaint to state "the facts constituting a cause of action," and substituting in lieu thereof the requirement that a "claim for relief" shall be stated with sufficient particularity to give notice of the events intended to be proved showing that the pleader is entitled to relief, the legislature obviously intended to change prior law. Its choice of "new semantics" was neither accidental nor casual. Rather, the legislature intended to relax somewhat the strict requirements of detailed fact pleading and to adopt the concept of "notice pleading." Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

By repealing § 1-122 and enacting subsection (a)(1) of this rule, the General Assembly intended to relax somewhat the strict requirements of detailed fact pleading and to adopt the concept of "notice pleading." Madigan v. Jenkins, 31 N.C. App. 391, 229 S.E.2d 213 (1976).

This rule was intended to liberalize pleading requirements by adopting the concept of "notice pleading," thereby abolishing the more strict requirements of "fact pleading." Smith v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 84 N.C. App. 120, 351 S.E.2d 774, aff'd, 321 N.C. 60, 361 S.E.2d 571 (1987).

In enacting subsection (a)(1), the General Assembly adopted the concept of notice pleading. Pyco Supply Co. v. American Centennial Ins. Co., 321 N.C. 435, 364 S.E.2d 380 (1988).

The policy behind the notice theory of the present rules is to resolve controversies on the merits, following opportunity for discovery, rather than resolving them on technicalities of pleading. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

Controversies to Be Resolved on Merits and Not Technicalities. — The adoption of the notice theory of pleading indicates the legislature's intention that controversies be resolved on their merits, following an opportunity for discovery, rather than resolving them on technicalities of pleading. Wentz v. Unifi, Inc., 89 N.C. App. 33, 365 S.E.2d 198, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 610, 370 S.E.2d 257 (1988).

Detailed Fact Pleading No Longer Required. — Under the "notice theory" of pleading contemplated by subsection (a)(1), detailed fact pleading is no longer required. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970); Cassels v. Ford Motor Co., 10 N.C. App. 51, 178 S.E.2d 12 (1970); Madigan v. Jenkins, 31 N.C. App. 391, 229 S.E.2d 213 (1976).

Under the notice theory of this rule, pleadings need not contain detailed factual allegations to raise issues. Southern of Rocky Mount, Inc. v. Woodward Specialty Sales, Inc., 52 N.C. App. 549, 279 S.E.2d 32 (1981).

But there is nothing in the rules to prevent detailed pleading if the pleader deems it desirable. He may plead enough facts to prevent the invocation of discovery devices or the use of motions for more definite statement. Such a complaint could clearly identify the issues, since § 1A-1, Rule 10(b) requires the claim or claims to be averred in numbered paragraphs. In other words, there is nothing to prevent skillful and candid pleaders from meeting head-on in the pleadings. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970).

Simplified "notice pleading" is made possible by the liberal opportunity for discovery and the other pretrial procedures established by the rules to disclose more precisely the basis of both claim and defense and to define more narrowly the disputed facts and issues. Brewer v. Harris, 279 N.C. 288, 182 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Sufficiency of Pleading Under Notice Theory. — Under the "notice theory of pleading," a statement of claim is adequate if it gives sufficient notice of the claim asserted to enable the adverse party to answer and prepare for trial, to allow for the application of the doctrine of res judicata, and to show the type of case brought. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971); Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972); Lewis v. Gastonia Air Serv., Inc., 16 N.C. App. 317, 192 S.E.2d 6 (1972); Patterson v. Weatherspoon, 17 N.C. App. 236, 193 S.E.2d 585 (1972); Randolph v. Schuyler, 18 N.C. App. 393, 197 S.E.2d 3 (1973), rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 496, 201 S.E.2d 833 (1974); Luther v. Hauser, 24 N.C. App. 71, 210 S.E.2d 218 (1974).

A pleading complies with this rule if it gives sufficient notice of the events or transactions which produced the claim to enable the adverse party to understand the nature of it and the basis for it, to file a responsive pleading, and, by using the rules provided for obtaining pretrial discovery, to get any additional information he may need to prepare for trial. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970); Cassels v. Ford Motor Co., 10 N.C. App. 51, 178 S.E.2d 12 (1970); Lewis v. Gastonia Air Serv., Inc., 16 N.C. App. 317, 192 S.E.2d 6 (1972); Patterson v. Weatherspoon, 17 N.C. App. 236, 193 S.E.2d 585 (1972); Roberts v. Whitley, 17 N.C. App. 554, 195 S.E.2d 62 (1973); Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979); Henry v. Deen, 61 N.C. App. 189, 300 S.E.2d 707 (1983); Huff v. Chrismon, 68 N.C. App. 525, 315 S.E.2d 711, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 756, 321 S.E.2d 134 (1984); Brad Ragan, Inc. v. Callicut Enters., Inc., 73 N.C. App. 134, 326 S.E.2d 62 (1985); Buchanan v. Hunter Douglas, Inc., 87 N.C. App. 84, 359 S.E.2d 271, cert. denied, 321 N.C. 296, 362 S.E.2d 779 (1987).

The allegations of the verified complaint were sufficiently particular as required by this rule to give the defendant notice of the transactions and occurrences intended to be proved and the type of relief demanded. North Am. Acceptance Corp. v. Samuels, 11 N.C. App. 504, 181 S.E.2d 794 (1971).

True test under this rule is whether the pleading gives fair notice and states the elements of the claim plainly and succinctly. Manning v. Manning, 20 N.C. App. 149, 201 S.E.2d 46 (1973).

A party is not required to plead evidence. Lea Co. v. North Carolina Bd. of Transp., 308 N.C. 603, 304 S.E.2d 164 (1983).

Under the "notice theory of pleading" a complainant must state a claim sufficient to enable the adverse party to understand the nature of the claim, to answer, and to prepare for trial. Ipock v. Gilmore, 73 N.C. App. 182, 326 S.E.2d 271, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 116, 332 S.E.2d 481 (1985).

Under the notice theory of pleading, a complaint need no longer allege facts or elements showing aggravating circumstances which would justify an award of punitive damages. Huff v. Chrismon, 68 N.C. App. 525, 315 S.E.2d 711, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 756, 321 S.E.2d 134 (1984).

Under our modern practice only claims for fraud, duress, libel and slander have to be pleaded with any particularity at all. In all other instances the complaint is sufficient if it gives the court and the parties notice of the transactions, occurrences, or series of transactions or occurrences intended to be proved, showing that the pleader is entitled to relief. Newton v. Whitaker, 83 N.C. App. 112, 349 S.E.2d 333 (1986), aff'd, 319 N.C. 455, 355 S.E.2d 138 (1987).

A pleading is sufficient if it gives notice of the events and transactions and allows the adverse party to understand the nature of the claim and to prepare for trial. Smith v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 84 N.C. App. 120, 351 S.E.2d 774, aff'd, 321 N.C. 60, 361 S.E.2d 571 (1987).

Under the notice theory of pleading, a statement of a claim is adequate if it gives sufficient notice of the events or transactions which produced the claim to enable the adverse party to understand its nature and basis and to file a responsive pleading. Pyco Supply Co. v. American Centennial Ins. Co., 321 N.C. 435, 364 S.E.2d 380 (1988).

A worker's complaint demanding entry of judgment against his employer for the sums due under an Industrial Commission Form 60 was an acceptable method for asserting a claim, where the complaint failed to state that the claimant was seeking judgment under this section, but he pled facts sufficient to alert the employer that relief was being sought under this section. Calhoun v. Wayne Dennis Heating & Air Conditioning, 129 N.C. App. 794, 501 S.E.2d 346 (1998).

All this rule requires is a "short and plain statement of the claim" that will give the defendant fair notice of what the plaintiff's claim is and the grounds upon which it rests. Brewer v. Harris, 279 N.C. 288, 182 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

It was error for the court to strike a lengthy, highly detailed and technical complaint on the apparent grounds that it did not contain a short and plain statement of the facts. This rule prescribes the minimum information that a pleading must contain; it does not require that a complaint contain only a "short and plain statement." Holley v. Burroughs Wellcome Co., 74 N.C. App. 736, 330 S.E.2d 228 (1985), aff'd, 318 N.C. 352, 348 S.E.2d 772 (1986).

Which Must Be More Than a General Statement. — Even construing pleadings liberally, the "short and plain statement of the claim" required by subsection (a)(1) requires more than a general statement that a notice for relief has been filed pursuant to some statute. Baumann v. Smith, 41 N.C. App. 223, 254 S.E.2d 627, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 778, 260 S.E.2d 626 (1979).

While this rule does not require detailed fact pleading, nevertheless it does require a certain degree of specificity. It is not enough to indicate merely that the plaintiff has a grievance, but sufficient detail must be given so that the defendant and the court can obtain a fair idea of what the plaintiff is complaining about, and can see that there is some basis for recovery. Manning v. Manning, 20 N.C. App. 149, 201 S.E.2d 46 (1973).

Mere assertion of a grievance is insufficient to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Some degree of factual particularity is required. The statement of a claim for relief must satisfy the requirements of the substantive law which give rise to the pleadings. Alamance County v. North Carolina Dep't of Human Resources, 58 N.C. App. 748, 294 S.E.2d 377 (1982).

Claim for relief and basis for defense must still satisfy requirements of substantive law which give rise to the pleadings, and no amount of liberalization should seduce the pleader into failing to state enough to give the substantive elements of his claim or of his defense. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970).

Despite the liberal nature of the concept of notice pleading, a complaint must nonetheless state enough to give the substantial elements of at least some legally recognized claim or it is subject to dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6). Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979).

Damages Governed by Evidence Presented. — There is a longstanding rule that damages in this state are governed by the evidence presented rather than the claim made for relief; the fact that the complaint contained a much lower figure than the amount awarded did not mean that the trial judge abused his discretion. Lovell v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 108 N.C. App. 416, 424 S.E.2d 181, aff'd in part; discretionary review improvidently granted in part, 334 N.C. 682, 435 S.E.2d 71 (1993).

Inclusion of Statute Authorizing Measure of Damages Not Necessary. — This rule requires only that a pleading contain "[a] demand for judgment for the relief to which [the party] deems himself entitled." This language does not necessitate including the specific statute authorizing a particular measure of damages. Atkins v. Mitchell, 91 N.C. App. 730, 373 S.E.2d 152 (1988).

In an action by the seller of securities under a contract for sale to recover the purchase price of securities not accepted by the buyer, sellers' failure to specifically cite § 25-8-107 in their complaint did not foreclose them from seeking the contract price remedy nor limit them to recovering only the more traditional measure of the difference between fair market value and unpaid contract price. Atkins v. Mitchell, 91 N.C. App. 730, 373 S.E.2d 152 (1988).

Where a petition requested relief not authorized by statute, the petition stated a defective claim in that it requested relief the court was powerless to grant regardless of what facts could be proved, and thus a motion to dismiss was properly granted. Forrester v. Garrett, 280 N.C. 117, 184 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

"Ultimate" and "Evidentiary" Facts No Longer Distinguished. — One of the objectives sought to be attained by enactment of subsection (a)(1) of this rule was to eliminate the sometimes troublesome and often sterile discussion as to whether a particular allegation states an "ultimate" fact or an "evidentiary" fact or conclusion of law. Hoover v. Hoover, 9 N.C. App. 310, 176 S.E.2d 10 (1970).

Allegations must be liberally construed. Gore v. George J. Ball, Inc., 279 N.C. 192, 182 S.E.2d 389 (1971).

Pleadings must be liberally construed to do substantial justice, and must be fatally defective before they may be rejected as insufficient. Smith v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 84 N.C. App. 120, 351 S.E.2d 774, aff'd, 321 N.C. 60, 361 S.E.2d 571 (1987).

Mere vagueness or lack of detail is not ground for a motion to dismiss. Such a deficiency should be attacked by a motion for a more definite statement. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

But vague and conclusory pleading is not encouraged or commended. Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 222 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

And the courts should not engage in judicial amending or rewriting of pleadings. FCX, Inc. v. Bailey, 14 N.C. App. 149, 187 S.E.2d 381 (1972).

Pleading of Fraud as Exception to Notice Pleading Approach. — Section 1A-1, Rule 9(b) is in contrast to the notice pleading approach adopted upon the enactment of section (a) of this rule and is essentially a codification of former case law of this State with respect to pleading fraud. Girard Trust Bank v. Belk, 41 N.C. App. 328, 255 S.E.2d 430, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 293, 259 S.E.2d 299 (1979).

The provision that pleadings are to be liberally construed under the notice theory of pleadings does not apply to fraud cases. In a fraud case the plaintiff must allege all material facts and circumstances constituting the fraud with particularity. Rosenthal v. Perkins, 42 N.C. App. 449, 257 S.E.2d 63 (1979).

For case comparing specificity requirements of subsection (a)(1) of this rule and corresponding federal and New York rules, see Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970).

Punitive Damages Need Not Be Specially Pled. — Where a pleading fairly apprises opposing parties of facts which will support an award of punitive damages, they may be recovered at trial without having been specially pleaded. Holloway v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 339 N.C. 338, 452 S.E.2d 233 (1994).

Allegations Sufficient to Give Rise to Punitive Damages Claim. — Where complaint alleged that defendant intentionally pointed a gun at the plaintiffs in an attempt to intimidate them, reached into plaintiff's vehicle and struggled with her, making contact with plaintiff infant and plaintiff mother in the process, the acts were intentional acts of the type giving rise to punitive damages. Holloway v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 339 N.C. 338, 452 S.E.2d 233 (1994).

Mislabeled Claims. — In order to survive a motion to dismiss, the allegations of a mislabeled claim must reveal that plaintiff has properly stated a claim under a different legal theory. Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979).

When the allegations in the complaint give sufficient notice of the wrong complained of, an incorrect choice of legal theory should not result in dismissal of the claim if the allegations are sufficient to state a claim under some legal theory. Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979).

Action on Contract Does Not Require Entire Writing. — The principle of pleading, well established under the former Code, that in an action on a written contract it is not mandatory to make the entire writing a part of the complaint, is not specifically set forth in the present Rules of Civil Procedure, but it is implicit in the requirement of this rule that the plaintiff's claim for relief be set forth in "a short and plain statement of the claim" and that "each averment of a pleading shall be simple, concise, and direct." RGK, Inc. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 292 N.C. 668, 235 S.E.2d 234 (1977).

To hold that in order to resist successfully a motion to dismiss, a materialman, who sues on a contractor's payment bond, must set forth in his complaint, by attachment or otherwise, the contract between the builder and the owner, including all plans and specifications for the construction of an apartment complex, would make a farce of the requirement of the present rule that the plaintiff state his claim in a "short and plain statement . . . simple, concise, and direct." RGK, Inc. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 292 N.C. 668, 235 S.E.2d 234 (1977).

Illustrative Forms 3 and 4, § 1A-1, Rule 84, illustrate the sufficient form of a complaint for negligence; they contain much more than the corresponding federal forms, by requiring the pleader to allege the specific acts which constitute the defendant's negligence. Ormond v. Crampton, 16 N.C. App. 88, 191 S.E.2d 405, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 194 (1972).

A petition to condemn land for urban renewal is sufficient under the Rules of Civil Procedure to state a claim for relief where it gives notice of the nature and basis of the petitioners' claim and the type of case brought, and alleges generally the occurrence or performance of the required statutory conditions precedent. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Sufficiency of Amended Complaint Where Demurrer to Original Complaint Sustained Under Prior Practice. — Where a demurrer to original complaint was sustained under former § 1-122(2), and motion to dismiss the amended complaint for failure to state a claim for relief was filed after the effective date of the new Rules of Civil Procedure, the sufficiency of the amended complaint would be tested against the standard provided in subsection (a)(1) of this rule; the order sustaining the demurrer to the original complaint could not be res judicata when considering the question of the sufficiency of the amended complaint under the new rule. Hoover v. Hoover, 9 N.C. App. 310, 176 S.E.2d 10 (1970).

Purpose of Subsection (a)(2). — The General Assembly enacted subsection (a)(2) in response to a perceived crisis in the area of professional liability insurance. A study commission thereon recommended elimination of the ad damnum clause in professional malpractice cases to avoid adverse press attention prior to trial, and thus save reputations from the harm which can result from persons reading about huge malpractice suits and drawing their own conclusions based on the money demanded. Rather than eliminating the clause entirely, the General Assembly chose to follow the Wisconsin approach in which only a jurisdictional amount is named (e.g., the plaintiff claims in excess of $10,000 in damages). Jones v. Boyce, 60 N.C. App. 585, 299 S.E.2d 298 (1983); Harris v. Maready, 64 N.C. App. 1, 306 S.E.2d 799 (1983); Biggs v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 69 N.C. App. 547, 317 S.E.2d 421 (1984).

Provision of subsection (a)(2) of this rule relating to professional malpractice actions was enacted to reduce the believed impact of pretrial publicity about medical malpractice cases, and for no other purpose. It has no bearing on the damages that a victim of medical negligence is entitled to recover, as the long-standing rule that damages in this State are governed by the evidence presented, rather than the claim made for relief, still abides except in cases of default. Nor does this provision curtail the rights that counsel in this State have long had to argue the facts in evidence and all reasonable inferences drawable therefrom. Biggs v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 69 N.C. App. 547, 317 S.E.2d 421 (1984).

The General Assembly enacted subsection (a)(2) of this rule in response to what has been called a national medical malpractice crisis brought on by increasing numbers of malpractice suits and resultant sharply rising malpractice insurance rates. Harris v. Maready, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

The North Carolina General Assembly enacted subsection (a)(2) of this rule to respond to a national medical malpractice crisis and the adverse publicity which sometimes accompanies frivolous or exorbitant claims. Richards & Assocs. v. Boney, 604 F. Supp. 1214 (E.D.N.C. 1985), overruled on other grounds, 148 F.R.D. 545 (E.D.N.C. 1993).

Applicability of Subdivision (a)(2). — Subdivision (a)(2) does not apply to diversity cases in U.S. District Court, and therefore could not provide a basis for dismissal of diversity personal injury action. Creech v. Denning, 148 F.R.D. 545 (E.D.N.C. 1993).

Penalty for Violation of Subsection (a)(2) of This Rule. — Subsection (a)(2) of this rule prescribes no penalty for violation of its proscription against stating the demand for monetary relief. Absent application of the § 1A-1, Rule 41(b) provision for dismissal for violation of the rules, litigants could ignore the proscription with impunity, thereby nullifying the express legislative purpose for its enactment. The General Assembly thus must have intended application of the § 1A-1, Rule 41(b) power of dismissal as a permissible sanction for violation of the proscription of subsection (a)(2). Jones v. Boyce, 60 N.C. App. 585, 299 S.E.2d 298 (1983).

Although the North Carolina Supreme Court has never decided what sanctions are appropriate for parties who violate subsection (a)(2) of this rule, decision in other jurisdictions favor penalties less harsh than dismissal. Stokes v. Wilson & Redding Law Firm, 72 N.C. App. 107, 323 S.E.2d 470 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 612, 332 S.E.2d 83 (1985).

Dismissal for a violation of subsection (a)(2) of this rule is not always the best sanction available to the trial court and is certainly not the only sanction available. Although an action may be dismissed under § 1A-1, Rule 41(b) for a plaintiff's failure to comply with subsection (a)(2), this extreme sanction is to be applied only when the trial court determines that less drastic sanctions will not suffice. Harris v. Maready, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

A dismissal with prejudice, pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 41(b), is an available sanction for a plaintiff's violation of subsection (a)(2) of this rule. It is not, however, the only available sanction and should be applied only when the trial court determines that less drastic sanctions will not suffice. Miller v. Ferree, 84 N.C. App. 135, 351 S.E.2d 845 (1987).

The determination of whether to dismiss for a violation of subsection (a)(2) and whether such a dismissal should be with prejudice so as to bar a subsequent action involves the exercise of judicial discretion. Miller v. Ferree, 84 N.C. App. 135, 351 S.E.2d 845 (1987).

Dismissal May Not Be Imposed Mechanically. — Although dismissal under subsection (a)(2) of this rule is within the discretion of the trial court, when the rule is violated such sanction may not be imposed mechanically. Because the drastic sanction of dismissal is not always the best sanction available to the trial court and is certainly not the only sanction available, dismissal is to be applied only when the trial court determines that less drastic sanctions will not suffice. Foy v. Hunter, 106 N.C. App. 614, 418 S.E.2d 299 (1992).

As to use of the § 1A-1, Rule 41(b) power of dismissal as a sanction for violation of provision of subsection (a)(2) of this rule as to pleading of malpractice damages, see Schell v. Coleman, 65 N.C. App. 91, 308 S.E.2d 662 (1983), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 311 N.C. 763, 321 S.E.2d 145 (1984).

A motion for a more definite statement is the most purely dilatory of all the motions available under the Rules of Civil Procedure, and should not be granted so long as the pleading meets the requirements of this rule and/or § 1A-1, Rule 9 and fairly notifies the opposing party of the nature of the claim. Fisher v. Lamm, 66 N.C. App. 249, 311 S.E.2d 61 (1984).

Complaint Held Insufficient. — Where complaint merely alleged that defendant treated plaintiff cruelly and offered indignities to her person, using the exact language of the alimony statute, but it did not refer to any transactions, occurrences or series of transactions or occurrences intended to be proved, nor mention any specific act of cruelty or indignity, such complaint did not give defendant fair notice of plaintiff's claim, but was merely an "assertion of a grievance," and did not comply with section (a) of this rule. Manning v. Manning, 20 N.C. App. 149, 201 S.E.2d 46 (1973).

Complaint Held Sufficient. — Complaint was sufficient where it gave notice of the nature and basis of plaintiff's claim and the type of case brought and alleged that a lease agreement was entered into by the parties and subsequently breached by nonpayment of rent. Luther v. Hauser, 24 N.C. App. 71, 210 S.E.2d 218 (1974).

While the allegation in a malpractice claim that the defendant-physician's conduct "amounted to a reckless and wanton disregard of and indifference to the rights and safety of" the plaintiff-patient mentioned no particular instance of aggravated conduct, it was sufficient to put the defendant on notice of a punitive damage claim, to provide an understanding of the nature and basis of the claim, and to allow him to prepare his defense. Paris v. Kreitz, 75 N.C. App. 365, 331 S.E.2d 234, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 185, 337 S.E.2d 858 (1985).

Plaintiff sufficiently set out his claim against hospital for medical malpractice where he alleged that under the direction of his doctors, agents or employees of the hospital anesthetized him, that immediately after the surgery he noticed numbness in his left hand, later diagnosed as ulnar neuropathy, and that this condition was the direct and proximate result of the negligent procedures employed in anesthetizing him and immobilizing him during his surgery. Fournier v. Haywood County Hosp., 95 N.C. App. 652, 383 S.E.2d 227 (1989).

Failure to Comply with Subsection (a)(2) in Federal Case Transferred to This State. — Where malpractice action was commenced in Virginia and was transferred intact, the action would not be dismissed because the complaint failed to comply with subsection (a)(2) of this rule, as since the action was commenced in Virginia, there was no foreseeable need at that time to comply with this State's pleading rules. Porter v. Groat, 713 F. Supp. 893 (M.D.N.C. 1989).

Responsive Letter Deemed Answer. — A letter, or any document, that is filed with the court and substantively responds to a complaint may constitute an answer, notwithstanding its failure to comply with all of the technical requirements of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Brown v. American Messenger Servs., Inc., 129 N.C. App. 207, 498 S.E.2d 384 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 692, 511 S.E.2d 644 (1998).

Notice Theory Does Not Necessarily Require Full-Blown Trial. — The notice theory of pleading does not necessarily mean that there must be a full-blown trial. Utilizing the facility of pretrial discovery, the real facts can be ascertained, and by motion for summary judgment (or other suitable device) the trial court can determine whether as a matter of law there is any right of recovery on those facts. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970).

Methods for Obtaining Facts More Specifically. — If, for purposes of preparing a defense, a defendant wishes to know more specifically than the complaint alleges exactly what facts plaintiffs intend to rely upon, tools, such as discovery proceedings under § 1A-1, Rule 26 or a motion for more definite statement under § 1A-1, Rule 12(e), are available. Nolan v. Boulware, 21 N.C. App. 347, 204 S.E.2d 701, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 590, 206 S.E.2d 863 (1974).

Once a complaint gives general notice of the matter being pleaded, the defendant must rely on other procedures, such as discovery, to further define the issues and prepare for trial. Smith v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 84 N.C. App. 120, 351 S.E.2d 774, aff'd, 321 N.C. 60, 361 S.E.2d 571 (1987).

Plaintiff's original complaint held to have given notice of amended claim. Pyco Supply Co. v. American Centennial Ins. Co., 321 N.C. 435, 364 S.E.2d 380 (1988).

Mislabeled Claims. — The fact that plain-tiff's claim is mislabeled in his complaint will not, in and of itself, prove fatal to the action, if critical facts are sufficiently pled in the body of the complaint that will give the adverse party notice of the assertions against him. Buchanan v. Hunter Douglas, Inc., 87 N.C. App. 84, 359 S.E.2d 271, cert. denied, 321 N.C. 296, 362 S.E.2d 779 (1987).

Disability Need Not Be Pleaded. — Plaintiff was not required to plead mental disability in avoidance of the affirmative defense of statute of limitations. Dunkley v. Shoemate, 121 N.C. App. 360, 465 S.E.2d 319 (1996).

Requests for Monetary Relief. — A request for monetary relief sought must be served, and the request must also be filed with the court unless it can be shown to be a discovery document of the type specifically excepted in Rule 5(d). Cottle v. Thompson, 123 N.C. App. 147, 472 S.E.2d 189 (1996).

Trial court erred in dismissing plaintiff's action for failing to file a statement of monetary relief sought where no request for a statement of monetary relief sought was ever filed with the court. Cottle v. Thompson, 123 N.C. App. 147, 472 S.E.2d 189 (1996).

A request for a statement of monetary relief sought cannot be considered a discovery document of the type specifically excepted in Rule 5(d). Cottle v. Thompson, 123 N.C. App. 147, 472 S.E.2d 189 (1996).

III. AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES.

Section (c) of this rule applies only to responsive pleadings. Meachan v. Montgomery County Bd. of Educ., 47 N.C. App. 271, 267 S.E.2d 349 (1980).

Affirmative Defense Defined. — A defense which introduces new matter in an attempt to avoid defendant's counterclaim, regardless of the truth or falsity of the allegations in the counterclaim, is an affirmative defense. Roberts v. Heffner, 51 N.C. App. 646, 277 S.E.2d 446 (1981).

Requirements for Pleading Affirmative Defense. — The language in section (a), dealing with general pleading, and that in section (c), dealing with pleading affirmative defenses, are largely identical. The requirements for pleading an affirmative defense are no more stringent than those for pleading a cause of action. Bell v. Traders & Mechanics Ins. Co., 16 N.C. App. 591, 192 S.E.2d 711 (1972).

Failure to plead an affirmative defense ordinarily results in waiver thereof. The parties may, however, still try the issue by express or implied consent. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Edwards, 67 N.C. App. 1, 312 S.E.2d 656, rev'd on other grounds, 311 N.C. 170, 316 S.E.2d 298 (1984); Alston v. Monk, 92 N.C. App. 59, 373 S.E.2d 463 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 246, 378 S.E.2d 420 (1989); Duke Univ. v. St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co., 95 N.C. App. 663, 384 S.E.2d 36 (1989).

Failure to Plead Barred Issue on Appeal. — Defendants' failure to plead plaintiffs' contributory negligence case was a bar to this issue being raised on appeal. Forbes v. Par Ten Group, Inc., 99 N.C. App. 587, 394 S.E.2d 643 (1990), discretionary review denied, 99 N.C. 587, 402 S.E.2d 824 (1991).

Failure to Plead Res Judicata. — The failure of the defendant to plead res judicata is not a bar to that issue being raised at hearing on summary judgment. County of Rutherford ex rel. Child Support Enforcement Agency ex rel. Hedrick v. Whitener, 100 N.C. App. 70, 394 S.E.2d 263 (1990).

Illegality is an affirmative defense under section (c) of this rule, and the burden of proving illegality is on the party who pleads it. Rose v. Vulcan Materials Co., 282 N.C. 643, 194 S.E.2d 521 (1973); Collins v. Davis, 68 N.C. App. 588, 315 S.E.2d 759, aff'd, 312 N.C. 324, 321 S.E.2d 892 (1984).

As Is Contributory Negligence. — Contributory negligence is an affirmative defense, and the burden of proof on a contributory negligence issue rests on defendant. Clary v. Alexander County Bd. of Educ., 286 N.C. 525, 212 S.E.2d 160 (1975).

And Misconduct in Divorce Action. — The burden of pleading, as well as establishing, the affirmative defense of misconduct in a divorce action is on the defendant. Gray v. Gray, 16 N.C. App. 730, 193 S.E.2d 492 (1972).

As Well as Laches. — Laches is an affirmative defense which must be pleaded, and the party pleading it bears the burden of proof. Young v. Young, 43 N.C. App. 419, 259 S.E.2d 348 (1979); Larsen v. Sedberry, 54 N.C. App. 166, 282 S.E.2d 551 (1981), cert. denied, 304 N.C. 728, 288 S.E.2d 381 (1982).

Laches is an affirmative defense which must be specifically pleaded by answer. Bertie-Hertford Child Support Enforcement Agency v. Barnes, 80 N.C. App. 552, 342 S.E.2d 579 (1986).

Payment is an affirmative defense, and as such it must be pleaded by the party asserting it. The general rule is that the burden of showing payment must be assumed by the party interposing it. Shaw v. Shaw, 63 N.C. App. 775, 306 S.E.2d 506 (1983).

Payment is an affirmative defense which must be established by the party claiming its protection. Where creditor's evidence establishes an existing indebtedness and nonpayment, and debtor offers no competent evidence in support of his defense of payment, summary judgment or directed verdict for the creditor is properly granted. Murphrey v. Winslow, 70 N.C. App. 10, 318 S.E.2d 849, cert. denied as to additional issues, 312 N.C. 495, 322 S.E.2d 558 (1984).

Sudden Emergency. — Defendants failed to meet the requirement of section (c) of this rule when they failed to set forth affirmatively sudden emergency as an avoidance or affirmative defense. Hinson v. Brown, 80 N.C. App. 661, 343 S.E.2d 284, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 318 N.C. 282, 348 S.E.2d 138 (1986).

Ordinarily waiver and estoppel must be pleaded as affirmative defenses. Stuart v. United States Fire Ins. Co., 18 N.C. App. 518, 197 S.E.2d 250 (1973).

Waiver, the voluntary relinquishment of a known right, is an affirmative defense which a defendant must plead and which he has the burden of proving. Rose v. Vulcan Materials Co., 282 N.C. 643, 194 S.E.2d 521 (1973).

A defense based on waiver or release is an affirmative defense, and therefore the defendant bears the burden of proof. Lyon v. Shelter Resources Corp., 40 N.C. App. 557, 253 S.E.2d 277 (1979).

Waiver and estoppel are affirmative defenses which must be pleaded with certainty and particularity and established by the greater weight of the evidence. Duke Univ. v. St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co., 95 N.C. App. 663, 384 S.E.2d 36 (1989).

Contributory Negligence Sufficiently Pleaded. — Where defendant in her answer specifically alleged contributory negligence and referred to the actions which constituted the alleged contributory negligence, plaintiff was therefore put on notice that defendant would try to prove that plaintiff could not recover on those grounds. Watkins v. Hellings, 83 N.C. App. 430, 350 S.E.2d 590 (1986), rev'd on other grounds, 321 N.C. 78, 361 S.E.2d 568 (1987).

Where the parties' pleadings were sufficient to give notice of all theories, claims and facts sought to be proven by each party, the trial court did not err in submitting the issue of contributory negligence to the jury. Wentz v. Unifi, Inc., 89 N.C. App. 33, 365 S.E.2d 198, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 610, 370 S.E.2d 257 (1988).

On an affirmative defense, the burden of proof lies with the defendant. Price v. Conley, 21 N.C. App. 326, 204 S.E.2d 178 (1974).

When not raised by the pleadings, the issue of usury may still be tried if raised by express or implied consent of the parties at trial. Wallace Men's Wear, Inc. v. Harris, 28 N.C. App. 153, 220 S.E.2d 390 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 298, 222 S.E.2d 703 (1976).

Exclusion of evidence on the ground that an affirmative defense was not specifically pleaded may be properly raised at trial. Cooke v. Cooke, 34 N.C. App. 124, 237 S.E.2d 323, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 740, 241 S.E.2d 513 (1977).

Where a defendant does not raise an affirmative defense in his pleadings or in the trial, he cannot present it on appeal. Delp v. Delp, 53 N.C. App. 72, 280 S.E.2d 27, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 194, 285 S.E.2d 97 (1981).

Where defendant did not raise the defense of the statute of frauds, one of the affirmative defenses which must be pleaded, in his pleadings or in the trial, he could not present it on appeal. Grissett v. Ward, 10 N.C. App. 685, 179 S.E.2d 867 (1971).

A defendant may not take advantage of the provisions of the statute of frauds by a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted, which must be pleaded as an affirmative defense. Green v. Harbour, 113 N.C. App. 280, 437 S.E.2d 719 (1993).

Failure to Affirmatively Plead Defenses of Consideration and Statute of Frauds. — In an action to recover damages for breach of contract for the sale of land and construction of a house thereon, where defendants failed to affirmatively plead in their answer the defenses of consideration and the statute of frauds, defendants thereby waived their right to assert these defenses. Smith v. Hudson, 48 N.C. App. 347, 269 S.E.2d 172 (1980).

Complaint Sufficient to Put Defendants on Notice of a Contract. — Complaint alleging, that there was an express contract between plaintiff and defendants for payment of funeral expenses was sufficient to put defendants on notice of a contract; therefore, where defendants did not specifically plead the affirmative defense of the statute of frauds as required by § 1A-1, Rule 8(c), it would not be available as a defense to the contract. Parrish Funeral Home v. Pittman, 104 N.C. App. 268, 409 S.E.2d 327 (1991).

Failure to Cite Statutory Statute of Limitations Provision. — Failure to plead § 1-52(16) by precise number and subdivision is not fatal under subsection (c) of this Rule. Bonestell v. North Topsail Shores Condominiums, Inc., 103 N.C. App. 219, 405 S.E.2d 222 (1991).

Burden on Plaintiff When Statute of Limitations Is Pleaded. — North Carolina, apparently alone among American jurisdictions, continues to adhere to the rule that once the statute of limitations has been properly pleaded in defense the burden of proof shifts to the plaintiff to show that the action was filed within the statutory period. This anomalous rule survived the adoption of the Rules of Civil Procedure, which specifically list the statute of limitations as an affirmative defense and operate generally to place the burden of proof of affirmative defenses on the party raising them. Georgia-Pacific Corp. v. Bondurant, 81 N.C. App. 362, 344 S.E.2d 302 (1986).

Where the defense admits that the statute of limitations does not bar the claim, the question should be summarily treated (if at all) by the court, not the jury. Georgia-Pacific

Corp. v. Bondurant, 81 N.C. App. 362, 344 S.E.2d 302 (1986).

Defenses Raised in Hearing on Summary Judgment Motion Deemed Part of Pleadings. — The nature of summary judgment procedure, coupled with the generally liberal rules relating to amendment of pleadings, requires that unpleaded affirmative defenses be deemed part of the pleadings where such defenses are raised in a hearing on a motion for summary judgment. Cooke v. Cooke, 34 N.C. App. 124, 237 S.E.2d 323, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 740, 241 S.E.2d 513 (1977); Barrett, Robert & Woods, Inc. v. Armi, 59 N.C. App. 134, 296 S.E.2d 10, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 269, 299 S.E.2d 214 (1982); C.C. Walker Grading & Hauling, Inc. v. S.R.F. Mgt. Corp., 66 N.C. App. 170, 310 S.E.2d 615, rev'd on other grounds, 311 N.C. 170, 316 S.E.2d 298 (1984).

And May Be Heard for First Time on Motion for Summary Judgment. — Unpleaded affirmative defenses may be heard for the first time on motion for summary judgment, even though not asserted in the answer, at least where both parties are aware of the defense. Dickens v. Puryear, 45 N.C. App. 696, 263 S.E.2d 856 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 302 N.C. 437, 276 S.E.2d 325 (1981).

For the purpose of ruling on a motion for summary judgment, an affirmative defense may be raised for the first time by affidavit. Bassett Furn. Indus. of N.C., Inc. v. Griggs, 47 N.C. App. 104, 266 S.E.2d 702 (1980).

Unpled affirmative defenses may be heard for the first time on motion for summary judgment even though not asserted in the answer, at least where both parties are aware of the defense. Gillis v. Whitley's Disct. Auto Sales, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 270, 319 S.E.2d 661 (1984).

Raising of Affirmative Defense in Support of Summary Judgment Before Responsive Pleadings Due. — A party whose responsive pleading is not yet due may, by motion for summary judgment and in support of the motion, raise an affirmative defense to an asserted claim before he pleads responsively to the claim. Dickens v. Puryear, 302 N.C. 437, 276 S.E.2d 325 (1981).

Failure to be properly licensed is an affirmative defense which ordinarily must be specifically pleaded. Barrett, Robert & Woods, Inc. v. Armi, 59 N.C. App. 134, 296 S.E.2d 10, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 269, 299 S.E.2d 214 (1982).

Defense of Consideration Waived. — Where defendant failed to plead or offer evidence on the defense of consideration advanced in good faith, defendant waived right to assert this defense. Arnette v. Morgan, 88 N.C. App. 458, 363 S.E.2d 678 (1988).

Failure to Plead Election of Remedies. — Defendant, who claimed that plaintiff was barred from recovery because plaintiff elected inconsistent remedies, could not introduce election of remedy theory for the first time on appeal, since the defense of inconsistent remedies is an affirmative defense, and defendant did not plead election of remedies or present that theory at trial. North Carolina Fed. Savs. & Loan Ass'n v. Ray, 95 N.C. App. 317, 382 S.E.2d 851 (1989).

Abatement Where Prior Action Pending in Appellate Division. — A prior action which is pending in the appellate division may serve as a prior action pending for the purpose of basing a judgment of abatement in a subsequent action between the same parties upon the same issues. Clark v. Craven Regional Medical Auth., 326 N.C. 15, 387 S.E.2d 168 (1990).

Effect of an Entry of Default. — The effect of an entry of default is that the defendant against whom entry of default is made is deemed to have admitted the allegations in plaintiff's complaint and is prohibited from defending on the merits of the case. Spartan Leasing, Inc. v. Pollard, 101 N.C. App. 450, 400 S.E.2d 476 (1991).

IV. EFFECT OF FAILURE TO DENY.

Averments in pleadings are admitted when not denied in a responsive pleading, if a responsive pleading is required. Hill v. Hill, 11 N.C. App. 1, 180 S.E.2d 424, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 348, 182 S.E.2d 580 (1971).

Allegations Not Admitted Where Reply Not Required. — Plaintiff's failure to file a reply to defendant's purported "counterclaim" did not operate as an admission of the facts alleged therein where defendant's pleading did nothing more than raise an affirmative defense to plaintiff's cause of action, to which a reply was neither required nor permitted by § 1A-1, Rule 7(a). Eubanks v. First Protection Life Ins. Co., 44 N.C. App. 224, 261 S.E.2d 28 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 735, 267 S.E.2d 661 (1980).

Where plaintiff was not required to plead matters in avoidance of affirmative defenses, he could not as a matter of right file a reply to plead such matters, and he was not required to seek leave to plead such matters. Thus, defendants' affirmative defense of release was deemed avoided or denied by section (d) of this rule and no further pleadings were required. Brown v. Lanier, 60 N.C. App. 575, 299 S.E.2d 279 (1983).

Privilege Against Self-incrimination Applies at Pleading Stage. — A defendant may plead his privilege against self-incrimination in a civil action where the plaintiff asks for punitive damages, and the privilege applies to protect a party from self-incrimination at the pleading stage of an action. Byrd v. Hodges, 44 N.C. App. 509, 261 S.E.2d 269 (1980).

Thus, Allegations Not Admitted Where

Privilege Asserted. — In an action to recover compensatory and punitive damages for alienation of affections and criminal conversation, where defendant refused to answer the allegations of plaintiff's complaint, claiming his constitutional privilege against self-incrimination, the trial court erred in deeming the allegations as admitted pursuant to section (d). Byrd v. Hodges, 44 N.C. App. 509, 261 S.E.2d 269 (1980).

Procedure at Trial Where Party Not Permitted to File Responsive Pleading. — A party who is not permitted to file a responsive pleading may meet the allegations at trial in any manner that would have been proper had a reply been allowed. Malloy v. Malloy, 33 N.C. App. 56, 234 S.E.2d 199 (1977).

Reply Not Required. — Where defendant's claim contending that all the property listed was marital property, though denominated a counterclaim, in effect did no more than deny plaintiff's allegations that only the property listed in the complaint was marital property, a reply was not required. Cornelius v. Cornelius, 87 N.C. App. 269, 360 S.E.2d 703 (1987).

There was no error in an instruction to the jury that defendant admitted a contract, where a paragraph of the complaint alleged the making of the contract and the terms thereof as contended by the plaintiff, and the answer stated that the paragraph was not denied and did not allege a different contract. Johnson v. Massengill, 280 N.C. 376, 186 S.E.2d 168 (1972).

V. ALTERNATIVE, HYPOTHETICAL AND INCONSISTENT STATEMENTS.

There is no requirement that all claims be legally consistent. Concrete Serv. Corp. v. Investors Group, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 678, 340 S.E.2d 755, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 333, 346 S.E.2d 137 (1986).

A party may allege and prove inconsistent or alternative theories without subjecting the case to directed verdict. Hall v. Mabe, 77 N.C. App. 758, 336 S.E.2d 427 (1985).

Defendant may plead alternative, inconsistent defenses, and need not make an election between the two defenses prior to trial. Alpar v. Weyerhaeuser Co., 20 N.C. App. 340, 201 S.E.2d 503, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 85, 203 S.E.2d 57 (1974).

Election of Remedies. — Where defendant sought equitable distribution and imposition of a constructive trust upon certain property in her husband's possession, doctrine of election of remedies would ban action for constructive trust only if a distribution had been made in the equitable distribution action and the constructive trust remedy was inconsistent with the equitable distribution remedy. Lamb v. Lamb, 92 N.C. App. 680, 375 S.E.2d 685 (1989).

On appeal from summary judgment, the record did not provide basis for determination of whether defendant's equitable distribution action would allow redress of injury complained of in her constructive trust proceeding, thus barring the constructive trust action under the doctrine of election of remedies; nonetheless, as the equitable distribution action had not been prosecuted to a final judgment, the trial court erred in entering summary judgment for the plaintiff and dismissing defendant's counterclaim for a constructive trust. Lamb v. Lamb, 92 N.C. App. 680, 375 S.E.2d 685 (1989).

Quantum Meruit. — It is not necessary to plead quantum meruit in the alternative unless the claim is based on the same subject matter as the express contract claim, since one cannot recover on both claims. Consequently, it is error to submit an alternative implied contract claim to the jury when an express contract has been proved. Catoe v. Helms Constr. & Concrete Co., 91 N.C. App. 492, 372 S.E.2d 331 (1988).

Where plaintiff, in the event that he could not prove breach of an express contract, sought the same amount in the alternative in quantum meruit, and succeeded in proving the existence of an express contract at trial, he could not then successfully assert on appeal that his implied contract claim should have been considered by the jury simply because his express contract claim yielded only nominal damages. Catoe v. Helms Constr. & Concrete Co., 91 N.C. App. 492, 372 S.E.2d 331 (1988).

VI. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-151 and 1-159.

Common-law rule requiring every pleading to be construed against the pleader was materially modified by former § 1-151. Sexton v. Farrington, 185 N.C. 339, 117 S.E. 172 (1923).

Liberal Construction of Pleadings with View to Substantial Justice. — Pleadings challenged by a demurrer are to be construed liberally with a view to substantial justice between the parties. Stamey v. Rutherfordton Elec. Membership Corp., 247 N.C. 640, 101 S.E.2d 814 (1958); Givens v. Sellars, 273 N.C. 44, 159 S.E.2d 530 (1968); Clemmons v. Life Ins. Co., 1 N.C. App. 215, 161 S.E.2d 55, aff'd, 274 N.C. 416, 163 S.E.2d 761 (1968).

The allegations of a pleading must be liberally construed for the purpose of determining their effect and with a view to substantial justice between the parties. Edwards v. Edwards, 261 N.C. 445, 135 S.E.2d 18 (1964); Powell v. Powell, 271 N.C. 420, 156 S.E.2d 691 (1967).

In the construction of a pleading to determine whether or not the allegations meet the requirements laid down by the court, such allegations must be construed with a view to substantial justice between the parties. Kemp v. Funderburk, 224 N.C. 353, 30 S.E.2d 155 (1944).

The pleadings must be liberally construed, with a view to present the case upon its real merits. Lyon v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 165 N.C. 143, 81 S.E. 1 (1914).

Construction of Pleadings in Favor of Pleader. — Pleadings must be liberally construed, and every reasonable intendment and presumption must be in favor of the pleader. A pleading must be fatally defective before it will be rejected as insufficient. Corbett v. Hilton Lumber Co., 223 N.C. 704, 28 S.E.2d 250 (1943). See also, Sandlin v. Yancey, 224 N.C. 519, 31 S.E.2d 532 (1944); Ferrell v. Worthington, 226 N.C. 609, 39 S.E.2d 812 (1946); Winston v. Williams & McKeithan Lumber Co., 227 N.C. 339, 42 S.E.2d 218 (1947); McCampbell v. Valdese Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 231 N.C. 647, 58 S.E.2d 617 (1950); Peoples Oil Co. v. Richardson, 271 N.C. 696, 157 S.E.2d 369 (1967).

The allegations of the complaint are to be liberally construed so as to give the plaintiff the benefit of every reasonable intendment in his favor. Clemmons v. Life Ins. Co., 274 N.C. 416, 163 S.E.2d 761 (1968).

The court is required to construe the complaint liberally with a view to substantial justice between the parties, and every reasonable intendment is to be made in favor of the pleader. Setser v. Cepco Dev. Corp., 3 N.C. App. 163, 164 S.E.2d 407 (1968); Joyner v. Woodard, 201 N.C. 315, 160 S.E. 288 (1931); Bailey v. Roberts, 208 N.C. 532, 181 S.E. 754 (1935); Leach v. Page, 211 N.C. 622, 191 S.E. 349 (1937); Anthony v. Knight, 211 N.C. 637, 191 S.E. 323 (1937); Anderson Cotton Mills v. Royal Mfg. Co., 218 N.C. 560, 11 S.E.2d 550 (1940).

Upon inquiry as to whether a complaint states a cause of action, it will be liberally construed, with every reasonable intendment therefrom in the plaintiff's favor, however uncertain, defective, and redundant its allegations may be drawn. Elam v. Barnes, 110 N.C. 73, 14 S.E. 621 (1892); Foy v. Stephens, 168 N.C. 438, 84 S.E. 758 (1915); State ex rel. N.C. Corp. Comm'n v. Harnett County Trust Co., 192 N.C. 246, 134 S.E. 656 (1926); North Carolina Corp. Comm'n v. Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 193 N.C. 513, 137 S.E. 587 (1927); Seawell v. Chas. Cole & Co., 194 N.C. 546, 194 N.C. 1450a, 140 S.E. 85, 140 S.E. 85 (1927); Enloe v. Ragle, 195 N.C. 38, 141 S.E. 477 (1928); Presnell v. Beshears, 227 N.C. 279, 41 S.E.2d 835 (1947). See Bryant v. Little River Ice Co., 233 N.C. 266, 63 S.E.2d 547 (1951).

A motion for judgment on the pleadings is not favored by the courts; pleadings alleged to state no cause of action or defense will be liberally construed in favor of the pleader. Edwards v. Edwards, 261 N.C. 445, 135 S.E.2d 18 (1964); Powell v. Powell, 271 N.C. 420, 156 S.E.2d 691 (1967).

Complaint Sufficient to State Cause of Action Sustained. — If the facts alleged are sufficient for a cause of action when liberally construed, however inartistically the complaint may have been drawn, it will be sustained. Renn v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 170 N.C. 128, 86 S.E. 964 (1915), aff'd, 241 U.S. 290, 36 S. Ct. 567, 60 L. Ed. 1006 (1916); Conrad v. Board of Educ., 190 N.C. 389, 130 S.E. 53 (1925). Same rule applies to an answer. Dixon v. Green, 178 N.C. 205, 100 S.E. 262 (1919); Pridgen v. Pridgen, 190 N.C. 102, 129 S.E. 419 (1925). See also Farrell v. Thomas & Howard Co., 204 N.C. 631, 169 S.E. 224 (1933).

A complaint cannot be overthrown unless it be wholly insufficient. If in any portion of it, or to any extent, it presents facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, or if facts sufficient for that purpose can be fairly gathered from it, the pleading will stand, however inartistically it may have been drawn, or however uncertain, defective, or redundant may be its statements, for, contrary to the common-law rule, every reasonable intendment and presumption must be made in favor of the pleader. A complaint must be fatally defective before it will be rejected as insufficient. Fairbanks, Morse & Co. v. J.A. Murdock Co., 207 N.C. 348, 177 S.E. 122 (1934); Ramsey v. Nash Furn. Co., 209 N.C. 165, 183 S.E. 536 (1936); Cummings v. Dunning, 210 N.C. 156, 185 S.E. 653 (1936); State ex rel. Avery County v. Braswell, 215 N.C. 270, 1 S.E.2d 864 (1939); Vincent v. Powell, 215 N.C. 336, 1 S.E.2d 826 (1939); Dickensheets v. Taylor, 223 N.C. 570, 27 S.E.2d 618 (1943), citing Anderson Cotton Mills v. Royal Mfg. Co., 218 N.C. 560, 11 S.E.2d 550 (1940).

If a complaint merely alleges conclusions, it is demurrable. On the other hand, if in any portion of it or to any extent it presents facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, the pleading will stand. Givens v. Sellars, 273 N.C. 44, 159 S.E.2d 530 (1968).

A pleading will be upheld if any part presents sufficient facts, or if such facts may be gathered from the whole pleading by a liberal and reasonable construction. Pridgen v. Pridgen, 190 N.C. 102, 129 S.E. 419 (1925).

When it is apparent from the whole pleading that the complaint alleges a good cause of action, it will be sustained under the rule of liberal construction. Muse v. Ford Motor Co., 175 N.C. 466, 95 S.E. 900 (1918); Dixon v. Green, 178 N.C. 205, 100 S.E. 262 (1919).

There should be at least a substantial accuracy in the averments of pleadings, and a compliance therein with the essential rules of pleading so that the real issues may be evolved from the controversy. New Bern Banking &

Trust Co. v. Duffy, 156 N.C. 83, 72 S.E. 96 (1911).

The complaint is construed to aver all the facts that can be implied by fair and reasonable intendment from the facts expressly stated. Steel v. Locke Cotton Mills Co., 231 N.C. 636, 58 S.E.2d 620 (1950).

But the court will not construe into a pleading that which it does not contain. Jones v. Jones Lewis Furn. Co., 222 N.C. 439, 23 S.E.2d 309 (1942).

The rule of liberal construction does not mean that a pleading shall be construed to say what it does not say, but that if it can be seen from its general scope that a party has a cause of action or defense, he will not be deprived thereof merely because he has not stated it with technical accuracy. Chesson v. Lynch, 186 N.C. 625, 120 S.E. 198 (1923).

The rule of liberal construction does not mean that the court shall supply the necessary allegations, nor is it intended thereby to repeal those rules of pleading which are essential to produce certainty of issues. Turner v. McKee, 137 N.C. 251, 49 S.E. 330 (1904). See also, Fairbanks, Morse & Co. v. J.A. Murdock Co., 207 N.C. 348, 177 S.E. 122 (1934).

While the appellate court must construe liberally the allegations of a challenged pleading, the appellate court is not permitted to read into it facts which it does not contain. Lane v. Griswold, 273 N.C. 1, 159 S.E.2d 338 (1968).

Liberal construction does not mean that the court is to read into the complaint allegations which it does not contain. Clemmons v. Life Ins. Co., 274 N.C. 416, 163 S.E.2d 761 (1968).

A complaint must be fatally defective before it will be rejected as insufficient. Givens v. Sellars, 273 N.C. 44, 159 S.E.2d 530 (1968).

Under the liberal construction rule, an answer must be fatally defective before it will be rejected as insufficient, and every reasonable intendment and presumption must be in favor of the pleader. Commerce Ins. Co. v. McCraw, 215 N.C. 105, 1 S.E.2d 369 (1939).

A demurrer will not be sustained unless the complaint is fatally and wholly defective. Clemmons v. Life Ins. Co., 1 N.C. App. 215, 161 S.E.2d 55, aff'd, 274 N.C. 416, 163 S.E.2d 761 (1968).

Construction of Inaccurate Language. — A plea that a cause of action did not "arise" within the time prescribed by the statute for the commencement of an action, while not strictly accurate, would be construed under the liberal system of pleading to mean that it did not "accrue" within that time. Stubbs v. Motz, 113 N.C. 458, 18 S.E. 387 (1893).

It is proper to strike repetitious allegations from the pleadings. Girard Trust Bank v. Easton, 3 N.C. App. 414, 165 S.E.2d 252 (1969).

New matter in the answer not relating to a counterclaim is deemed denied without a reply. Sullivan v. Johnson, 3 N.C. App. 581, 165 S.E.2d 507 (1969).

Conflict of Laws. — The rules of construction of pleadings are governed by the law of the state in which the cause is being litigated. McNinch v. American Trust Co., 183 N.C. 33, 110 S.E. 663 (1922), appeal dismissed, 261 U.S. 606, 43 S. Ct. 363, 67 L. Ed. 823, cert. denied, 261 U.S. 618, 43 S. Ct. 663, 67 L. Ed. 823 (1923).

Rule 9. Pleading special matters.

(a) Capacity. — Any party not a natural person shall make an affirmative averment showing its legal existence and capacity to sue. Any party suing in any representative capacity shall make an affirmative averment showing his capacity and authority to sue. When a party desires to raise an issue as to the legal existence of any party or the capacity of any party to sue or be sued or the authority of a party to sue or be sued in a representative capacity, he shall do so by specific negative averment, which shall include such supporting particulars as are peculiarly within the pleader's knowledge.

(b) Fraud, duress, mistake, condition of the mind. — In all averments of fraud, duress or mistake, the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake shall be stated with particularity. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally.

(c) Conditions precedent. — In pleading the performance or occurrence of conditions precedent, it is sufficient to aver generally that all conditions precedent have been performed or have occurred. A denial of performance or occurrence shall be made specifically and with particularity.

(d) Official document or act. — In pleading an official document or official act it is sufficient to aver that the document was issued or the act done in compliance with law.

(e) Judgment. — In pleading a judgment, decision or ruling of a domestic or foreign court, judicial or quasi-judicial tribunal, or of a board or officer, it is sufficient to aver the judgment, decision or ruling without setting forth matter showing jurisdiction to render it.

(f) Time and place. — For the purpose of testing the sufficiency of a pleading, averments of time and place are material and shall be considered like all other averments of material matter.

(g) Special damage. — When items of special damage are claimed each shall be averred.

(h) Private statutes. In pleading a private statute or right derived therefrom it is sufficient to refer to the statute by its title or the day of its ratification if ratified before January 1, 1996, or the date it becomes law if it becomes law on or after January 1, 1996, and the court shall thereupon take judicial notice of it.

(i) Libel and slander. —

(1) In an action for libel or slander it is not necessary to state in the complaint any extrinsic facts for the purpose of showing the application to the plaintiff of the defamatory matter out of which the claim for relief arose, but it is sufficient to state generally that the same was published or spoken concerning the plaintiff, and if such allegation is controverted, the plaintiff is bound to establish on trial that it was so published or spoken.

(2) The defendant may in his answer allege both the truth of the matter charged as defamatory, and any mitigating circumstances to reduce the amount of damages; and whether he proves the justification or not, he may give in evidence the mitigating circumstances.

(j) Medical malpractice. — Any complaint alleging medical malpractice by a health care provider as defined in G.S. 90-21.11 in failing to comply with the applicable standard of care under G.S. 90-21.12 shall be dismissed unless:

(1) The pleading specifically asserts that the medical care has been reviewed by a person who is reasonably expected to qualify as an expert witness under Rule 702 of the Rules of Evidence and who is willing to testify that the medical care did not comply with the applicable standard of care;

(2) The pleading specifically asserts that the medical care has been reviewed by a person that the complainant will seek to have qualified as an expert witness by motion under Rule 702(e) of the Rules of Evidence and who is willing to testify that the medical care did not comply with the applicable standard of care, and the motion is filed with the complaint; or

(3) The pleading alleges facts establishing negligence under the existing common-law doctrine of res ipsa loquitur.

Upon motion by the complainant prior to the expiration of the applicable statute of limitations, a resident judge of the superior court of the county in which the cause of action arose may allow a motion to extend the statute of limitations for a period not to exceed 120 days to file a complaint in a medical malpractice action in order to comply with this Rule, upon a determination that good cause exists for the granting of the motion and that the ends of justice would be served by an extension. The plaintiff shall provide, at the request of the defendant, proof of compliance with this subsection through up to ten written interrogatories, the answers to which shall be verified by the expert required under this subsection. These interrogatories do not count against the interrogatory limit under Rule 33.

(k) Punitive damages. — A demand for punitive damages shall be specifically stated, except for the amount, and the aggravating factor that supports the award of punitive damages shall be averred with particularity. The amount of damages shall be pled in accordance with Rule 8. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1995, c. 20, s. 10; c. 309, s. 2; c. 514, s. 3; 1998-217, s. 61.)

COMMENT

This rule is designed to lay down some special rules for pleading in typically recurring contexts which have traditionally caused trouble when no codified directive existed.

Section (a). — This section deals with the problem of putting in issue the legal existence, the capacity or the authority of parties. The rule as presented here requires that parties plaintiff who are not natural persons shall affirmatively aver their legal existence and capacity and that parties plaintiff suing in representative capacities shall affirmatively plead to show capacity and authority. However, the further requirement is laid down that any party actually desiring to put any of these concepts in issue shall negatively aver their nonexistence and support the averment. This section departs from federal Rule 9, which has no requirement that capacity, legal existence or representative authority be affirmatively averred. The Code nowhere deals specifically with the question whether capacity, etc., must be affirmatively pleaded. It did, of course, provide for demurrer to a complaint which affirmatively disclosed lack of capacity. Former § 1-127(2). Monfils v. Hazlewood, 218 N.C. 215, 10 S.E.2d 673 (1940) (complaint in wrongful death action affirmatively showing plaintiff a foreign administratrix). Capacity and existence are customarily pleaded affirmatively in North Carolina practice in any context where they might possibly be in issue, e.g., by parties suing in representative capacities; by corporations. There is no present Code requirement that their nonexistence or noncapacity be specifically averred and supported by pleading in order to put this in issue, and the rule does require this. This is an improvement, since it deprives parties of the easy ability, without real basis in fact, to put the opponent to needless proof of these matters.

Section (b). — This section codifies a rule applied without specific Code directive in existing State practice. See, e.g., Calloway v. Wyatt, 246 N.C. 129, 97 S.E.2d 881 (1957).

Section (c). — This section is an approximate counterpart to former § 1-155. The rule is, however, more precise on two aspects, and thereby an improvement. First it is made plain that the license to plead generally extends to "occurrence" as well as to "performance" of conditions precedent. Second, the rule requires that the party desiring to controvert performance or occurrence must specify and particularize rather than merely deny the general allegation.

Section (d). — This section had no counterpart in existing law, but is a helpful sanction to plead generally and in conclusory terms the official character of document issuance and particular acts — "facts" not logically subject to "ultimate fact" pleading.

Section (e). — This section is an approximate counterpart to former § 1-154, but makes precise some things not spelled out in that statute, i.e., that it relates to judgments of foreign as well as domestic courts and to the decisions of quasi-judicial tribunals as well as those of traditional courts of law and judicial officers.

Section (f). — This section varies the usual rule under the Code that allegations of time and place are immaterial, but in only one narrow respect, viz., that for purposes of testing the sufficiency of a pleading, i.e., on motion to dismiss or for judgment on the pleadings, such allegations are considered material. The main purpose of this is to allow the early raising of issues as to the bar of the statute of limitations. This section would actually solidify a trend in North Carolina practice toward pretrial resolutions of the issue, notwithstanding it may not technically be raised by an attack by demurrer on the pleading itself, but must be affirmatively pleaded by the party relying on the defense. Section 1-15. The practice has already evolved, however, of resolving the issue after answer filed, on pretrial motion or motion for judgment on the pleading. See, e.g., Rowland v. Beauchamp, 253 N.C. 231, 116 S.E.2d 720 (1960); Gillikin v. Bell, 254 N.C. 244, 118 S.E.2d 609 (1961). This section would carry the process one step further and allow the issue to be raised prior to filing of answer by motion to dismiss. For all other purposes, however, allegations of time and place ordinarily remain immaterial, so far as limiting proof is concerned. Of course, any question of materiality is customarily avoided by the "on or about" or "at or near" type allegation.

Section (g). — This section codifies, without attempting elaboration, the rule generally stated and followed under North Carolina Code practice. It attempts no specification of what amounts to "special damage" in particular context, so that developed case precedent on this would continue to apply. See, on this point, Brandis and Trotter, Some Observations on Pleading Damages in North Carolina, 31 N.C.L. Rev. 249 (1953).

Section (h). — This section has no counterpart in the federal rules, but is taken from former § 1-157.

Section (i). — This section has no counterpart in the federal rules, but is taken from former § 1-158.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1995, c. 20, s. 17 provided that sections 1 through 16 of this act would become effective only if the constitutional amendments proposed by Session Laws 1995, c. 5, ss. 1-2 were approved as provided by Session Laws 1995, c. 5, ss. 3-4, and if so approved, sections 1 through 16 would become effective with respect to bills and joint resolutions passed in either house of the General Assembly on or after January 1, 1997. The constitutional amendments were approved.

Session Laws 1995, c. 309, which amended this section by adding subsection (j), in s. 3, provides that the amendment to this section is not intended, and shall not be construed, to enlarge or diminish the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur in medical malpractice claims.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1998 amendment, effective October 31, 1998, added the last two sentences of subsection (j).

I. IN GENERAL.

This rule codifies established North Carolina law. Rodd v. W.H. King Drug Co., 30 N.C. App. 564, 228 S.E.2d 35 (1976).

The pleading with particularity required by section (b) of this rule is complemented by § 1A-1, Rule 15(b). Benfield v. Costner, 67 N.C. App. 444, 313 S.E.2d 203 (1984).

Intent and knowledge may be averred generally. Carver v. Roberts, 78 N.C. App. 511, 337 S.E.2d 126 (1985).

When Complaint Is Sufficient. — Under our modern practice only claims for fraud, duress, libel and slander have to be pleaded with any particularity at all. In all other instances the complaint is sufficient if it gives the court and the parties notice of the transactions, occurrences, or series of transactions or occurrences intended to be proved, showing that the pleader is entitled to relief. Newton v. Whitaker, 83 N.C. App. 112, 349 S.E.2d 333 (1986), aff'd, 319 N.C. 455, 355 S.E.2d 138 (1987).

Pleading of Private or Local Act by Title or Day of Ratification. — As a general rule, a court will not take judicial notice of a private or local act unless it is pleaded by reference to its title or the day of its ratification, even though the act is published among the public laws. But this rule is one of pleading, designed to prevent surprise, and should never be allowed to prevail when a statute which effectually settles the controversy has been formally brought to the attention of the court and all parties. Bland v. City of Wilmington, 278 N.C. 657, 180 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

Applied in Beachboard v. Southern Ry., 16 N.C. App. 671, 193 S.E.2d 577 (1972); Brantley v. Dunstan, 17 N.C. App. 19, 193 S.E.2d 423 (1972); Ragsdale v. ## II. CAPACITY.

This Rule and § 1A-1, Rule 17(a) Compared. — Section 1A-1, Rule 17(a) deals not only with real party in interest questions, but also with questions relating to capacity to sue, which are not solely governed by this rule, while this rule sets out those things which must be specially and specifically pleaded, one of which is the capacity in which plaintiff sues. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

Plaintiff in a wrongful death action must allege and prove that he has the capacity to sue. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

Complaint Need Not Allege What Type of Legal Entity Defendant Is. — The defendant in a civil action must be an existing legal entity, either natural or artificial; however, it is not necessary to allege in the complaint what type of legal entity the defendant is. Rollins v. Junior Miller Roofing Co., 55 N.C. App. 158, 284 S.E.2d 697 (1981).

Allegations that a party is a member of and properly represents a class under § 1A-1, Rule 23 suffice as the "affirmative averment" of "capacity and authority to sue" required by subsection (a) of this rule. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

III. FRAUD, DURESS, MISTAKE, ETC.

Allegations establishing fraud must be stated with particularity. von Hagel v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield, 91 N.C. App. 58, 370 S.E.2d 695 (1988).

Allegations of fraud are subject to more exacting pleading requirements than are generally demanded by our liberal rules of notice pleading. Chesapeake Microfilm, Inc. v. Eastern Microfilm Sales & Serv., Inc., 91 N.C. App. 539, 372 S.E.2d 901 (1988).

This rule requires that the circumstances constituting the defense of duress be pled with particularity. Stewart v. Stewart, 61 N.C. App. 112, 300 S.E.2d 263 (1983).

The requirement of particularity in section (b) must be reconciled with § 1A-1, Rule 8, which requires a short and concise statement of claims, and with the general notice pleading theory of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Cunningham v. Brown, 51 N.C. App. 264, 276 S.E.2d 718 (1981).

Section (b) is in contrast to the notice pleading approach adopted upon the enactment of § 1A-1, Rule 8(a), and is essentially a codification of former case law of this State with respect to pleading fraud. Girard Trust Bank v. Belk, 41 N.C. App. 328, 255 S.E.2d 430, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 293, 259 S.E.2d 299 (1979).

Notice Pleading Not Applicable to Fraud. — The provision of § 1A-1, Rule 8 that pleadings are to be liberally construed under the notice theory of pleadings does not apply to fraud cases. In a fraud case, the plaintiff must allege all material facts and circumstances constituting the fraud with particularity. Rosenthal v. Perkins, 42 N.C. App. 449, 257 S.E.2d 63 (1979).

A claim for relief based on fraud is unique and must be pleaded with particularity even under the liberal rules of notice pleading. Stanford v. Owens, 76 N.C. App. 284, 332 S.E.2d 730, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 670, 336 S.E.2d 402 (1985).

The pleading with particularity required by section (b) of this rule is complemented by § 1A-1, Rule 15(b). Benfield v. Costner, 67 N.C. App. 444, 313 S.E.2d 203 (1984).

The purpose of prior case law and present section (b) is to require pleading of the facts upon which the plaintiff relies to establish the essential elements of fraud; the facts alleged must be sufficient to support a finding of the intent to deceive, the specific false representations that were made, and that the defrauded party relied upon the misrepresentations to his detriment. Girard Trust Bank v. Belk, 41 N.C. App. 328, 255 S.E.2d 430, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 293, 259 S.E.2d 299 (1979).

The purpose of this rule is to protect a defendant from unjustified injury to his reputation by requiring more particularity than is normally required by notice pleading, because fraud embraces such a wide variety of potential conduct that the defendant needs particularity of allegation in order to meet the charges. Terry v. Terry, 302 N.C. 77, 273 S.E.2d 674 (1981).

What Constitutes Fraud. — The vitals of the creature of fraud are well established: There must be a misrepresentation of material fact, made with knowledge of its falsity and with intent to deceive, which the other party reasonably relies on to his deception and detriment. Terry v. Terry, 46 N.C. App. 583, 265 S.E.2d 463 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 302 N.C. 77, 273 S.E.2d 674 (1981).

To prevail in a cause of action sounding in fraud, the plaintiff must prove that false representations or concealments were made with knowledge of the truth or with reckless indifference thereto. Watts v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 74 N.C. App. 769, 330 S.E.2d 256 (1985), rev'd in part on other grounds, 317 N.C. 110, 343 S.E.2d 879 (1986).

Fraud, Duress or Mistake Must Be Alleged. — Section (b) of this rule codifies the requirement previously existing that the facts relied upon to establish fraud, duress or mistake must be alleged. Mangum v. Surles, 281 N.C. 91, 187 S.E.2d 697 (1972); In re Estate of Loftin v. Loftin, 21 N.C. App. 627, 205 S.E.2d 574, aff'd, 285 N.C. 717, 208 S.E.2d 670 (1974).

Insufficient Allegation of Fraud Subjects Plaintiff to Summary Judgment. — Plaintiff cannot simply allege fraud and thereby escape summary judgment; therefore, where plaintiff asserted defendant never intended to honor its obligations, dismissal of the issue was appropriate. Strum v. Exxon Co., 15 F.3d 327 (4th Cir. 1994).

Requirements of Pleading or Averring Fraud. — A pleading setting up fraud must allege the facts relied upon to constitute fraud, and that the alleged false representation was made with intent to deceive plaintiff, or must allege facts from which such intent can be legitimately inferred. Moore v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 30 N.C. App. 390, 226 S.E.2d 833 (1976).

In pleading actual fraud the particularity requirement of this rule is met by alleging time, place and content of the fraudulent representation, identity of the person making the representation and what was obtained as a result of the fraudulent acts or representation. Terry v. Terry, 302 N.C. 77, 273 S.E.2d 674 (1981); Watts v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 75 N.C. App. 1, 330 S.E.2d 242 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 317 N.C. 321, 345 S.E.2d 201 (1986); Lackey v. Bressler, 86 N.C. App. 486, 358 S.E.2d 560 (1987); Powell v. Wold, 88 N.C. App. 61, 362 S.E.2d 796 (1987).

The pleader must state with particularity the time, place and content of the false misrepresentation. Coley v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 41 N.C. App. 121, 254 S.E.2d 217 (1979).

In pleading actual fraud the particularity requirement of this rule is met by alleging time, place and content of the fraudulent representation and what was obtained as a result of the fraudulent acts or representations. Cunningham v. Brown, 51 N.C. App. 264, 276 S.E.2d 718 (1981).

Without any essential factual basis to support the plaintiff's allegation that the defendant knowingly made false misrepresentations, a critical element of fraud, his tort claim for fraud could not withstand a motion to dismiss. Beasley v. National Sav. Life Ins. Co., 75 N.C. App. 104, 330 S.E.2d 207, discretionary review improvidently allowed, 316 N.C. 372, 341 S.E.2d 338 (1986); Chesapeake Microfilm, Inc. v. Eastern Microfilm Sales & Serv., Inc., 91 N.C. App. 539, 372 S.E.2d 901 (1988).

The well-recognized elements of fraud are 1) a false representation or concealment of a material fact, 2) reasonably calculated to deceive, 3) made with intent to deceive, 4) which does in fact deceive, and 5) which results in damage to the injured party. A complaint charging fraud must allege these elements with particularity. Hunter v. Spaulding, 97 N.C. App. 372, 388 S.E.2d 630 (1990).

Actual fraud and constructive fraud satisfy the particularity requirement in varying ways. Benfield v. Costner, 67 N.C. App. 444, 313 S.E.2d 203 (1984).

The very nature of constructive fraud defies specific and concise allegations. This particularity requirement may be met by alleging facts and circumstances (1) which created the relation of trust and confidence, and (2) which led up to and surrounded the consummation of the transaction in which defendant is alleged to have taken advantage of his position of trust to the hurt of plaintiff. Benfield v. Costner, 67 N.C. App. 444, 313 S.E.2d 203 (1984).

Less Particularity Required in Alleging Constructive Fraud. — A constructive fraud claim requires less particularity, as it is based on a confidential relationship rather than a specific misrepresentation; the particularity requirement for alleging constructive fraud may be met by alleging facts and circumstances which created the relation of trust and confidence and which led up to and surrounded the consummation of the transaction in which defendant is alleged to have taken advantage of his position of trust to the hurt of plaintiff. Terry v. Terry, 302 N.C. 77, 273 S.E.2d 674 (1981).

Mere generalities and conclusory allegations of fraud will not suffice under section (b). Moore v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 30 N.C. App. 390, 226 S.E.2d 833 (1976).

In order to state a cause of action for fraud, facts must be alleged which, if true, would constitute fraud, it not being sufficient to allege the elements of fraud in general terms. Watts v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 74 N.C. App.

769, 330 S.E.2d 256 (1985), rev'd in part on other grounds, 317 N.C. 110, 343 S.E.2d 879 (1986).

Reliance Must Be Pleaded. — Section (b) of this rule requires allegations as to all of the elements of fraud, including plaintiff's reasonable reliance. Foley v. L & L Int'l, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 710, 364 S.E.2d 733 (1988).

Failure to Allege Intent. — Where plaintiffs failed to allege defendants' intent at the time the alleged fraudulent representations were made, that portion of the trial court's order granting summary judgment for defendants on the fraudulent misrepresentation of recreational facilities claim was not error since this rule requires that fraud be pleaded with particularity. Leake v. Sunbelt Ltd., 93 N.C. App. 199, 377 S.E.2d 285, cert. denied, 324 N.C. 578, 381 S.E.2d 774 (1989).

Fraud by Group or Association of Persons. — The plaintiff must identify the particular individuals who dealt with him when he alleges that he was defrauded by a group or association of persons. Coley v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 41 N.C. App. 121, 254 S.E.2d 217 (1979).

Fraud by Corporation. — It is not sufficient to conclusorily allege that a corporation made fraudulent misrepresentations; the pleader in such a situation must allege specifically the individuals who made the misrepresentations of material fact, the time the alleged misstatements were made, and the place or occasion at which they were made. Coley v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 41 N.C. App. 121, 254 S.E.2d 217 (1979).

Plaintiff's claim that corporation fraudulently induced him to purchase property and execute a note did not meet the particularity requirements because there was no allegation that the representations which the corporation's agent made were false or that the agent either knew them to be false or made them with reckless indifference to the truth. Trull v. Central Carolina Bank & Trust Co., 117 N.C. App. 220, 450 S.E.2d 542 (1994), cert. denied, 339 N.C. 611, 454 S.E.2d 267 (1995).

Fraud Claim Arising from Express Representation That Plaintiff's Interests Would Be Defended Held Not Barred. — The court erroneously dismissed plaintiffs' fraud claim arising from defendant's allegedly express representation that it would defend plaintiffs' interests, since the bar evidenced by § 1-50(6) was inapplicable to this particular fraud claim, plaintiffs having alleged that they were injured by defendant's intentionally deceptive express representation that defendants would provide counsel for them irrespective of barred products liability claims. Brown v. Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co., 90 N.C. App. 464, 369 S.E.2d 367, aff'd, 326 N.C. 387, 390 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

Burden Where Duress Raised Against Summary Judgment Motion. — A party resisting a summary judgment motion through an alleged defense of duress by threat of legal proceedings, has the burden of forecasting evidence showing with particularity circumstances which tend to indicate that the alleged threats were made with the corrupt intent to coerce a transaction grossly unfair to the victim and not related to the subject of such proceedings. Sound policy considerations support this approach. Were the burden otherwise, amorphous allegations and forecasts of evidence of duress, frivolous in nature, could consume valuable court time, delay resolution of disputes, and tend to force settlements less than equitable to the party accused of duress. Stewart v. Stewart, 61 N.C. App. 112, 300 S.E.2d 263 (1983).

Allegations Held Insufficient Under Section (b). — Allegations which amounted to a mere conclusion that an antenuptial contract was fraudulently procured were not sufficient under section (b). In re Estate of Loftin v. Loftin, 21 N.C. App. 627, 205 S.E.2d 574, aff'd, 285 N.C. 717, 208 S.E.2d 670 (1974).

Where defendants alleged the elements of false representation and concealment of material fact in general terms, they pleaded no facts which, if true, would have constituted fraudulent concealment by plaintiff of the financial condition of corporation. Consequently, defendants' allegation about the books and records did not satisfy the particularity requirement of section (b) of this rule, and dismissal of defendants' amended counterclaim under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) was proper. Chesapeake Microfilm, Inc. v. Eastern Microfilm Sales & Serv., Inc., 91 N.C. App. 539, 372 S.E.2d 901 (1988).

IV. CONDITIONS PRECEDENT.

Section (c) contains the same provisions as Rule 9(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Clary v. Alexander County Bd. of Educ., 286 N.C. 525, 212 S.E.2d 160 (1975).

Failure of Occurrence of Necessary Condition. — Where a party intends to rely upon failure of the occurrence of a necessary condition, such failure should be specially pleaded in the answer. Spencer Oil Co. v. Welborn, 20 N.C. App. 681, 202 S.E.2d 618, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 235, 204 S.E.2d 25 (1974).

Allegations of Conditions Precedent in Action to Condemn Land for Urban Renewal. — A petition to condemn land for urban renewal was sufficient under the Rules of Civil Procedure to state a claim for relief where it gave notice of the nature and basis of the petitioners' claim and the type of case brought and alleged generally occurrence or performance of the conditions precedent statutorily required. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

V. SPECIAL DAMAGES.

Facts giving rise to special damages must be alleged so as to fairly inform defendant of the scope of plaintiff's demand. Stanford v. Owens, 46 N.C. App. 388, 265 S.E.2d 617, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 95, 273 S.E.2d 300 (1980).

Special damages must be specifically pleaded and proved, and the facts giving rise to the special damages must be sufficient to inform the defendant of the scope of plaintiff's demand. Gillespie v. Draughn, 54 N.C. App. 413, 283 S.E.2d 548 (1981), cert. denied, 304 N.C. 726, 288 S.E.2d 805 (1982); Johnson v. Bollinger, 86 N.C. App. 1, 356 S.E.2d 378 (1987).

Under this rule, each claimed item of special damage must be averred. Johnson v. Bollinger, 86 N.C. App. 1, 356 S.E.2d 378 (1987).

Dismissal for Insufficient Allegation of Special Damage. — Where special damage is an integral part of a claim for relief, its insufficient allegation could provide the basis for dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6). Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979).

Special damage, as that term is used in the law of defamation, means pecuniary loss, as distinguished from humiliation. Williams v. Rutherford Freight Lines, 10 N.C. App. 384, 179 S.E.2d 319 (1971).

Operating losses are special damages which must be alleged under section (g) and are consequential damages which are recoverable under § 25-2-715(2) if defendant knew or reasonably could have foreseen that the probable result of a malfunctioning product would be such operating losses. Rodd v. W.H. King Drug Co., 30 N.C. App. 564, 228 S.E.2d 35 (1976).

When Loss of Profits Recoverable as Special Damages in Personal Injury Suits. — In personal injury suits, loss of profits are recoverable as special damages if properly pleaded as such under section (g), if they arise naturally and proximately from the injury, and if they are reasonably definite and certain. Ponder v. Budweiser of Asheville, Inc., 30 N.C. App. 200, 226 S.E.2d 539, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 176, 229 S.E.2d 690 (1976).

Sum Allegedly Spent to Repair Water System as Special Damages. — A sum which plaintiff allegedly spent in its efforts to repair a water system installed by defendant was an item of special damages which should have been specifically pleaded; failure of plaintiff to so plead required that the portion of the judgment awarding the special damages be vacated. Windfield Corp. v. McCallum Inspection Co., 18 N.C. App. 168, 196 S.E.2d 607 (1973).

Remedy Where Pleading for Special Damages Is Vague. — Where plaintiff pleaded business losses as special damages, however vaguely and ambiguously, defendants' proper remedy was a motion for a more definite statement under § 1A-1, Rule 12(e), and not dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6). Johnson v. Bollinger, 86 N.C. App. 1, 356 S.E.2d 378 (1987).

VI. LIBEL AND SLANDER.

Failure to State Defamatory Words Verbatim Not Fatal. — In an action for slander, plaintiff's failure to state the defamatory words verbatim in the complaint did not render the complaint fatally defective, since the words attributed to defendant must be alleged only substantially or with sufficient particularity to enable the court to determine whether the statement was defamatory. Stutts v. Duke Power Co., 47 N.C. App. 76, 266 S.E.2d 861 (1980).

Right of Defendant to Plead and Prove Truth and Other Mitigating Circumstances. — This rule does not require the defendant in a libel and slander action to reveal whether he intends to prove the defense of truth; the latter portion of this rule allows the defendant to plead and prove truth and/or other mitigating circumstances. Alpar v. Weyerhaeuser Co., 20 N.C. App. 340, 201 S.E.2d 503, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 85, 203 S.E.2d 57 (1974).

VII. PLEADING AND PRACTICE.

A motion for a more definite statement is the most purely dilatory of all the motions available under the Rules of Civil Procedure, and should not be granted so long as the pleading meets the requirements of § 1A-1, Rule 8 and/or Rule 9 and fairly notifies the opposing party of the nature of the claim. Fisher v. Lamm, 66 N.C. App. 249, 311 S.E.2d 61 (1984).

Where the opposing party does not object to evidence outside the issues raised by the pleadings, the issue is tried with his implied consent. Benfield v. Costner, 67 N.C. App. 444, 313 S.E.2d 203 (1984).

Medical malpractice complaint that failed to include the certification requirement of section (j) of this rule could not be subsequently amended pursuant to § 1A-1 Rule 15(a), by adding the certification and having that amendment relate back, pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 15(c). Keith v. Northern Hosp. Dist., 129 N.C. App. 402, 499 S.E.2d 200 (1998), review denied, 348 N.C. 693, 511 S.E.2d 646 (1998).

A patient was not required to assert in his complaint that his medical care had been reviewed by an expert, where he sued his doctor for negligently breaking his hip while moving him from an examination table to his wheelchair, because moving the patient was predominantly a manual activity not requiring specialized knowledge or skill. Lewis v. Setty, 130 N.C. App. 606, 503 S.E.2d 673 (1998).

Notice of 120-Day Extension to Other Party. — A patient who was granted a 120-day extension under this rule for filing her medical malpractice complaint against a hospital was not required to serve notice on the hospital that she had been granted the extension. Timour v. Pitt County Mem. Hosp., 131 N.C. App. 548, 508 S.E.2d 329 (1998).

VIII. TIME AND PLACE.

For the purposes of testing the timeliness of a complaint, averments of time and place are material. This allows early consideration of statute of limitations defenses, which are appropriately raised by motions to dismiss. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

IX. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-155 and 1-158.

Averment of Conditions Precedent. — Under former § 1-155, in an action upon an insurance policy, the truth of the representations in the application as conditions precedent could be averred generally by stating that the party duly performed all the conditions on his part. Britt v. Mutual Benefit Life Ins. Co., 105 N.C. 175, 10 S.E. 896 (1890).

Sufficient Averment of Libel and Slander. — It is material only to aver in the complaint that the slanderous words were spoken of the plaintiff. The facts which point to them and convey to the hearer the sense in which they are used are matters of proof before the jury. Wozelka v. Hettrick, 93 N.C. 10 (1885).

Insufficient Allegation of Publication. — Where the complaint in an action for libel alleged that the defendant sent the plaintiff, through the mails, an open postcard containing libelous matter, without alleging that such matter was read by some third person, the allegation of publication was insufficient. McKeel v. Latham, 202 N.C. 318, 162 S.E. 747 (1932).

Rule 10. Form of pleadings.

(a) Caption; names of parties. — Every pleading shall contain a caption setting forth the division of the court in which the action is filed, the title of the action, and a designation as in Rule 7(a). In the complaint the title of the action shall include the names of all the parties, but in other pleadings it is sufficient to state the name of the first party on each side with an appropriate indication of other parties.

(b) Paragraphs; separate statement. — All averments of claim or defense shall be made in numbered paragraphs, the contents of each of which be limited as far as practicable to a statement of a single set of circumstances; and a paragraph may be referred to by number in all succeeding pleadings. Each claim founded upon a separate transaction or occurrence and each defense other than denials shall be stated in a separate count or defense whenever a separation facilitates the clear presentation of the matters set forth.

(c) Adoption by reference; exhibits. — Statements in a pleading may be adopted by reference in a different part of the same pleading or in another pleading or in any motion in the action. A copy of any written instrument which is an exhibit to a pleading is a part thereof for all purposes. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Section (a). — This section dealing with the formal caption and designation of parties in the pleadings generally approximates the corresponding directive found in former § 1-122(1), although the latter actually dealt literally only with the caption and party designation in the complaint. The rule literally sanctions the practice customarily followed of shortening the listing of multiple parties in all pleadings subsequent to the complaint.

Section (b). — This section deals basically with the requirement that pleadings be drafted in a format designed to promote the clear definition of fact issues — the required separate statement in numbered paragraphs of practically manageable aggregates of factual averments, each generally referable to a separate substantive concept likely to lead to one manageable issue if controverted. This is a key innovation in the Code "fact-pleading" reform in reaction to the formulary pleading of common law. Thus, comparable provisions were found in former §§ 1-122(2) (complaint) and 1-138 (answer). By carrying forward this scheme, it is made abundantly clear that these rules are designed just as are the codes to cause factual issues clearly to emerge in the unsupervised exchange of pleadings where skilled and honest pleaders are aligned in opposition. That this is the design of these rules, particularly as exemplified in Rule 10(b), see Mr. Justice Jackson's analysis and admonition in O'Donnell v. Elgin, J. & E. Ry., 338 U.S. 384, 70 S. Ct. 200, 94 L. Ed. 187, 16 A.L.R.2d 646 (1949) ("We no longer insist upon technical rules of pleading, but it will ever be difficult in a jury trial to segregate issues which counsel do not separate in their pleading, preparation or thinking"). It can be stated quite confidently that this rule contemplates a continuation of the issue-defining fact pleading approach of the Code.

Section (c). — This section's first sentence involves a change from present practice which is controlled by a rule of the Supreme Court and does not permit adoption of portions of pleadings by reference into other parts of the cause or other pleadings. Of course, this presents a critical policy question of the propriety of adopting statutes in direct conflict with existing court rules. However, the practice sanctioned in this rule is believed an improvement, all things considered. The second sentence, directly sanctioning the incorporation of attached exhibits involves no change in procedure. The phrase "for all purposes" is apt to avoid the type of decision which quibbles over whether mere attachment of an exhibit without express words purporting to incorporate particular aspects as direct allegations does have this effect.

CASE NOTES

Letter Deemed an Answer. — Where letter raised no defenses to plaintiff's claims, nor answered the allegations, but offered partial payment and promised to repay the balance of the principal in question, the letter was an answer sufficient to satisfy the Rules of Civil Procedure. Brown v. American Messenger Servs., Inc., 129 N.C. App. 207, 498 S.E.2d 384 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 692, 511 S.E.2d 644 (1998).

Treatment of Pleading as Counterclaim. — Defendant's failure to affirmatively allege facts within his pleading does not preclude the pleading from being treated as a counterclaim where the answer begins, "the defendant . . . alleges and says:" and then admits the allegations of the complaint. McCarley v. McCarley, 289 N.C. 109, 221 S.E.2d 490 (1976).

To require defendant who solemnly admits the truth of the allegations of the complaint upon which he then bases his prayer for relief to repeat them in his own pleading as a prerequisite to treating his pleading as a counterclaim seeking affirmative relief would be a triumph of form over substance. McCarley v. McCarley, 289 N.C. 109, 221 S.E.2d 490 (1976).

Section (c) of this rule permits an incorporation by reference of statements made in other parts of a pleading. FCX, Inc. v. Bailey, 14 N.C. App. 149, 187 S.E.2d 381 (1972).

Where affidavits considered by the trial court were not incorporated by reference into the pleadings pursuant to subdivision (c) of this rule, a motion to dismiss was converted into a motion for summary judgment. Richland Run Homeowners Ass'n v. CHC Durham Corp., 123 N.C. App. 345, 473 S.E.2d 649 (1996), rev'd, 346 N.C. 170, 484 S.E.2d 527 (1997).

Incorporation of Federal Court Case Complaint. — Where complaint incorporated by reference, as an exhibit, a complaint in a federal court action, the complaint in the federal court action was not a matter outside the pleadings so as to convert a § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss into a Rule 56 motion for summary judgment, since section (c) of this rule provides that such an exhibit is a part of the pleading for all purposes. Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979).

Applied in Carolina Freight Carriers Corp. v. Local 61, 11 N.C. App. 159, 180 S.E.2d 461 (1971); Koehring Co. v. Seacrest Marine Corp., 29 N.C. App. 498, 224 S.E.2d 654 (1976); State ex rel. Eure v. Lawrence, 93 N.C. App. 446, 378 S.E.2d 207 (1989); Interstate Hwy. Express, Inc. v. S & S Enters., Inc., 93 N.C. App. 765, 379 S.E.2d 85 (1989); State v. Pruitt, 94 N.C. App. 261, 380 S.E.2d 383 (1989); Smith v. Bohlen, 95 N.C. App. 347, 382 S.E.2d 812 (1989).

Quoted in Lawson v. Lawson, 84 N.C. App. 51, 351 S.E.2d 794 (1987).

Stated in Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970).

Cited in Musten v. Musten, 36 N.C. App. 618, 244 S.E.2d 699 (1978); State v. Harren, 302 N.C. 142, 273 S.E.2d 694 (1981); State v. McLean, 74 N.C. App. 224, 328 S.E.2d 451 (1985); Dowat, Inc. v. Tiffany Corp., 83 N.C. App. 207, 349 S.E.2d 610 (1986); Pugh v. Pugh, 111 N.C. App. 118, 431 S.E.2d 873 (1993); Terrell v. Lawyers Mut. Liab. Ins., 131 N.C. App. 655, 507 S.E.2d 923 (1998).

Rule 11. Signing and verification of pleadings.

(a) Signing by Attorney. — Every pleading, motion, and other paper of a party represented by an attorney shall be signed by at least one attorney of record in his individual name, whose address shall be stated. A party who is not represented by an attorney shall sign his pleading, motion, or other paper and state his address. Except when otherwise specifically provided by rule or statute, pleadings need not be verified or accompanied by affidavit. The signature of an attorney or party constitutes a certificate by him that he has read the pleading, motion, or other paper; that to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief formed after reasonable inquiry it is well grounded in fact and is warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law, and that it is not interposed for any improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation. If a pleading, motion, or other paper is not signed, it shall be stricken unless it is signed promptly after the omission is called to the attention of the pleader or movant. If a pleading, motion, or other paper is signed in violation of this rule, the court, upon motion or upon its own initiative, shall impose upon the person who signed it, a represented party, or both, an appropriate sanction, which may include an order to pay to the other party or parties the amount of the reasonable expenses incurred because of the filing of the pleading, motion, or other paper, including a reasonable attorney's fee.

(b) Verification of pleadings by a party. — In any case in which verification of a pleading shall be required by these rules or by statute, it shall state in substance that the contents of the pleading verified are true to the knowledge of the person making the verification, except as to those matters stated on information and belief, and as to those matters he believes them to be true. Such verification shall be by affidavit of the party, or if there are several parties united in interest and pleading together, by at least one of such parties acquainted with the facts and capable of making the affidavit. Such affidavit may be made by the agent or attorney of a party in the cases and in the manner provided in section (c) of this rule.

(c) Verification of pleadings by an agent or attorney. — Such verification may be made by the agent or attorney of a party for whom the pleading is filed, if the action or defense is founded upon a written instrument for the payment of money only and the instrument or a true copy thereof is in the possession of the agent or attorney, or if all the material allegations of the pleadings are within the personal knowledge of the agent or attorney. When the pleading is verified by such agent or attorney, he shall set forth in the affidavit:

(1) That the action or defense is founded upon a written instrument for the payment of money only and the instrument or a true copy thereof is in his possession, or

(2)a. That all the material allegations of the pleadings are true to his personal knowledge and

b. The reasons why the affidavit is not made by the party.

(d) Verification by corporation or the State. — When a corporation is a party the verification may be made by any officer, or managing or local agent thereof upon whom summons might be served; and when the State or any officer thereof in its behalf is a party, the verification may be made by any person acquainted with the facts. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 1027, s. 55.)

COMMENT

This rule is in form an amalgamation of federal Rule 11 and basic North Carolina statutes concerned with signing and verification of pleadings. The provision common to both, that every pleading must be signed either by a party or his attorney of record, is retained. The requirement that every pleading subsequent to a verified pleading must be verified is abandoned, and the only time any pleading must be verified is when some statute specifically requires it, as in actions for divorce (§ 50-8). As an alternative to the verification control on truth, the federal approach of constituting an attorney's signature to any pleading a certificate of good faith in its preparation is adopted. However, the severe explicit federal rule sanction of disciplinary action against an attorney violating this rule is dropped, retaining only the sanction of striking as sham.

Sections (b), (c), and (d) are not found in the corresponding federal rule, but are lifted as substantial counterparts from former §§ 1-145, 1-146, and 1-147.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

No Lack of Credibility Implied by Absence of Verification. — Since section (a) of this rule provides that generally pleadings need not be verified, no lack of credibility is implied by the absence of a verification. Hankins v. Somers, 39 N.C. App. 617, 251 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 300, 254 S.E.2d 920 (1979).

Verified Pleading May Be Considered as Affidavit. — There is nothing in the rules which precludes the judge from considering a verified answer as an affidavit in the cause. Schoolfield v. Collins, 281 N.C. 604, 189 S.E.2d 208 (1972).

To the extent that a verified pleading meets the requirements of § 1A-1, Rule 56(e), then it may properly be considered as equivalent to a supporting or opposing affidavit, as the case may be. Schoolfield v. Collins, 281 N.C. 604, 189 S.E.2d 208 (1972).

Verification of Instrument for Payment of Money by Agent or Attorney Not Specifically Required. — Section (c) of this rule sets forth the circumstances and the manner in which pleadings may be verified by an agent or attorney of a party when the action or defense is founded upon a written instrument for the payment of money only, but it does not specifically require verification. Hill v. Hill, 11 N.C. App. 1, 180 S.E.2d 424, cert. denied, 279 N.C.

348, 182 S.E.2d 580 (1971).

As to insufficient basis to impeach verification, see Skinner v. Skinner, 28 N.C. App. 412, 222 S.E.2d 258, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 726, 224 S.E.2d 674 (1976).

In analyzing whether the complaint meets the factual certification requirement, the court must determine: whether the plaintiff (1) undertook a reasonable inquiry into the facts and (2) after reviewing the results of his inquiry, reasonably believed that his position was well grounded in fact. McClerin v. R-M Indus., Inc., 118 N.C. App. 640, 456 S.E.2d 352 (1995).

Plaintiff May Not File Solely to Toll Statute. — A plaintiff may not file a complaint within the time permitted by the statute of limitations for the sole purpose of tolling the statute of limitations, but with no intention of pursuing the prosecution of the action, then voluntarily dismiss the complaint and thereby gain an additional year pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1). Estrada v. Burnham, 316 N.C. 318, 341 S.E.2d 538 (1986).

Pleading in Violation of Section (a) May Not Be Voluntarily Dismissed. — Section 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1) and section (a) of this rule must be construed in pari materia to require that, in order for a timely filed complaint to toll the statute of limitations and provide the basis for a one-year "extension" by way of a § 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1) voluntary dismissal without prejudice, the complaint must conform in all respects to the rules of pleading, including section (a) of this rule. A pleading filed in violation of section (a) should be stricken as "sham and false" and may not be voluntarily dismissed without prejudice in order to give the pleader the benefit of the "saving" provision of § 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1). Estrada v. Burnham, 316 N.C. 318, 341 S.E.2d 538 (1986).

Defendant partner's verification of original answer where he was sued in his partnership capacity did not subject him to individual liability. Stevens v. Nimocks, 82 N.C. App. 350, 346 S.E.2d 180, cert. denied, 83 N.C. App. 511, 349 S.E.2d 873 (1986), reconsideration denied, 318 N.C. 702, 351 S.E.2d 760 (1987).

Petition to Review Zoning Board Decision Need Not Be Verified. — No civil procedure rule or statute requires a petition to review a zoning board decision to be verified. Little v. City of Locust, 83 N.C. App. 224, 349 S.E.2d 627 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 105, 353 S.E.2d 111 (1987).

Lack of Verification. — Petition for a contested case hearing, containing signatures of petitioner and his attorney, but which failed to include either an affidavit executed by petitioner or an affidavit executed by his attorney, was timely filed but was not verified under sections (b) and (c) of this rule when it was filed. Gaskill v. State ex rel. Cobey, 109 N.C. App. 656, 428 S.E.2d 474 (1993), pet. disc. rev. denied, 334 N.C. 163, 432 S.E.2d 359 (1993).

Lack of Evidence. — Under § 57C-3-30, it was improper to name an individual member of a limited liability company as a party defendant without any evidence to support it; thus, the naming of member as an individual defendant was not well-grounded in law and therefore a violation of this section. Page v. Roscoe, 128 N.C. App. 678, 497 S.E.2d 422 (1998).

Sanction Provision Not Applicable to Claims Filed Before Amendment of This Rule. — Court could not award attorneys' fees pursuant to this rule, recently amended to permit such awards, because the amendment was not effective until after the filing of the claim for declaratory relief on which the award was based. Clark v. Williamson, 91 N.C. App. 668, 373 S.E.2d 317 (1988).

Although plaintiffs and their attorney could be liable for sanctions under this Rule for signing and filing certain "other papers" for an improper purpose after January 1, 1987, the complaint in the case at bar was filed in December of 1986, and therefore could not be a basis for the imposition of sanctions. Brooks v. Giesey, 334 N.C. 303, 432 S.E.2d 339 (1993).

Dismissal does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to consider collateral issues such as sanctions that require consideration after the action has been terminated. Bryson v. Sullivan, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Neither the dismissal of a case nor the filing of an appeal deprives the trial court of jurisdiction to hear Rule 11 motions. Dodd v. Steele, 114 N.C. App. 632, 442 S.E.2d 363, cert. denied, 337 N.C. 691, 448 S.E.2d 521 (1994).

There are three separate and distinct issues to Rule 11 including: (1) legal sufficiency; (2) factual sufficiency; and (3) improper purpose. Williams v. Hinton, 127 N.C. App. 421, 490 S.E.2d 239 (1997).

When Sanctions May Be Imposed. — To impose sanctions against a party for filing a complaint for an improper purpose, the complaint must fail either the legal or factual certification requirements of this rule. In re Finnican, 104 N.C. App. 157, 408 S.E.2d 742 (1991), cert. denied, 330 N.C. 612, 413 S.E.2d 800 (1992).

Timeliness of Motion for Sanctions. — While the court will impose no explicit time limit for filing a motion under this rule, a party should make such a motion within a reasonable time after he discovers an alleged impropriety. Rice v. Danas, Inc., — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 97 (1999).

Motion for Sanctions Not Timely. — Employer's motion for sanctions was not filed within a reasonable time, where it was filed six months after a judgment in the employer's favor, and the pleadings and other documents of the former employee to which the employer referred in its motion were signed months before trial. Rice v. Danas, Inc., — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 97 (1999).

Sua sponte imposition of sanctions against an attorney without notice of the bases for the sanctions violated the attorney's due process rights. Griffin v. Griffin, 348 N.C. 278, 500 S.E.2d 437 (1998).

Sanctions Following Voluntary Dismissal. — Absent a rule to the contrary, sanctions motions may appropriately be filed after a voluntary dismissal. Renner v. Hawk, 125 N.C. App. 483, 481 S.E.2d 370 (1997), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 283, 487 S.E.2d 553 (1997).

Review of Sanctions. — Imposition of sanctions under this rule is reviewable de novo; however, but the choice of sanction is reviewable under an abuse of discretion standard. Crutchfield v. Crutchfield, — N.C. App. —, 511 S.E.2d 31 (1999).

Sanctions Where Party Knew Pleadings Not Factually Plausible. — Where judge announced the rendering of an absolute divorce in open court while defendant was present with counsel, when defendant's motion to dismiss based on lack of service was later filed defendant knew that the pleading was not factually plausible because he had made a general appearance; therefore, the trial court's imposition of sanctions under this rule was proper. Bumgardner v. Bumgardner, 113 N.C. App. 314, 438 S.E.2d 471 (1994).

Sanctions were not appropriate for alienation of affections claim. Brown v. Hurley, 124 N.C. App. 377, 477 S.E.2d 234 (1996).

Sanctions Were Not Appropriate. — It was improper for the trial court to impose Rule 11 sanctions on attorney, based on his conduct in failing to timely notify the court and defense counsel of a scheduling conflict since it does not involve the filing of a pleading, motion or other paper. Williams v. Hinton, 127 N.C. App. 421, 490 S.E.2d 239 (1997).

Although attorney should have honored defense counsel's request to be notified of calendar notices and instead served defendants directly, he did not violate the Code of Professional Responsibility or the Rules of Civil Procedure. Williams v. Hinton, 127 N.C. App. 421, 490 S.E.2d 239 (1997).

Courts should not impose sanctions under this rule when relief is available under another provision which more specifically addresses the situation. Overcash v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield, 94 N.C. App. 602, 381 S.E.2d 330 (1989).

The Improper Purpose Prong. — The improper purpose prong of this Rule is separate and distinct from the factual and legal sufficiency requirements. Certification under the rule includes three things: That the subject person has read the document, that he or she believes it to be well-grounded in fact and law, and that it is not interposed for any improper purpose. Bryson v. Sullivan, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Even if the complaint is well grounded in fact and in law, it may nonetheless violate the improper purpose prong of this rule. McClerin v. R-M Indus., Inc., 118 N.C. App. 640, 456 S.E.2d 352 (1995).

A claim, while well grounded in law, can nevertheless violate the improper purpose prong of this Rule. Taylor v. Taylor Prods. Inc., 105 N.C. App. 620, 414 S.E.2d 568 (1992), overruled on other grounds, 334 N.C. 303, 432 S.E.2d 347 (1993).

While attorney's filing of the notice of lien against former client after having withdrawn from the case violated the legal sufficiency prong of this rule, that itself did not support a strong inference of improper purpose. However, the totality of the circumstances did. Mack v. Moore, 107 N.C. App. 87, 418 S.E.2d 685 (1992).

Even if a complaint is well-grounded in fact and in law, it may nonetheless violate the improper purpose of Rule 11. Brown v. Hurley, 124 N.C. App. 377, 477 S.E.2d 234 (1996).

Objective Standard Used to Determine Improper Purpose. — An objective standard is used to determine the existence of an improper purpose, with the burden on the movant to prove such improper purpose. Brown v. Hurley, 124 N.C. App. 377, 477 S.E.2d 234 (1996).

Motion Based on ERISA Action. — Where although defendant's post-trial motion also sought fees under this rule, the motion was based upon his Employee Retirement Income Security Act action, any award of attorneys' fees would be governed by 29 U.S.C. § 1132(g). Overcash v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield, 94 N.C. App. 602, 381 S.E.2d 330 (1989).

When a party files a motion which is virtually identical to a previously denied motion, sanctions under this rule may be appropriate. Overcash v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield, 94 N.C. App. 602, 381 S.E.2d 330 (1989).

Trial court's decision to impose or not to impose mandatory sanctions under section (a) of this rule is reviewable de novo as a legal issue; in the de novo review, the appellate court will determine (1) whether the trial court's conclusions of law support its judgment or determination, (2) whether the trial court's conclusions of law are supported by its findings of fact, and (3) whether the findings of fact are supported by a sufficiency of the evidence; if the appellate court makes these three determinations in the affirmative, it must uphold the trial court's decision to impose or deny the imposition of mandatory sanctions under section (a). Turner v. Duke Univ., 325 N.C. 152, 381 S.E.2d 706 (1989), aff'd, 101 N.C. App. 276, 399 S.E.2d 402, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 504, 407 S.E.2d 552 (1991); Williams v. Garrison, 105 N.C. App. 79, 411 S.E.2d 633 (1992).

After a voluntary dismissal the broad limitation on the trial court's power to enter orders does not extend so far as to bar the trial court from awarding attorney's fees pursuant to subsection (a) of this Rule or § 6-21.5. VSD Communications, Inc. v. Lone Wolf Publishing Group, Inc., 124 N.C. App. 642, 478 S.E.2d 214 (1996).

And Clearly Erroneous Standard Is Not Applicable. — In a malpractice case, Court of Appeals erred in employing a "clearly erroneous" standard in reviewing the trial court's denial of plaintiff's motion for sanctions under section (a) of this rule. Turner v. Duke Univ., 325 N.C. 152, 381 S.E.2d 706 (1989), aff'd, 101 N.C. App. 276, 399 S.E.2d 402, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 504, 407 S.E.2d 552 (1991).

The standard to be applied in assessing an attorney's conduct under section (a) of this rule is "objective reasonableness under the circumstances." Central Carolina Nissan, Inc. v. Sturgis, 98 N.C. App. 253, 390 S.E.2d 730, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 137, 394 S.E.2d 169 (1990).

The proper standard for reviewing the appropriateness of the sanction imposed in a given case is whether the trial court has abused its discretion. Central Carolina Nissan, Inc. v. Sturgis, 98 N.C. App. 253, 390 S.E.2d 730, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 137, 394 S.E.2d 169 (1990).

Inference of Improper Purpose Inferred from Objective Behavior. — Under this rule, an objective standard is used to determine whether a paper has been interposed for an improper purpose, with the burden on the movant to prove such improper purpose. In this regard, the relevant inquiry is whether the existence of an improper purpose may be inferred from the alleged offender's objective behavior. Mack v. Moore, 107 N.C. App. 87, 418 S.E.2d 685 (1992).

Reasonableness of Belief That Claim Is Warranted. — The reasonableness of the belief that a complaint is warranted by existing law must be judged as of the time the document was signed. Taylor v. Taylor Prods. Inc., 105 N.C. App. 620, 414 S.E.2d 568 (1992), overruled on other grounds, 334 N.C. 303, 432 S.E.2d 347 (1993).

Sanctions against plaintiff were improper where plaintiff in good faith relied on his attorney regarding the legal sufficiency of his claims and thus met his duty of making a "reasonable inquiry". Taylor v. Collins, 128 N.C. App. 46, 493 S.E.2d 475 (1997).

Motion for Attorney's Fees. — Petitioner's motion for attorney's fees, filed well before final judgment, was timely; therefore, the trial court had jurisdiction to hear the matter. Whiteco Indus., Inc. v. Harrelson, 111 N.C. App. 815, 434 S.E.2d 229 (1993); Whiteco Indus., Inc. v. Harrington, 111 N.C. App. 839, 434 S.E.2d 234 (1993), cert. granted, 335 N.C. 565, 441 S.E.2d 135 (1994).

Reduction of Award Held Error. — Trial court which found as fact that petitioners had expended a reasonable attorneys' fee of $14,400 in defending action signed and filed by respondent, but reduced that figure to $4,800 because it found the professional damages to have been "mitigated considerably by the extremely honest, candid and competent representation" of respondent by his attorney in § 1A-1, Rule 11 hearing, abused its discretion in basing its reduction on that factor. Central Carolina Nissan, Inc. v. Sturgis, 98 N.C. App. 253, 390 S.E.2d 730, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 137, 394 S.E.2d 169 (1990).

Award of Attorneys' Fees Upheld. — Trial court did not err by ordering defendant's counsel to pay plaintiffs' attorneys' fees where the trial court found as a fact that defendant's counsel had raised nonjusticiable issues in the motion in the cause, and had failed to make a reasonable inquiry, as required by this rule, before filing the motion, and where the evidence did not support defendant's contention that the trial court directed him to file the motion in the cause after dismissing his earlier action. H. McBride Realty, Inc. v. Myers, 94 N.C. App. 511, 380 S.E.2d 586 (1989).

Where plaintiff had violated this section, the trial court acted within its discretion in awarding reasonable attorney's fees as an appropriate sanction. VSD Communications, Inc. v. Lone Wolf Publishing Group, Inc., 124 N.C. App. 642, 478 S.E.2d 214 (1996).

Findings and Conclusions Insufficient to Support Sanctions. — Court's findings and conclusions were insufficient to support an award of sanctions, where the order recited that "sanctions are imposed against plaintiff for violation of the legal provision and improper purpose provision" of Rule 11, but contained no findings or conclusions explaining how plaintiff's conduct violated these provisions, or to explain the appropriateness of the sanction imposed or award of attorney's fees, or to indicate how the court arrived at the amount. Davis v. Wrenn, 121 N.C. App. 156, 464 S.E.2d 708 (1995).

Sanctions Not Merited. — Where there was no indication at trial that the grandparents in fact did not wish to obtain custody of the children or that their claim was made in bad faith, the fact that the grandparents had originally asked for visitation does not make their later claim for custody violative of this rule. Kerns v. Southern, 100 N.C. App. 664, 397 S.E.2d 651 (1990).

Although claimant was explicitly told by an employee of the Employment Security Commission that she was not required to conduct a job search during her temporary recall, because there were grounds for the Commission's holding, under § 96-18(g)(2), that claimant repay the sum, received as benefits, based on failure to conduct a job search, sanctions could not be imposed. Gilliam v. Employment Sec. Comm'n, 110 N.C. App. 796, 431 S.E.2d 772, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 334 N.C. 619, 435 S.E.2d 334 (1993).

Attorney made a "reasonable inquiry" into the factual bases for the allegations contained in the complaint regarding conspiracy, an auto theft-drug ring, and intentional infliction of emotional distress; therefore, the sanctions imposed against attorney were not warranted. Pugh v. Pugh, 111 N.C. App. 118, 431 S.E.2d 873, aff'd, 113 N.C. App. 375, 438 S.E.2d 214 (1994).

It was improper for the trial court to impose Rule 11 sanctions on plaintiff for his failure to promptly serve the summons and complaint, as it did not involve the filing of a pleading or other paper and was therefore beyond the scope of this Rule. Ward v. Lyall, 125 N.C. App. 732, 482 S.E.2d 740 (1997), cert. denied, appeal dismissed, 346 N.C. 290, — S.E.2d — (1997).

Imposition of Sanctions Upheld. — In a malpractice case where defendant university failed to identify doctor in response to other discovery requests, where doctor's depositions threatened to cause a needless increase in the cost of litigation and an unnecessary delay, and where the depositions were noticed for an improper purpose, that is, to disrupt counsel's trial preparation, university's conduct was sufficient to trigger the mandatory sanctions clause of section (a) of this rule. Turner v. Duke Univ., 325 N.C. 152, 381 S.E.2d 706 (1989), aff'd, 101 N.C. App. 276, 399 S.E.2d 402, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 504, 407 S.E.2d 552 (1991).

Where complaint stated that defendant, a postal service employee, earned income of about $5,000 or more per week, and contended that wife needed $3,000 per week while wife's affidavit alleged expenses of only $779.00 per month, and where claims for costs and attorneys' fees were unconscionable, the consistent use of inflated figures in complaint, after the opportunity to amend, was sufficient evidence for the trial court to impose sanctions under this rule. Shook v. Shook, 95 N.C. App. 578, 383 S.E.2d 405 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 50, 389 S.E.2d 94 (1990).

Abuse of the Declaratory Judgment Act, § 1-253 et seq., by prospective defendant in an anticipated enforcement action by the State under Chapter 75 by attempting to prelitigate its defenses and seek to determine the scope of prosecutorial discretion constituted grounds for trial court's holding that attorney violated this rule in signing and filing pleadings which were not warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for modification or reversal of existing law. Central Carolina Nissan, Inc. v. Sturgis, 98 N.C. App. 253, 390 S.E.2d 730, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 137, 394 S.E.2d 169 (1990).

Striking of the notice of the taking of a deposition and prohibiting its further use was a reasonable sanction for a deposition procured in violation of deposition rules, even though it was defendant's counsel, and not defendant itself, who committed the acts giving rise to the sanction. Turner v. Duke Univ., 101 N.C. App. 276, 399 S.E.2d 402, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 504, 407 S.E.2d 552 (1991).

Insured and insured's attorney were properly assessed costs and expenses incurred by holder of security interest in insured's vehicle for improperly naming holder as a party in an action against vehicle's insurer, despite plaintiff's contention that holder was named in pleadings to give it notice as a lienholder. Lassiter v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 106 N.C. App. 66, 415 S.E.2d 212, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 148, 419 S.E.2d 573 (1992).

A superior court award of $2,918.82 to reimburse plaintiff for attorneys' fees and expenses and an order to defendant to pay $1,000 to the clerk of superior court as an additional sanction for filing frivolous and vexatious motions to dismiss and for summary judgment was not an abuse of discretion where defendant persisted in advancing arguments which had been previously rejected by the courts. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 103 N.C. App. 500, 405 S.E.2d 774, cert. denied, 330 N.C. 196, 412 S.E.2d 678 (1991), 332 N.C. 484, 421 S.E.2d 349 (1992).

Where a motion to dismiss and a motion for summary judgment were based on the same grounds that had proven baseless in past motions and appeals, and were patently frivolous, the trial judge had more than ample basis for imposition of sanctions. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 103 N.C. App. 500, 405 S.E.2d 774, cert. denied, 330 N.C. 196, 412 S.E.2d 678 (1991), 332 N.C. 484, 421 S.E.2d 349 (1992).

Co-counsel for corporate defendant, almost 19 months after corporation employees' counsel gave notice that she was serving as co-counsel, and only two weeks before trial, signed and filed a motion for disqualification of counsel; neither his co-counsel nor his client signed it, and there was no evidence that co-counsel even knew that the motion was being filed, the late date on which the motion was filed indicated an attempt to interrupt opposing counsel's trial preparation and increase litigation costs. Therefore, Rule 11 sanctions were appropriate. Harrison v. Edison Bros. Apparel Stores, 146 F.R.D. 142 (M.D.N.C. 1993).

There was no abuse of discretion in the court's imposition of $931 in sanctions; the court found as a fact that defendant incurred $931.00 as a necessary consequence of plain-tiff's notice of appeal following a voluntary dismissal and that the rate was reasonable. Dodd v. Steele, 114 N.C. App. 632, 442 S.E.2d 363, cert. denied, 337 N.C. 691, 448 S.E.2d 521 (1994).

Where the Employment Commission's signing of order remanding the matter to a hearing officer just three days prior to the date by which the Commission was to have entered a final order could be calculated as an attempt to delay the litigation or increase its cost, sanctions would apply. Gilliam v. Employment Sec. Comm'n, 110 N.C. App. 796, 431 S.E.2d 772, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 334 N.C. 619, 435 S.E.2d 334 (1993).

Where ex-husband filed a complaint to harass ex-wife and needlessly increase the costs of litigation, where senseless litigation initiated by ex-husband had persisted since the parties' separation in 1986, while ex-husband claimed the litigation was part and parcel of his attempts to increase visitation privileges with his son, but he had done nothing constructive to further that objective, and testimony indicated that he has spent $20,000 trying to recover $10,000 in attorney's fees, the trial did not err in imposing $15,000 sanction against the ex-husband. Brown v. Brown, 112 N.C. App. 614, 436 S.E.2d 404 (1993).

Sanctions were properly imposed where the plaintiff's brief in opposition to defendant's motion to dismiss ignored well-established precedent and failed to argue for reversal or modification of well-established law. Sharp v. Miller, 121 N.C. App. 616, 468 S.E.2d 799 (1996), cert. denied, 343 N.C. 309, 471 S.E.2d 76, cert. denied, 519 U.S. 871, 117 S. Ct. 187, 136 L. Ed. 2d 125 (1996).

Evidence overwhelmingly supported the trial court's finding that attorneys' actions in obtaining medical records were improper and the trial court's conclusion of law that the imposition of sanctions was appropriate. Bass v. Sides, 120 N.C. App. 485, 462 S.E.2d 838 (1995).

Sanctions against plaintiff's attorney were upheld where the evidence showed that attorney was familiar with the separation agreement before filing the signed complaint that was not well-grounded in fact or law. Taylor v. Collins, 128 N.C. App. 46, 493 S.E.2d 475 (1997).

Harassment of Former Client. — In light of the obviously strained relationship between former attorney and client, and because it is utterly unreasonable for an attorney, particularly one who has withdrawn from the case, to file an attorney's charging lien seeking recovery of fees based on both quantum meruit and a percentage of the judgment, there exists a strong inference of improper purpose, i.e., harassment, in filing the notice of lien. Accordingly, the trial court's imposition of Rule 11 sanctions based on alleged improper purpose in filing the notice of lien must be upheld. Mack v. Moore, 107 N.C. App. 87, 418 S.E.2d 685 (1992).

Subjective Beliefs and Actual Effect of Conduct Not Relevant. — Just as the Rule 11 movant's subjective belief that a paper had been filed for an improper purpose was immaterial in determining whether an alleged offender's conduct was sanctionable, whether the conduct did in fact harass was also not relevant to the issue. Rather, the dispositive question was whether the filing of the notice of lien supported a strong inference of improper purpose. Mack v. Moore, 107 N.C. App. 87, 418 S.E.2d 685 (1992).

Denial of Sanctions Not Insulation from Future Sanctions. — The denial of sanctions does not insulate a party or an attorney from the future imposition of sanctions under the improper purpose prong of this rule if the litigation is continued after subsequent developments in the case render it meritless. Taylor v. Taylor Prods. Inc., 105 N.C. App. 620, 414 S.E.2d 568 (1992), overruled on other grounds, 334 N.C. 303, 432 S.E.2d 347 (1993).

Features of Certification. — The central feature of this rule is a certification established by the signature of the person signing the pleadings, motions, or other papers. This certification includes: (1) that the signer has conducted a reasonable inquiry into the facts that support the pleading, motion or other paper; (2) that the signer has conducted a reasonable inquiry into the law such that the paper embodies existing legal principles or a good faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing legal principles; and (3) that the paper is not interposed for any improper purpose. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Under this rule, in addition to certifying that the pleading or paper is well grounded in fact and not interposed for any improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation, the signer also certifies that the pleading or paper is warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law. Mack v. Moore, 107 N.C. App. 87, 418 S.E.2d 685 (1992).

The signature of an attorney under this rule simply certifies upon reasonable inquiry that the complaint is well grounded in fact and warranted by existing law; this signature does not demonstrate that there is genuine issue of material fact, in light of evidence gathered after the complaint is filed, as to whether a plaintiff would actually have prevailed on the underlying claim. Byrd v. Arrowood, 118 N.C. App. 418, 455 S.E.2d 672 (1995).

Two-Part Analysis. — An award of sanctions under this rule on the ground that a pleading is not warranted by existing law requires a two-part analysis. First, the court must determine whether the pleading, when read in conjunction with the responsive pleadings, is facially plausible. If it is facially plausible, then the inquiry is complete, and sanctions are not proper. If the pleading is not facially plausible, then the second issue is whether to the best of the signer's knowledge, information, and belief formed after reasonable inquiry, the complaint was warranted by the existing law. dePasquale v. O'Rahilly, 102 N.C. App. 240, 401 S.E.2d 827 (1991).

In determining whether sanctions are warranted under the legal sufficiency prong of the rule, the court must first determine the facial plausibility of the paper. If the paper is facially plausible, then the inquiry is complete, and sanctions are not proper. If the paper is not facially plausible, then the second issue is (1) whether the alleged offender undertook a reasonable inquiry into the law, and (2) whether, based upon the results of the inquiry, formed a reasonable belief that the paper was warranted by existing law, judged as of the time the paper was signed. If the court answers either prong of this second issue negatively, then sanctions under this rule are appropriate. Mack v. Moore, 107 N.C. App. 87, 418 S.E.2d 685 (1992).

Three-Part Analysis. — There are three parts to a Rule 11 analysis: (1) factual sufficiency, (2) legal sufficiency, and (3) improper purpose; a violation of any one of these requirements mandates the imposition of sanctions. Dodd v. Steele, 114 N.C. App. 632, 442 S.E.2d 363, cert. denied, 337 N.C. 691, 448 S.E.2d 521 (1994); Page v. Roscoe, 128 N.C. App. 678, 497 S.E.2d 422 (1998).

Collateral Issues. — Attorneys' fee requests under this rule raise collateral issues which often require consideration by the trial court after the action has been terminated, and a voluntary dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 41(a) does not deprive the trial court of jurisdiction to determine these collateral issues. Higgins v. Patton, 102 N.C. App. 301, 401 S.E.2d 854 (1991), overruled on other grounds, Bryson v. Sullivan, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Voluntary Dismissal. — Where the plaintiffs filed a voluntary dismissal with prejudice pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1), the trial court was not deprived of jurisdiction to determine the appropriateness of attorneys' fees under this rule or § 6-21.5. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Considerations for Court. — This rule raises three interconnected interpretive issues for the court: (1) When has sanctionable conduct occurred? (2) Who should be sanctioned, attorney, client, or both? (3) What sanction is appropriate? Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Inadequate Researching and Filing of Pleadings by Attorney. — Prior to imposing sanctions against an attorney under this rule on the ground that the nonmovant's pleadings are not warranted by the existing law, the movant must show that the attorney's conduct in researching and filing the pleadings was not objectively reasonable. dePasquale v. O'Rahilly, 102 N.C. App. 240, 401 S.E.2d 827 (1991).

Failure of Attorney to Confirm Facts. — The attorney should be sanctioned for failure to take minimal steps to confirm the client's facts, when these facts could be verified easily by reference to the public record or to accessible documents. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Sanctions Against Attorney and Client. — Generally, since the lawyer exercises primary control over the litigation, the responsibility for improper purpose violations should rest with the lawyer. However, "the sanction may fall in equal or greater proportion upon the client as well" as this allocation serves punitive and deterrent purposes. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Sanctions Against Client. — Whether the violation of this rule is one of law, fact, or improper purpose, if the prejudice caused by the violation can only be remedied by entry of sanctions against the client, such sanctions are appropriate. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Where a party misleads an attorney as to facts or the purpose of the lawsuit, but the attorney nevertheless had an objectively reasonable basis to sign the papers in question, then sanctions on the party alone are appropriate. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

No Sanctions Against Client. — Clients should not be sanctioned when the attorney fails to ask the right questions to elicit legally relevant facts. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Allocation of Sanctions. — Sanctions should be allocated among the persons responsible for the offending pleading, motion or other paper, based upon their relative culpability. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

De Novo Review of Sanctions. — Court of Appeals exercises de novo review of the question of whether to impose Rule 11 sanctions; if sanctions were warranted, the court must review the actual sanctions imposed under an abuse of discretion standard. Dodd v. Steele, 114 N.C. App. 632, 442 S.E.2d 363, cert. denied, 337 N.C. 691, 448 S.E.2d 521 (1994).

Sanctions Against State. — Even though this rule does not provide for sanctions against the State, that does not mean that judge did not have jurisdiction to decide this question; when he decided it, he could not be overruled by another superior court judge. Able Outdoor, Inc. v. Harrelson, 341 N.C. 167, 459 S.E.2d 626 (1995).

Reliance on Counsel by Nonlawyers as to Issues of Law. — Reliance on counsel by nonlawyers as to issues of law, is relevant, but not conclusive evidence on the issue of "reasonable inquiry." The reasonableness of the reliance would depend upon the surrounding circumstances including the extent of knowledge possessed by the lawyer about the facts of the controversy, the history and duration of the relationship between the attorney and client, and the relative expertise of the attorney relating to the legal issues involved. It is appropriate, however, to consider in evaluating the reasonableness of the inquiry that nonlawyers are not expected to appreciate the nuances of subtle legal issues. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Determining Compliance with Rule. — In determining compliance with this rule, courts should avoid hindsight and resolve all doubts in favor of the signer. Furthermore, whether the certification requirements have been met requires an objective determination. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Signature of Party Unnecessary for Sanctions. — Defendants were entitled to request sanctions against the attorney, as signer of complaint, and against plaintiffs as represented parties, regardless of whether the plaintiffs signed the complaint. Higgins v. Patton, 102 N.C. App. 301, 401 S.E.2d 854 (1991), overruled on other grounds, Bryson v. Sullivan, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Burdens of Proof and Persuasion. — When a motion is made for sanctions pursuant to this rule and the nature of the alleged violation is legal, rather than factual, this rule requires a two-part analysis. In such cases, the court should first scrutinize the challenged paper. If, on its face, the paper states a plausible legal theory (either under existing law or a good faith argument for a change in the law), there is no need for further inquiry. Only if the court concludes that the paper is not facially plausible in its legal analysis is there a need for further scrutiny into the actual conduct of the signer in researching or otherwise gathering the law. The movant bears the burden of persuasion on the first prong of the two-part analysis and the burdens of proof and persuasion on the second prong. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, In re J.A., 103 N.C. App. 720, 407 S.E.2d 873 (1991).

Plaintiff's affidavits did not support the court's finding that judgment was entered as a result of mistake, inadvertence or excusable neglect, as the inadvertence, mistake, or neglect that they showed were of a kind that the law does not excuse. All the affidavits showed, when sifted down, was that in signing the court papers which enabled default judgment to be entered plaintiff's treasurer and counsel were unaware that they had sued for future rents — a matter that they could have known through the exercise of due diligence and reasonable care, and that they were required to know by § 1A-1, Rule 11 of our civil procedure rules. Kimzay Winston-Salem, Inc. v. Jester, 103 N.C. App. 77, 404 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 497, 407 S.E.2d 534 (1991).

II. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-144 through 1-147.

The object of verification is that if the defendant does not deny the allegations, the cause shall stand as if the jury had been empaneled, and the allegations put in proof without denial, the purpose being to avoid the delay of trial upon uncontroverted points. Griffin v. Asheville Light & Power Co., 111 N.C. 434, 16 S.E. 423 (1892); Rich v. Norfolk S. Ry., 244 N.C. 175, 92 S.E.2d 768 (1956).

A motion is not a pleading, and therefore judgment by default may not be entered pending the hearing of a motion to strike on the ground that the motion was not verified. Williams v. Denning, 260 N.C. 539, 133 S.E.2d 150 (1963).

The requirement as to verification may be waived, except in those cases where the form and substance of the verification is made an essential part of the pleading. Sisk v. Perkins, 264 N.C. 43, 140 S.E.2d 753 (1965).

Whether plaintiff verifies his complaint is optional with him unless some statute requires verification as a condition to the maintenance of the action. Levy v. Meir, 248 N.C. 328, 103 S.E.2d 288 (1958).

Where the plaintiff's verification does not meet requirements, defendant is not required to verify his answer. Levy v. Meir, 248 N.C. 328, 103 S.E.2d 288 (1958).

Effect of Attempted But Unnecessary Verification. — Where plaintiff can maintain his action without verifying the complaint, an attempted verification, which is a nullity, cannot defeat that right. Levy v. Meir, 248 N.C. 328, 103 S.E.2d 288 (1958).

Affiant is not required to subscribe the affidavit. State v. Higgins, 266 N.C. 589, 146 S.E.2d 681 (1966).

It is sufficient if the oath is administered by one authorized to administer oaths. State v. Higgins, 266 N.C. 589, 146 S.E.2d 681 (1966).

No Literal Formula Required. — Verification must be in "substance" as prescribed, and hence a verbal and literal following of the formula prescribed is not necessary. McLamb v. McPhail, 126 N.C. 218, 35 S.E. 426 (1900).

But Following Words of Statute Is Advisable. — While it is not necessary to follow the exact words of the statute, it is always safe to do so, and such course is advisable in preference to mere experimental practice, which is always dangerous. Cole v. Boyd, 125 N.C. 496, 34 S.E. 557 (1899).

As to verification by an agent or attorney, see Hammerslaugh v. Farrior, 95 N.C. 135 (1886); Griffin v. Asheville Light & Power Co., 111 N.C. 434, 16 S.E. 423 (1892).

Verification by Corporate Officer Need Not State Knowledge or Grounds for Belief. — Verification to a complaint made by an officer of a corporation need not set forth "his knowledge or the grounds of his belief on the subject and the reason why it was not made by the party." A corporation acts only through its officers and agents, and such verification is the verification of the corporation itself. Bank v. Hutchison & Hutchison, 87 N.C. 22 (1882).

Verification by Corporate Officers Not Verification by Individual Defendants. — Verification by the vice-president and secretary of the corporate defendant, unchallenged as a proper verification as to the corporate defendant, was not verification by or in behalf of the individual defendants. Rich v. Norfolk S. Ry., 244 N.C. 175, 92 S.E.2d 768 (1956).

Managing director of a foreign corporation may verify its pleadings. Best v. British & Am. Mtg. Co., 131 N.C. 70, 42 S.E. 456 (1902).

City manager of a municipal corporation is its "managing or local agent" and is authorized to verify the municipality's answer in an action instituted against it. Grimes v. Lexington, 216 N.C. 735, 6 S.E.2d 505 (1940).

Verification Held Sufficient. — Verification to a complaint, made by an agent or attorney of a nonresident, to the effect that the claim sued on was in writing and in his possession for collection, giving facts in his personal knowledge and sources of other information, met the substantial statutory requirements. Johnson, Clark & Co. v. Maxwell, 87 N.C. 18 (1882).

Verification of answer in the words "The foregoing answer of the defendant is true of his own knowledge, except those matters stated on information and belief, and he believes those to be true" is a substantial compliance. McLamb v. McPhail, 126 N.C. 218, 35 S.E. 426 (1900).

An allegation that plaintiff has "reason to believe," and therefore "alleges," etc., is sufficient compliance with requirement that matter be alleged as of plaintiff's knowledge or upon "information and belief." Ware-Kramer Tobacco

Co. v. American Tobacco Co., 180 F. 160 (E.D.N.C. 1910), appeal dismissed, 196 F. 1004 (4th Cir. 1912).

A petition in proceedings for contempt which is verified in accordance with the prescribed form is sufficient to give the court jurisdiction of the persons named when the facts set forth in the petition constituting a sufficient basis for judgment of contempt are stated to be within the knowledge of affiant and not upon information and belief. Safie Mfg. Co. v. Arnold, 228 N.C. 375, 45 S.E.2d 577 (1947).

Verification Held Insufficient. — Verification of a complaint made by an attorney of the plaintiff, setting forth in the affidavit that the facts set forth as of his own knowledge were true and that those stated on information and belief he believed to be true; that the action was based on a written instrument for the payment of money; and that the instrument was in his possession, did not comply with the requisites of the statute, and was defective in not stating the grounds of the affiant's belief and the reason why the party himself did not make the verification. Miller v. Curl, 162 N.C. 1, 77 S.E. 952 (1913).

In a proceeding to restore certain records destroyed by fire, an affidavit by the agent of the petitioner that the facts set forth in the complaint were true to the best of his knowledge, information and belief was an insufficient verification. Cowles v. Hardin, 79 N.C. 577 (1878).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Notarization of Verification in Divorce Proceedings by Partner in Firm of Plaintiff's Counsel. — When one partner of Firm A appears as attorney for a plaintiff in a divorce proceeding, the other partners in the firm also "appear," and they could be prohibited under former § 47-8 from notarizing the verification of the client. This would be true whether or not the firm appears as "of counsel" to the individual partner on the face of the complaint or answer. Therefore, such practice should be avoided, and an attorney/notary who acts in this fashion proceeds at his own risk. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. James Lee Knight, Notary Public, Guilford County, 58 N.C.A.G. 35 (1988).

It is not advisable for a notary who is also a partner in a law firm acting of counsel to an attorney filing a divorce complaint to notarize the verification of the client. A divorce complaint which is not properly notarized is subject to dismissal. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. James Lee Knight, Notary Public, Guilford County, 58 N.C.A.G. 35 (1988).

Pleadings not requiring verification by one of the parties are not subject to dismissal if they are verified anyway and a partner of the firm representing that client acts as the notary. However, former § 47-8 would still seem to say that partner is without power to act as a notary in that situation. The signature of the attorney signing the pleadings would be adequate under section (a) of this rule. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. James Lee Knight, Notary Public, Guilford County, 58 N.C.A.G. 35 (1988).

Rule 12. Defenses and objections; when and how presented; by pleading or motion; motion for judgment on pleading.

(a)(1) When Presented. — A defendant shall serve his answer within 30 days after service of the summons and complaint upon him. A party served with a pleading stating a crossclaim against him shall serve an answer thereto within 30 days after service upon him. The plaintiff shall serve his reply to a counterclaim in the answer within 30 days after service of the answer or, if a reply is ordered by the court, within 30 days after service of the order, unless the order otherwise directs. Service of a motion permitted under this rule alters these periods of time as follows, unless a different time is fixed by order of the court:

a. The responsive pleading shall be served within 20 days after notice of the court's action in ruling on the motion or postponing its disposition until the trial on the merits;

b. If the court grants a motion for a more definite statement, the responsive pleading shall be served within 20 days after service of the more definite statement.

(2) Cases Removed to United States District Court. — Upon the filing in a district court of the United States of a petition for the removal of a civil action or proceeding from a court in this State and the filing of a copy of the petition in the State court, the State court shall proceed no further therein unless and until the case is remanded. If it shall be finally determined in the United States courts that the action or proceeding was not removable or was improperly removed, or for other reason should be remanded, and a final order is entered remanding the action or proceeding to the State court, the defendant or defendants, or any other party who would have been permitted or required to file a pleading had the proceedings to remove not been instituted, shall have 30 days after the filing in such State court of a certified copy of the order of remand to file motions and to answer or otherwise plead.

(b) How Presented. — Every defense, in law or fact, to a claim for relief in any pleading, whether a claim, counterclaim, crossclaim, or third-party claim, shall be asserted in the responsive pleading thereto if one is required, except that the following defenses may at the option of the pleader be made by motion:

(1) Lack of jurisdiction over the subject matter,
(2) Lack of jurisdiction over the person,
(3) Improper venue or division,
(4) Insufficiency of process,
(5) Insufficiency of service of process,
(6) Failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted,
(7) Failure to join a necessary party.

A motion making any of these defenses shall be made before pleading if a further pleading is permitted. The consequences of failure to make such a motion shall be as provided in sections (g) and (h). No defense or objection is waived by being joined with one or more other defenses or objections in a responsive pleading or motion. Obtaining an extension of time within which to answer or otherwise plead shall not constitute a waiver of any defense herein set forth. If a pleading sets forth a claim for relief to which the adverse party is not required to serve a responsive pleading, he may assert at the trial any defense in law or fact to that claim for relief. If, on a motion asserting the defense numbered (6), to dismiss for failure of the pleading to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, matters outside the pleading are presented to and not excluded by the court, the motion shall be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in Rule 56, and all parties shall be given reasonable opportunity to present all material made pertinent to such a motion by Rule 56.

(c) Motion for judgment on the pleadings. — After the pleadings are closed but within such time as not to delay the trial, any party may move for judgment on the pleadings. If, on a motion for judgment on the pleadings, matters outside the pleadings are presented to and not excluded by the court, the motion shall be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in Rule 56, and all parties shall be given reasonable opportunity to present all material made pertinent to such a motion by Rule 56.

(d) Preliminary hearings. — The defenses specifically enumerated (1) through (7) in section (b) of this rule, whether made in a pleading or by motion, and the motion for judgment on the pleadings mentioned in section (c) of this rule shall be heard and determined before trial on application of any party, unless the judge orders that the hearing and determination thereof be deferred until the trial.

(e) Motion for more definite statement. — If a pleading to which a responsive pleading is permitted is so vague or ambiguous that a party cannot reasonably be required to frame a responsive pleading, he may move for a more definite statement before interposing his responsive pleading. The motion shall point out the defects complained of and the details desired. If the motion is granted and the order of the judge is not obeyed within 20 days after notice of the order or within such other time as the judge may fix, the judge may strike the pleading to which the motion was directed or make such orders as he deems just.

(f) Motion to strike. — Upon motion made by a party before responding to a pleading or, if no responsive pleading is permitted by these rules, upon motion made by a party within 30 days after the service of the pleading upon him or upon the judge's own initiative at any time, the judge may order stricken from any pleading any insufficient defense or any redundant, irrelevant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous matter.

(g) Consolidation of defenses in motion. — A party who makes a motion under this rule may join with it any other motions herein provided for and then available to him. If a party makes a motion under this rule but omits therefrom any defense or objection then available to him which this rule permits to be raised by motion, he shall not thereafter make a motion based on the defense or objection so omitted, except a motion as provided in section (h)(2) hereof on any of the grounds there stated.

(h) Waiver or preservation of certain defenses. —

(1) A defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person, improper venue, insufficiency of process, or insufficiency of service of process is waived (i) if omitted from a motion in the circumstances described in section (g), or (ii) if it is neither made by motion under this rule nor included in a responsive pleading or an amendment thereof permitted by Rule 15(a) to be made as a matter of course.

(2) A defense of failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, a defense of failure to join a necessary party, and an objection of failure to state a legal defense to a claim may be made in any pleading permitted or ordered under Rule 7(a), or by motion for judgment on the pleadings, or at the trial on the merits.

(3) Whenever it appears by suggestion of the parties or otherwise that the court lacks jurisdiction of the subject matter, the court shall dismiss the action. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1971, c. 1236; 1975, c. 76, s. 2.)

COMMENT

This rule deals comprehensively with the whole mechanism, including timetables, for raising all the various defenses and objections traditionally available to defensively aligned parties at some pretrial stage, including those based merely on objections to form of pleadings, those traditionally characterized as dilatory defenses, and those based upon defenses on the merits.

Section (a) is a straightforward timetable for the filing of the traditional defensive pleadings, the answer, and the reply. The 30-day period rather than the federal rule 20-day period is adopted. All other considerations of timeliness in raising the various possible objections and defenses by other devices are related to the times for filing these responsive pleadings.

The remaining sections deal in closely interrelated fashion with the whole problem of an orderly staging of the various traditional objections and defenses, worked out to guard against dilatoriness and to encourage economy of effort and early potential raising and determination of defenses likely to be decisive, either as to the abatement of the particular action, or on the merits. The key conceptions, involving some fairly drastic changes from the Code practice, are these: (1) Only two kinds of procedural devices — the traditional defensive pleadings and functionally shaped motions — shall be utilized to raise all the objections and defenses made available. This has been presaged in the provisions of Rule 7(c), abolishing demurrers and pleas, and thus leaving only pleadings and the motion remaining as available devices out of the traditional arsenal. (2) Except for the possible objections to mere forms of pleadings, all the traditional defenses, whether characterized as merely formal, dilatory, or on the merits, may be raised together, and for the first time, in the required responsive pleadings. This departs from the traditional Code approach which required certain defenses, both dilatory and on the merits, to be raised, at peril of waiver, by demurrer, when they appear on the face of the pleading (former §§ 1-127, 1-133). Taking a different approach, this rule instead merely gives the option to any defensive pleader to raise seven enumerated objections and defenses by motion prior to filing his responsive pleading [Rule 12(b)]; and the option to either party to then have such motion-raised defenses heard preliminarily unless the court defers consideration of them to trial time [Rule 12(d)].

The third sentence in section (b) has as its purpose the clarification of the preceding sentence. Ordinarily, of course, a motion making any of the listed defenses should be made before pleading. But the failure to do so is not preclusive in all circumstances and as to all defenses, as sections (g) and (h) of this rule make clear.

The only ones of the traditional objections to mere form which are retained are the motion to make more definite and certain and the motion to strike. It must be assumed that in the context of the federal pleading approach the motion to make more definite and certain will be utilized with much more restraint, generally only when such ambiguity exists that the responsive pleader cannot reasonably be required to plead to the pleading under attack. See generally 2 Moore's Federal Practice Pars. 12.18 and 12.20.

The most direct analogue to the Code demurrer for failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, which is abolished under this procedure, is the motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. [Rule 12(b)(6)]. In a general way it can be said that this motion is typically honored in federal practice under the same circumstances that a demurrer is sustained and action dismissed in State practice because the pleading attacked contains a "statement of a defective cause of action," as opposed merely to a "defective statement of good cause of action." Compare, for example, Turner v. Gastonia City Bd. of Educ., 250 N.C. 456, 109 S.E.2d 211 (1959), illustrating application of the "defective cause" rule under existing State demurrer practice, with DeLoach v. Crawley's, Inc., 128 F.2d 378 (5th Cir. 1942), illustrating dismissal rule on motion to dismiss under federal Rule 12(b)(6). Unlike the State practice demurrer, this motion to dismiss may "speak." [Rule 12(b), last sentence].

The waiver provisions of Rule 12(h) provide in effect that the defenses of failure to state a claim, or failure to join a necessary party may be raised at any time before verdict. After verdict however, the defenses of failure to state a claim and failure to join a necessary party cannot then be raised or noted for the first time. Lack of jurisdiction of the subject matter, of course, cannot be waived and is always available as a defense.

In addition to the motion to dismiss, analogous in a limited way to the demurrer as above stated, a motion for judgment on the pleadings is likewise provided in Rule 12(c). It too has "speaking" capacities.

I. IN GENERAL.

Rule 12 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure is essentially the same as this rule. Spartan Leasing, Inc. v. Brown, 14 N.C. App. 383, 188 S.E.2d 574 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 285 N.C. 689, 208 S.E.2d 649 (1974). See also, Dale v. Lattimore, 12 N.C. App. 348, 183 S.E.2d 417, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

Section (b) of this rule is essentially a verbatim copy of FRCP, Rule 12(b). Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970).

Subsection (h)(3) of this rule is virtually identical to FRCP, Rule 12(h)(3). Dale v. Lattimore, 12 N.C. App. 348, 183 S.E.2d 417, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

Taken together, subsection (b)(6) of this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 8(a) suggest pleadings should be limited to those facts or descriptions of transactions, occurrences, or series of transactions or occurrences, intended to be proved. Bowlin v. Duke Univ., 108 N.C. App. 145, 423 S.E.2d 320 (1992), cert. denied, 333 N.C. 461, 427 S.E.2d 618 (1993).

An order entered out of session without the parties' consent is null and void and must be vacated pursuant to subsection (h)(3) of this rule. Turner v. Hatchett, 104 N.C. App. 487, 409 S.E.2d 747 (1991).

Subject Matter Jurisdiction of Court. — Superior court could not dismiss complaint with prejudice for failure to state a claim where the court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over plaintiffs' claim. Flowers v. Blackbeard Sailing Club, Ltd., 115 N.C. App. 349, 444 S.E.2d 636, cert. granted, 337 N.C. 691, 448 S.E.2d 522 (1994), review improvidently granted, 340 N.C. 357, 457 S.E.2d 599 (1995).

Motions under subsection (b)(6) and section (c) of this rule can be treated as summary judgment motions, the difference being that under subsections (b)(6) and section (c) the motion is decided on the pleadings alone, while under § 1A-1, Rule 56 the court may receive and consider various kinds of evidence. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971).

Distinction Between Motion to Dismiss and Motion for Summary Judgment. — The distinction between a motion to dismiss under subdivision (b)(6) of this rule and a motion for summary judgment is more than a mere technicality. When considering a motion to dismiss, the trial court need only look to the face of the complaint to determine whether it reveals an insurmountable bar to plaintiff's recovery. By contrast, when considering a summary judgment motion, the trial court must look at more than the pleadings; it must also consider additional matters such as affidavits, depositions and other specified matter outside the pleadings. Locus v. Fayetteville State Univ., 102 N.C. App. 522, 402 S.E.2d 862 (1991).

Justiciable Controversy. — The mere filing of an affirmative defense, without more, is not sufficient to establish the absence of a justiciable issue, nor is the grant of a motion under subdivision (b)(6) of this rule, nor the entry of summary judgment. These events may only be evidence of the absence of a justiciable issue. However, action by the losing party which perpetuated litigation in the face of events substantially establishing that the pleadings no longer presented a justiciable controversy may also serve as evidence for purposes of § 6-21.5. Sunamerica Fin. Corp. v. Bonham, 328 N.C. 254, 400 S.E.2d 435 (1991).

Whether sovereign immunity is a question of subject matter jurisdiction or personal jurisdiction is an unsettled area of the law in this State. The distinction is important because the denial of a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to subsection (b)(1) of this rule is nonappealable, but the denial of a motion challenging the jurisdiction of the court over the person of the defendant pursuant to subsection (b)(2) is immediately appealable. Zimmer v. North Carolina Dep't of Transp., 87 N.C. App. 132, 360 S.E.2d 115 (1987).

Pleadings are to be liberally construed. Benton v. W.H. Weaver Constr. Co., 28 N.C. App. 91, 220 S.E.2d 417 (1975).

Failure to plead the particulars of jurisdiction is not fatal to a claim, so long as the facts alleged permit the inference of jurisdiction under the statute. Williams v. Institute for Computational Studies, 85 N.C. App. 421, 355 S.E.2d 177 (1987).

No appeal lies as a matter of right from denial of a motion under section (d) of this rule. Raines v. Thompson, 62 N.C. App. 752, 303 S.E.2d 413 (1983).

Appeal of Dismissal. — Although order dismissing class action without prejudice did not determine the controversy and was interlocutory, the order affected a substantial right of the unnamed plaintiffs and was immediately appealable. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 79 N.C. App. 447, 339 S.E.2d 437, rev'd on other grounds, 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Procedure and Discovery in Shareholders' Derivative Actions. — For a case discussing interplay of rules and statutes governing procedure and discovery in shareholders' derivative action, particularly with respect to former § 55-55(c) (see now § 55-7-40), this rule, and § 1A-1, Rules 23 and 56, see Alford v. Shaw, 327 N.C. 526, 398 S.E.2d 445 (1990).

II. ANSWERS AND TIME THEREFOR.

Service of Motion Alters Time Period for Answering. — Although the motions provided for in section (b) of this rule are not pleadings under § 1A-1, Rule 7(a), section (a) of this rule provides that the service of such a motion results in a postponement of the time for serving an answer, and consequently no default results pending disposition of these motions. Moseley v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 19 N.C. App. 137, 198 S.E.2d 36, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 121, 199 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Time to Answer Not Extended. — Plaintiffs' motions for entry of default and default judgment were made after defendant's time to answer had expired, where although summons and complaint were served upon defendant by mail, § 1A-1, Rule 6(e) did not apply to extend his time to answer to 33 days, because the 30 days defendant had under this rule to answer the complaint began running when defendant was served with the summons and complaint, not when plaintiff mailed it. Williams v. Moore, 95 N.C. App. 601, 383 S.E.2d 416 (1989).

Pre-answer motion to dismiss was not a responsive pleading within the confines of this rule, preventing the entry of default judgment pursuant to Rule 55 of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Eden's Gate, Ltd. v. Leeper, 121 N.C. App. 171, 464 S.E.2d 696 (1995).

Substantive Response May Constitute Answer. — A letter, or any document, that is filed with the court and substantively responds to a complaint may constitute an answer, notwithstanding its failure to comply with all of the technical requirements of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Brown v. American Messenger Servs., Inc., 129 N.C. App. 207, 498 S.E.2d 384 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 692, 511 S.E.2d 644 (1998).

Letter Deemed an Answer. — Where letter raised no defenses to plaintiff's claims, nor answered the allegations, but offered partial payment and promised to repay the balance of the principal in question, the letter was an answer sufficient to satisfy the Rules of Civil Procedure. Brown v. American Messenger Servs., Inc., 129 N.C. App. 207, 498 S.E.2d 384 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 692, 511 S.E.2d 644 (1998).

III. PRESERVATION AND WAIVER OF DEFENSES, GENERALLY.

Under section (b) of this rule, every defense, including a defense in the nature of the old plea in abatement, may be raised by responsive pleading. Lehrer v. Edgecombe Mfg. Co., 13 N.C. App. 412, 185 S.E.2d 727 (1972).

Motions Under Subsections (b)(2), (b)(4) and (b)(5) Distinguished. — A challenge to the court's jurisdiction over the person under subsection (b)(2) of this rule concerns whether the court has power, assuming it is properly invoked, to require the defendant to come into court to adjudicate the claim, a test which has come to be known as "minimum contacts." Challenges to sufficiency of process and service do not concern the State's fundamental power to bring a defendant before its courts for trial; instead they concern the means by which a court gives notice to the defendant and asserts jurisdiction over him. Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141 (1982); Sigman v. R.R. Tydings, Inc., 59 N.C. App. 346, 296 S.E.2d 659 (1982).

A subsection 12(b) defense contained in an answer is not the same as a 12(b) defense raised in a motion, and affidavits filed in support of a 12(b) defense contained in an answer is not governed by the time constraints found in 1A-1, Rule 6(d). Ryals v. Hall-Lane Moving & Storage Co., 122 N.C. App. 242, 468 S.E.2d 600 (1996).

Dismissal of Less Than All Claims Permitted. — Section (b) of this rule permits assertion by motion of a defense to "a claim for relief in any pleading." It does not require that the assertion be to "the claims for relief." Thus, it appears that the clear intent of the rule is to permit dismissal of some claims without requiring dismissal of all. Morrow v. Kings Dep't Stores, Inc., 57 N.C. App. 13, 290 S.E.2d 732, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 385, 294 S.E.2d 210 (1982).

A similar action pending in the courts of any other jurisdiction will not abate an action between the same parties in the North Carolina courts if raised as a defense under section (b) of this rule. Lehrer v. Edgecombe Mfg. Co., 13 N.C. App. 412, 185 S.E.2d 727 (1972).

But Court in Second Forum May Stay or Continue Action. — A prior action pending outside the jurisdiction, if raised as a defense under section (b) of this rule, is not grounds for the abatement of an action begun in the courts of the state in question, but this does not preclude the court in the second forum from staying or continuing the progress of the second action pending determination of the first. Such a stay or continuance is discretionary and not a matter of right. Lehrer v. Edgecombe Mfg. Co., 13 N.C. App. 412, 185 S.E.2d 727 (1972).

Application of Waiver Provisions of Rule. — The waiver provisions of this rule apply only to those motions enumerated under section (b) and not excepted under section (h). Sims v. Oakwood Trailer Sales Corp., 18 N.C. App. 726, 198 S.E.2d 73, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 754, 198 S.E.2d 723 (1973).

General Appearance by Defendant. — Even if the court had not already obtained jurisdiction over defendant by serving him with process by registered mail in compliance with § 1A-1, Rule 4, by contesting both the notice to take his deposition and the show cause motion on grounds other than the court's lack of jurisdiction over him, defendant made a general appearance in the proceeding and thus submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the court. M.G. Newell Co. v. Wyrick, 91 N.C. App. 98, 370 S.E.2d 431 (1988).

Subsection (b)(2) Waived Where Raised for First Time on Appeal. — Defendant waived his right to raise subsection (b)(2) of this rule as a defense because he failed to raise it in his answer or motions but presented it for the first time on appeal. Shores v. Shores, 91 N.C. App. 435, 371 S.E.2d 747 (1988).

Lack of jurisdiction can never be waived by the parties, nor may such jurisdiction be conferred on a court by consent of the parties, except where a valid statute may allow jurisdiction to be so conferred. Dale v. Lattimore, 12 N.C. App. 348, 183 S.E.2d 417, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

Waiver of Venue in Custody and Support Modification Proceeding. — Waiver of venue occurs when a custody and support modification request is filed with the district court in an improper county and there is no timely demand that the trial be conducted in the proper county. In such event, the district court in the improper county appropriately adjudicates the modification request. Brooks v. Brooks, 107 N.C. App. 44, 418 S.E.2d 534 (1992).

IV. SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION.

Lack of jurisdiction of the subject matter may always be raised by a party, or the court may raise such defect on its own initiative. Dale v. Lattimore, 12 N.C. App. 348, 183 S.E.2d 417, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

Lack of subject matter jurisdiction may always be raised by a party, or the court may raise such defect on its own initiative, even after an answer has been filed. Jackson County ex rel. Child Support Enforcement Agency v. Swayney, 75 N.C. App. 629, 331 S.E.2d 145 (1985), rev'd in part on other grounds, 319 N.C. 52, 352 S.E.2d 413, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 826, 108 S. Ct. 93, 98 L. Ed. 2d 54 (1987).

Failure to join a necessary party does not result in a lack of jurisdiction over the subject matter of the proceeding. Stancil v. Bruce Stancil Refrigeration, Inc., 81 N.C. App. 567, 344 S.E.2d 789, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 418, 349 S.E.2d 601 (1986), appeal dismissed, 94 N.C. App. 760, 381 S.E.2d 720 (1989).

An objection to subject matter jurisdiction may be made at any time during the course of the action. Vance Constr. Co. v. Duane White Land Corp., 127 N.C. App. 493, 490 S.E.2d 588 (1997).

The question of subject matter jurisdiction may be raised at any point in a proceeding under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act, § 50A-1 et seq., and such jurisdiction cannot be conferred by waiver, estoppel or consent. Sloop v. Friberg, 70 N.C. App. 690, 320 S.E.2d 921 (1984).

The district courts of this State do undoubtedly possess general subject matter jurisdiction over child custody disputes. Such matters are in no wise reserved by the Constitution or laws of North Carolina to the exclusive consideration of another tribunal. Therefore the real question under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act, § 50A-1 et seq., is whether jurisdiction is properly exercised according to the statutory requirements in a particular case. Sloop v. Friberg, 70 N.C. App. 690, 320 S.E.2d 921 (1984).

The question of subject matter jurisdiction may properly be raised for the first time on appeal. Bache Halsey Stuart, Inc. v. Hunsucker, 38 N.C. App. 414, 248 S.E.2d 567 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 583, 254 S.E.2d 32 (1979).

And the Court of Appeals may raise the question of subject matter jurisdiction on its own motion, even when it was not argued by the parties in their briefs. Bache Halsey Stuart, Inc. v. Hunsucker, 38 N.C. App. 414, 248 S.E.2d 567 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 583, 254 S.E.2d 32 (1979).

A dismissal for lack of subject matter jurisdiction is not on the merits and thus is not given res judicata effect. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

Failure to State Claim Does Not Constitute Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction. — The failure of the complaint to state a claim upon which relief can be granted does not constitute a lack of jurisdiction of the subject matter. Dale v. Lattimore, 12 N.C. App. 348, 183 S.E.2d 417, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

And a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction is not viewed in the same manner as a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Matters outside the pleadings may be considered and weighed by the court in determining the existence of jurisdiction over the subject matter. Tart v. Walker, 38 N.C. App. 500, 248 S.E.2d 736 (1978).

Failure to properly file a petition for writ of certiorari with the superior court which would have allowed the court to exercise its jurisdiction following administrative hearing justified dismissal by the trial court. House of Raeford Farms, Inc. v. City of Raeford, 104 N.C. App. 280, 408 S.E.2d 885 (1991).

Failure to Comply with Requirements of § 1A-1, Rule 23(b) Not Jurisdictional Defect. — Although complaint, in shareholders' derivative suit was not properly verified, because § 1A-1, Rule 23(b) addresses the procedure to be followed in, and not the substantive elements of, a shareholders' derivative suit, plaintiffs' failure to comply with the verification requirement at the time the complaint was filed was not a jurisdictional defect. Alford v. Shaw, 327 N.C. 526, 398 S.E.2d 445 (1990).

Denial of Motion Not Immediately Appealable. — While § 1-277(b) permits the immediate appeal of an order denying a motion made pursuant to subsection (b)(2) of this rule to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction over the person, that statute does not apply to orders denying motions made pursuant to subsection (b)(1) of this rule to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Such orders, the same as other orders not determinative of an action, are interlocutory and therefore not immediately appealable. Teachy v. Coble Dairies, Inc., 306 N.C. 324, 293 S.E.2d 182 (1982).

Concurrent Federal and State Jurisdiction Presumed in RICO and Similar Federal Actions. — The general rule in Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations actions and similar federal actions presumes concurrent jurisdiction over federal claims as between state and federal courts. This presumption however may be rebutted only by showing the existence of a Congressional provision establishing sole federal jurisdiction, a clear implication of exclusivity from the relevant legislative history or a "disabling incompatibility between the federal claim and state court adjudications." Hoke v. E.F. Hutton & Co., 91 N.C. App. 159, 370 S.E.2d 857 (1988).

V. PERSONAL JURISDICTION.

The manner of presenting the defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person is governed by this rule. Spartan Leasing, Inc. v. Brown, 14 N.C. App. 383, 188 S.E.2d 574 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 285 N.C. 689, 208 S.E.2d 649 (1974).

Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction. — Motion to dismiss should have been granted to defendant, where court lacked authority to exercise personal jurisdiction over it. Transtector Sys. v. Electric Supply, Inc., 113 N.C. App. 148, 437 S.E.2d 699 (1993).

Inappropriate Challenge by Motion for Directed Verdict. — According to this section, a motion for a directed verdict is not an appropriate method of presenting the defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person. Harris v. Pembaur, 84 N.C. App. 666, 353 S.E.2d 673 (1987).

Methods of Challenging Jurisdiction. — This section provides that a defendant may raise the defense of lack of jurisdiction over his person by a pre-answer motion or by a responsive pleading. If the defendant fails to proceed in this manner, the defense of lack of jurisdiction is waived. Harris v. Pembaur, 84 N.C. App. 666, 353 S.E.2d 673 (1987).

Concept of Voluntary Appearance Not Abolished. — When this rule and § 1-75.7 are construed together, it is apparent that this rule does not abolish the concept of the voluntary or general appearance. Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974); Swenson v. Thibaut, 39 N.C. App. 77, 250 S.E.2d 279 (1978), appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 740, 254 S.E.2d 183 (1979).

Voluntary Appearance as Waiver of Defense of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction. — Nothing in the language of this rule prevents a defendant, prior to filing a answer or a motion in which he could set up a section (b) defense, from submitting himself to the jurisdiction of the court in which an action has been filed against him by formally entering his voluntary appearance, by seeking some affirmative relief at the hands of the court, or by utilizing the facilities of the court in some other manner inconsistent with the defense that the court has no jurisdiction over him, and once a defendant has submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the court by such conduct the defense of lack of jurisdiction over his person is no longer available to him. Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974).

Nonresident defendant, by moving for a discretionary change of venue pursuant to § 1-83(2) without first or simultaneously asserting his defenses under section (b) of this rule relating to jurisdiction and process, made a general appearance and voluntarily submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the court. Humphrey v. Sinnott, 84 N.C. App. 263, 352 S.E.2d 443 (1987).

Once defendant submitted herself to the jurisdiction of the court, then the defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person was no longer available to her. Harris v. Pembaur, 84 N.C. App. 666, 353 S.E.2d 673 (1987).

Right to Challenge Personal Jurisdiction Preserved Where General Appearance Made in Conjunction with or After Subsection (b)(2) Motion. — If a general appearance is made in conjunction with or after a subsection (b)(2) motion is properly filed, the right to challenge personal jurisdiction is preserved. Lynch v. Lynch, 302 N.C. 189, 274 S.E.2d 212, modified and aff'd on other grounds on rehearing, 303 N.C. 367, 279 S.E.2d 840 (1981).

Where defendant's initial action was the filing of a motion which, inter alia, sought dismissal pursuant to subsection (b)(2) of this rule for lack of jurisdiction over his person, a subsequent general appearance would not have waived his right to challenge personal jurisdiction. Hall v. Hall, 65 N.C. App. 797, 310 S.E.2d 378 (1984).

A general appearance will waive the right to challenge personal jurisdiction only when it is made prior to the proper filing of a subsection (b)(2) motion contesting jurisdiction over the person. Hall v. Hall, 65 N.C. App. 797, 310 S.E.2d 378 (1984).

Where defendant's initial action was the filing of a motion which, inter alia, sought dismissal pursuant to subsection (b)(2) of this rule for lack of jurisdiction over his person, a subsequent general appearance would not have waived his right to challenge personal jurisdiction. Hall v. Hall, 65 N.C. App. 797, 310 S.E.2d 378 (1984).

A general appearance by a party's attorney will dispense with process and service on the defendant; and the filing of an answer by the defendant's attorney, which does not include the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction, constitutes a waiver of this defense if the defense has not been raised in a prior motion. Grimsley v. Nelson, 117 N.C. App. 329, 451 S.E.2d 336 (1994), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 342 N.C. 542, 467 S.E.2d 92 (1995).

Securing Enlargement of Time to Plead as General Appearance. — A defendant who, before asserting his defense that the court has no jurisdiction over his person by answer or pre-answer motion under sections (b) and (g) and subsection (h)(1), secures an enlargement of time in which to plead, is making a general appearance, thereby submitting to the court's jurisdiction and obviating the necessity of any service of summons. Philpott v. Kerns, 285 N.C. 225, 203 S.E.2d 778 (1974). See also, Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974).

In determining whether a general appearance was made, § 1-75.7 must be construed with this rule, since these statutes are part of the same enactment. Lynch v. Lynch, 302 N.C. 189, 274 S.E.2d 212, modified and aff'd on other grounds on rehearing, 303 N.C. 367, 279 S.E.2d 840 (1981).

This rule and § 1-75.7 must be construed together since they are a part of the same enactment. Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974); Swenson v. Thibaut, 39 N.C. App. 77, 250 S.E.2d 279 (1978), appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 740, 254 S.E.2d 183 (1979).

General Appearance Not Shown. — Because the filing of the answer was entirely consistent with this section and because the record revealed that the plaintiffs were fully aware of the fact that the attorney signing the answer represented the insurance company, there arises no presumption that the attorney represented the defendant. Accordingly, the answer did not constitute a general appearance by the defendant, and the defendant was not precluded from later raising the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction. Grimsley v. Nelson, 117 N.C. App. 329, 451 S.E.2d 336 (1994), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 342 N.C. 542, 467 S.E.2d 92 (1995).

A defendant submits to the jurisdiction of the court by formally entering a voluntary appearance, by seeking some affirmative relief at the hands of the court, or by utilizing the facilities of the court in some manner inconsistent with the defense that the court has no jurisdiction over her. Harris v. Pembaur, 84 N.C. App. 666, 353 S.E.2d 673 (1987).

Defendant made a general appearance in a child custody proceeding and submitted herself to the jurisdiction of the court by making a motion invoking the adjudicatory power of the court to determine whether full faith and credit should be given to a custody decree entered in another state. Lynch v. Lynch, 302 N.C. 189, 274 S.E.2d 212, modified and aff'd on other grounds on rehearing, 303 N.C. 367, 279 S.E.2d 840 (1981).

Option of Presenting Lack of Jurisdiction by Pre-Answer Motion or Answer Substituted for Special Appearance. — This rule eliminated the special appearance and, in lieu thereof, gave a defendant the option of making the defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person by pre-answer motion or by answer, even though a defendant makes a general appearance when he files an answer. Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974).

This rule did not abolish the concept of the voluntary or general appearance but did eliminate the special appearance, and, in lieu thereof, gave defendant the option of making the defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person by pre-answer motion or by answer. Lynch v. Lynch, 45 N.C. App. 391, 264 S.E.2d 114 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 302 N.C. 189, 274 S.E.2d 212, modified and aff'd on other grounds on rehearing, 303 N.C. 367, 279 S.E.2d 840 (1981).

Where defendant admits the existence of jurisdiction in her answer, that fact is conclusively established and cannot be disputed. Harris v. Pembaur, 84 N.C. App. 666, 353 S.E.2d 673 (1987).

Filing Answer as Waiver of Right to Con- test. — The defendant waived his right to contest lack of personal jurisdiction when he filed his answer without raising this defense. Jackson County ex rel. Child Support Enforcement Agency v. Swayney, 75 N.C. App. 629, 331 S.E.2d 145 (1985), rev'd in part on other grounds, 319 N.C. 52, 352 S.E.2d 413, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 826, 108 S. Ct. 93, 98 L. Ed. 2d 54 (1987).

In defendant's answer, he made a motion under subsection (b)(6) of this rule, and a res judicata motion, without making a motion to contest personal jurisdiction. By filing his answer without contesting personal jurisdiction, his right to challenge the court's exercise of personal jurisdiction over him was waived. Stern v. Stern, 89 N.C. App. 689, 367 S.E.2d 7 (1988).

Section 1-277(b) allows the immediate appeal of a denial of subsection (b)(2) motion, but not the immediate appeal of a denial of a subsection (b)(1) motion. Teachy v. Coble Dairies, Inc., 306 N.C. 324, 293 S.E.2d 182 (1982).

An appeal lies immediately from the refusal to dismiss a cause for want of jurisdiction. In re Will of Lamb, 48 N.C. App. 122, 268 S.E.2d 831 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 303 N.C. 452, 279 S.E.2d 781 (1981).

An appeal lies immediately from refusal by the trial court to dismiss a cause for want of jurisdiction over the person where the motion is made pursuant to subsection (b)(2) of this rule. Chamberlin v. Chamberlin, 70 N.C. App. 474, 319 S.E.2d 670, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 921 (1984).

In paternity suit, where trial court adequately inquired into defendant's contacts with this State and set its findings out in its order, without objection of defendant, the hearing which was held on defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction comported with all due process requirements. Cochran v. Wallace, 95 N.C. App. 167, 381 S.E.2d 853 (1989).

VI. IMPROPER VENUE.

Venue Is Not Jurisdictional. — The principle that venue is not jurisdictional, but is only ground for removal to the proper county, if objection thereto is made in apt time and in the proper manner, appears to be fully supported by section (b) and subsection (h)(1) of this rule. Shaw v. Stiles, 13 N.C. App. 173, 185 S.E.2d 268 (1971).

Defense of improper venue may be raised in the answer if no pre-answer motions have been made. Swift & Co. v. Dan-Cleve Corp., 26 N.C. App. 494, 216 S.E.2d 464 (1975).

Where motion asserting improper venue is made in writing in apt time, question of removal becomes a matter of substantial right, and the court of original venue is without power to proceed further in essential matters until the right of removal is considered and passed upon. Little v. Little, 12 N.C. App. 353, 183 S.E.2d 278 (1971).

In the absence of waiver or consent of the parties, express or implied, when a motion for change of venue as a matter of right has been properly made in apt time, the court is in error thereafter to enter any order affecting the rights of the parties, save the order of removal. Little v. Little, 12 N.C. App. 353, 183 S.E.2d 278 (1971).

Court was not required to rule on motion for change of venue prior to granting plaintiffs' motions for possession of collateral, since an ancillary order of attachment had already been entered, since granting possession of the collateral to plaintiffs did not affect defendant's ultimate rights, and since the motion for change of venue involved a change within the district. Citicorp Person-to-Person Fin. Center, Inc. v. Stallings 601 Sales, Inc., 49 N.C. App. 187, 270 S.E.2d 567 (1980).

Defense of Improper Venue Not Waived by Motion for Enlargement of Time. — While section (h) of this rule provides for waiver of the defense of improper venue where not joined in a motion made under this rule, this waiver is not applicable to a motion for enlargement of time made under § 1A-1, Rule 6. Moseley v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 19 N.C. App. 137, 198 S.E.2d 36, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 121, 199 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Implied Waiver of Right to Change Venue. — Where in a divorce action almost a year passed between the time defendant filed motion for change of venue under subsection (b)(3) of this rule and the first hearing date, at which time defendant sought a continuance, and on the second hearing date five months later defendant failed to appear, the trial court was justified in finding an implied waiver of defendant's right to a change of venue by her failure to pursue her motion for removal. Miller v. Miller, 38 N.C. App. 95, 247 S.E.2d 278 (1978).

VII. INSUFFICIENCY OF PROCESS.

Correctable Error. — Trial court erred in granting defendants' motion to dismiss pursuant to subdivisions (b)(4) and (5) as the designation of the incorrect county on the civil summons form was not a jurisdictional defect but rather an irregularity or error in form correctable by amending the summons in accordance with Rule 4(i). Hazelwood v. Bailey, 339 N.C. 578, 453 S.E.2d 522 (1995).

VIII. INSUFFICIENCY OF SERVICE.

Where there was no valid service of pro- cess, the court acquired no jurisdiction over defendant and defendant's motion to dismiss under this rule on jurisdictional grounds should have been allowed. Sink v. Easter, 284 N.C. 555, 202 S.E.2d 138.

Where the trial court record showed that plaintiff failed to request defendant's appearance in its Delayed Service of Complaint, the trial court found that no summons had ever been served on defendant and properly granted defendant's motion to dismiss. Hemmings v. Green, 122 N.C. App. 191, 468 S.E.2d 278 (1996).

Insufficiency of Service Not Waived by Taking Deposition After Filing Answer Raising the Defense. — Defendant did not waive the defense of insufficiency of service of process by taking plaintiff's deposition after answer was filed raising the jurisdictional defense. Wiles v. Welparnel Constr. Co., 34 N.C. App. 157, 237 S.E.2d 297 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 295 N.C. 81, 243 S.E.2d 756 (1978).

Appeal. — An order ruling on the sufficiency of service of process is not immediately appealable. Seabrooke v. Hagin, 83 N.C. App. 60, 348 S.E.2d 614 (1986).

Service Not Insufficient. — A successful service of process occurring within thirty days after issuance of a summons is valid even if there has been a prior unsuccessful attempt at serving that same summons. An endorsement, alias summons or pluries summons are not necessary. Shiloh Methodist Church v. Keever Heating & Cooling Co., 127 N.C. App. 619, 492 S.E.2d 380 (1997).

IX. FAILURE TO STATE CLAIM.

A. In General.

Constitutional Issues. — To test the legal sufficiency of a complaint asserting constitutional issues, a party may move to dismiss under this rule. North Carolina E. Mun. Power v. Wake County, 100 N.C. App. 693, 398 S.E.2d 486 (1990), cert. denied, 329 N.C. 270, 407 S.E.2d 838 (1991).

The only purpose of a motion under subsection (b)(6) of this rule is to test the legal sufficiency of the pleading against which it is directed. In deciding such a motion the trial court is to treat the allegations of the pleading it challenges as true. Azzolino v. Dingfelder, 71 N.C. App. 289, 322 S.E.2d 567 (1984), rev'd in part and aff'd in part, 315 N.C. 103, 337 S.E.2d 528 (1985), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 835, 107 S. Ct. 131, 93 L. Ed. 2d 75 (1986).

The essential question on a motion under subsection (b)(6) of this rule is whether the complaint, when liberally construed, states a claim upon which relief can be granted on any theory. Barnaby v. Boardman, 70 N.C. App. 299, 318 S.E.2d 907, rev'd on other grounds, 313 N.C. 565, 330 S.E.2d 600 (1985).

The question for the court on a motion to dismiss is whether, as a matter of law, the allegations of the complaint, treated as true, are sufficient to state a claim upon which relief may be granted under some legal theory, whether properly labeled or not. Harris v. NCNB Nat'l Bank, 85 N.C. App. 669, 355 S.E.2d 838 (1987).

The test on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is whether the pleadings, when taken as true, are legally sufficient to satisfy the elements of at least some legally recognized claim. Arroyo v. Scottie's Professional Window Cleaning, Inc., 120 N.C. App. 154, 461 S.E.2d 13 (1995), discretionary review improvidently allowed, 343 N.C. 118, 468 S.E.2d 58 (1996).

Where loan between brothers was secured by deed of trust and son of borrower was made trustee, because of the close family relationships of the parties, the question of when lender knew or should have known of trustee's alleged breach of fiduciary duty was question for trier of fact, and lender's action against trustee was not subject to dismissal on borrower's and trustee's motion to dismiss alleging the action was time barred under subsection (b)(6) of this rule. Dawn v. Dawn, 122 N.C. App. 493, 470 S.E.2d 341 (1996).

Complaint Must Be Liberally Construed. — In analyzing the sufficiency of the complaint under subsection (b)(6) of this rule, the complaint must be liberally construed. Dixon v. Stuart, 85 N.C. App. 338, 354 S.E.2d 757 (1987).

Failure to State Claim May Be Asserted in Responsive Pleading or by Motion to Dismiss. — When a pleader has failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, his adversary is permitted by subsection (b)(6) of this rule to assert this defense either in a responsive pleading or by motion to dismiss. Forrester v. Garrett, 280 N.C. 117, 184 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

In ruling upon a subdivision (b)(6) motion, the trial court should liberally construe the complaint and should not dismiss the action unless it appears to a certainty that plaintiff is entitled to no relief under any statement of facts which could be proved in support of the claim. Arroyo v. Scottie's Professional Window Cleaning, Inc., 120 N.C. App. 154, 461 S.E.2d 13 (1995), discretionary review improvidently allowed, 343 N.C. 118, 468 S.E.2d 58 (1996).

Motion Under Subsection (b)(6) Available in Declaratory Judgment Action. — When the record shows that there is no basis for declaratory relief, as when the complaint does not allege an actual, genuine existing controversy, this may be taken advantage of by a subsection (b)(6) motion to dismiss. Kirkman v. Kirkman, 42 N.C. App. 173, 256 S.E.2d 264, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 297, 259 S.E.2d 300 (1979).

When Motion Under Subsection (b)(6) May Be Made. — A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted under subsection (b)(6) of this rule may be made as late as trial upon the merits. Dale v. Lattimore, 12 N.C. App. 348, 183 S.E.2d 417, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

A motion under subsection (b)(6) cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. Collyer v. Bell, 12 N.C. App. 653, 184 S.E.2d 414 (1971); Jones v. Satterfield Dev. Co., 16 N.C. App. 80, 191 S.E.2d 435, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 194 (1972).

Where there has been a trial, a party cannot on appeal interpose the defense that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Dale v. Lattimore, 12 N.C. App. 348, 183 S.E.2d 417, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

Subsection (b)(6) is an analogue to section (f), and the same tests as to legal principles apply. Mozingo v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 31 N.C. App. 157, 229 S.E.2d 57 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 711, 232 S.E.2d 204 (1977).

For discussion of the similarities and differences between motions under subsection (b)(6) of this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 56, see Shoffner Indus., Inc. v. W.B. Lloyd Constr. Co., 42 N.C. App. 259, 257 S.E.2d 50, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 296, 259 S.E.2d 301 (1979).

Motion to dismiss is the usual and proper method of testing legal sufficiency of the complaint. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970); Dockery v. Lampart Table Co., 36 N.C. App. 293, 244 S.E.2d 272, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 465, 246 S.E.2d 215 (1978); Lloyd v. Babb, 296 N.C. 416, 251 S.E.2d 843 (1979); Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979); Braun v. Glade Valley Sch., Inc., 77 N.C. App. 83, 334 S.E.2d 404 (1985).

The test on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is whether the pleading is legally sufficient. Alltop v. J.C. Penney Co., 10 N.C. App. 692, 179 S.E.2d 885, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 348, 182 S.E.2d 580 (1971); Barbour v. Little, 37 N.C. App. 686, 247 S.E.2d 252, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 733, 248 S.E.2d 862 (1978); McKinney Drilling Co. v. Nello L. Teer Co., 38 N.C. App. 472, 248 S.E.2d 444 (1978); Fowler v. Williamson, 39 N.C. App. 715, 251 S.E.2d 889 (1979); Snyder v. Freeman, 40 N.C. App. 348, 253 S.E.2d 10 (1979), rev'd, 300 N.C. 204, 266 S.E.2d 593 (1980); Kinlaw v. Long Mfg. N.C., Inc., 40 N.C. App. 641, 253 S.E.2d 629, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 494, 259 S.E.2d 552 (1979); GASP v. Mecklenburg County, 42 N.C. App. 225, 256 S.E.2d 477 (1979); Shoffner Indus., Inc. v. W.B. Lloyd Constr. Co., 42 N.C. App. 259, 257 S.E.2d 50, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 296, 259 S.E.2d 301 (1979); United Leasing Corp. v. Miller, 45 N.C. App. 400, 263 S.E.2d 313, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 374, 267 S.E.2d 685 (1980); State ex rel. Tenn. Dep't of Health & Env't v. Environmental Mgt. Comm'n, 78 N.C. App. 763, 338 S.E.2d 781 (1986).

Where it appears to a certainty that plaintiffs are entitled to no relief under any state of facts which could be proved in support of the claim, dismissal for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is proper. Alamance County v. N.C. Dep't of Human Resources, 58 N.C. App. 748, 294 S.E.2d 377 (1982).

To prevent a dismissal under subsection (b)(6) of this rule, a party must (1) give sufficient notice of the events on which the claim is based to enable the adverse party to respond and prepare for trial, and (2) state enough to satisfy the substantive elements of at least some legally recognized claim. Hewes v. Johnston, 61 N.C. App. 603, 301 S.E.2d 120 (1983); Vinson v. McManus, 68 N.C. App. 763, 316 S.E.2d 98 (1984); Peele v. Provident Mut. Life Ins. Co., 90 N.C. App. 447, 368 S.E.2d 892, appeal dismissed, 323 N.C. 366, 373 S.E.2d 547 (1988).

The motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6) of this rule tests the sufficiency of the complaint to state a claim for relief. Hendrix v. Hendrix, 67 N.C. App. 354, 313 S.E.2d 25 (1984).

A motion under subsection (b)(6) of this rule tests the legal sufficiency of the claim. The rules regarding the sufficiency of a complaint to withstand such a motion are equally applicable to a claim for relief presented in a counterclaim by the defendant. A counterclaim is sufficient to withstand the motion where no insurmountable bar to recovery on the claim appears on its face. Thus, the question becomes whether the counterclaim states a claim upon which relief can be granted on any theory. Chrysler Credit Corp. v. Rebhan, 66 N.C. App. 255, 311 S.E.2d 606 (1984).

A legal insufficiency may be due to an absence of law to support a claim of the sort made, absence of fact sufficient to make a good claim, or the disclosure of some fact which will necessarily defeat the claim. State ex rel. Tenn. Dep't of Health & Env't v. Environmental Mgt. Comm'n, 78 N.C. App. 763, 338 S.E.2d 781 (1986).

Where the facts are insufficient as a matter of law to constitute reasonable reliance on them, a complaint alleging fraud or negligent representation is properly dismissed. Hudson-Cole Dev. Corp. v. Beemer, — N.C. App. —, 511 S.E.2d 309 (1999).

Motion Under Subsection (b)(6) Is Modern Equivalent of Demurrer. — A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is the modern equivalent of a demurrer. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176

S.E.2d 161 (1970); Green v. Best, 9 N.C. App. 599, 176 S.E.2d 853 (1970).

Which Performs Substantially Same Function as Demurrer. — The motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6) of this rule performs substantially the same function as the old common-law general demurrer. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970); Forrester v. Garrett, 280 N.C. 117, 184 S.E.2d 858 (1971); North Carolina Consumers Power, Inc. v. Duke Power Co., 285 N.C. 434, 206 S.E.2d 178, rehearing denied, 286 N.C. 547, 212 S.E.2d 169 (1974); Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979); Pierce v. Piver, 45 N.C. App. 111, 262 S.E.2d 320, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 375, 282 S.E.2d 228 (1980).

A motion under subsection (b)(6) of this rule performs substantially the same function as a demurrer for failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Hodges v. Wellons, 9 N.C. App. 152, 175 S.E.2d 690 (1970).

And Will Only Be Allowed When Demurrer Would Have Been Sustained. — The motion to dismiss will only be allowed when, under the former practice, a demurrer would have been sustained because the complaint affirmatively disclosed that the plaintiff had no cause of action against the defendant. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970); Forrester v. Garrett, 280 N.C. 117, 184 S.E.2d 858 (1971); Mazzucco v. North Carolina Bd. of Medical Exmrs., 31 N.C. App. 47, 228 S.E.2d 529, appeal dismissed, 291 N.C. 323, 230 S.E.2d 676 (1976).

Treatment of Demurrer as Motion Under Subsection (b)(6). — The trial court did not err in considering demurrers filed prior to the effective date of the Rules of Civil Procedure as motions under subsection (b)(6) of this rule where plaintiff was not taken by surprise because the grounds stated in the demurrers were grounds covered by the rule. Hodges v. Wellons, 9 N.C. App. 152, 175 S.E.2d 690 (1970). See also, Green v. Best, 9 N.C. App. 599, 176 S.E.2d 853 (1970).

Function of a motion to dismiss is to test the law of a claim, not the facts which support it. White v. White, 296 N.C. 661, 252 S.E.2d 698 (1979); Pierce v. Piver, 45 N.C. App. 111, 262 S.E.2d 320 (1980); Snyder v. Freeman, 300 N.C. 204, 266 S.E.2d 593 (1980); State ex rel. Gilchrist v. Hurley, 48 N.C. App. 433, 269 S.E.2d 646 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 720, 274 S.E.2d 233 (1981); Laumann v. Plakakis, 84 N.C. App. 131, 351 S.E.2d 765 (1987).

The test on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is whether the pleading is legally sufficient. State ex rel. Tenn. Dep't of Health & Env't v. Environmental Mgt. Comm'n, 78 N.C. App. 763, 338 S.E.2d 781 (1986).

A ruling on the merits cannot be made on a motion to dismiss. Wilkes v. North Carolina State Bd. of Alcoholic Control, 44 N.C. App. 495, 261 S.E.2d 205 (1980), but see, Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988), annotated below.

Subsection (b)(6) as Adjudication on the Merits. — Section 1A-1, Rule 41(b) provides the basis for concluding that dismissal under subsection (b)(6) of this rule is an adjudication on the merits; therefore, a dismissal under subsection (b)(6) bars subsequent relitigation of the same claim. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

Allegations Treated as True. — For the purpose of a motion to dismiss, the allegations of the complaint are treated as true. Smith v. Ford Motor Co., 289 N.C. 71, 221 S.E.2d 282 (1976); Mazzucco v. North Carolina Bd. of Medical Exmrs., 31 N.C. App. 47, 228 S.E.2d 529, appeal dismissed, 291 N.C. 323, 230 S.E.2d 676 (1976); Presnell v. Pell, 39 N.C. App. 538, 251 S.E.2d 692, aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 298 N.C. 715, 260 S.E.2d 611 (1979); Fowler v. Williamson, 39 N.C. App. 715, 251 S.E.2d 889 (1979); Kinlaw v. Long Mfg. N.C., Inc., 40 N.C. App. 641, 253 S.E.2d 629, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 494, 259 S.E.2d 552 (1979); Shoffner Indus., Inc. v. W.B. Lloyd Constr. Co., 42 N.C. App. 259, 257 S.E.2d 50, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 296, 259 S.E.2d 301 (1979); State ex rel. Gilchrist v. Hurley, 48 N.C. App. 433, 269 S.E.2d 646 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 720, 274 S.E.2d 233 (1981); Stanley v. Stanley, 51 N.C. App. 172, 275 S.E.2d 546, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 182, 280 S.E.2d 454, appeal dismissed, 454 U.S. 959, 102 S. Ct. 496, 70 L. Ed. 2d 374 (1981); Noell v. Winston, 51 N.C. App. 455, 276 S.E.2d 766, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 315, 281 S.E.2d 652 (1981); Brewer v. Hatcher, 52 N.C. App. 601, 279 S.E.2d 69 (1981); Mebane v. Board of Medical Exmrs., 55 N.C. App. 455, 286 S.E.2d 112, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 305 N.C. 586, 292 S.E.2d 6 (1982); Ladd v. Estate of Kellenberger, 314 N.C. 477, 334 S.E.2d 751 (1985); Sorrell v. Sorrell's Farms & Ranches, Inc., 78 N.C. App. 415, 337 S.E.2d 595 (1985); Hawkins v. Webster, 78 N.C. App. 589, 337 S.E.2d 682 (1985); Fox v. Wilson, 85 N.C. App. 292, 354 S.E.2d 737 (1987); Peele v. Provident Mut. Life Ins. Co., 90 N.C. App. 447, 368 S.E.2d 892 (1988), appeal dismissed, 323 N.C. 366, 373 S.E.2d 547 (1988).

In ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the allegations of the complaint must be viewed as admitted. Rawls v. Lampert, 58 N.C. App. 399, 293 S.E.2d 620 (1982).

In ruling on the motion the allegations of the complaint must be viewed as admitted, and on that basis the court must determine as a matter of law whether the allegations state a claim for which relief may be granted. Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979); Rawls v. Lampert, 58 N.C. App. 399, 293 S.E.2d 620 (1982); Andresen v. Eastern Realty Co., 60

N.C. App. 418, 298 S.E.2d 764 (1983); Ruffin v. Contractors & Materials, Inc., 69 N.C. App. 174, 316 S.E.2d 353 (1984); State ex rel. Tenn. Dep't of Health & Env't v. Environmental Mgt. Comm'n, 78 N.C. App. 763, 338 S.E.2d 781 (1986); Warren v. Halifax County, 90 N.C. App. 271, 368 S.E.2d 47 (1988).

When a motion for judgment on the pleadings is made, all well-pleaded factual allegations in the nonmoving party's pleadings must be taken as true. Burton v. Kenyon, 46 N.C. App. 309, 264 S.E.2d 808 (1980); Rose v. Guilford County, 60 N.C. App. 170, 298 S.E.2d 200 (1982).

For purposes of ruling on a motion to dismiss, the well-pleaded material allegations of the complaint are taken as admitted. Snug Harbor Property Owners Ass'n v. Curran, 55 N.C. App. 199, 284 S.E.2d 752 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 302, 291 S.E.2d 151 (1982).

In an appellate review of a dismissal of a counterclaim under subdivision (b)(6) of this rule, the material allegations of fact alleged in the counterclaim were taken as admitted. Barnaby v. Boardman, 313 N.C. 565, 330 S.E.2d 600 (1985).

Where case was dismissed prior to trial pursuant to subdivision (b)(6), it is clear under North Carolina law that the court must treat the allegations of the complaint as true. Hickman ex rel. Womble v. McKoin, 337 N.C. 460, 446 S.E.2d 80 (1994).

But Not Conclusions or Unwarranted Deductions. — For the purpose of the motion to dismiss, the well-pleaded material allegations of the complaint are taken as admitted; but conclusions of law or unwarranted deductions of fact are not admitted. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970); Lloyd v. Babb, 296 N.C. 416, 251 S.E.2d 843 (1979); Hoover v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 84 N.C. App. 549, 353 S.E.2d 248 (1987); Hill v. Perkins, 84 N.C. App. 644, 353 S.E.2d 686 (1987).

In ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, the allegations of the complaint must be viewed as admitted, and the motion should not be allowed unless the complaint affirmatively shows that plaintiff has no cause of action. Gatlin v. Bray, 81 N.C. App. 639, 344 S.E.2d 814 (1986).

On a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, all allegations of fact are taken as true but conclusions of law are not. Jackson v. Bumgardner, 318 N.C. 172, 347 S.E.2d 743 (1986).

Concept of "Defective Statement of a Good Cause of Action" Abolished. — When § 1A-1, Rule 7(c) abolished demurrers and decreed that pleas for insufficiency should not be used, it also abolished the concept of a defective statement of a good cause of action. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970); Cassels v. Ford Motor Co., 10 N.C. App. 51, 178 S.E.2d 12 (1970); Forrester v. Garrett, 280 N.C. 117, 184 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

Motion to Dismiss May Be Interposed to Defective Claim. — Generally speaking, the motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6) of this rule may be successfully interposed to a complaint which states a defective claim or cause of action. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970); Cassels v. Ford Motor Co., 10 N.C. App. 51, 178 S.E.2d 12 (1970); Forrester v. Garrett, 280 N.C. 117, 184 S.E.2d 858 (1971); Brown v. Brown, 21 N.C. App. 435, 204 S.E.2d 534 (1974).

Subsection (b)(6) of this rule permits a motion to dismiss upon the ground that the complaint states a defective claim or cause of action. Dale v. Lattimore, 12 N.C. App. 348, 183 S.E.2d 417, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

But Not to Defective Statement of Good Claim. — The motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6) of this rule may not be successfully interposed to a complaint which was formerly labeled a "defective statement of a good cause of action." For such complaint, other provisions of this rule, the rules governing discovery, and the motion for summary judgment provide procedures adequate to supply information not furnished by the complaint. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970); Cassels v. Ford Motor Co., 10 N.C. App. 51, 178 S.E.2d 12 (1970); Forrester v. Garrett, 280 N.C. 117, 184 S.E.2d 858 (1971); Brown v. Brown, 21 N.C. App. 435, 204 S.E.2d 534 (1974); Deitz v. Jackson, 57 N.C. App. 275, 291 S.E.2d 282 (1982); Anderson v. Texas Gulf, Inc., 83 N.C. App. 634, 351 S.E.2d 109 (1986).

Subsection (b)(6) of this rule does not permit a motion to dismiss upon the ground that the complaint contains a defective statement of a good cause of action, relief for that defect being available under other sections of this rule. Dale v. Lattimore, 12 N.C. App. 348, 183 S.E.2d 417, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

If a complaint amounts to what was formerly called a "defective statement" of a good cause of action, a motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6) of this rule should not be allowed. Other provisions of this rule, the rules governing discovery and the motion for summary judgment provide adequate procedure to obtain details not set out in a complaint. Lupo v. Powell, 44 N.C. App. 35, 259 S.E.2d 777 (1979).

Under the notice theory of pleading of the Rules of Civil Procedure a complaint should not be dismissed merely because it amounts to a defective statement of a good cause of action. Jenkins v. Wheeler, 69 N.C. App. 140, 316 S.E.2d 354, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 758, 321 S.E.2d 136 (1984).

Where a petition requested relief not authorized by statute, the petition stated a defective claim, in that it requested relief the court was powerless to grant, regardless of what facts could be proved; and thus a motion to dismiss was properly granted. Forrester v. Garrett, 280 N.C. 117, 184 S.E.2d 858 (1971).

Mere vagueness or lack of detail is not ground for a motion to dismiss. Such a deficiency should be attacked by a motion for a more definite statement. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971); Brown v. Brown, 21 N.C. App. 435, 204 S.E.2d 534 (1974); Benton v. W.H. Weaver Constr. Co., 28 N.C. App. 91, 220 S.E.2d 417 (1975); North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. McCarley & Co., 34 N.C. App. 689, 239 S.E.2d 583 (1977).

While mere vagueness is not enough to dismiss the complaint, the complaint must state enough to satisfy the requirements of the substantive law giving rise to the claim; merely asserting a grievance is not enough. Braun v. Glade Valley Sch., Inc., 77 N.C. App. 83, 334 S.E.2d 404 (1985).

But Complaint Must State Substantive Elements of Some Recognized Claim. — Despite the liberal nature of the concept of notice pleading, a complaint must nonetheless state enough to give the substantive elements of at least some legally recognized claim or it is subject to dismissal under subsection (b)(6) of this rule. Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979).

A complaint may be dismissed pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule if there is an absence of law to support a claim of the sort made. Snyder v. Freeman, 40 N.C. App. 348, 253 S.E.2d 10 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 300 N.C. 204, 266 S.E.2d 593 (1980); Noell v. Winston, 51 N.C. App. 455, 276 S.E.2d 766, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 315, 281 S.E.2d 652 (1981).

A claim for relief must still satisfy the requirements of the substantive laws which gave rise to the pleadings, and no amount of liberalization should seduce the pleader into failing to state enough to give the substantive elements of his claim. While an incorrect choice of theory should not result in dismissal of the claim, the allegations must suffice to state a claim under some legal theory. Morrow v. Kings Dep't Stores, Inc., 57 N.C. App. 13, 290 S.E.2d 732, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 385, 294 S.E.2d 210 (1982).

In order to withstand a motion to dismiss pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule, the complaint must provide sufficient notice of the events and circumstances from which the claim arises, and must make allegations sufficient to satisfy the substantive elements of at least some recognized claim. Harris v. Duke Power Co., 83 N.C. App. 195, 349 S.E.2d 394 (1986), aff'd, 319 N.C. 627, 356 S.E.2d 357 (1987); Fox v. Wilson, 85 N.C. App. 292, 354 S.E.2d 737 (1987); Harris v. NCNB Nat'l Bank, 85 N.C. App. 669, 355 S.E.2d 838 (1987).

With the adoption of "notice pleading," mere vagueness or lack of detail is no longer ground for allowing a motion to dismiss. Gatlin v. Bray, 81 N.C. App. 639, 344 S.E.2d 814 (1986).

In order to survive a motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6) of this rule, a plaintiff must only state enough to give the substantive elements of a legally recognized claim. Booher v. Frue, 86 N.C. App. 390, 358 S.E.2d 127 (1987), aff'd, 321 N.C. 590, 364 S.E.2d 141 (1988).

Complaint Sufficient to Withstand Motion to Dismiss. — Where complaint alleged the existence of an employment contract containing a specific duration of employment, as it is well established that this type of employment contract is not terminable at will, and plaintiff was not permitted to complete the contract's stated duration of employment, the breach of contract claim as alleged in the complaint was sufficient to withstand defendant's subdivision (b)(6) motion to dismiss. Brandis v. Lightmotive Fatman, Inc., 115 N.C. App. 59, 443 S.E.2d 887 (1994).

Plaintiff alleged sufficient facts in his complaint to state a claim for wrongful termination under the public policy exception to the employment at-will doctrine. Vereen v. Holden, 121 N.C. App. 779, 468 S.E.2d 471 (1996), cert. granted, appeal dismissed, 345 N.C. 646, 483 S.E.2d 719 (1997).

Where plaintiffs alleged facts sufficient to establish a prima facie case of negligence against town as well as sufficient to place plaintiffs' case within the "special duty" exception to the public duty doctrine and to withstand the town's defenses, the trial court erred by granting the town's motion to dismiss; complaint's factual allegations [e.g., that .4 mile from plaintiffs' burning house, fire chief decided to abandon plaintiffs' emergency call and instead ordered his crew to return to the fire station] were adequate to support a conclusion that fire chief's behavior was "malicious," "willful and wanton," or "outside of and beyond the scope of" his official duties as fire chief. Davis v. Messer, 119 N.C. App. 44, 457 S.E.2d 902 (1995).

Plaintiff, insurer of automobile which was pulling trailer, stated a claim for contribution against defendant, insurer of trailer involved in accident, where plaintiff acted in good faith in notifying defendant of claim and defendant was not prejudiced by delay in notice, and plaintiff acted to protect its own interest as insurer of automobile and was not a mere volunteer. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 122 N.C. App. 449, 470 S.E.2d 556 (1996).

Upon Which Relief Can Be Granted Under Some Theory. — With regard to its sufficiency, the question is whether the complaint, when liberally construed, states a claim upon which relief can be granted on any theory. Brewer v. Hatcher, 52 N.C. App. 601, 279 S.E.2d 69 (1981); Hawkins v. Webster, 78 N.C. App. 589, 337 S.E.2d 682 (1985).

In order to survive a motion to dismiss, the allegations of a mislabeled claim must reveal that plaintiff has properly stated a claim under a different legal theory. Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979).

For purposes of a motion to dismiss, the allegations in the complaint must be treated as true, and the complaint is sufficient if it supports relief on any theory. Jenkins v. Wheeler, 69 N.C. App. 140, 316 S.E.2d 354, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 758, 321 S.E.2d 136 (1984).

A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted is addressed to whether the facts alleged in the complaint, when viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs, give rise to a claim for relief on any theory. Ford v. Peaches Entertainment Corp., 83 N.C. App. 155, 349 S.E.2d 82 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 694, 351 S.E.2d 746 (1987).

Dismissal Not Necessitated by Incorrect Choice of Legal Theory. — In testing the sufficiency of a claim, the complaint must be liberally construed, and when the allegations give sufficient notice of the wrong of which plaintiff complains, incorrect choice of the legal theory upon which the claim is bottomed should not result in dismissal if the allegations are sufficient to state a claim under some legal theory. Jones v. City of Greensboro, 51 N.C. App. 571, 277 S.E.2d 562 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Fowler v. Valencourt, 334 N.C. 345, 432 S.E.2d 306 (1993).

The theory of a claim is to be determined from the evidence and not from the pleadings. The fact that plaintiff might have mislabeled his claim is of no significance in ruling on a motion to dismiss pursuant to this rule. Warren v. Halifax County, 90 N.C. App. 271, 368 S.E.2d 47 (1988).

The facts pleaded in the complaint are the determining factors in deciding whether the complaint states a claim upon which relief can be granted; the legal theory set forth in the complaint does not determine the validity of the claim. Braun v. Glade Valley Sch., Inc., 77 N.C. App. 83, 334 S.E.2d 404 (1985).

In order to survive a motion to dismiss pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule, a complaint for fraud must allege with particularity all material facts and circumstances constituting the fraud. But while the facts constituting fraud must be alleged with particularity, there is no requirement that any precise formula be followed or that any certain language be used. Carver v. Roberts, 78 N.C. App. 511, 337 S.E.2d 126 (1985).

Test for Sufficiency of Complaint. — A complaint is sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss where no insurmountable bar to recovery on the claim alleged appears on the face of the complaint and where allegations contained therein are sufficient to give a defendant sufficient notice of the nature and basis of plaintiff's claim to enable him to answer and prepare for trial. Cassels v. Ford Motor Co., 10 N.C. App. 51, 178 S.E.2d 12 (1970); Lewis v. Gastonia Air Serv., Inc., 16 N.C. App. 317, 192 S.E.2d 6 (1972); North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. McCarley & Co., 34 N.C. App. 689, 239 S.E.2d 583 (1977); Presnell v. Pell, 39 N.C. App. 538, 251 S.E.2d 692, aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 298 N.C. 715, 260 S.E.2d 611 (1979); Shoffner Indus., Inc. v. W.B. Lloyd Constr. Co., 42 N.C. App. 259, 257 S.E.2d 50, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 296, 259 S.E.2d 301 (1979); United Leasing Corp. v. Miller, 45 N.C. App. 400, 263 S.E.2d 313, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 374, 267 S.E.2d 685 (1980); Stanley v. Stanley, 51 N.C. App. 172, 275 S.E.2d 546, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 182, 280 S.E.2d 454, appeal dismissed, 454 U.S. 959, 102 S. Ct. 496, 70 L. Ed. 2d 374 (1981); Noell v. Winston, 51 N.C. App. 455, 276 S.E.2d 766, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 315, 281 S.E.2d 652 (1981); Brewer v. Hatcher, 52 N.C. App. 601, 279 S.E.2d 69 (1981); Deitz v. Jackson, 57 N.C. App. 275, 291 S.E.2d 282 (1982); Dixon v. Stuart, 85 N.C. App. 338, 354 S.E.2d 757 (1987); Leonard v. Pugh, 86 N.C. App. 207, 356 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

It is error to grant defendant's motion to dismiss plaintiff's claim where no insurmountable bar to recovery appears on the face of the complaint and the complaint contains a statement of the claim sufficiently particular to give the court and the parties notice of the transactions, occurrences, or series of transactions or occurrences, intended to be proved. Clouse v. Chairtown Motors, Inc., 14 N.C. App. 117, 187 S.E.2d 398 (1972).

A pleading is sufficient if it gives enough notice of the events or transactions that produced the claim to enable the adverse party to understand the nature and basis of the claim, to file a responsive pleading, and, by using the rules provided for discovery, to get additional information needed for trial. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Wallens, 31 N.C. App. 721, 230 S.E.2d 690 (1976); Orange County Sensible Hwys. & Protected Env'ts, Inc. v. North Carolina DOT, 46 N.C. App. 350, 265 S.E.2d 890, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 94, 273 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

Under the notice theory of pleading, a statement of claim is adequate if it gives sufficient notice of the claim asserted to enable the adverse party to answer and prepare for trial, to allow for the application of res judicata, and to show the type of case brought. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971); Brown v. Brown, 21 N.C. App. 435, 204 S.E.2d 534 (1974); Carolina Wire & Cable, Inc. v. Finnican, 46 N.C. App. 87, 264 S.E.2d 138 (1980).

Pleadings comply with the present concept of notice pleading if the allegations in the complaint give defendant sufficient notice of the nature and basis of plaintiffs' claim to file an answer, and the face of the complaint shows no insurmountable bar to recovery. Rose v. Guilford County, 60 N.C. App. 170, 298 S.E.2d 200 (1982); Gatlin v. Bray, 81 N.C. App. 639, 344 S.E.2d 814 (1986).

The complaint is adequate if it gives the defendant sufficient notice of the nature and basis of plaintiff's claim to enable him to answer and to prepare for trial, and to show the type of case brought. State ex rel. Gilchrist v. Hurley, 48 N.C. App. 433, 269 S.E.2d 646 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 720, 274 S.E.2d 233 (1981).

The sufficiency of a claim to withstand a motion to dismiss is tested by its success or failure in setting out a state of facts which, when liberally considered, would entitle plaintiff to some relief. If it appears to a certainty that no state of facts could be proved in support of the claim so as to entitle plaintiff to some relief, the complaint should be dismissed. Carolina Bldrs. Corp. v. AAA Dry Wall, Inc., 43 N.C. App. 444, 259 S.E.2d 364 (1979); Yates v. City of Raleigh, 46 N.C. App. 221, 264 S.E.2d 798 (1980).

A motion under subsection (b)(6) of this rule operates to test the legal sufficiency of the complaint. In ruling on the motion the allegations of the complaint must be viewed as admitted, and on that basis the court must determine as a matter of law whether the allegations state a claim for which relief may be granted. However, if the complaint discloses an unconditional affirmative defense which defeats the asserted claim, the motion will be granted and the action dismissed. Skinner v. E.F. Hutton & Co., 70 N.C. App. 517, 320 S.E.2d 424 (1984), rev'd in part on other grounds, 314 N.C. 267, 333 S.E.2d 236 (1985).

Under the "notice theory of pleading," a statement of a claim can withstand a motion to dismiss if it gives the other party notice of the nature and basis of the claim sufficient to enable the party to answer and prepare for trial. Barnaby v. Boardman, 70 N.C. App. 299, 318 S.E.2d 907, rev'd on other grounds, 313 N.C. 565, 330 S.E.2d 600 (1985).

In order to withstand a motion to dismiss pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule, the complaint must provide sufficient notice of the events and circumstances from which the claim arises, and must make allegations sufficient to satisfy the substantive elements of at least some recognized claim. Stewart v. Allison, 86 N.C. App. 68, 356 S.E.2d 109 (1987).

To be legally sufficient, a claim must show on its face that there is no insurmountable bar to recovery and that the pleadings give the adverse party notice of the events giving rise to the claim so that the party understands the nature of the claim and is able to answer the allegations in the complaint and prepare for trial. Piedmont Ford Truck Sale, Inc. v. City of Greensboro, 90 N.C. App. 692, 370 S.E.2d 262, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 625, 374 S.E.2d 589 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 324 N.C. 499, 380 S.E.2d 107 (1989).

In a conversion action, owners of leased portable hangers stated claim based on city's taking control of hangers pursuant to a bankruptcy clause in the agreement, even though plaintiff owners ability to recover depended on whether the hangers were in fact "trade fixtures" and thus personalty or improvements affixed to the realty. Garvin v. City of Fayetteville, 102 N.C. App. 121, 401 S.E.2d 133 (1991).

Facts alleging unfair claim settlement practices were sufficient to state a claim for unfair trade practices under § 58-63-15 so as to withstand a challenge under subdivision (b)(6) of this rule. Miller v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 112 N.C. App. 295, 435 S.E.2d 537 (1993), cert. denied, 335 N.C. 770, 442 S.E.2d 519 (1994).

Allegations in amended complaint were sufficient to state a claim for relief based on a theory of negligence against an aircraft manufacturer in the preparation and publication of the information manual on mechanical functions. Driver v. Burlington Aviation, Inc., 110 N.C. App. 519, 430 S.E.2d 476 (1993).

Dismissal Is Precluded Absent Insurmountable Bar to Recovery. — A complaint should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief. This rule generally precludes dismissal except in those instances where the face of the complaint discloses some insurmountable bar to recovery. Brown v. Brown, 21 N.C. App. 435, 204 S.E.2d 534 (1974); Carolina Wire & Cable, Inc. v. Finnican, 46 N.C. App. 87, 264 S.E.2d 138 (1980); Forbis v. Honeycutt, 48 N.C. App. 145, 268 S.E.2d 247, aff'd, 301 N.C. 699, 273 S.E.2d 240 (1980); Snug Harbor Property Owners Ass'n v. Curran, 55 N.C. App. 199, 284 S.E.2d 752 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 302, 291 S.E.2d 151 (1982); Ladd v. Estate of Kellenberger, 314 N.C. 477, 334 S.E.2d 751 (1985).

If a complaint meets the basic requirements set forth in § 1A-1, Rule 8 and does not show upon its face that there is an insurmountable bar to recovery on the claim alleged, it is not subject to dismissal under subsection (b)(6) of this rule. Patterson v. Weatherspoon, 17 N.C.

App. 236, 193 S.E.2d 585 (1972).

A complaint is deemed sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss under this rule where no insurmountable bar to recovery appears on the face of the complaint and the complaint's allegations give adequate notice of the nature and extent of the claim. Renwick v. News & Observer Publishing Co., 63 N.C. App. 200, 304 S.E.2d 593 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 310 N.C. 312, 312 S.E.2d 405, cert. denied, 310 N.C. 749, 315 S.E.2d 704; 469 U.S. 858, 105 S. Ct. 187, 83 L. Ed. 2d 121 (1984).

A complaint will not be dismissed for failure to state a valid claim unless it appears to a certainty that plaintiff is entitled to no relief under any state of facts which could be proved in support of the claim. Unless the face of the complaint shows an insurmountable bar to recovery, plaintiff's action should not be dismissed on the pleading. Lyon v. Continental Trading Co., 76 N.C. App. 499, 333 S.E.2d 774 (1985).

Subsection (b)(6) of this rule generally precludes dismissal except in those instances in which the face of the complaint discloses some insurmountable bar to recovery. Hawkins v. Webster, 78 N.C. App. 589, 337 S.E.2d 682 (1985).

And a complaint should not be dismissed unless it appears that plaintiff is entitled to no relief under any state of facts which could be proved in support of the claim. Clouse v. Chairtown Motors, Inc., 14 N.C. App. 117, 187 S.E.2d 398 (1972); Newton v. Standard Fire Ins. Co., 291 N.C. 105, 229 S.E.2d 297 (1976); Mazzucco v. North Carolina Bd. of Medical Exmrs., 31 N.C. App. 447, 368 S.E.2d 892, appeal dismissed, 323 N.C. 366, 373 S.E.2d 547 (1988).

A complaint should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. FDIC v. Loft Apts., Ltd. Partnership, 39 N.C. App. 473, 250 S.E.2d 693, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 176, 254 S.E.2d 39 (1979); O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979); Pedwell v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 51 N.C. App. 236, 275 S.E.2d 565 (1981); Renwick v. News & Observer Publishing Co., 63 N.C. Ed. 2d 121 (1984); Brown v. Miller, 63 N.C. App. 694, 306 S.E.2d 502 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 476, 312 S.E.2d 882 (1984); Hull v. Floyd S. Pike Elec. Contractor, 64 N.C. App. 379, 307 S.E.2d 404 (1983); Azzolino v. Dingfelder, 71 N.C. App. 289, 322 S.E.2d 567 (1984); Briggs v. Rosenthal, 73 N.C. App. 672, 327 S.E.2d 308, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 114, 332 S.E.2d 479 (1985); Leonard v. Pugh, 86 N.C. App. 207, 356 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

A claim should be dismissed under subsection (b)(6) of this rule where it appears that plaintiff is entitled to no relief under any statement of facts which could be proven; this will occur when there is a want of law to support a claim of the sort made, an absence of facts sufficient to make a good claim, or the disclosure of some fact which will necessarily defeat the claim. Orange County Sensible Hwys. &

Protected Env'ts, Inc. v. North Carolina DOT, 46 N.C. App. 350, 265 S.E.2d 890, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 94, 273 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

A claim for relief should not suffer dismissal unless it affirmatively appears that plaintiff is entitled to no relief under any state of facts which could be presented in support of the claim. Andresen v. Eastern Realty Co., 60 N.C. App. 418, 298 S.E.2d 764 (1983); Ladd v. Estate of Kellenberger, 314 N.C. 477, 334 S.E.2d 751 (1985); Fox v. Wilson, 85 N.C. App. 292, 354 S.E.2d 737 (1987); Dixon v. Stuart, 85 N.C. App. 338, 354 S.E.2d 757 (1987); Harris v. NCNB Nat'l Bank, 85 N.C. App. 669, 355 S.E.2d 838 (1987).

A claim for relief should not be dismissed unless it appears beyond doubt that the party is entitled to no relief under any state of facts which could be presented in support of the claim. Barnaby v. Boardman, 70 N.C. App. 299, 318 S.E.2d 907 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 313 N.C. 565, 330 S.E.2d 600 (1985).

An order granting a motion to dismiss is erroneous if the complaint, liberally construed, shows no insurmountable bar to recovery, as dismissal is generally precluded unless plaintiff can prove no set of facts to support the claim for relief. Jenkins v. Wheeler, 69 N.C. App. 140, 316 S.E.2d 354, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 758, 321 S.E.2d 136 (1984).

A motion to dismiss pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule is properly granted when the complaint affirmatively discloses to a certainty that even if the facts alleged therein were true, the plaintiff would be entitled to no relief. Plemmons v. City of Gastonia, 62 N.C. App. 470, 302 S.E.2d 905, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 322, 307 S.E.2d 165, 307 S.E.2d 166 (1983).

Dismissal of a complaint is proper under the provisions of subsection (b)(6) of this rule when one or more of the following three conditions is satisfied: (1) When the complaint on its face reveals that no law supports plaintiff's claim; (2) when the complaint reveals on its face the absence of fact sufficient to make a good claim; (3) when some fact disclosed in the complaint necessarily defeats the plaintiff's claim. Oates v. Jag, Inc., 314 N.C. 276, 333 S.E.2d 222 (1985).

A complaint should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears to a certainty that plaintiff is legally entitled to no relief under any construction of the facts asserted. Powell v. Wold, 88 N.C. App. 61, 362 S.E.2d 796 (1987).

A claim should be dismissed under this rule where it appears that the plaintiff is entitled to no relief under any statement of facts which could be proven. Peoples Sec. Life Ins. Co. v. Hooks, 322 N.C. 216, 367 S.E.2d 647 (1988).

In reviewing the grant of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the question for the appellate court is whether, as a matter of law, the allegations of the complaint, treated as true, are sufficient to state a claim upon which relief can be granted under some legal theory, whether properly labeled or not. Replacements, Ltd. v. Midwesterling, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 46 (1999).

Complaint Without Merit May Be Dismissed. — A complaint may be dismissed on motion filed under subsection (b)(6) of this rule if it is clearly without merit; this want of merit may consist in an absence of law to support a claim of the sort made, or absence of facts sufficient to make a good claim, or in the disclosure of some fact which will necessarily defeat the claim. Hodges v. Wellons, 9 N.C. App. 152, 175 S.E.2d 690 (1970); North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. McCarley & Co., 34 N.C. App. 689, 239 S.E.2d 583 (1977); Kinlaw v. Long Mfg. N.C., Inc., 298 N.C. 494, 259 S.E.2d 552 (1979); FDIC v. Loft Apts., Ltd. Partnership, 39 N.C. App. 473, 250 S.E.2d 693, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 176, 254 S.E.2d 39 (1979); Kinlaw v. Long Mfg. N.C., Inc., 40 N.C. App. 641, 253 S.E.2d 629, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 494, 259 S.E.2d 552 (1979); GASP v. Mecklenburg County, 42 N.C. App. 225, 256 S.E.2d 477 (1979); Shoffner Indus., Inc. v. W.B. Lloyd Constr. Co., 42 N.C. App. 259, 257 S.E.2d 50, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 296, 259 S.E.2d 301 (1979); Snyder v. Freeman, 300 N.C. 204, 266 S.E.2d 593 (1980); Stanford v. Owens, 46 N.C. App. 388, 265 S.E.2d 617, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 95, 273 S.E.2d 300 (1980); Morrow v. Kings Dep't Stores, Inc., 57 N.C. App. 13, 290 S.E.2d 732, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 385, 294 S.E.2d 210 (1982); Lee v. Paragon Group Contractors, 78 N.C. App. 334, 337 S.E.2d 132 (1985).

A complaint may be dismissed on motion if clearly without any merit; and this want of merit may consist in an absence of law to support the claim, or in the disclosure of some fact that will necessarily defeat the claim. O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979); Winborne v. Winborne, 41 N.C. App. 756, 255 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 305, 259 S.E.2d 918 (1979); Pierce v. Piver, 45 N.C. App. 111, 262 S.E.2d 320 (1980); Rawls v. Lampert, 58 N.C. App. 399, 293 S.E.2d 620 (1982).

A motion to dismiss will be allowed if a complaint is clearly without merit; this lack of merit may consist in an absence of law to support the claim, or in the disclosure of some fact that will necessarily defeat the claim, or when the complaint shows on its face that there is an insurmountable bar. Collins v. Edwards, 54 N.C. App. 180, 282 S.E.2d 559 (1981).

Where plaintiffs' nuisance complaint made no allegations of defendant's intentional conduct but was merely a broad assertion to the effect that the location and operation of defendant's business was a nuisance to them and that the court should, therefore, grant plaintiffs' injunctive relief and damages, and where plaintiffs' complaint did not even assert that their remedy at law was inadequate so that they would be entitled to the equitable remedy of a permanent injunction, plaintiffs' complaint failed to state a complaint upon which relief could be granted. State v. Mercer, 84 N.C. App. 623, 353 S.E.2d 682 (1987).

A complaint must be dismissed under subsection (b)(6) of this rule when it is clear from the face of the complaint that plaintiffs cannot recover as a matter of law, where some fact essential to plaintiffs' case is missing, or where a fact is revealed in plaintiffs' complaint which defeats the action. Piedmont Ford Truck Sale, Inc. v. City of Greensboro, 90 N.C. App. 692, 370 S.E.2d 262, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 625, 374 S.E.2d 589 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 324 N.C. 499, 380 S.E.2d 107 (1989).

As Where Pleaded Facts Defeat the Claim. — A complaint may be dismissed on motion filed under subsection (b)(6) of this rule where it pleads facts which will necessarily defeat the claim. Powell v. County of Haywood, 15 N.C. App. 109, 189 S.E.2d 785 (1972); Sunbow Indus., Inc. v. London, 58 N.C. App. 751, 294 S.E.2d 409, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 272, 299 S.E.2d 219 (1982).

Or Where Complaint Discloses Unconditional Affirmative Defense. — If the complaint discloses an unconditional affirmative defense which defeats the claim asserted or pleads facts which deny the right to any relief on the alleged claim it will be dismissed. Brown v. Brown, 21 N.C. App. 435, 204 S.E.2d 534 (1974); Brown v. Miller, 63 N.C. App. 694, 306 S.E.2d 502 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 476, 312 S.E.2d 882 (1984).

When a complaint states a valid claim but also discloses an unconditional affirmative defense which defeats the asserted claim, the motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted will be granted and the action dismissed. Skinner v. E.F. Hutton & Co., 314 N.C. 267, 333 S.E.2d 236 (1985).

Once it is determined that the affirmative defense is properly before the trial court, dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) on the grounds of the affirmative defense is proper if the complaint on its face reveals an insurmountable bar to recovery. Johnson v. North Carolina DOT, 107 N.C. App. 63, 418 S.E.2d 700 (1992).

If Face of Complaint Discloses That Claim Is Barred. — A statute of limitations can be the basis for dismissal on a subdivision (b)(6) motion if the face of the complaint discloses that the plaintiff's claim is so barred. Reunion Land Co. v. Village of Marvin, 129 N.C. App. 249, 497 S.E.2d 446 (1998).

Where an affirmative defense is raised for the first time in a motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6) of this rule, the motion must ordinarily refer expressly to the affirmative defense relied upon. Johnson v. North Carolina DOT, 107 N.C. App. 63, 418 S.E.2d 700 (1992).

Absent a showing of prejudice, an affirmative defense may be raised by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss. Johnson v. North Carolina DOT, 107 N.C. App. 63, 418 S.E.2d 700 (1992).

Where the nonmovant has not been surprised and has full opportunity to argue and present evidence on the affirmative defense, the failure of the motion filed under subsection (b)(6) of this rule to expressly refer to the affirmative defense will not bar consideration of the defense by the trial court. Johnson v. North Carolina DOT, 107 N.C. App. 63, 418 S.E.2d 700 (1992).

A complaint is without merit if (1) there is an absence of law to support a claim of the sort made; (2) there is an absence of fact sufficient to make a good claim; or (3) there is the disclosure of some fact which will defeat a claim. Home Elec. Co. v. Hall & Underdown Heating & Air Conditioning Co., 86 N.C. App. 540, 358 S.E.2d 539 (1987), aff'd, 322 N.C. 107, 366 S.E.2d 441 (1988).

The only times when dismissal is proper under subsection (b)(6) of this rule are: (1) when the complaint on its face reveals that no law supports plaintiff's claim; (2) when the complaint reveals on its face that some fact essential to plaintiff's claim is missing; and (3) when some fact disclosed in the complaint defeats the plaintiff's claim. Schloss Outdoor Adv. Co. v. City of Charlotte, 50 N.C. App. 150, 272 S.E.2d 920 (1980); Hull v. Floyd S. Pike Elec. Contractor, 64 N.C. App. 379, 307 S.E.2d 404 (1983); Jackson v. Bumgardner, 318 N.C. 172, 347 S.E.2d 743 (1986); Hooper v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 84 N.C. App. 549, 353 S.E.2d 248 (1987).

This rule provides that a complaint must be dismissed when on its face it appears that no law supports it, that some fact essential to it is missing or that some disclosed fact necessarily defeats it. Mozingo v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 31 N.C. App. 157, 229 S.E.2d 57 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 711, 232 S.E.2d 204 (1977); Mumford v. Hutton & Bourbonnais Co., 47 N.C. App. 440, 267 S.E.2d 511 (1980).

A complaint is dismissable for want of proof under subsection (b)(6) of this rule only when it appears that the proof needed is beyond the realm of possibility. Newton v. Whitaker, 83 N.C. App. 112, 349 S.E.2d 333, aff'd, 319 N.C. 455, 355 S.E.2d 138 (1986).

A complaint may be dismissed pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule if there is no law to support the claim made, if there is an absence of facts sufficient to make a good claim, or if there is a disclosure of facts which will necessarily defeat the claim. Robertson v. Boyd, 88

N.C. App. 437, 363 S.E.2d 672 (1988).

The fact that the full extent of plaintiff's damages may be a matter of some speculation is no basis for the trial court to deny plaintiff any relief by dismissing its complaint. Carolina Wire & Cable, Inc. v. Finnican, 46 N.C. App. 87, 264 S.E.2d 138 (1980).

Insufficient Allegation of Special Damage as Basis for Dismissal. — Where special damage is an integral part of the claim for relief, its insufficient allegation could provide the basis for dismissal under subsection (b)(6) of this rule. Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979).

A statute of limitations can be the basis for dismissal on a motion under subsection (b)(6) of this rule if the face of the complaint discloses that plaintiff's claim is so barred. Long v. Fink, 80 N.C. App. 482, 342 S.E.2d 557 (1986).

A statute of limitations defense is properly asserted in a motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6). Horton v. Carolina Medicorp, Inc., 119 N.C. App. 777, 460 S.E.2d 567 (1995), rev'd on other grounds, 344 N.C. 133, 472 S.E.2d 778 (1996).

When the complaint discloses on its face that plaintiff's claim is barred by the statute of limitations, such defect may be taken advantage of by a motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6) of this rule. FDIC v. Loft Apts., Ltd. Partnership, 39 N.C. App. 473, 250 S.E.2d 693, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 176, 254 S.E.2d 39 (1979); Fleet Real Estate Funding Corp. v. Blackwelder, 83 N.C. App. 27, 348 S.E.2d 611 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 104, 353 S.E.2d 109 (1987).

Failure of Plaintiff Without Standing to State Wrongful Death Claim. — Since a wrongful death action may be brought only by the executor, administrator or collector of the decedent, the plaintiff, who was the adopted daughter of the decedent, could not maintain the action in her own name; therefore she failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted, and the order dismissing her action under this rule was proper. Young v. Marshburn, 10 N.C. App. 729, 180 S.E.2d 43, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 703, 181 S.E.2d 603 (1971).

Mislabeled Motion to Dismiss. — Where defendants' motion was in fact a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted pursuant to this rule, and the effect of the trial court's judgment was to treat it as such, the label "judgment on the pleadings" which was inadvertently entered in the notice of hearing to plaintiff and the trial court's judgment could not have prejudiced plaintiff, the motion being properly treated according to its substance rather than its label. Harrell v. Whisenant, 53 N.C. App. 615, 281 S.E.2d 453 (1981), cert. denied, 304 N.C. 726, 288 S.E.2d 380 (1982).

As to application of § 1A-1, Rule 43(e) in ruling on motion to dismiss, see Hankins v. Somers, 39 N.C. App. 617, 251 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 300, 254 S.E.2d 920 (1979).

Findings and Conclusions Not Required on Denial of Motion to Dismiss. — A trial judge is not required to make findings and conclusions with respect to an interlocutory order that is not appealable, such as is the case with the denial of a motion to dismiss. O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

Unless Required by Statute or Requested by Party. — Trial court is required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law on a motion to dismiss only when required by statute or requested by a party. Sherwood v. Sherwood, 29 N.C. App. 112, 223 S.E.2d 509 (1976).

A trial court cannot make "findings of fact" conclusive on appeal on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under subsection (b)(6) of this rule. White v. White, 296 N.C. 661, 252 S.E.2d 698 (1979).

A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim in an action for declaratory judgment is seldom appropriate, and will not be allowed simply because the plaintiff may not be able to prevail. Such motion is allowed only when there is no basis for declaratory relief, as when the complaint does not allege an actual, genuine existing controversy. A claim for declaratory relief is sufficient if the complaint alleges the existence of a real controversy arising out of the parties' opposing contentions and respective legal rights under a deed, will, or contract in writing. Morris v. Plyler Paper Stock Co., 89 N.C. App. 555, 366 S.E.2d 556 (1988).

Grant of Motion After Previous Denial by Another Judge. — Superior court erred in granting a motion under subsection (b)(6) of this rule after moving party's previous motion under subsection (b)(6) had been denied by another superior court judge. Jenkins v. Wheeler, 81 N.C. App. 512, 344 S.E.2d 371 (1986).

Motion Under § 1A-1, Rule 60(b) Not Proper After Denial of Subsection (b)(6) Motion. — Since the denial of a motion to dismiss is not a final judgment or order, a motion for relief from such an order could not, as a matter of law, be proper under § 1A-1, Rule 60(b). O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

An order denying a motion under subsection (b)(6) of this rule is interlocutory and not appealable. O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

Ordinarily no appeal lies from denial of a motion to dismiss. Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 222 S.E.2d 412 (1976); Terry v. Terry, 46 N.C. App. 583, 265 S.E.2d 463 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 302 N.C. 77, 273 S.E.2d 674 (1981); Dworsky v. Travelers Ins. Co., 49 N.C. App. 446, 271 S.E.2d 522 (1980).

Ordinarily, there is no right of appeal from the refusal of a motion to dismiss, as refusal to dismiss generally will not seriously impair any right of defendant that cannot be corrected upon appeal from final judgment. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

Ordinarily, a denial of a motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6) of this rule merely serves to continue the action then pending. No final judgment is involved, and the disappointed movant is generally not deprived of any substantial right which cannot be protected by timely appeal from the trial court's ultimate disposition of the entire controversy on its merits. Thus, an adverse ruling on a motion under subsection (b)(6) is in most cases an interlocutory order from which no direct appeal may be taken. State, Child Day-Care Licensing Comm'n v. Fayetteville St. Christian School, 299 N.C. 351, 261 S.E.2d 908, aff'd on rehearing, 299 N.C. 731, 265 S.E.2d 387, appeal dismissed, 449 U.S. 807, 101 S. Ct. 55, 66 L. Ed. 2d 11 (1980).

Denial of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is not a final determination within the meaning of § 1-277(a), does not affect a substantial right, and is not appealable. Hankins v. Somers, 39 N.C. App. 617, 251 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 300, 254 S.E.2d 920 (1979).

Denial of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is an interlocutory order from which no immediate appeal may be taken. Teachy v. Coble Dairies, Inc., 306 N.C. 324, 293 S.E.2d 182 (1982).

No appeal lies as a matter of right from the denial of a subsection (b)(6) motion. Raines v. Thompson, 62 N.C. App. 752, 303 S.E.2d 413 (1983).

Appeal of Denial of Motion to Dismiss Heard. — Generally, the denial of a motion under subsection 12(b)(6) of this rule is interlocutory and not immediately appealable. However, where the court of appeals had proper jurisdiction over the other issues and because the parties desired an answer to a question which was fundamental in determining their rights, was also of public importance, and would aid State agencies in the performance of their duties, the court exercised its supervisory discretion to address on the merits the appeal. Faulkenbury v. Teachers' & State Employees' Retirement Sys., 108 N.C. App. 357, 424 S.E.2d 420, cert. denied, 334 N.C. 162, 432 S.E.2d 358, aff'd per curiam, 335 N.C. 158, 436 S.E.2d 821 (1993).

Summary Judgment Not Precluded by Earlier Denial of Motion Under Subsection (b)(6). — The denial of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, which merely challenges the sufficiency of the complaint, does not prevent the court's allowing a subsequent motion for summary judgment based on affidavits outside the complaint. Alltop v. J.C. Penney Co., 10 N.C. App. 692, 179 S.E.2d 885, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 348, 182 S.E.2d 580 (1971).

Denial of a motion to dismiss made under subsection (b)(6) of this rule does not prevent the court from thereafter allowing a subsequent motion for summary judgment made and supported as provided in § 1A-1, Rule 56. Barbour v. Little, 37 N.C. App. 686, 247 S.E.2d 252, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 733, 248 S.E.2d 862 (1978); Dull v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co., 85 N.C. App. 310, 354 S.E.2d 752 (1987); Burton v. NCNB Nat'l Bank, 85 N.C. App. 702, 355 S.E.2d 800 (1987).

Rules Applicable to Counterclaims. — The rules regarding the sufficiency of a complaint to withstand a motion to dismiss pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule, for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, are equally applicable to a claim for relief by a defendant in a counterclaim. Barnaby v. Boardman, 70 N.C. App. 299, 318 S.E.2d 907 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 313 N.C. 565, 330 S.E.2d 600 (1985).

Appellate Court's Prior Decision Not Binding. — The appellate court's prior decision, in which it "vacated" an order dismissing the plaintiff's complaint for failure to state a claim, was not binding on the court on a later appeal of a judgment notwithstanding the verdict. While the appellate court, in the first appeal, held that the complaint disclosed no insurmountable bar to recover under at least one of the claims for relief, its inquiry in the second appeal was a very different one: Was the evidence introduced at trial, viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, insufficient as a matter of law to support the jury's verdict? Pearce v. American Defender Life Ins. Co., 74 N.C. App. 620, 330 S.E.2d 9 (1985), rev'd in part on other grounds, 316 N.C. 461, 343 S.E.2d 174 (1986).

Motion to Dismiss for Abuse of Process. — Allegations in complaint that defendant filed liens "for the purpose of injuring and destroying the credit business of the plaintiffs and in general to oppress the plaintiffs" and that the defendant knew they were without legal basis stated an ulterior motive and a willful act not proper in the regular course of the earlier legal proceeding, and therefore, the defendant's motion to dismiss the action for abuse of process was properly denied. Hewes v. Wolfe, 74 N.C. App. 610, 330 S.E.2d 16 (1985).

Challenge to Congressional Redistrict- ing Plan. — Action brought by the Republican Party of North Carolina, thirty registered Republicans, nine registered Democrats, and three citizens not affiliated with either party to challenge the State's federal congressional redistricting plan was dismissed with prejudice under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim. Pope v. Blue, 809 F. Supp. 392 (W.D.N.C. 1992), aff'd, 506 U.S. 801, 113 S. Ct. 30, 121 L. Ed. 2d 3 (1992).

Crossclaim Against Commissioner of DMV Held Barred. — Where the court determined that defendant as Commissioner of the DMV was a public official and therefore immune from liability for mere negligence, a crossclaim which alleged nothing more than negligence failed to state a claim for which relief could be granted. Columbus County Auto Auction, Inc. v. Aycock Auction Co., 90 N.C. App. 439, 368 S.E.2d 888 (1988).

Complaint Concerning Loss of Bearer Bond Presented Basis for Declaratory Relief. — Plaintiff's complaint should not have been dismissed for failure to state a claim, since the court did not see an absence of law or fact to support plaintiff's claim or disclosure of a fact that necessarily defeated plaintiff's claim, and plaintiff's complaint concerning the loss of bearer bonds deposited with the Commissioner of Insurance presented a basis for declaratory relief. Selective Ins. Co. v. NCNB Nat'l Bank, 91 N.C. App. 597, 372 S.E.2d 876 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 324 N.C. 248, 377 S.E.2d 756 (1989), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 248, 380 S.E.2d 521 (1989).

Failure to Allege Elements of Fraud. — Where defendants alleged the elements of false representation and concealment of material fact in general terms, they pleaded no facts which, if true, would have constituted fraudulent concealment by plaintiff of the financial condition of corporation. Consequently, defendants' allegation about books and records did not satisfy the particularity requirement of § 1A-1, Rule 9(b), and dismissal of defendants' amended counterclaim under subsection (b)(6) of this rule was proper. Chesapeake Microfilm, Inc. v. Eastern Microfilm Sales & Serv., Inc., 91 N.C. App. 539, 372 S.E.2d 901 (1988).

Failure to Allege Waiver of Immunity. — Where plaintiffs failed to allege in their complaint that defendant school board waived its immunity by the procurement of liability insurance to cover alleged negligence or tort, plaintiffs' complaint failed to state a cause of action as to defendant school board. Gunter v. Anders, 114 N.C. App. 61, 441 S.E.2d 167, aff'd on rehearing, 115 N.C. App. 331, 444 S.E.2d 685 (1994), cert. denied, 339 N.C. 612, 454 S.E.2d 250, rehearing dismissed, 339 N.C. 738, 454 S.E.2d 651 (1995).

Improper to Consider Statute of Frauds. — It was inappropriate to consider, for purposes of a motion under subsection (b)(6) of this rule, whether a contract failed to comport with the statute of frauds, because the defense that the statute of frauds bars enforcement of a contract is an affirmative defense that can only be raised by answer or reply. Brooks Distrib. Co., Inc. v. Pugh, 324 N.C. 326, 378 S.E.2d 31 (1989).

A defendant may not take advantage of the provisions of the statute of frauds by a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted, which must be pleaded as an affirmative defense. Green v. Harbour, 113 N.C. App. 280, 437 S.E.2d 719 (1993).

Allegations of Plaintiff's Expenses Did Not State Claim. — Allegations made concerning the expenses the plaintiff incurred in presenting his claim and in preparing and pursuing his lawsuit did not state a claim that would support legal relief. Dailey v. Integon Gen. Ins. Corp., 75 N.C. App. 387, 331 S.E.2d 148 (1985), cert. denied, 314 N.C. 664, 336 S.E.2d 399 (1985).

Tort Action Brought by Improper Party. — Pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule, trial court properly dismissed action brought against tortfeasor by employer of injured child's father, which had provided medical benefits for child through a self-funded employee benefit program. Harris-Teeter Super Mkts., Inc. v. Watts, 97 N.C. App. 101, 387 S.E.2d 203 (1990).

Complaint for Insurance Benefits Alleging Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress. — Since a contract of insurance is a commercial transaction, absent allegations of specific facts which, if proved, would have demonstrated calculated intentional conduct causing emotional distress directed towards the claimant, a complaint for insurance benefits alleging intentional infliction of emotional distress did not withstand a motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6) of this rule. Beasley v. National Sav. Life Ins. Co., 75 N.C. App. 104, 330 S.E.2d 207 (1985), discretionary review improvidently granted, 316 N.C. 372, 341 S.E.2d 338 (1986).

There is a difference between sufficiently alleging a claim and sufficiently proving it. Although the plaintiff clearly alleged a claim for the intentional infliction of emotional distress, there was no testimony whatsoever to indicate that he suffered emotional distress. Such an injury cannot be assumed, but must be proved by evidence. Dailey v. Integon Gen. Ins. Corp., 75 N.C. App. 387, 331 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 664, 336 S.E.2d 399 (1985).

For claims based on third-party beneficiary contract doctrine to withstand a motion to dismiss, plaintiffs' allegations must show: (1) the existence of a contract between two other persons; (2) that the contract was valid and enforceable; and (3) that the contract was entered into for his direct, and not incidental, benefit. Raritan River Steel Co. v. Cherry, Bekaert & Holland, 79 N.C. App. 81, 339 S.E.2d 62, reversed on other grounds, 329 N.C. 607, 407 S.E.2d 183 (1991), modified on other grounds, Raritan River Steel Co. v. Cherry, Bekaert & Holland, 322 N.C. 200, 367 S.E.2d 609 (1988).

Plaintiffs' allegation of a very general taking by aircraft overflights "within the past two years" failed to allege with reasonable specificity when the alleged appropriation or taking occurred; however, rather than dismissing the complaint altogether, the court should have required plaintiffs to come forward in accordance with defendant's motion for a more definite statement and plead the facts they possessed, so that the court could then rule on their timeliness and sufficiency. Smith v. City of Charlotte, 79 N.C. App. 517, 339 S.E.2d 844 (1986).

A claim should be dismissed under this rule where it appears that plaintiff is entitled to no relief under any statement of facts which could be proven; this will occur when there is a want of law to support a claim of the sort made, an absence of facts sufficient to make a good claim, or the disclosure of some fact which will necessarily defeat the claim. Garvin v. City of Fayetteville, 102 N.C. App. 121, 401 S.E.2d 133 (1991).

Dismissal as Adjudication on Merits. — With certain exceptions, § 1A-1, Rule 41(b) provides that all dismissals, including those under subsection (b)(6) of this rule, operate as adjudications upon the merits unless the trial court specifies that the dismissal is without prejudice. Johnson v. Bollinger, 86 N.C. App. 1, 356 S.E.2d 378 (1987).

Evidence Outside the Pleadings Not to Be Considered. — Where the trial court considered evidence outside the pleadings, motion to dismiss was improperly granted. Jacobs v. Royal Ins. Co. of Am., 128 N.C. App. 528, 495 S.E.2d 185 (1998).

Amendment After Dismissal. — A motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6) of this rule is not a "responsive pleading" under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a) and so does not itself terminate plaintiff's unconditional right to amend a complaint under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a). However, once the trial court enters its dismissal under subsection (b)(6), plaintiff's right to amend under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a) is terminated. Under certain limited circumstances set forth in § 1A-1, Rules 59(e) and 60(b), a plaintiff may, however, seek to reopen the trial court's judgment and amend the complaint concurrently under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a). Johnson v. Bollinger, 86 N.C. App. 1, 356 S.E.2d 378 (1987).

Claim Based on Repealed Statute Held Not Subject to Dismissal. — Claim based on former § 168-6 held not subject to dismissal under subsection (b)(6) of this rule, notwithstanding the repeal of § 168-6, where the complaint was sufficient to put defendants on notice of the events or transactions which produced the claim, and even though the General Assembly did not include a saving clause in the repeal of § 168-6, the same remedy was immediately available to plaintiff for the same injury in the new act, without any intervening period in which plaintiff's claim was without legal redress. Buchanan v. Hunter Douglas, Inc., 87 N.C. App. 84, 359 S.E.2d 271, cert. denied, 321 N.C. 296, 362 S.E.2d 779 (1987).

Appeal of Dismissal. — When an action is dismissed with leave to amend, the proceeding is still pending and the plaintiff has no right to appeal such a dismissal interlocutory in nature. When the court allows amendment by the plaintiffs, relief in the trial court has not been entirely denied and appeal is premature. Day v. Coffey, 68 N.C. App. 509, 315 S.E.2d 96, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 82, 321 S.E.2d 894 (1984).

When Denial of Motion May Be Reviewed on Appeal. — Ordinarily, denial of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is an interlocutory order from which no immediate appeal may be taken. Nevertheless, where a decision of the principal question presented would expedite the administration of justice, or where the case involves a legal issue of public importance, appellate courts may exercise their discretion to determine such an appeal on its merits. Flaherty v. Hunt, 82 N.C. App. 112, 345 S.E.2d 426, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 505, 349 S.E.2d 859 (1986).

Review of Denial of Motion to Dismiss Not Available After Judgment on Merits. — Where an unsuccessful motion to dismiss is grounded on an alleged insufficiency of the facts to state a claim for relief, and the case thereupon proceeds to judgment on the merits, the unsuccessful movant may not on an appeal from the final judgment seek review of the denial of the motion to dismiss. Concrete Serv. Corp. v. Investors Group, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 678, 340 S.E.2d 755, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 333, 346 S.E.2d 137 (1986); Drain v. United Servs. Life Ins. Co., 85 N.C. App. 174, 354 S.E.2d 269, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 630, 360 S.E.2d 85 (1987).

An unsuccessful movant under subsection (b)(6) of this rule may not seek review of denial of such motion on appeal from judgment on the merits against him. Berrier v. Thrift, 107 N.C. App. 356, 420 S.E.2d 206 (1992), cert. denied, 333 N.C. 254, 424 S.E.2d 918 (1993).

Claim for Concurrent Negligence. — For case holding plaintiff successfully stated a cause of action for concurrent negligence based upon the negligent acts of multiple defendants even though plaintiff could not allege which defendant had committed the injurious act, see McMillan ex rel. McMillan v. Mahoney, 99 N.C. App. 448, 393 S.E.2d 298 (1990).

Claim Against Parents for Negligence in Giving Air Rifles to Children. — For case holding plaintiff successfully stated a claim for negligence against parents for giving air rifles to their minor children (where plaintiff's injury was sustained after being shot by one of the children), see McMillan ex rel. McMillan v. Mahoney, 99 N.C. App. 448, 393 S.E.2d 298 (1990).

Claim for Failure to Follow Safety Requirements. — Where plaintiff alleged defendant was aware that the required safe methods for cleaning highly elevated windows were not being practiced, the defendant's management accepted and encouraged this fact, that defendant knew of supervisor's past record of ignoring safety requirements, and defendant had previously allowed exact cleaning job to be performed in the same inherently dangerous manner by this supervisor, these allegations were sufficient to state a legally cognizable claim that defendant intentionally engaged in conduct that it knew was substantially certain to cause serious injury or death. Arroyo v. Scottie's Professional Window Cleaning, Inc., 120 N.C. App. 154, 461 S.E.2d 13 (1995), discretionary review improvidently allowed, 343 N.C. 118, 468 S.E.2d 58 (1996).

B. Conversion of Motion to Dismiss to Summary Judgment Motion.

When Motion to Dismiss Converted to Summary Judgment Motion. — A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is converted to a § 1A-1, Rule 56 motion for summary judgment when matters outside the pleadings are presented to and not excluded by the court. Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979); Smith v. Independent Life Ins. Co., 43 N.C. App. 269, 258 S.E.2d 864 (1979); Piedmont Consultants of Statesville, Inc. v. Baba, 48 N.C. App. 160, 268 S.E.2d 222 (1980); Baugh v. Woodard, 56 N.C. App. 180, 287 S.E.2d 412, cert. denied, 305 N.C. 759, 292 S.E.2d 574 (1982).

Where extraneous matter is received and considered on a motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6) of this rule, the motion should be treated as a motion for summary judgment and disposed of in the manner and on the conditions stated in § 1A-1, Rule 56. Fowler v. Williamson, 39 N.C. App. 715, 251 S.E.2d 889 (1979); Roach v. City of Lenoir, 44 N.C. App. 608, 261 S.E.2d 299 (1980); Oliver v. Roberts, 49 N.C. App. 311, 271 S.E.2d 399 (1980).

By the provisions of section (b) of this rule itself, matters outside the pleading may be presented to the court and considered by it on a motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6), in which case the motion will be treated as one for summary judgment under § 1A-1, Rule 56. Smith v. Smith, 17 N.C. App. 416, 194 S.E.2d 568 (1973).

Section (b) of this rule provides that on a motion under subsection (b)(6), if matters outside the pleadings are presented to and considered by the court, the motion will be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in § 1A-1, Rule 56. Parslow v. Parslow, 47 N.C. App. 84, 266 S.E.2d 746 (1980).

Where the record contains affidavits and indicates that the trial judge, in addition to considering the pleadings and attached exhibits, also heard counsel for both parties and considered briefs submitted by both parties, the motion for judgment on the pleadings under section (c) of this rule must be considered as though it was made under § 1A-1, Rule 56. Minor v. Minor, 70 N.C. App. 76, 318 S.E.2d 865, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 495, 322 S.E.2d 558 (1984).

Where matters outside the pleadings are presented to and not excluded by the court on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the motion shall be treated as one for summary judgment under § 1A-1, Rule 56. DeArmon v. B. Mears Corp., 312 N.C. 749, 325 S.E.2d 223 (1985); King v. Durham County Mental Health Developmental Disabilities & Substance Abuse Auth., 113 N.C. App. 341, 439 S.E.2d 771 (1994), cert. denied,.

Where matters outside the pleadings are before the court, a motion to dismiss may be treated as a motion for summary judgment. Deans v. Layton, 89 N.C. App. 358, 366 S.E.2d 560, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 834, 371 S.E.2d 276 (1988).

When a trial court considers matters outside the pleadings, a motion under this rule is automatically converted into a motion for summary judgment. North Carolina Steel, Inc. v. National Council on Comp. Ins., 123 N.C. App. 163, 472 S.E.2d 578 (1996), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 347 N.C. 627, 496 S.E.2d 369 (1998).

Motion Not Converted to Motion for Summary Judgment by Reference to Contract. — Defendant's motion to dismiss was not converted into one for summary judgment by the trial court's referring to the contract which was the subject of the action and was specifically referred to in the complaint. Coley v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 41 N.C. App. 121, 254 S.E.2d 217 (1979); Brooks Distrib. Co. v. Pugh, 91 N.C. App. 715, 373 S.E.2d 300 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 324 N.C. 326, 378 S.E.2d 31 (1989).

Summary judgment, like judgment on the pleadings, is appropriately granted only where no disputed issues of fact have been presented and the undisputed facts show that any party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Minor v. Minor, 70 N.C. App. 76,

318 S.E.2d 865, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 495, 322 S.E.2d 558 (1984).

The notice required in situations where a subsection (b)(6) motion is treated as a motion for summary judgment is procedural rather than constitutional. As such, the proper action for counsel to take is to request a continuance or additional time to produce evidence. Objections to timeliness are therefore not germane in such situations and the trial court has discretion, provided the opposing party has a "reasonable opportunity" to present pertinent material, to take and consider affidavits in support of a converted motion. By participating in the hearing and failing to request a continuance or additional time to produce evidence, a party waives his right to this procedural notice. Raintree Homeowners Ass'n v. Raintree Corp., 62 N.C. App. 668, 303 S.E.2d 579, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 462, 307 S.E.2d 366 (1983).

Complaint in Federal Court Incorporated by Reference Not Matter Outside Pleadings. — Where the plaintiff incorporated by reference in her complaint as an exhibit a complaint in a federal court action and a copy of it was attached, the complaint in the federal court action was not a matter outside the pleadings converting a motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6) of this rule into a motion for summary judgment under § 1A-1, Rule 56, since § 1A-1, Rule 10(c) provides that such an exhibit is a part of the pleading for all purposes. Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979).

Memoranda, Briefs and Oral Arguments Not Matters Outside the Pleading. — Memoranda of points and authorities as well as briefs and oral arguments are not considered matters outside the pleading for purposes converting a motion under this rule into a motion for summary judgment under § 1A-1, Rule 56. Privette v. University of N.C., 96 N.C. App. 124, 385 S.E.2d 185 (1989).

Illustrative Case. — Where plaintiff sought a personal judgment against owners based on its contract to drill a well and to have such personal judgment declared to be a specific lien on the property allegedly conveyed by owners to purchasers, but there was no allegation in the complaint that the purchasers were indebted to plaintiff in any amount, and subsequently plaintiff abandoned its claim for a personal judgment based on the contract to drill the well by taking a voluntary dismissal of its claim against owners, when the trial judge granted the purchasers motion to dismiss under subsection (b)(6) of this rule there was no debt or judgment to be secured by a lien on the property in question, and since the court necessarily considered matters outside the pleadings, i.e., the voluntary dismissal of plaintiff's claim for personal judgment against owners, order under subsection (b)(6) of this rule was converted to a summary judgment for the purchasers with respect to the dismissal of plaintiff's claim to have a lien imposed on the property. Johnson v. Builder's Transp., Inc., 79 N.C. App. 721, 340 S.E.2d 515 (1986).

Materials which constituted only requests, explanations, and arguments of counsel on both sides with respect to defendants' motions under subsection (b)(6) of this rule were matters outside the pleadings within the meaning of section (b) thereof. King v. Cape Fear Mem. Hosp., 96 N.C. App. 338, 385 S.E.2d 812 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 265, 389 S.E.2d 114 (1990).

X. FAILURE TO JOIN NECESSARY PARTY.

A defense of failure to join a necessary party must be raised in the trial court; it may not be asserted for the first time on appeal. Stancil v. Bruce Stancil Refrigeration, Inc., 81 N.C. App. 567, 344 S.E.2d 789, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 418, 349 S.E.2d 601 (1986), appeal dismissed, 94 N.C. App. 760, 381 S.E.2d 720 (1989).

Remedy for Failure to Join Necessary Party Is Motion to Dismiss. — Summary judgment is not a proper remedy for failure to join a necessary party. Rather, a motion to dismiss for failure to join a necessary party would be proper. Dildy v. Southeastern Fire Ins. Co., 13 N.C. App. 66, 185 S.E.2d 272 (1971).

Dismissal under subsection (b)(7) of this rule is proper only when the defect cannot be cured, and the court ordinarily should order a continuance for the absent party to be brought into the action and plead. Howell v. Fisher, 49 N.C. App. 488, 272 S.E.2d 19 (1980), cert. denied, 302 N.C. 218, 277 S.E.2d 69 (1981).

Court to Decide Whether Absent Party Should Be Joined. — When faced with a motion under subsection (b)(7) of this rule, the court will decide if the absent party should be joined as a party. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971); Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

If it decides in the affirmative, the court will order him brought into the action. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971); Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

Procedure Where Absentee Cannot Be Joined. — If the absentee cannot be joined, the court must then determine, by balancing the guiding factors set forth in § 1A-1, Rule 19(b), whether to proceed without him or to dismiss the action. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971).

Under subsection (b)(7), dismissal is appropriate where the party ordered joined is not subject to the court's jurisdiction. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971).

A dismissal under subsection (b)(7) is not considered to be on the merits and is without prejudice. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971).

XI. MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS.

Section (c) of this rule is identical to its federal counterpart. Ragsdale v. Kennedy, 286 N.C. 130, 209 S.E.2d 494 (1974).

Motions Under Subsection (b)(6) and Section (c) Distinguished. — Principal difference between a motion for judgment on the pleadings and a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is that a motion under section (c) of this rule is properly made after the pleadings are closed, while a motion under subsection (b)(6) of this rule must be made prior to or contemporaneously with the filing of the responsive pleading. Robertson v. Boyd, 88 N.C. App. 437, 363 S.E.2d 672 (1988).

Motion for judgment on the pleadings operates substantially the same as under the Code system before adoption of the new Rules of Civil Procedure. Ragsdale v. Kennedy, 286 N.C. 130, 209 S.E.2d 494 (1974).

Function of section (c) of this rule is to dispose of baseless claims or defenses when the formal pleadings reveal their lack of merit. Ragsdale v. Kennedy, 286 N.C. 130, 209 S.E.2d 494 (1974); High v. Parks, 42 N.C. App. 707, 257 S.E.2d 661, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 806, 262 S.E.2d 1 (1979).

Inapplicable to Post-Trial Motions. — Motions under section (c) of this rule are pretrial motions requiring a review of the pleadings; they cannot be employed to test the validity of post-trial motions. Scott v. Scott, 106 N.C. App. 379, 416 S.E.2d 583 (1992).

Judgment on the pleadings under section (c) is not favored by the law, and the nonmovant's pleadings will be liberally construed. Huss v. Huss, 31 N.C. App. 463, 230 S.E.2d 159 (1976).

A motion for judgment on the pleadings is not favored by the courts; pleadings alleged to state no cause of action or defense will be liberally construed in favor of the pleader. RGK, Inc. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 292 N.C. 668, 235 S.E.2d 234 (1977).

Judgment on the pleadings pursuant to section (c) of this rule is not favored by the law, and the pleadings must be liberally construed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving parties. Pipkin v. Lassiter, 37 N.C. App. 36, 245 S.E.2d 105 (1978); DeTorre v. Shell Oil Co., 84 N.C. App. 501, 353 S.E.2d 269 (1987).

Judgment on the pleadings is not appropriate merely because the claimant's case is weak and he is unlikely to prevail on the merits. Huss v. Huss, 31 N.C. App. 463, 230 S.E.2d 159 (1976); Pipkin v. Lassiter, 37 N.C. App. 36, 245 S.E.2d 105 (1978).

Judgment on the pleadings is proper only when the pleadings fail to present any issue of fact for the jury. Gammon v. Clark, 25 N.C. App. 670, 214 S.E.2d 250 (1975).

A judgment on the pleadings based upon a plea of the statute of limitations is proper only when the pleadings fail to present any issue of fact for determination by a jury. Flexolite Elec., Ltd. v. Gilliam, 55 N.C. App. 86, 284 S.E.2d 523 (1981).

A motion for judgment on the pleadings is proper procedure when all the material allegations of fact are admitted in the pleadings and only questions of law remain. Ragsdale v. Kennedy, 286 N.C. 130, 209 S.E.2d 494 (1974); Pipkin v. Lassiter, 37 N.C. App. 36, 245 S.E.2d 105 (1978); DeTorre v. Shell Oil Co., 84 N.C. App. 501, 353 S.E.2d 269 (1987).

When pleadings do not resolve all factual issues, judgment on pleadings is generally inappropriate. Ragsdale v. Kennedy, 286 N.C. 130, 209 S.E.2d 494 (1974).

The law does not authorize entry of a judgment on the pleadings in any case where the pleadings raise an issue of fact on any single material proposition. Cline v. Seagle, 27 N.C. App. 200, 218 S.E.2d 480 (1975).

Movant Must Prove Entitlement to Judgment as Matter of Law. — A motion for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to section (c) of this rule should not be granted unless the movant clearly establishes that no material issue of fact remains to be resolved and that he is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. American Bank & Trust Co. v. Elzey, 26 N.C. App. 29, 214 S.E.2d 800, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 252, 217 S.E.2d 662 (1975); J.F. Wilkerson Contracting Co. v. Rowland, 29 N.C. App. 722, 225 S.E.2d 840, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 660, 228 S.E.2d 452 (1976); Minor v. Minor, 70 N.C. App. 76, 318 S.E.2d 865, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 495, 322 S.E.2d 558 (1984).

Under section (c) of this rule, a party moving for judgment on the pleadings is held to a strict standard and must show that no material issue of facts exists and that he is clearly entitled to judgment. Ragsdale v. Kennedy, 286 N.C. 130, 209 S.E.2d 494 (1974); Shellhorn v. Brad Ragan, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 310, 248 S.E.2d 103, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 735, 249 S.E.2d 804 (1978); Newbold v. Globe Life Ins. Co., 50 N.C. App. 628, 274 S.E.2d 905 (1981).

The movant under section (c) of this rule must show, even when viewing the facts and permissible inferences in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, that he is clearly entitled to judgment as a matter of law. DeTorre v. Shell Oil Co., 84 N.C. App. 501, 353 S.E.2d 269 (1987); Whitaker v. Clark, 109 N.C. App. 379, 427 S.E.2d 142 cert. denied,.

When a party moves for judgment on the pleadings, he admits two things for the purpose of his motion, namely: (1) the truth of all well-pleaded facts in the pleading of his adversary, together with all fair inferences to be drawn from such facts; and (2) the untruth of his own allegations insofar as they are controverted by the pleading of his adversary. Gammon v. Clark, 25 N.C. App. 670, 214 S.E.2d 250 (1975).

All well-pleaded factual allegations in the nonmoving party's pleadings are taken as true, and all contravening assertions in the nonmovant's pleadings are taken as false. Ragsdale v. Kennedy, 286 N.C. 130, 209 S.E.2d 494 (1974); Shellhorn v. Brad Ragan, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 310, 248 S.E.2d 103, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 735, 249 S.E.2d 804 (1978).

Upon a motion for judgment on the pleadings under section (c) of this rule the allegations of the nonmovant are taken as true and all contravening assertions of the movant are taken as false. Huss v. Huss, 31 N.C. App. 463, 230 S.E.2d 159 (1976).

When a party moves for judgment on the pleadings, he admits the truth of all well-pleaded facts in the pleading of the opposing party and the untruth of his own allegations insofar as they are controverted by the pleadings of the opposing party. Pipkin v. Lassiter, 37 N.C. App. 36, 245 S.E.2d 105 (1978).

What Allegations in Nonmovant's Pleadings Deemed Admitted. — All allegations in the nonmovant's pleadings except conclusions of law, legally impossible facts and matters not admissible in evidence at the trial are deemed admitted by the movant for purposes of the motion. Ragsdale v. Kennedy, 286 N.C. 130, 209 S.E.2d 494 (1974); Commercial Credit Equip. Corp. v. Thompson, 48 N.C. App. 594, 269 S.E.2d 286 (1980).

For the purpose of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, the movant is deemed to have admitted all factual allegations in the nonmovant's pleadings except those which are legally impossible and those not admissible in evidence. Cheape v. Town of Chapel Hill, 320 N.C. 549, 359 S.E.2d 792 (1987).

Facts and permissible inferences are viewed in the light most favorable to nonmoving party in considering a motion for judgment on the pleadings. Ragsdale v. Kennedy, 286 N.C. 130, 209 S.E.2d 494 (1974); Shellhorn v. Brad Ragan, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 310, 248 S.E.2d 103, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 735, 249 S.E.2d 804 (1978); Rose v. Guilford County, 60 N.C. App. 170, 298 S.E.2d 200 (1982).

In considering a motion for judgment on the pleadings, the trial court is required to view the facts presented in the pleadings and the inferences to be drawn therefrom in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. American Bank & Trust Co. v. Elzey, 26 N.C. App. 29, 214 S.E.2d 800, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 252, 217 S.E.2d 662 (1975); Huss v. Huss, 31 N.C. App. 463, 230 S.E.2d 159 (1976); Burton v. Kenyon, 46 N.C. App. 309, 264 S.E.2d 808 (1980); Newbold v. Globe Life Ins. Co., 50 N.C. App. 628, 274 S.E.2d 905 (1981).

Evidence to Be Considered by Trial Judge. — In a motion for judgment on the pleadings the trial judge is to consider only the pleadings and any attached exhibits, which become part of the pleadings. No evidence is to be heard, and the trial judge is not to consider statements of fact in the briefs of the parties or the testimony of allegations by the parties in different proceedings. Minor v. Minor, 70 N.C. App. 76, 318 S.E.2d 865, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 495, 322 S.E.2d 558 (1984).

Under section (c) of this rule the court is not required to find facts in a judgment on the pleadings since the facts determining disposition are those alleged in the pleadings; and the court cannot select some of the alleged facts as a basis for granting the motion on the pleadings if other allegations, together with the selected facts, establish material issues of fact. J.F. Wilkerson Contracting Co. v. Rowland, 29 N.C. App. 722, 225 S.E.2d 840, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 660, 228 S.E.2d 452 (1976).

Findings and Conclusions as Surplusage. — Findings of fact and conclusions of law in a judgment on the pleadings were surplusage and of no legal effect. United Va. Bank v. Air-Lift Assocs., 79 N.C. App. 315, 339 S.E.2d 90 (1986).

When Summary Judgment Motion Treated as Motion for Judgment on Pleadings. — Where the record on appeal contained no affidavits, answers to interrogatories, or anything else other than the pleadings upon which to base a decision, a motion purportedly made under § 1A-1, Rule 56 would be considered as a motion for judgment on the pleadings under section (c) of this rule. Reichler v. Tillman, 21 N.C. App. 38, 203 S.E.2d 68 (1974); Town of Bladenboro v. McKeithan, 44 N.C. App. 459, 261 S.E.2d 260, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 202, 282 S.E.2d 228 (1980); Burton v. Kenyon, 46 N.C. App. 309, 264 S.E.2d 808 (1980).

A motion for judgment on the pleadings is inappropriate where the complaint is not fatally defective and matters outside the pleadings are presented to and considered by the court; under such circumstances the motion for judgment on the pleadings must be treated as a motion for summary judgment. Battle v. Clanton, 27 N.C. App. 616, 220 S.E.2d 97

(1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 613, 223 S.E.2d 391 (1976).

When Motion for Judgment on Pleadings Treated as Motion for Summary Judgment. — Where matters outside the pleadings were considered by the court in reaching its decision on the judgment on the pleadings, the motion for judgment on the pleadings was treated as if it were a motion for summary judgment. Helms v. Holland, 124 N.C. App. 629, 478 S.E.2d 513 (1996).

Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings Treated as (12)(b)(6) Motion. — Although respondent styled his motion as one for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Rule 12(c), the court treated it as a motion for failure to state a claim because (1) the basis for the motion was that the petition failed to state sufficient facts as required by § 7A-289.25(6) [see now § 7B-1104], and (2) a motion is treated according to its substance and not its label. In re Quevedo, 106 N.C. App. 574, 419 S.E.2d 158, appeal dismissed, 332 N.C. 483, 424 S.E.2d 397 (1992).

Grant of Motion Held Proper. — The plaintiff was not prejudiced by dismissal of her case on the pleadings, where the defendant had requested dismissal for failure to state a claim, but plaintiff had received the pleadings two weeks prior to trial and the court could have rendered judgment on the pleadings sua sponte. Terrell v. Lawyers Mut. Liab. Ins., 131 N.C. App. 655, 507 S.E.2d 923 (1998).

Grant of Motion Held Error. — The trial court erred in granting defendant's counterclaim for mortgage payments without a hearing on the merits, where the pleadings did not establish due dates, nor did plaintiff admit that such payments were due. Daniels v. Montgomery Mut. Ins. Co., 320 N.C. 669, 360 S.E.2d 772 (1987).

Redundancy of Order Under Section (c). — Where all defendants made timely motions pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule, which were granted by the trial court, the court's subsequent order pursuant to section (c) of this rule was redundant and would not be considered on appeal. Thus, the sole issue in the appeal was whether the trial court erred in granting defendants' motions under subsection (b)(6). Robertson v. Boyd, 88 N.C. App. 437, 363 S.E.2d 672 (1988).

As to appellate consideration of motion for judgment on pleadings, see Mills v. Koscot Interplanetary, Inc., 13 N.C. App. 681, 187 S.E.2d 372 (1972).

Refusal to Grant Judgment on Pleadings on Grounds of Governmental Immunity. — Although normally an appeal does not lie from the denial of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, an immediate appeal will lie under subsection (c), as well as subsection (b), where the trial court refuses to grant a judgment on the pleadings for the state on the grounds of governmental immunity. Whitaker v. Clark, 109 N.C. App. 379, 427 S.E.2d 142, cert. denied, 333 N.C. 795, 431 S.E.2d 31 (1993).

Summary judgment improper where plaintiffs' claim raised a genuine issue as to defendant's negligence in the design and construction of a retaining wall, the necessary costs to remedy the defects and the appropriate damages by submitting affidavits and photographs in support of their claim, and defendant submitted no material beyond its pleadings. Floraday v. Don Galloway Homes, Inc., 340 N.C. 223, 456 S.E.2d 303 (1995).

XII. MOTION FOR MORE DEFINITE STATEMENT.

Motion for a more definite statement is the most purely dilatory of all the motions available under the Rules of Civil Procedure. Ross v. Ross, 33 N.C. App. 447, 235 S.E.2d 405 (1977); Fisher v. Lamm, 66 N.C. App. 249, 311 S.E.2d 61 (1984).

Motion for more definite statement is not favored by the courts and is sparingly granted, because pleadings may be brief and lacking in factual detail, and because of the extensive discovery devices available to the movant. Ross v. Ross, 33 N.C. App. 447, 235 S.E.2d 405 (1977).

Vagueness as Grounds for Motion for More Definite Statement But Not Motion to Dismiss. — Mere vagueness is not ground for a motion to dismiss, but a defendant is instead entitled to attack an allegation by a motion for a more definite statement under section (e) of this rule. Schloss Outdoor Adv. Co. v. City of Charlotte, 50 N.C. App. 150, 272 S.E.2d 920 (1980).

Motion for More Definite Statement Within Discretion of Court. — The granting or denial of a motion for a more definite statement rests in the sound discretion of the trial judge, and his ruling thereon will not be overturned on appeal absent a showing of abuse of discretion. Ross v. Ross, 33 N.C. App. 447, 235 S.E.2d 405 (1977).

So long as pleading meets requirements of § 1A-1, Rule 8 and fairly notifies the opposing party of the nature of the claim, a motion for more definite statement will not be granted. Ross v. Ross, 33 N.C. App. 447, 235 S.E.2d 405 (1977).

Special Damages. — Where plaintiff pleaded business losses as special damages, however vaguely and ambiguously, defendants' proper remedy was a motion for a more definite statement under section (e) of this rule, and not dismissal under subsection (b)(6) of this rule. Johnson v. Bollinger, 86 N.C. App. 1, 356 S.E.2d 378 (1987).

XIII. MOTION TO STRIKE.

The purpose of section (f) of this rule is to avoid expenditure of time and resources before trial by removing spurious issues, whether introduced by original or amended complaint. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

A motion under section (f) is a device to test the legal sufficiency of an affirmative defense. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Akelaitis, 25 N.C. App. 522, 214 S.E.2d 281 (1975).

Section (f) of this rule requires that a motion to strike be made before responding to a pleading. Clouse v. Chairtown Motors, Inc., 14 N.C. App. 117, 187 S.E.2d 398 (1972).

Section (f) of this rule allows the court to strike improper allegations from any pleading. Although the reported cases do not address the application of section (f) of this rule to allegations added under § 1A-1, Rule 15, the latter rule clearly governs pleadings practice, and motions to strike logically are available to test amended as well as original complaints. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

Matter should not be stricken unless it has no possible bearing upon the litigation. If there is any question as to whether an issue may arise, the motion should be denied. Shellhorn v. Brad Ragan, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 310, 248 S.E.2d 103, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 735, 249 S.E.2d 804 (1978).

Motion under Section (f) Not Proper to Challenge Notice of Dismissal Without Prejudice. — A motion to strike "any insufficient defense or any redundant, irrelevant, immaterial, impertinent or scandalous matter" under section (f) of this rule is not the proper motion by which to challenge a notice of dismissal without prejudice. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Ryder Truck Rental, Inc., 34 N.C. App. 379, 238 S.E.2d 193 (1977).

"Short and Plain Statement" of Complaint. — It was error for the court to strike a lengthy, highly detailed and technical complaint on the apparent grounds that it did not contain a short and plain statement of the facts. Section 1A-1, Rule 8 prescribes the minimum information that a pleading must contain; it does not require that a complaint contain only a "short and plain statement." Holley v. Burroughs Wellcome Co., 74 N.C. App. 736, 330 S.E.2d 228 (1985), aff'd, 318 N.C. 352, 348 S.E.2d 772 (1986).

Consideration of Untimely Motion Upheld. — Although plaintiff's motion to strike was not timely filed, because this section clearly states that the trial court may strike materials from the pleadings on its own initiative at any time, the trial court's consideration of the motion was permissible despite its untimeliness. Daily v. Mann Media, Inc., 95 N.C. App. 746, 384 S.E.2d 54 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 47, 389 S.E.2d 86 (1990).

Defense Stricken for Irrelevance. — Where defendant agreed to pay plaintiff severance pay in the event that the parties' business relationship ended, defendant was not entitled to plead as a defense that plaintiff's action was barred because he was terminated for cause, and accordingly, the trial court committed no error in striking that defense on the grounds that it was irrelevant and immaterial, having no possible bearing upon the litigation, and because the defense was legally insufficient. Daily v. Mann Media, Inc., 95 N.C. App. 746, 384 S.E.2d 54 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 47, 389 S.E.2d 86 (1990).

XIV. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-127, 1-134 and 1-153.

A defect in jurisdiction over the subject matter cannot be cured by waiver, consent, amendment or otherwise. Anderson v. Atkinson, 235 N.C. 300, 69 S.E.2d 603 (1952), decided under former § 1-134.

The objection that a prior action is pending between the same parties for the same cause is waived unless it is raised in the mode appointed by law. McDowell v. Blythe Bros. Co., 236 N.C. 396, 72 S.E.2d 860 (1952), decided under former § 1-134.

The court may strike out irrelevant or redundant matter inserted in a pleading upon motion of any party aggrieved, aptly made. Wall v. England, 243 N.C. 36, 89 S.E.2d 785 (1955); Girard Trust Bank v. Easton, 3 N.C. App. 414, 165 S.E.2d 252 (1969), decided under former § 1-153.

Irrelevant or redundant matter inserted in a pleading is subject to a motion to strike. Johnson v. Petree, 4 N.C. App. 20, 165 S.E.2d 757 (1969), decided under former § 1-153.

A motion to strike, made in apt time, is made as a matter of right. Sullivan v. Johnson, 3 N.C. App. 581, 165 S.E.2d 507 (1969), decided under former § 1-153.

A complaint must be fatally defective before it will be rejected as insufficient. Newman Mach. Co. v. Newman, 275 N.C. 189, 166 S.E.2d 63 (1969), decided under former § 1-127.

Rule 13. Counterclaim and crossclaim.

(a) Compulsory counterclaims. — A pleading shall state as a counterclaim any claim which at the time of serving the pleading the pleader has against any opposing party, if it arises out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim and does not require for its adjudication the presence of third parties of whom the court cannot acquire jurisdiction. But the pleader need not state the claim if

(1) At the time the action was commenced the claim was the subject of another pending action, or

(2) The opposing party brought suit upon his claim by attachment or other process by which the court did not acquire jurisdiction to render a personal judgment on that claim, and the pleader is not stating any counterclaim under this rule.

(b) Permissive counterclaim. — A pleading may state as a counterclaim any claim against an opposing party not arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim.

(c) Counterclaim exceeding opposing claim. — A counterclaim may or may not diminish or defeat the recovery sought by the opposing party. It may claim relief exceeding in amount or different in kind from that sought in the pleading of the opposing party.

(d) Counterclaim against the State of North Carolina. — These rules shall not be construed to enlarge beyond the limits fixed by law the right to assert counterclaims or to claim credit against the State of North Carolina or an officer or agency thereof.

(e) Counterclaim maturing or acquired after pleading. — A claim which either matured or was acquired by the pleader after serving his pleading may, with the permission of the court, be presented as a counterclaim by supplemental pleading.

(f) Omitted counterclaim. — When a pleader fails to set up a counterclaim through oversight, inadvertence, or excusable neglect, or when justice requires, he may by leave of court set up the counterclaim by amendment.

(g) Crossclaim against coparty. — A pleading may state as a crossclaim any claim by one party against a coparty arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter either of the original action or of a counterclaim therein or relating to any property that is the subject matter of the original action. Such crossclaim may include a claim that the party against whom it is asserted is or may be liable to the crossclaimant for all or part of a claim asserted in the action against the crossclaimant.

(h) Additional parties may be brought in. — When the presence of parties other than those to the original action is required for the granting of complete relief in the determination of a counterclaim or crossclaim, the court shall order them to be brought in as defendants as provided in these rules, if jurisdiction of them can be obtained.

(i) Separate trial; separate judgment. — If the court orders separate trials as provided in Rule 42(b), judgment on a counterclaim or crossclaim may be rendered in accordance with the terms of Rule 54(b) when the court has jurisdiction so to do, even if the claims of the opposing party have been dismissed or otherwise disposed of. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Sections (a) through (f) deal with counterclaims that must and those that may be asserted in an action, i.e., with compulsory and permissive counterclaims.

Compulsory counterclaims. — There is no current statutory provision which in terms makes any counterclaim compulsory. However, certain counterclaims have traditionally been made compulsory in effect by application of res judicata principles. The judicially evolved rule is that a party will be barred from maintaining an action if in a prior or pending action he could have obtained the same relief by permissive counterclaim and if a judgment for plaintiff in the former or pending action would collaterally estop the plaintiff in the second in respect of determinative issues. Thus, most typically, when a party is sued for damages arising out of negligent operation of an automobile, he must assert any claim for damages he may have arising out of the same occurrence by counterclaim, at peril of being barred from thereafter asserting the claim by separate action. Allen v. Salley, 179 N.C. 147, 101 S.E. 545 (1919). Rule 13(a) states this substantially, but with more directness, and in a way which avoids some possible question about the application of the North Carolina judicial rule to a second action when plaintiff in the first action lost. Basically, this rule should cause no actual change in the practice in respect to those claims which counsel for defendants will feel under compulsion to assert by counterclaim at peril of being barred to assert them separately.

Three necessary exceptions to the basic rule of compulsion are provided in this section. A counterclaim otherwise compulsory under the rule need not be asserted: (1) If parties necessary to its adjudication cannot be subjected to jurisdiction; or (2) if the pleader has already asserted the claim in another pending action; or (3) if to counterclaim would subject the pleader to personal jurisdiction in respect of a merely quasi in rem claim by the plaintiff, as to which the pleader is not otherwise amenable to personal jurisdiction. Furthermore, possible relief against the consequences of failure to assert a normally compulsory counterclaim is provided in section (f) which gives the court discretion to allow a compulsory counterclaim to be added by amendment.

Permissive counterclaim. — Under former code practice, two types of counterclaim were permissive: (1) Any contract claim existing at the commencement of the plaintiff's action, when the plaintiff's claim is in contract, and (2) any claim arising out of the same contract or transaction which is the basis of plaintiff's action (usually compulsory under the res judicata rule).

The rule in section (b) is much broader. In fact, it is unlimited in its terms — a pleader may at his option assert any claim he may have against an opponent which he is not compelled by section (a) to assert. This approach parallels that of the unlimited joinder of claims philosophy of Rule 18. The idea is that so far as the basic structuring of the litigation at the pleading stage is concerned, there should be unlimited ability to join opposing as well as parallel claims — and that the appropriate protection against trial of an overly complex case resulting from unlimited counterclaim assertion right is by severance for separate trial subsequently under Rule 42(b).

Section (c). — This section states existing case law in North Carolina. See 1 McIntosh, North Carolina Practice and Procedure, § 1238 (2d ed. 1956).

Section (d). — This section is self-explanatory.

Section (e). — This section allows the assertion by supplemental pleading, with leave of court, of counterclaims maturing or acquired after the pleader has already filed his defensive pleading. This is a direct and simple handling of a problem as to which confusion had existed under code practice. Under former § 1-137, a counterclaim might be asserted under the contract section only if it was in existence at the time of commencement of plaintiff's action, but no such limitation was stated with respect to counterclaims under the same transaction section. But, of course, these also may arise out of contract, and some confusion existed in applying the statute. See 1 McIntosh, North Carolina Practice and Procedure, § 1242 (2d ed. 1956). This rule makes no distinction based on types of counterclaim, but simply provides that any subsequently acquired counterclaim may, if the court deems it proper on a whole view of the matter, be injected into litigation after the initial pleading has already been served.

Crossclaims between parties similarly aligned, as coplaintiffs or codefendants. — Rule 13(g), following the general philosophy of an unlimited option by pleaders to join any claims and assert any counterclaims at the pleading stage, lays down a very liberal policy for asserting crossclaims between coparties. There is, however, a limitation, not found with respect to permissive claim joinder under Rule 18, or permissive counterclaim assertion under Rule 13(b). The crossclaim must arise out of the same transaction or occurrence on which the basic claims and counterclaims are based, or must relate to property which is the subject matter of the original action. Thus, coparties cannot as a matter of right inject claims between themselves which have not even a general historical relation to the basic claims in litigation between plaintiffs and defendants. But, given the general historical relation expressed in the concept, "arising out of the same transaction or occurrence," there is no further requirement that the crossclaim relate substantively to the basic claim or counterclaim — or that it in some way affect the party asserting these basic claims. Thus, most typically, where A sues B and C for personal injury damages as alleged joint tort-feasors, B and C may crossclaim against each other in respect of independent claims for personal injury or property damage alleged to have resulted from the same occurrence out of which A's claim arose. Certainly the most common bases for crossclaims are those for contribution or indemnification in respect of the crossclaimant's alleged liability, and the last sentence Rule 13(g) specifically authorizes these bases.

This represents a substantial departure from former code practice which, without specific statutory directive, had slowly evolved a much more restrictive judicial rule for permissible crossclaims between coparties. Thus, it was held under the code that the only permissible crossclaim was one for indemnification based on a noncontractual right (e.g., primary as opposed to secondary tort liability). Specifically forbidden was any crossclaim by one codefendant against another for: (1) Personal injury or property damage to the claimant, notwithstanding it "arose out of the same occurrence" as plaintiff's primary claim. Jarrett v. Brogdon, 256 N.C. 693, 124 S.E.2d 850 (1962); (2) contribution in respect of the crossclaimant's liability to plaintiff. Bass v. Lee, 255 N.C. 73, 120 S.E.2d 570 (1961); and (3) indemnification if based on an express or implied contract to indemnify crossclaimant in respect of his liability to plaintiff. Steele v. Moore-Flesher Hauling Co., 260 N.C. 486, 133 S.E.2d 197 (1963). See generally, tracing the evolution of the permissible crossclaim rules to their present state, Note, 40 N.C.L. Rev. 633 (1962).

Section (h). — This section states existing North Carolina case law. Bullard v. Berry Coal & Oil Co., 254 N.C. 756, 119 S.E.2d 910 (1961) (when A sues B in negligence and B counterclaims, B may have C brought in to defend against counterclaim on allegations that C is vicariously liable thereon in respect of A's alleged negligence).

Here again, with respect to the liberal attitude toward allowable crossclaims, the notion is that if over-complexity results for the purposes of trial, severance and separate trials under Rule 42(b) is the appropriate action, rather than preventing the assertion of crossclaims at the pleading stage.

Section (i). — This section incorporates the provisions of Rule 54(b) to allow the entering of "final judgment" in respect to particular counterclaims or crossclaims, notwithstanding the whole action is not yet ripe for judgment.

II. COUNTERCLAIMS.

The purpose of section (a) of this rule, making certain counterclaims compulsory, is to enable one court to resolve all related claims in one action, thereby avoiding a wasteful multiplicity of litigation. Gardner v. Gardner, 294 N.C. 172, 240 S.E.2d 399 (1978); Stines v. Satterwhite, 58 N.C. App. 608, 294 S.E.2d 324 (1982); Carolina Squire, Inc. v. Champion Map Corp., 75 N.C. App. 194, 330 S.E.2d 36 (1985).

The term "at the time the action was commenced," as used in subsection (a)(1) of this rule, refers to the action against which the pleader is required to counterclaim, and not necessarily the primary action originally commencing the lawsuit. Thus, where defendant institutes a crossclaim and a third-party action, the court should look to the times of filing such crossclaim and third-party action to determine whether, at those times, there was pending an action whose claim involved the same subject matter as that of the proposed counterclaims. Faggart v. Biggers, 18 N.C. App. 366, 197 S.E.2d 75, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 752, 198 S.E.2d 721 (1973).

Section (a) of this rule is a tool designed to further judicial economy. Twin City Apts., Inc. v. Landrum, 45 N.C. App. 490, 263 S.E.2d 323 (1980).

Section (a) of this rule is a tool designed to further judicial economy. The tool should not be used to combine actions that, despite their origin in a common factual background, have no logical relationship to each other. Winston-Salem Joint Venture v. Cathy's Boutique, Inc., 72 N.C. App. 673, 325 S.E.2d 286 (1985).

In order to find that an action must be filed as a compulsory counterclaim pursuant to section (a) of this rule, a court must first find a logical relationship between the factual backgrounds of the two claims. In addition, the court must find a logical relationship between the nature of the actions. Winston-Salem Joint Venture v. Cathy's Boutique, Inc., 72 N.C. App. 673, 325 S.E.2d 286 (1985).

And Should Not Be Used to Combine Actions Without Logical Relationship. — Section (a) of this rule is a tool designed to further judicial economy. The tool should not be used to combine actions that, despite their origin in a common factual background, have no logical relationship to each other. Curlings v. Macemore, 57 N.C. App. 200, 290 S.E.2d 725 (1982).

A counterclaim is in the nature of an independent proceeding and is not automatically determined by a ruling in the principal claim. Brooks v. Gooden, 69 N.C. App. 701, 318 S.E.2d 348 (1984).

What Claims Must Be Asserted. — This rule requires a party to assert as a counterclaim any claim arising out of the same transaction or occurrence as the pending action, "at peril of being barred" from asserting the claim in a later action. Furr v. Noland, 103 N.C. App. 279, 404 S.E.2d 885 (1991).

Where plaintiff proffered its counterclaims one year and three months after the filing of the complaint, by that time extensive discovery had already taken place, the new counterclaims would have required evidence of transactions which occurred three to five years earlier, and plaintiff sought to allege unfair and deceptive business practices for the first time, defendants were not to be penalized with more discovery and litigation and, for the first time, be exposed to treble damages because plaintiff was initially acting pro se and its first attorney was dilatory. House Healers Restorations, Inc. v. Ball, 112 N.C. App. 783, 437 S.E.2d 383 (1993).

Once a claim has been denominated a compulsory counterclaim under section (a) of this rule, the question what must be done with it if it is filed as a subsequent, independent claim is not answered by the rule itself. Atkins v. Nash, 61 N.C. App. 488, 300 S.E.2d 880 (1983).

Logical Relationship Between Factual Backgrounds and Nature of Actions Required. — In order to find that an action must be filed as a compulsory counterclaim pursuant to section (a) of this rule, a court must first find a logical relationship between the factual backgrounds of the two claims. In addition, the court must find a logical relationship between the nature of the actions. Twin City Apts., Inc. v. Landrum, 45 N.C. App. 490, 263 S.E.2d 323 (1980); Curlings v. Macemore, 57 N.C. App. 200, 290 S.E.2d 725 (1982).

Similarity in Nature of Action and Rem- edy Sought More Important Than Common Factual Transaction. — It is the similarity in the nature of the action and the remedy sought which seems to be more important in establishing when an action will be treated as a compulsory counterclaim, rather than a basis in a common factual transaction. Twin City Apts., Inc. v. Landrum, 45 N.C. App. 490, 263 S.E.2d 323 (1980).

Section (a) of this rule does not require that the legal claims be identical. It is sufficient that the nature of the actions and the remedies sought are logically related in fact and law. Brooks v. Rogers, 82 N.C. App. 502, 346 S.E.2d 677 (1986).

In determining whether certain claims arose out of the same transaction or occurrence as a prior action for purposes of treating them as compulsory counterclaims, several factors are considered: (1) Whether the issues of fact and law are largely the same; (2) whether substantially the same evidence is involved in each action; and (3) whether there is a logical relationship between the two actions. Brooks v. Rogers, 82 N.C. App. 502, 346 S.E.2d 677 (1986).

Counterclaims were compulsory where they arose out of business dealings of the parties covering over a two-year period and the expenditure of over one million dollars, and where defendants conceded that the counterclaims were compulsory in their brief by stating that they "arise out of the same series of transactions as the claims in the original complaints," and that "a reasonable person would have brought all of the claims on the original complaints." House Healers Restorations, Inc. v. Ball, 112 N.C. App. 783, 437 S.E.2d 383 (1993).

Compulsory Counterclaim Not Limited to Facts Alleged in Original Complaint. — A compulsory counterclaim under section (a) of this rule is not limited to facts alleged in the original complaint, but includes logically related acts and conduct involving the parties. Powell Mfg. Co. v. Harrington Mfg. Co., 30 N.C. App. 97, 226 S.E.2d 173, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1031, 97 S. Ct. 722, 50 L. Ed. 2d 743 (1977).

Where a compulsory counterclaim is filed as an independent action during the pendency of the prior action, it must be dismissed with leave to file it as a counterclaim in the prior action or stayed until final judgment has been entered in that action. Cloer v. Smith, — N.C. App. —, 512 S.E.2d 779 (1999).

In order to give effect to the purpose of section (a) of this rule once its applicability to a second independent action has been determined, this second action must on motion be either (1) dismissed with leave to file it in the former case, or (2) stayed until the former case has been finally determined. Gardner v. Gardner, 294 N.C. 172, 240 S.E.2d 399 (1978); Stines v. Satterwhite, 58 N.C. App. 608, 294 S.E.2d 324 (1982); Atkins v. Nash, 61 N.C. App. 488, 300 S.E.2d 880 (1983).

If an action may be denominated a compulsory counterclaim in a prior action, it must be either (1) dismissed with leave to file it in the former case, or (2) stayed until the conclusion of the former case. However, because the purpose of section (a) of this rule is to combine related claims in one action, thereby avoiding a wasteful multiplicity of litigation, the option to stay the second action should be reserved for unusual circumstances. Brooks v. Rogers, 82 N.C. App. 502, 346 S.E.2d 677 (1986).

A motion to dismiss on grounds of a prior pending action should be treated as a motion pursuant to section (a) of this rule and should be allowed where the action arose out of the same transaction or occurrence which formed the basis of the movant's prior action. Atkins v. Nash, 61 N.C. App. 488, 300 S.E.2d 880 (1983).

Answer Treated as Counterclaim. — In a suit for absolute divorce, where defendant admitted the allegations of the complaint and prayed for an absolute divorce on the same grounds, the fact that defendant's pleading was labelled an "answer" did not preclude its being treated also as a counterclaim. McCarley v. McCarley, 289 N.C. 109, 221 S.E.2d 490 (1976).

The existence of wife's pending action for alimony without divorce did not affect her statutory right to plead a counterclaim seeking alimony without divorce based upon the same allegations when her husband brought a separate action for absolute divorce. VanDooren v. VanDooren, 37 N.C. App. 333, 246 S.E.2d 20, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 258 (1978).

Allegations in Divorce Action Held Recrimination, Not Counterclaim. — In an action for divorce, defendant wife's allegations that plaintiff husband secured a deed of separation from her by fraud by representing that he had not been seeing another woman when in fact he was regularly committing adultery did not state or constitute a counterclaim for alimony or for child custody or support which could be asserted in an action for absolute divorce; the alleged misconduct set forth in wife's defense fell clearly within the doctrine of recrimination and was therefore not available to wife as a defense to husband's action for divorce. Edwards v. Edwards, 43 N.C. App. 296, 259 S.E.2d 11 (1979).

Summary Ejectment Action. — Tenant's claim that landlord improperly exercised summary ejectment was a compulsory counterclaim in summary ejectment proceeding as the issues of law and fact were largely the same, were logically related, and required substantially the same evidence. Cloer v. Smith, — N.C. App. —, 512 S.E.2d 779 (1999).

Plaintiff landlord's claim for summary ejectment was not a compulsory counterclaim in tenant's prior action for breach of a lease agreement, breach of covenants of fitness and habitability and of the duty of repair, violations of the unfair trade practices statute, and conspiracy to deprive tenant of her civil rights, although both actions arose out of the same landlord and tenant relationship, since the nature of the actions and the remedies sought were too divergent. Twin City Apts., Inc v. Landrum, 45 N.C. App. 490, 263 S.E.2d 323 (1980).

Claim of Conversion Not Compulsory Counterclaim in Action on Contract. — Where plaintiff alleged that defendant stole property owned by plaintiff and where in prior action defendants sued plaintiff for breach of contract, trial court erred in finding that plaintiff's claim was a compulsory counterclaim to the prior action, since the issues of fact and law in plaintiff's conversion proceeding were different from the issues involved in defendant's action on the contract. Hailey v. Allgood Constr. Co., 95 N.C. App. 630, 383 S.E.2d 220 (1989).

Failure to assert a compulsory counterclaim will ordinarily bar future action on the claim. Hudspeth v. Bunzey, 35 N.C. App. 231, 241 S.E.2d 119, cert. denied, 294 N.C. 736, 244 S.E.2d 154 (1978).

Voluntary Dismissal of Compulsory Counterclaim as Bar to Later Suit. — Plaintiff may not maintain action on a claim which was a compulsory counterclaim in a prior lawsuit and on which plaintiff took a voluntary dismissal. Furr v. Noland, 103 N.C. App. 279, 404 S.E.2d 885 (1991).

This rule and the doctrine of res judicata would be completely undermined if parties were allowed to voluntarily dismiss and then later re-file compulsory counterclaims. The judicial economy promoted by this rule would be lost. Furr v. Noland, 103 N.C. App. 279, 404 S.E.2d 885 (1991).

But Assertion of Counterclaim Maturing After Original Answer Is Not Mandatory. — Although section (e) permits the court to allow a supplemental pleading to assert a counterclaim, matured or acquired, subsequent to the original answer, such supplemental pleading is not mandated and failure to assert such a counterclaim will not bar the claim. Driggers v. Commercial Credit Corp., 31 N.C. App. 561, 230 S.E.2d 201 (1976); Stines v. Satterwhite, 58 N.C. App. 608, 294 S.E.2d 324 (1982).

Denial of motion seeking to amend answer to allege compulsory counterclaim is immediately appealable. Hudspeth v. Bunzey, 35 N.C. App. 231, 241 S.E.2d 119, cert. denied, 294 N.C. 736, 244 S.E.2d 154 (1978).

Plaintiff insurer's recovery against defendant for intentional damage to property could not be offset by defendant's claim for child support owed to her by the insured, where defendant's counterclaim for child support was a compulsory counterclaim in an earlier action. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Balfour, 62 N.C. App. 580, 302 S.E.2d 922 (1983).

Claims Dismissed to Permit Joinder as Counterclaims in Pending Action. — Where suits were logically related, the same parties were involved, the issues arose out of the same agreement, and both suits occurred because of the same set of circumstances, plaintiff failed to demonstrate that any of his rights would be jeopardized if the issues were adjudicated in a single action; therefore, plaintiff's claims for monetary and injunctive relief should have been raised as a compulsory counterclaim in previously filed declaratory judgment action, and plaintiff's action should have been dismissed without prejudice to file these claims as a counterclaim in the pending action. Stevens v. Henry, 121 N.C. App. 150, 464 S.E.2d 704 (1995).

Claim for damages for breach of contract should have been raised as compulsory counterclaim in a previously filed declaratory judgment action, since both actions arose out of the same franchise agreement, both actions were brought about by the same set of occurrences, the damage claim was clearly extant during the pleading phase of the declaratory judgment action, none of the exceptions to the compulsory counterclaim provisions were applicable, and the plaintiff made no showing that its rights would have been jeopardized if all issues were adjudicated in a single action. Carolina Squire, Inc. v. Champion Map Corp., 75 N.C. App. 194, 330 S.E.2d 36 (1985).

Claim of Diversion of Partnership Assets and Accounting. — The original action claimed a diversion of partnership assets and sought a partnership accounting. A later abuse of process claim was that the plaintiffs in the original action, for ulterior motives, used their action to file lis pendens and liens against the property of the plaintiffs in the second action. The two claims, while possessing similar factual bases, required different proof, and the plaintiffs in the second action, by failing to plead a counterclaim in the first action, were not barred by res judicata from asserting their abuse of process claim. Hewes v. Wolfe, 74 N.C. App. 610, 330 S.E.2d 16 (1985).

A nonqualifying corporation, against which an action is brought in this State, may bring a compulsory counterclaim in that action. E & E Indus., Inc. v. Crown Textiles, Inc., 80 N.C. App. 508, 342 S.E.2d 397 (1986).

By suing in a forum of this State a foreign corporation which has not obtained a certificate of authority before the commencement of the action, a North Carolina corporation effectively waives any protection which § 55-154 (see now § 55-15-02) affords it from compulsory counterclaims asserted by the party sued. E & E Indus., Inc. v. Crown Textiles, Inc., 80 N.C. App. 508, 342 S.E.2d 397 (1986).

Joinder of Other Parties. — Section (a) of this rule clearly contemplates that all counterclaims arising out of the same transaction or occurrence be asserted, even if other parties must then be joined, as long as the court can acquire jurisdiction over them. Brooks v. Rogers, 82 N.C. App. 502, 346 S.E.2d 677 (1986).

III. CROSSCLAIMS.

Wider Range of Cross Actions Between Coparties Authorized. — The new Rules of Civil Procedure authorize a much wider range of cross actions between coparties than were heretofore permissible. Anderson v. Robinson, 275 N.C. 132, 165 S.E.2d 502 (1969).

Dismissal of Plaintiff's Claims Does Not Require Dismissal of Crossclaims. — Unless a crossclaim is dependent upon the plaintiff's original claim (as would be, e.g., a crossclaim for indemnity or contribution) or is purely defensive, the plaintiff's dismissal of its claims against all of the defendants does not require the dismissal of a crossclaim properly filed in the same action. Jennette Fruit & Produce Co. v. Seafare Corp., 75 N.C. App. 478, 331 S.E.2d 305 (1985).

Crossclaims Against State. — Allowing claims against the State for contribution and indemnification to be asserted as crossclaims accomplishes the legislative purpose behind section (g) of this rule and avoids absurd or bizarre consequences, by preventing the necessity of a second action before the Industrial Commission to settle claims between the coparties; an absurd result would be reached by allowing the State to be made a third-party defendant on a claim for contribution or indemnification, while prohibiting an identical claim to be made by a coparty in an action in which the State is already a party. Selective Ins. Co. v. NCNB Nat'l Bank, 324 N.C. 560, 380 S.E.2d 521 (1989).

State Held Liable as Coparty. — Where insurer sued bank and State for the loss or theft of bonds, State was held liable as a coparty under section (g) of this rule for purposes of contribution and indemnification to the same extent that the State would be held liable as a third-party defendant under § 1A-1, Rule 14(c); since it was clear that the State was not immune from such claims substantively, and since the State was already properly before the court as a party defendant, there was no reason to exclude the State from the definition of a coparty under section (g) of this rule. Selective Ins. Co. v. NCNB Nat'l Bank, 324 N.C. 560, 380 S.E.2d 521 (1989).

Class Action Crossclaim. — The class of plaintiffs was entitled as a matter of law to proceed against impleaded defendant because plaintiffs' crossclaim related to the subject matter of the action and because the crossclaim merely realleged claims which the court found to be appropriate for class action procedure. Dublin v. UCR, Inc., 115 N.C. App. 209, 444 S.E.2d 455 (1994), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, — N.C. —, 449 S.E.2d 569 (1994).

Rule 14. Third-party practice.

(a) When defendant may bring in third party. — At any time after commencement of the action a defendant, as a third-party plaintiff, may cause a summons and complaint to be served upon a person not a party to the action who is or may be liable to him for all or part of the plaintiff's claim against him. Leave to make the service need not be obtained if the third-party complaint is filed not later than 45 days after the answer to the complaint is served. Otherwise leave must be obtained on motion upon notice to all parties to the action. The person served with the summons and third-party complaint, hereinafter called the third-party defendant, shall make his defense to the third-party plaintiff's claim as provided in Rule 12 and his counterclaims against the third-party plaintiff and crossclaim against other third-party defendants as provided in Rule 13. The third-party defendant may assert against the plaintiff any defenses which the third-party plaintiff has to the plaintiff's claim. The third-party defendant may also assert any claim against the plaintiff arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim against the third-party plaintiff. The plaintiff may assert any claim against the third-party defendant arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim against the third-party plaintiff, and the third-party defendant thereupon shall assert his defenses as provided in Rule 12 and his counterclaims and crossclaims as provided in Rule 13. Any party may move for severance, separate trial, or dismissal of the third-party claim. A third-party defendant may proceed under this rule against any person not a party to the action who is or may be liable to him for all or part of the claim made in the action against the third-party defendant.

Where the normal statute of limitations period in an action arising on a contract is extended as provided in G.S. 1-47(2) or in any action arising on a contract or promissory note, upon motion of the defendant the court may order to be made parties additional defendants, including any party of whom the plaintiff is a subrogee, assignee, third-party beneficiary, endorsee, agent or transferee, or such other person as has received the benefit of the contract by transfer of interest.

(b) When plaintiff may bring in third party. — When a counterclaim is asserted against a plaintiff, he may cause a third party to be brought in under circumstances which under this rule would entitle a defendant to do so.

(c) Rule applicable to State of North Carolina. — Notwithstanding the provisions of the Tort Claims Act, the State of North Carolina may be made a third party under subsection (a) or a third-party defendant under subsection (b) in any tort action. In such cases, the same rules governing liability and the limits of liability of the State and its agencies shall apply as is provided for in the Tort Claims Act. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1969, c. 810, s. 2; 1975, c. 587, s. 1; 1981, c. 92; c. 810.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — Certainly one of the most unsatisfactory areas of North Carolina procedural law was that concerned with what has come to be called "third-party practice." By this is meant the basis upon which and the procedure whereby an original defendant (third-party plaintiff) may implead — have brought into the action — an additional party (third-party defendant) to defend against a claim over by the original defendant/third-party plaintiff. An adequate procedural rule dealing with this important and frequently encountered problem must at least: (1) Specify the substantive grounds permitting impleader, and (2) clearly set out the procedure by which it may be accomplished. For a comprehensive coverage, it should additionally prescribe the kinds of claims which, after impleader has been accomplished, may then be asserted by the parties — originally plaintiff, third-party plaintiff, and third-party defendants — inter se. North Carolina statutory law did none of these in adequate, direct terms. Because of the desirability of allowing impleader in some situations at least, the North Carolina court constructed a set of judicial rules for impleading by drawing upon certain statutes which suggested its use peripherally or in a specific situation, but which were completely inadequate if gauged by the standards of adequate coverage above suggested. Thus, former § 1-73, providing in part that the court might cause parties to be brought in when necessary to a complete determination of the controversy; former § 1-222, providing in part that a judgment might be given for or against one or more of several defendants, might determine the rights of the parties on each side, as between themselves, and might grant a defendant any affirmative relief to which entitled; and § 1-240, cryptically providing for the impleading of alleged joint tort-feasors by an original alleged tort-feasor defendant, were drawn upon by the court. As indicated, none of these statutes dealt directly with the basic problems: (a) Of grounds for impleading (except § 1-240, dealing narrowly with contribution between joint tort-feasors); (b) Of the procedure by which a third-party plaintiff actually impleads a third-party defendant; or (c) Of the kinds of claims that may, after impleader is accomplished, be asserted by the parties inter se.

Working with this completely inadequate statutory pattern, the court has, over the years, evolved rules and sanctioned procedures for impleading which can only be found by resort to the decided cases. These rules as evolved are, aside from the difficulty of locating them, subject to criticism because of their narrowness of approach to the grounds on which impleading is allowed in the first place, and then to the question of what claims may properly be asserted after impleading by the parties inter se. Thus, the basic rule which has evolved to control impleadings permits impleading only when the claim by the third-party plaintiff is for: (1) Contribution against an alleged joint tort-feasor under § 1-240, or (2) indemnification, but only when the indemnification right arises as a matter of law, and not when it arises by express or implied contract. See, for a summary of this rule and the basis of its evolution, 1 McIntosh, North Carolina Practice and Procedure, § 722 (2d edition 1956, with 1965 Supplement). The court is not always consistent in this distinction. See Davis v. Radford, 233 N.C. 283, 63 S.E.2d 822 (1951).

Beyond this, no systematic prescription of the additional claims which may thereafter be asserted between third-party plaintiff and third-party defendant, and between plaintiff and third-party defendant has been worked out in the North Carolina cases. And, as pointed out, this is not provided in the statutes. It is clear only that an impleaded third-party defendant may, but is not compelled to, assert against the third-party plaintiff any claim which would, as to the third-party plaintiff's claim, meet the permissive counterclaim test of former § 1-123. Norris v. Johnson, 246 N.C. 179, 97 S.E.2d 773 (1957) (permissive); Morgan v. Brooks, 241 N.C. 527, 85 S.E.2d 869 (1955) (but not compulsory).

None of the statutes drawn upon prescribed the exact procedure for impleading. Thus, there was no statutory directive as to whether it shall be done by "cross complaint" in the original defendant's answer, or by separate "third-party complaint"; as to whether it requires an order of court based upon motion and notice, or an order entered ex parte; nor as to what mode of service of the third-party complaint or cross complaint shall be utilized. In the absence of any such directive, a practice, generally standardized, but with many variants has been evolved. It has received at least indirect sanction from the court by constant reference to its use without comment. See 1 McIntosh, North Carolina Practice and Procedure, § 722.5 (1965 Pocket Supplement). This practice is cumbersome, and, as indicated, not by any means completely standardized.

In contrast to this most unsatisfactory situation, federal Rule 14 provides a directive for third-party practice which is comprehensive in its coverage. The substantive test for impleading is stated directly — a party may be impleaded "who is or may be liable to [the third-party plaintiff] for all or part of the plaintiff's claim against him." This obviously gives the right to implead for contribution and indemnification, where the substantive right to those remedies exists by statute or common law. This is the limit of the impleading right judicially evolved under North Carolina practice. The federal rule is construed to go beyond this and allow impleading for indemnification where the right to be indemnified has arisen out of contract. See, e.g., Watkins v. Baltimore & O. Ry., 29 F. Supp. 700 (W.D. Pa. 1939). This would broaden the North Carolina approach. Note that it still does not allow impleading on as liberal a basis as exists for crossclaims between parties originally joined as defendants. There, under federal Rule 13, the only requirement is relation between the crossclaim and the transaction or occurrence forming the basis of plaintiff's claim.

Beyond the direct and plain statement of the substantive test for impleading, the federal rule prescribes clearly and concisely the procedure for impleading where the right exists. This, as pointed out, is not done in the North Carolina statutes.

Finally, federal Rule 14 concludes with a clear statement, likewise lacking in State statutes, of the various claims which may, after a third-party defendant is impleaded, be asserted by the various parties inter se. Here, as in the joinder statutes, the safeguard against undue complexity which might result under this rule's liberal allowance of permissible cross and counterclaims is stated to be severance of claims in advance of trial.

It should be noted that federal Rule 14 is of course entirely procedural — it does not, indeed cannot — affect any substantive rights. Thus, it does not allow impleader unless the substantive right exists under State law. Accordingly, then, adoption of this rule does not affect any of the North Carolina substantive law of contribution or indemnification.

Comment to the 1969 Amendment. — (a) G.S. 1-47(2) was amended to provide that where an action is brought on a sealed instrument, the defendant or defendants in such action may file a counterclaim arising out of the same transaction or transactions as are the subject of plaintiff's claim, although a shorter period of limitation would otherwise apply to defendant's counterclaim.

The second paragraph of Rule 14 was amended to provide that in such actions, or in any action arising on a contract or promissory note, the defendant may have additional defendants brought into the action. Such additional defendants cannot escape liability by passage of time or by transferring of contract rights.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1969, c. 810, which added the second paragraph of section (a) of this rule, provides in s. 2: "It is the purpose of this section to insure that if a suit may be maintained on a contract against one contracting party, the other contracting party will not be allowed to escape his contractual obligations by the passage of time or the transfer of contract rights."

Section 1-240, referred to in the Comment to this Rule as originally enacted, set out above, has been repealed. For general information regarding the official comments to the North Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure, see the Editor's Note under the heading for this chapter.

CASE NOTES

The purpose of this rule is to promote judicial efficiency and convenience of the parties by eliminating circuity of action. Heath v. Board of Comm'rs, 292 N.C. 369, 233 S.E.2d 889 (1977).

This rule is intended to provide a mechanism for disposing of multiple claims arising from a single set of facts in one action expeditiously and economically. Heath v. Board of Comm'rs, 292 N.C. 369, 233 S.E.2d 889 (1977).

This rule does not create any substantive rights where none existed before. Heath v. Board of Comm'rs, 292 N.C. 369, 233 S.E.2d 889 (1977).

This rule permits the defendant as a third-party plaintiff to cause a summons and complaint to be served upon a person not a party to the action who is or may be liable to him for all or part of plaintiff's claim against him. Cody v. Department of Transp., 60 N.C. App. 724, 300 S.E.2d 25 (1983).

This rule anticipates the disposition in one trial of cases involving multiple parties. It is particularly adapted to cases where the liability of a third-party defendant is contingent upon liability of another party, and upon claims the exact amount of which is not fixed at the beginning of trial. Cody v. Department of Transp., 60 N.C. App. 724, 300 S.E.2d 25 (1983).

This rule anticipates the disposition in one trial of cases involving multiple parties. City of Winston-Salem v. Ferrell, 79 N.C. App. 103, 338 S.E.2d 794 (1986).

Third-party Defendant's Liability Need Not Have Been Determined Previously. — This section allows a party to implead a party or parties that may be liable to him. It is not necessary that the third-party defendant's liability be previously determined. Rouse v. Maxwell, 40 N.C. App. 538, 253 S.E.2d 326, appeal dismissed, 298 N.C. 570, 261 S.E.2d 124 (1979).

When a third-party defendant has an opportunity to participate fully in the determination of third-party plaintiff's liability, it is bound by a judgment in favor of the original plaintiff. City of Winston-Salem v. Ferrell, 79 N.C. App. 103, 338 S.E.2d 794 (1986).

Third-party Defendant Not Liable Where Original Defendant Not Liable. — If the original defendant is not liable to the original plaintiff, the third-party defendant is not liable to the original defendant. Jones v. Collins, 58 N.C. App. 753, 294 S.E.2d 384 (1982).

Third-party May Be Joined for Contribution. — Under this rule, an original defendant may bring in a third-party defendant for contribution to the original defendant for a part of his liability to the plaintiff. Jones v. Collins, 58 N.C. App. 753, 294 S.E.2d 384 (1982).

Third-party Claim Against Plaintiff's Agent Barred. — If the third-party defendant were the plaintiff's agent, the court would be correct in dismissing the third-party claim if the third-party defendant was negligent, since under the doctrine of respondeat superior the plaintiff would be barred from recovery from the original defendant and if the original defendant were not liable to plaintiff, the original defendant could not recover of the third-party defendant. Jones v. Collins, 58 N.C. App. 753, 294 S.E.2d 384 (1982).

Person Impleaded Not Automatically Liable for Entire Amount. — While section (a) of this rule permits a defendant to implead a person not a party to the action who is or may be liable to defendant for all or part of the plaintiff's claim against him, it does not follow that a person who has been impleaded is automatically liable for the entire amount of the judgment in the main action. Heath v. Board of Comm'r, 40 N.C. App. 233, 252 S.E.2d 543, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 453, 256 S.E.2d 807 (1979).

Allowing a defendant indemnitee to implead a third-party defendant before the indemnitee has paid the debt owing to the plaintiff does not create any new substantive rights in the indemnitee. But a cause of action now arises in the indemnitee where he impleads a third-party defendant before he pays the claim for which the indemnitor must reimburse him. Heath v. Board of Comm'rs, 292 N.C. 369, 233 S.E.2d 889 (1977).

State may be joined as a third-party defendant, whether in an action for contribution or in an action for indemnification, in the State courts. Teachy v. Coble Dairies, Inc., 306 N.C. 324, 293 S.E.2d 182 (1982); Columbus County Auto Auction, Inc. v. Aycock Auction Co., 90 N.C. App. 439, 368 S.E.2d 888 (1988).

As Evidenced by the 1981 Amendment. — The essence of the 1981 amendment evidences the legislature's intent to allow the State to be sued as a third-party defendant in the State courts. This was the legislature's initial intention in enacting section (c) of this rule, and the 1981 amendment is a clarification of this rather than an alteration. Teachy v. Coble Dairies, Inc., 306 N.C. 324, 293 S.E.2d 182 (1982).

Where the State was the subject of an action as a third-party defendant for indemnification pursuant to subsection (c) of this rule, the trial court erred when it dismissed a third-party complaint against the Department of Transportation. Columbus County Auto Auction, Inc. v. Aycock Auction Co., 90 N.C. App. 439, 368 S.E.2d 888 (1988).

Standing of Third-Party Defendant to Appeal. — Where third-party defendant not only had an opportunity to participate, but, in fact, did fully participate in the determination of third-party plaintiff's liability and was bound by the judgment in favor of plaintiff entered against defendants as third-party plaintiffs, it was clearly an aggrieved party within the meaning of § 1-271; therefore, third-party defendant had standing to appeal the judgment entered against third-party plaintiffs. Barker v. Agee, 326 N.C. 470, 389 S.E.2d 803 (1990).

Dismissal of Third-Party Complaint. — In divorce action where husband filed an answer in which he asserted a counterclaim against wife and a third-party complaint against third-party defendant bank and where he alleged that wife fraudulently obtained an equity line of credit from the bank, secured by a deed of trust on the marital home, without his knowledge and consent and through his forged signature which was purportedly "witnessed" by bank employees, the court did not err in dismissing the third-party complaint; wife's claims against husband were for an absolute divorce and for an equitable distribution of the marital property, and the bank could not be held liable to husband should an absolute divorce be granted; if the transaction resulting in the deed of trust is found to have been entered into without husband's consent and knowledge, the debts secured by the deed of trust would be held to be separate to wife; any misconduct by wife affecting the value of the property would also be considered in distributing the property. McCollum v. McCollum, 102 N.C. App. 347, 401 S.E.2d 773 (1991).

Party Dismissed from Action Not Bound by Judgment Therein. — The general rule that a person who was once a party to an action, but has been dismissed from it, is not bound by a judgment entered therein after he ceases to be a party is not altered by this rule, particularly where the third-party defendant has not had an opportunity to contest the determinations made in the main action. Heath v. Board of Comm'r, 40 N.C. App. 233, 252 S.E.2d 543, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 453, 256 S.E.2d 807 (1979).

Where circumstances require separate trials after an impleader under this rule, the better practice is to try the principal action first. Falls Sales Co. v. Board of Transp., 292 N.C. 437, 233 S.E.2d 569 (1977).

Even though, under section (c) of this rule, the State may be made a third party in a tort action, the rules governing liability and the limits of liability of the State and its agencies as provided in the State Tort Claims Act, § 143-291 et seq., apply. Guthrie v. North Carolina State Ports Auth., 307 N.C. 522, 299 S.E.2d 618 (1983).

Applied in Millsaps v. Wilkes Contracting Co., 14 N.C. App. 321, 188 S.E.2d 663 (1972); Smith v. Garrett, 32 N.C. App. 108, 230 S.E.2d 775 (1977); Wolfe v. Wolfe, 64 N.C. App. 249, 307 S.E.2d 400 (1983).

Rule 15. Amended and supplemental pleadings.

(a) Amendments. — A party may amend his pleading once as a matter of course at any time before a responsive pleading is served or, if the pleading is one to which no responsive pleading is permitted and the action has not been placed upon the trial calendar, he may so amend it at any time within 30 days after it is served. Otherwise a party may amend his pleading only by leave of court or by written consent of the adverse party; and leave shall be freely given when justice so requires. A party shall plead in response to an amended pleading within 30 days after service of the amended pleading, unless the court otherwise orders.

(b) Amendments to conform to the evidence. — When issues not raised by the pleadings are tried by the express or implied consent of the parties, they shall be treated in all respects as if they had been raised in the pleadings. Such amendment of the pleadings as may be necessary to cause them to conform to the evidence and to raise these issues may be made upon motion of any party at any time, either before or after judgment, but failure so to amend does not affect the result of the trial of these issues. If evidence is objected to at the trial on the ground that it is not within the issues raised by the pleadings, the court may allow the pleadings to be amended and shall do so freely when the presentation of the merits of the action will be served thereby and the objecting party fails to satisfy the court that the admission of such evidence would prejudice him in maintaining his action or defense upon the merits. The court may grant a continuance to enable the objecting party to meet such evidence.

(c) Relation back of amendments. — A claim asserted in an amended pleading is deemed to have been interposed at the time the claim in the original pleading was interposed, unless the original pleading does not give notice of the transactions, occurrences, or series of transactions or occurrences, to be proved pursuant to the amended pleading.

(d) Supplemental pleadings. — Upon motion of a party the court may, upon reasonable notice and upon such terms as are just, permit him to serve a supplemental pleading setting forth transactions or occurrences or events which may have happened since the date of the pleading sought to be supplemented, whether or not the original pleading is defective in its statement of a claim for relief or defense. If the court deems it advisable that the adverse party plead thereto, it shall so order, specifying the time therefor. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

This rule is, except for section (c), substantially a counterpart to federal Rule 15. Section (c) is drawn from the New York Civil Practice Law and Rules, Rule 3025. As such, it deals with a most critical aspect of the whole approach of these rules to the pleading function. This is most obvious in its basic directive for the allowing of amendments to pleading. In this aspect, its approach is generally that of the codes, with the basic theme being to allow amendment as of right up to the time that the opponent has taken his initial position by responsive pleading, and thereafter to make the privilege to amend more and more difficult to obtain as the litigation progresses and positions may accordingly have become more and more hardened on the basis of the original pleadings. However, a fundamental change of approach from existing practice is taken in (1) the generality with which this basic theme is formulated and (2) this rule's abandonment in terms of the whole variance conception so integral a part of the code amendment scheme.

Section (a). — This section first states the rule for amendment as of right up to responsive pleading time, thus basically making no change in the former law, § 1-161. But then, in dealing with the whole problem of discretionary amendments after this time and up to the time that amendments are sought to conform to proof already adduced, this rule merely lays down the simple directive that leave to amend in this interval shall be freely given "when justice so requires." This is a deliberate abandonment of the typical code approach, as found in former § 1-163, which attempted in tortuous fashion to lay down detailed directives for the exercise of this discretion. The result of this code formulation has been to necessitate equally tortured judicial construction which, instructively, still continues, 100 years after the code's adoption. See, e.g., Perkins v. Langdon, 233 N.C. 240, 63 S.E.2d 565 (1951). However, the phrase "as justice requires" has acted as an effective limitation on the amendment privilege in the federal courts. For when, on a whole view of the matter, as is frequently the case, it is determined that justice does not require a particular amendment, or that, to the contrary, positive injustice to the opposing party would result, amendment has been denied. See, e.g., Friedman v. Transamerica Corp., 5 F.R.D. 115 (D. Del. 1946); Portsmouth Baseball Corp. v. Frick, 21 F.R.D. 318 (S.D.N.Y.

1958). This is a much preferable type directive to the detailed code directive which has seemed to necessitate an obviously mechanical jurisprudence in its application. Perkins v. Langdon, supra.

The last sentence of section (a) involves a departure of obvious import from the federal rule timetable.

Section (b). — This section involves the second major change in concept from code practice. Dealing with the problem of trial time amendments necessitated by the failure of proof to conform in some degree with pleadings, it deliberately abandons the laboriously constructed code scheme of immaterial variance, material variance and total failure of proof (former §§ 1-168, 1-169), and lays down a directive based directly upon the truly legitimate policy consideration which should control amendment privilege here, namely, whether, notwithstanding variance of some degree, there has nevertheless been informed consent to try the issues on the evidence presented. Here again, limitation on amendment privilege is sufficiently insured by the phrases, "when the presentation of the merits of the action will be served thereby," and its twin, "and the objecting party fails to satisfy the court that the admission of such evidence would prejudice him." Indeed, it seems quite clear that the code directive was actually designed to get the same result, but that the very detail of its formulation led to a drift into a very mechanical approach which has now largely subverted the "litigation by consent" doctrine in North Carolina. See Note, 41 N.C.L. Rev. 647 (1963). Finally, the last sentence of this section inserts a final safeguard in its reminder of the continuance possibility.

Section (c). — This section deals with the extremely difficult matter of determining when amendments should "relate back" for statute of limitation purposes by posing the broad question of the relation between the new matter and the basic aggregate of historical facts upon which the original claim or defense is based. This deliberately avoids the more abstruse inquiry under the codes as to whether the amendment involves a "wholly different cause of action or defense." It is believed that this approach is a distinct improvement in its express reliance on the truly valid consideration of identity in the historical fact sense. Wachtell's comment on the provision in the New York Civil Practice Law and Rules from which section (c) is drawn is equally pertinent here. The rule, he says, is that "a cause of action in an amended pleading will be deemed to relate back to the commencement of the action if the original pleading gave notice of the transactions, occurrences, or series of transactions or occurrences to be proved under the amended pleading. The amended pleading will therefore relate back if the new pleading merely amplifies the old cause of action, or now even if the new pleading constitutes a new cause of action, provided that the defending party had originally been placed on notice of the events involved. For example, an amended cause of action for damages for breach of a contract would relate back where the original pleading alleged an action in equity to rescind the contract for fraud. And an amended cause of action against defendants for breach of an implied warranty of agency in entering into a contract would relate back even though the original pleading had alleged a cause of action upon the contract against the defendants as principals." Wachtell, N.Y. Practice Under the C.P.L.R. (1963), p. 141.

Section (d). — This section is in effect a general counterpart to former § 1-167, without some of the specific detail. No practical change in the procedure for filing supplemental pleadings should result under this rule.

V. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

This rule reflects the general policy of proceeding to the merits of an action. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 N.C. App. 40, 187 S.E.2d 420 (1972).

The rules achieve their purpose of insuring a speedy trial on the merits by providing for and encouraging liberal amendments to conform pleadings and evidence under section (a), by pretrial order under § 1A-1, Rule 16, during and after reception of evidence under section (b) of this rule, and after entry of judgment under section (b) and § 1A-1, Rules 59 and 60. Such amendments are made upon motion and with leave of court, by express consent, and by implied consent. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972).

The Rules of Civil Procedure achieve their purpose of assuring a speedy trial by providing for and encouraging liberal amendments to the pleadings under this rule. Taylor v. Triangle Porsche-Audi, Inc., 27 N.C. App. 711, 220 S.E.2d 806 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 619, 223 S.E.2d 396 (1976).

As a general rule, once judgment is entered, amendment of the complaint is not allowed unless the judgment is set aside or vacated under § 1A-1, Rule 59 or § 1A-1, Rule 60. Chrisalis Properties, Inc. v. Separate Quarters, Inc., 101 N.C. App. 81, 398 S.E.2d 628 (1990), discretionary review denied, 328 N.C. 570, 403 S.E.2d 509 (1991).

The pleading with particularity required by § 1A-1, Rule 9(b) is complemented by section (b) of this rule. Benfield v. Costner, 67 N.C. App. 444, 313 S.E.2d 203 (1984).

Federal Rule Compared with Section (a). — Except for differences in time allotments, section (a) of this rule is identical to its federal counterpart. Gro-Mar Pub. Relations, Inc. v. Billy Jack Enters., Inc., 36 N.C. App. 673, 245 S.E.2d 782 (1978).

Section (a) of this rule is virtually identical to its federal counterpart. United Leasing Corp. v. Miller, 60 N.C. App. 40, 298 S.E.2d 409 (1982), cert. denied, 308 N.C. 194, 302 S.E.2d 248 (1983).

As the official comment makes clear, the last sentence of section (a) of this rule was expressly intended to depart from the federal rule time table. Hyder v. Dergance, 76 N.C. App. 317, 332 S.E.2d 713 (1985).

As to liberal construction of this rule, see Watson v. Watson, 49 N.C. App. 58, 270 S.E.2d 542 (1980).

Issue Tried by Implied Consent of Parties Though Not in Pleadings. — In case alleging retaliatory discharge where both parties introduced a considerable amount of evidence regarding the financial condition of defendant and its relation to the termination of plaintiff's employment, the financial hardship issue was tried by the implied consent of the parties and should have been treated as if it was raised in the pleadings. Johnson v. Friends of Weymouth, Inc., 120 N.C. App. 255, 461 S.E.2d 801 (1995).

This rule contemplates liberality on the part of the court in allowing amendments to the pleadings. Performance Motors, Inc. v. Allen, 20 N.C. App. 445, 201 S.E.2d 513 (1974); Goodrich v. Rice, 75 N.C. App. 530, 331 S.E.2d 195 (1985).

Liberal amendment of pleadings is encouraged by the Rules of Civil Procedure. McGinnis v. Robinson, 43 N.C. App. 1, 258 S.E.2d 84 (1979).

It is fundamental to the concepts embodied in section (b) of this rule that amendments to pleadings and relation back of such amendments should be liberal in their allowance and application. The rule, in fact, encourages liberal amendment of pleadings. Discretion in the trial judge is not unlimited, however, and the amendment should not be granted when the opposing party would be prejudiced. Roper v. Thomas, 60 N.C. App. 64, 298 S.E.2d 424 (1982), cert. denied, 308 N.C. 191, 302 S.E.2d 244 (1983).

The Rules of Civil Procedure permit a liberal use of amendments to a party's theory of recovery. Taylor v. Gillespie, 66 N.C. App. 302, 311 S.E.2d 362, cert. denied, 310 N.C. 748, 315 S.E.2d 710 (1984).

Leave to amend should be freely given. Carolina Garage, Inc. v. Holston, 40 N.C. App. 400, 253 S.E.2d 7 (1979); Saintsing v. Taylor, 57 N.C. App. 467, 291 S.E.2d 880, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 558, 294 S.E.2d 224 (1982).

And amendments should always be freely allowed unless some material prejudice is demonstrated, for it is the essence of the rules that decisions be had on the merits and not be avoided on the basis of mere technicalities. Mangum v. Surles, 281 N.C. 91, 187 S.E.2d 697 (1972); Phillips v. Phillips, 46 N.C. App. 558, 265 S.E.2d 441 (1980); Mauney v.

Morris, 316 N.C. 67, 340 S.E.2d 397 (1986).

Leave to amend should be freely given except where the party objecting can show that he would be materially prejudiced. Auman v. Easter, 36 N.C. App. 551, 244 S.E.2d 728, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 548, 248 S.E.2d 725 (1978); Boudreau v. Baughman, 86 N.C. App. 165, 356 S.E.2d 907 (1987), rev'd and remanded in part, modified and aff'd in part, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

This rule allows issues to be raised by liberal amendments to pleadings, and, in some cases, by the evidence, the effect of the rule being to allow amendment by implied consent to change the legal theory of the cause of action so long as the opposing party has not been prejudiced in presenting his case. Taylor v. Gillespie, 66 N.C. App. 302, 311 S.E.2d 362, cert. denied, 310 N.C. 748, 315 S.E.2d 710 (1984).

But Court May Consider Countervailing Legislative Purposes. — While leave of court shall be freely given when justice so requires, and while justice might often so require where a layman appearing pro se inadvertently fails to conform to technical legal requirements, judicial discretion may properly be exercised to subordinate these concerns to readily discernible countervailing legislative intent. Jones v. Boyce, 60 N.C. App. 585, 299 S.E.2d 298 (1983).

Justification for Denial of Motion to Amend. — Although a trial court is not required to state specific reasons for denial of a motion to amend, reasons that would justify a denial are (a) undue delay, (b) bad faith, (c) undue prejudice, (d) futility of amendment, and (e) repeated failure to cure defects by previous amendments. Chicopee, Inc. v. Sims Metal Works, Inc., 98 N.C. App. 423, 391 S.E.2d 211, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 426, 395 S.E.2d 674 (1990).

Reasons justifying denial of an amendment are: (a) undue delay, (b) bad faith, (c) undue prejudice, (d) futility of amendment, and (e) repeated failure to cure defects by previous amendments. Martin v. Hare, 78 N.C. App. 358, 337 S.E.2d 632 (1985).

Reasons justifying denial of a motion to amend include (a) undue delay, (b) undue prejudice, and (c) futility of amendment. Members Interior Constr., Inc. v. Leader Constr. Co., 124 N.C. App. 121, 476 S.E.2d 399 (1996).

Proper reasons for denying a motion to amend include undue delay by the moving party, unfair prejudice to the nonmoving party, bad faith, futility of the amendment, and repeated failure to cure defects by previous amendments. Delta Envtl. Consultants of N.C., Inc. v. Wysong & Miles Co., — N.C. App. —, 510 S.E.2d 690 (1999).

Amendment to Correct Name. — If the effect of an amendment is merely to correct the name of a person already in court, there is no prejudice. This is true even though the change relates back to the date of the original complaint. Thorpe v. Wilson, 58 N.C. App. 292, 293 S.E.2d 675 (1982).

Six Months Delay Too Long to Amend Name. — When, after being informed by named defendant that they were not the proper defendant, plaintiffs waited over six months to file amended complaint, defendant properly asserted the statute of limitations as a bar to plaintiffs' effort to correct the name of the party already in court. Franklin v. Winn Dixie Raleigh, Inc., 117 N.C. App. 28, 450 S.E.2d 24 (1994), aff'd, 342 N.C. 404, 464 S.E.2d 46 (1995).

This Rule applies to adoption proceedings. In re Clark, 95 N.C. App. 1, 381 S.E.2d 835 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 327 N.C. 61, 393 S.E.2d 791 (1990).

Joinder of Putative Father in Adoption Proceedings. — Even if putative father's consent to adoption was necessary, petitioners' failure to join him at the time they filed their original adoption petition did not authorize the trial court to dismiss the adoption proceeding without first giving petitioners the opportunity to join putative father within a reasonable time. In re Clark, 95 N.C. App. 1, 381 S.E.2d 835 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 327 N.C. 61, 393 S.E.2d 791 (1990).

Failure to Make Motion in Timely Fashion. — Trial court did not err in denying plaintiffs' motion to amend their complaint where plaintiffs knew of the purchase of insurance for nearly two and a half years, and failed to amend their complaint to allege this until the motions hearing when defendants moved to dismiss the action based on plaintiffs' failure to so plead. Gunter v. Anders, 115 N.C. App. 331, 444 S.E.2d 685 (1994), cert. denied, 339 N.C. 612, 454 S.E.2d 250, cert. dismissed, 339 N.C. 738, 454 S.E.2d 651 (1995).

Amendment in Order to State Legal Theory. — Discretionary amendments are to be freely granted unless the opposing party would be prejudiced; amending pleadings to more accurately state the legal theory supported by the factual allegations already present in the complaint would not result in unfair surprise to defendant. Smith v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 96 N.C. App. 215, 385 S.E.2d 152 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 365, 389 S.E.2d 816 (1990).

Amendment to Add Defense. — Trial court did not err by allowing defendants to amend their respective answers to add defense that renewal insurance policy gave insufficient notice. North River Ins. Co. v. Young, 117 N.C. App. 663, 453 S.E.2d 205 (1995).

Amendment to add a § 58-63-15(11) claim was denied where it was not shown that defendant understood the alleged extraneous evidence was aimed at establishing a violation of § 58-63-15(11) rather than proving an issue actually raised by the pleadings. Members Interior Constr., Inc. v. Leader Constr. Co., 124 N.C. App. 121, 476 S.E.2d 399 (1996).

Amendment to Petition for Certiorari. — The trial court had the authority to grant an adjoining property owner's motion to amend her petition for certiorari, despite her failure to allege that she was an aggrieved party, since the petition was a "pleading" within the meaning of this rule. Darnell v. Town of Franklin, — N.C. App. —, 508 S.E.2d 841 (1998).

Plaintiff's right to amend is lost if trial court grants defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings, even where trial court grants plaintiff leave to amend on the court's own motion. Sentry Enters., Inc. v. Canal Wood Corp., 94 N.C. App. 293, 380 S.E.2d 152 (1989).

Effect on Jurisdiction. — When original process has been served properly and amendments to it are to make process and pleadings consistent, the court will retain jurisdiction. Jones v. Whitaker, 59 N.C. App. 223, 296 S.E.2d 27 (1982).

Burden of Party Objecting to Amendment. — The party objecting to an amendment has the burden of specifying the grounds of objection and of satisfying the court that he will be prejudiced by admission of the evidence or by litigation of the issues raised by the evidence. The objecting party must meet these requirements in order to avoid "litigation by consent" or allowance of a motion to amend. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972); Watson v. Watson, 49 N.C. App. 58, 270 S.E.2d 542 (1980).

Leave to amend should be freely given when justice so requires, and the burden is on the party objecting to the amendment to show that he would be prejudiced thereby. Vernon v. Crist, 291 N.C. 646, 231 S.E.2d 591 (1977); Gro-Mar Pub. Relations, Inc. v. Billy Jack Enters., Inc., 36 N.C. App. 673, 245 S.E.2d 782 (1978); F. Indus., Inc. v. Cox, 45 N.C. App. 595, 263 S.E.2d 791 (1980); Kinnard v. Mecklenburg Fair, Ltd., 46 N.C. App. 725, 266 S.E.2d 14, aff'd, 301 N.C. 522, 271 S.E.2d 909 (1980).

The party objecting to the amendment has the burden of satisfying the trial court that he would be prejudiced thereby. Carolina Garage, Inc. v. Holston, 40 N.C. App. 400, 253 S.E.2d 7 (1979); Watson v. Watson, 49 N.C. App. 58, 270 S.E.2d 542 (1980); Saintsing v. Taylor, 57 N.C. App. 467, 291 S.E.2d 880, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 558, 294 S.E.2d 224 (1982).

Burden of Party Objecting to Amendment. — The party objecting to the amendment has the burden of establishing it will be materially prejudiced by the amendment. North River Ins. Co. v. Young, 117 N.C. App. 663, 453 S.E.2d 205 (1995).

Plaintiffs Should Have Sought Leave to Amend Although Claim Raised in Answer. — Where the essence of plaintiffs' complaint and amended complaint was that defendants made unauthorized and unwarranted diversions of school bond proceeds to purposes other than those authorized by the bond resolution, namely for purchase and renovation of the Square D facility, and where neither complaint included an allegation that monies from other sources of revenue were improperly diverted, although defense, asserted in the answer of the Board of Education defendants, raised a claim of misappropriation of revenues other than bond proceeds, the trial court did not err in limiting denial of defendants' motions to dismiss to only the allegations relating to the propriety of the expenditure of school bond proceeds on the Square D facility; if plaintiffs desired to add a claim that defendants diverted sources of revenue other than school bond proceeds, plaintiffs should have sought leave to amend under this rule. Moore v. Wykle, 107 N.C. App. 120, 419 S.E.2d 164, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 666, 424 S.E.2d 405 (1992).

The burden is upon the party objecting to the amendment to set forth the grounds for his objection and to establish that he will be prejudiced if the motion is allowed. Rogers v. Rogers, 39 N.C. App. 635, 251 S.E.2d 663 (1979); Helena Chem. Co. v. Rivenbark, 45 N.C. App. 517, 263 S.E.2d 305 (1980); Evans v. Craddock, 61 N.C. App. 438, 300 S.E.2d 908 (1983).

The burden is on the objecting party to show that he would be prejudiced by an amendment. Henry v. Deen, 61 N.C. App. 189, 300 S.E.2d 707 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 310 N.C. 75, 310 S.E.2d 326 (1984); Mauney v. Morris, 316 N.C. 67, 340 S.E.2d 397 (1986).

The party opposing an amendment carries the burden of demonstrating prejudice. In a complicated medical malpractice case, particularly where discovery has been hotly contested and important evidence turns up missing, merely showing delay beyond the statutory period will not suffice as evidence of prejudice. To hold otherwise would negate the very policies embodied in this rule, i.e., liberal allowance of amendments, and availability of relation back, to ensure that controversies are decided on the merits. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

The party who objects to the amendment has the burden of proving prejudice. Peed v. Peed, 72 N.C. App. 549, 325 S.E.2d 275, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 604, 330 S.E.2d 612 (1985).

For amendment to be proper under this rule, there must be evidence of an unpleaded issue introduced without objection, and it must appear that the parties understood, or at least reasonably should have understood, that the evidence was aimed at an issue not expressly pleaded. Yet, even when the evidence is objected to on the grounds that it is not within the issues raised by the pleadings, the court will freely allow amendments to present the merits of the case when the objecting party fails to satisfy the court that he would be prejudiced in the trial on its merits. Peed v. Peed, 72 N.C. App. 549, 325 S.E.2d 275, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 604, 330 S.E.2d 612 (1985); Mauney v. Morris, 316 N.C. 67, 340 S.E.2d 397 (1986).

Consent Presumed Absent Objection on Proper Grounds. — If opposing counsel fails to object on the proper grounds, a presumption will arise that consent is given to the broadened scope of the trial. Under this presumption all issues raised will be treated as if they were in the pleadings. Harris v. Bridges, 59 N.C. App. 195, 296 S.E.2d 299 (1982).

Where a party offers evidence at trial which introduces a new issue and there is no objection by the opposing party, the opposing party is viewed as having consented to the admission of the evidence and the pleadings are deemed amended to include the new issue. Byrd v. Byrd, 62 N.C. App. 438, 303 S.E.2d 205 (1983).

Where defendant did not object to the introduction of certain evidence, the pleadings were amended by implication. Formal permission of the court was not required, although the better practice is that the party benefitted should move to amend the pleadings to reflect the theory of recovery. By failing to make timely objection to the introduction of the evidence at variance with the pleadings, defendant waived his right to assert such ground on appeal. Taylor v. Gillespie, 66 N.C. App. 302, 311 S.E.2d 362, cert. denied, 310 N.C. 748, 315 S.E.2d 710 (1984).

Where the opposing party does not object to evidence outside the issues raised by the pleadings, the issue is tried with his implied consent. Benfield v. Costner, 67 N.C. App. 444, 313 S.E.2d 203 (1984).

The defendant indicated his consent to the amended complaint, allegedly filed without leave of the court or the written consent of the defendant, by filing an answer, by responding to the allegations within it, and by submitting materials in support of his motion for summary judgment. Watts v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 75 N.C. App. 1, 330 S.E.2d 242 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 317 N.C. 321, 345 S.E.2d 201 (1986).

A formal amendment is needed only when evidence is objected to at trial as not within the scope of the pleadings. Taylor v. Gillespie, 66 N.C. App. 302, 311 S.E.2d 362, cert. denied, 310 N.C. 748, 315 S.E.2d 710 (1984).

Under certain circumstances a pleading may be deemed amended by implication when evidence outside the scope of the pleading has been received without objection, which evidence constitutes a substantial feature of a case; in such situation no formal amendment of the pleading is required. Hord v. Atkinson, 68 N.C. App. 346, 315 S.E.2d 339 (1984).

Unless Evidence Is Also Relevant to Support Issue Raised by Pleadings. — Under North Carolina's "notice theory of pleading," a trial proceeds on the issues raised by the pleadings unless the pleadings are amended. If an issue not raised by the pleadings is tried by the "implied consent" of the parties, the pleadings are deemed amended. When, however, the evidence used to support the new issue would also be relevant to support the issue raised by the pleadings, the defendant has not been put on notice of plaintiff's new or alternate theory. Gilbert v. Thomas, 64 N.C. App. 582, 307 S.E.2d 853 (1983).

Discretion of Court. — Whether a motion to amend a pleading is allowed or denied is addressed to the sound discretion of the court and is accorded great deference. North River Ins. Co. v. Young, 117 N.C. App. 663, 453 S.E.2d 205 (1995).

The trial court has broad discretion in permitting or denying amendments. Helson's Premiums & Gifts, Inc. v. Duncan, 9 N.C. App. 653, 177 S.E.2d 428 (1970); Galligan v. Smith, 14 N.C. App. 220, 188 S.E.2d 31, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 514, 189 S.E.2d 36 (1972).

In a motion to amend addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, the trial court has broad discretion in permitting or denying amendments. Markham v. Johnson, 15 N.C. App. 139, 189 S.E.2d 588, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 758, 191 S.E.2d 356 (1972).

Section (a) of this rule gives trial courts extensive discretion in determining whether or not leave to amend will be granted after the time for amending as a matter of course has expired. Willow Mt. Corp. v. Parker, 37 N.C. App. 718, 247 S.E.2d 11, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 738, 248 S.E.2d 867 (1978); Tyson v. Ciba-Geigy Corp., 82 N.C. App. 626, 347 S.E.2d 473 (1986).

A motion for leave to file an amended complaint is addressed to the discretion of the trial court. Flores v. Caldwell, 14 N.C. App. 144, 187 S.E.2d 377 (1972).

The motion to amend is properly addressed to the discretion of the trial court, who must weigh the motion in light of the attendant circumstances. Gladstein v. South Square Assocs., 39 N.C. App. 171, 249 S.E.2d 827 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 736, 254 S.E.2d 178 (1979); Saintsing v. Taylor, 57 N.C. App. 467, 291 S.E.2d 880, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 558, 294 S.E.2d 224 (1982).

This rule provides for broad discretion on the part of the court in allowing motions to amend a complaint after the answer is filed. Forbes v. Pillmon, 18 N.C. App. 439, 197 S.E.2d 226 (1973).

Rulings on motions to amend after the expiration of the statutory period are within the discretion of the trial court; that discretion is clearly not abused when granting the motion would be a futile gesture. Lee v. Keck, 68 N.C. App. 320, 315 S.E.2d 323, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 401, 319 S.E.2d 271 (1984).

A motion to amend a pleading, made more than 30 days after the original pleading is served, is addressed to the discretion of the trial court. Norlin Indus., Inc. v. Music Arts, Inc., 67 N.C. App. 300, 313 S.E.2d 166, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 403, 319 S.E.2d 273 (1984).

Under this rule, the trial judge had broad discretion to permit or deny defendant's motion to amend her answer to allege a counterclaim six months after her original answer was filed, whether the counterclaim to be alleged was compulsory or permissive. Grant & Hastings, P.A. v. Arlin, 77 N.C. App. 813, 336 S.E.2d 111 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 376, 342 S.E.2d 894 (1986).

Ruling on defendant's motion to amend its answer is within the discretion of the trial court. Hatfield v. Jefferson Std. Life Ins. Co., 85 N.C. App. 438, 355 S.E.2d 199, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 512, 358 S.E.2d 519 (1987).

Trial court has broad discretion in permitting or denying amendments after the time for amending as a matter of law has expired. Banner v. Banner, 86 N.C. App. 397, 358 S.E.2d 110, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 790, 361 S.E.2d 70 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

But Judge's Discretion Is Not Unlimited. — Although the ruling on a motion to allow supplemental pleadings is within the trial judge's discretion, that discretion is not unlimited. Generally, however, the motion should be allowed unless its allowance would impose a substantial injustice upon the opposing party. VanDooren v. VanDooren, 37 N.C. App. 333, 246 S.E.2d 20, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 258 (1978).

Although the spirit of the North Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure is to permit parties to proceed on the merits without the strict and technical pleading rules of the past, the rules still provide some protection for parties who may be prejudiced by liberal amendments. Henry v. Deen, 310 N.C. 75, 310 S.E.2d 326 (1984).

While the grant or denial of an opportunity to amend pleadings is within the discretion of the trial court, the refusal to grant such leave without any justifying reason for the denial is not an exercise of discretion; it is merely abuse of that discretion. Coffey v. Coffey, 94 N.C. App. 717, 381 S.E.2d 467 (1989).

In the absence of any apparent or declared reason — such as undue delay, bad faith or dilatory motive on the part of the movant, repeated failure to cure deficiencies by amendments previously allowed, undue prejudice to the opposing party by virtue of allowance of the amendment, futility of amendment, etc. — the leave sought should, as the rules require, be freely given. Of course, the grant or denial of an opportunity to amend is within the discretion of the court, but outright refusal to grant the leave without any justifying reason appearing for the denial is not an exercise of discretion; it is merely abuse of that discretion. Henry v. Deen, 61 N.C. App. 189, 300 S.E.2d 707 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 310 N.C. 75, 310 S.E.2d 326 (1984).

Court's Ruling Not Reviewable Absent Showing of Abuse. — A motion to amend the pleadings is addressed to the discretion of the trial judge, and is not reviewable on appeal in the absence of a showing of an abuse of discretion. Mangum v. Surles, 12 N.C. App. 547, 183 S.E.2d 839 (1971), rev'd on other grounds, 281 N.C. 91, 187 S.E.2d 697 (1972); Carolina Garage, Inc. v. Holston, 40 N.C. App. 400, 253 S.E.2d 7 (1979); Tyson v. Ciba-Geigy Corp., 82 N.C. App. 626, 347 S.E.2d 473 (1986); Banner v. Banner, 86 N.C. App. 397, 358 S.E.2d 110, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 790, 361 S.E.2d 70 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

The discretion of the trial court in allowing amendments is not reviewable absent a showing of abuse thereof. Willow Mt. Corp. v. Parker, 37 N.C. App. 718, 247 S.E.2d 11, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 738, 248 S.E.2d 867 (1978); Evans v. Craddock, 61 N.C. App. 438, 300 S.E.2d 908 (1983); Mauney v. Morris, 316 N.C. 67, 340 S.E.2d 397 (1986); Boudreau v. Baughman, 86 N.C. App. 165, 356 S.E.2d 907 (1987), rev'd and remanded in part, modified and aff'd in part, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988), modified on other grounds, 316 N.C. 16, 340 S.E.2d 397 (1986).

The trial judge has broad discretionary powers to permit amendments to any pleading, and the court's ruling is not reviewable on appeal in absence of a showing of abuse of discretion. Rogers v. Rogers, 39 N.C. App. 635, 251 S.E.2d 663 (1979).

While the burden is on the party objecting to the amendment to show that he would be prejudiced thereby, a motion under section (a) of this rule is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and the denial of such motion is not reviewable absent a clear showing of an abuse of discretion. Edwards v. Edwards, 43 N.C. App. 296, 259 S.E.2d 11 (1979); United Leasing Corp. v. Miller, 60 N.C. App. 40, 298 S.E.2d 409 (1982), cert. denied, 308 N.C. 194, 302 S.E.2d 248 (1983).

A motion to amend under this rule is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and the denial of such motion is not reviewable absent a clear showing of an abuse of discretion. Smith v. McRary, 306 N.C. 664, 295 S.E.2d 444 (1982); Doub v. Doub, 68 N.C.

App. 718, 315 S.E.2d 732, modified on other grounds, 313 N.C. 169, 326 S.E.2d 259 (1985); Mauney v. Morris, 73 N.C. App. 589, 327 S.E.2d 248 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 316 N.C. 16, 340 S.E.2d 397 (1986).

Discretion in allowing amendment of pleadings is vested in the trial judge, and his ruling will not be disturbed on appeal absent a showing of prejudice to the opposing party. Goodrich v. Rice, 75 N.C. App. 530, 331 S.E.2d 195 (1985).

A motion to amend is directed to the discretion of the trial court, and the exercise of the court's discretion is not reviewable absent a clear showing of abuse. Martin v. Hare, 78 N.C. App. 358, 337 S.E.2d 632 (1985); Pressman v. UNC, 78 N.C. App. 296, 337 S.E.2d 644 (1985).

A motion to amend is addressed to the discretion of the trial court and is not reviewable on appeal absent a showing of abuse of discretion. DOT v. Bollinger, 121 N.C. App. 606, 468 S.E.2d 796 (1996).

After the statutory time for amending pleadings as a matter of course has elapsed, a motion to amend a complaint pursuant to section (a) of this rule is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and the denial of such motion is not reviewable on appeal absent a clear showing of abuse. Caldwell's Well Drilling, Inc. v. Moore, 79 N.C. App. 730, 340 S.E.2d 518 (1986).

Motion Must Be Weighed in Light of Circumstances. — In deciding whether or not to allow an amendment. the trial court must weigh the motion in light of the attendant circumstances. Banner v. Banner, 86 N.C. App. 397, 358 S.E.2d 110, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 790, 361 S.E.2d 70 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

Absent any declared reason for denial of leave to amend, the appellate court may examine any apparent reasons for such denial. Kinnard v. Mecklenburg Fair, Ltd., 46 N.C. App. 725, 266 S.E.2d 14, aff'd, 301 N.C. 522, 271 S.E.2d 909 (1980); United Leasing Corp. v. Miller, 60 N.C. App. 40, 298 S.E.2d 409 (1982), cert. denied, 308 N.C. 194, 302 S.E.2d 248 (1983); Banner v. Banner, 86 N.C. App. 397, 358 S.E.2d 110, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 790, 361 S.E.2d 70 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991); Delta Envtl. Consultants of N.C., Inc. v. Wysong & Miles Co., — N.C. App. —, 510 S.E.2d 690 (1999).

Denial of a motion to amend without a justifying reason and no showing of prejudice to defendant, and apparently based on a misapprehension of the law, is an abuse of discretion and reversible error. Henry v. Deen, 61 N.C. App. 189, 300 S.E.2d 707 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 310 N.C. 75, 310 S.E.2d 326 (1984).

Denying a motion to amend without giving a reason for the denial is an abuse of discretion. Delta Envtl. Consultants of N.C., Inc. v. Wysong & Miles Co., — N.C. App. —, 510 S.E.2d 690 (1999).

Judge May Not Strike Motion Already Allowed by Another Judge. — When one judge allows a motion to amend a pleading in his discretion and the amendment is made in accordance with the authority granted, a second judge may not strike it on the ground that the first erred in allowing it. He is under the necessity of observing the terms of the judgment allowing the party to amend. Calloway v. Ford Motor Co., 281 N.C. 496, 189 S.E.2d 484 (1972).

Nor, Absent Changed Conditions, Allow Motion Already Denied. — When one superior court judge, in the exercise of his discretion, has made an order denying a motion to amend, absent changed conditions another superior court judge may not thereafter allow the motion. Calloway v. Ford Motor Co., 281 N.C. 496, 189 S.E.2d 484 (1972).

The power to allow amendments may not be exercised to upset or destroy the efficacy of a validly entered and jurisdictionally sound consent decree previously issued, in which the defense sought to be added by the amendment had been denied. Tridyn Indus., Inc. v. American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co., 46 N.C. App. 91, 264 S.E.2d 357 (1980).

A superior court judge erred in allowing defendant insurer to amend its answer to reassert the defense of lack of timely notice of a claim, where the parties had earlier agreed to a consent judgment striking the late notice defense, as this action contravened the rule that one superior court judge may not modify, overrule, or change the judgment of another superior court judge in the same action, and as the consent judgment was the binding contract of the parties, which could not be modified without the parties' consent. Tridyn Indus., Inc. v. American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co., 46 N.C. App. 91, 264 S.E.2d 357 (1980).

Effect of § 1A-1, Rule 12(a)(1)a. — In an action arising from a contract dispute, the court held that although section (a) of this rule mandates that defendant could only amend his answer after obtaining the court's permission of plaintiff's written consent, § 1A-1, Rule 12(a)(1)a expressly authorized defendant to file without permission those portions of his amended answer which were a responsive pleading to the paragraphs of the complaint subject to defendant's motion to strike. Brenner v. Little Red Sch. House, Ltd., 302 N.C. 207, 274 S.E.2d 206 (1981).

Amendment After Dismissal Under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6). — A motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) is not a "responsive pleading" under section (a) of this rule and so does not itself terminate plaintiff's unconditional right to amend a complaint under section (a).

However, once the trial court enters its dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6), plaintiff's right to amend under section (a) is terminated. Under certain limited circumstances set forth in § 1A-1, Rules 59(e) and 60(b), a plaintiff may, however, seek to reopen the trial court's judgment and amend the complaint concurrently under section (a). Johnson v. Bollinger, 86 N.C. App. 1, 356 S.E.2d 378 (1987).

Amendment Substituting or Adding Party. — If the effect of an amendment is to substitute for the defendant a new party, or to add another party, such amendment amounts to a new and independent cause of action and cannot be permitted when the statute of limitations has run. Callicutt v. American Honda Motor Co., 37 N.C. App. 210, 245 S.E.2d 558 (1978).

There is no time limit under this rule within which a party must move to amend. Gladstein v. South Square Assocs., 39 N.C. App. 171, 249 S.E.2d 827 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 736, 254 S.E.2d 178 (1979); Watson v. Watson, 49 N.C. App. 58, 270 S.E.2d 542 (1980).

Right to Amend Foreclosed by Dismissal of Action. — The granting of defendants' motion to dismiss a medical malpractice action pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 12(c) on the grounds that the action was barred by § 1-52 foreclosed the plaintiffs' right to amend their complaint pursuant to section (a) of this rule. Harris v. Family Medical Ctr., 38 N.C. App. 716, 248 S.E.2d 768 (1978).

Trial court's denial of plaintiff's motion to amend upheld. House of Raeford Farms, Inc. v. City of Raeford, 104 N.C. App. 280, 408 S.E.2d 885 (1991).

Denial of Defendants' Motion to Amend Answer. — Where defendants moved to amend their answer almost a full year from filing it and after both parties had conducted extensive discovery, and where, if the trial court had allowed amendment, plaintiffs would have been required to produce evidence of party's negligence approximately five years after the accident, at least on grounds of defendants' undue delay and undue prejudice to plaintiffs, the trial court was justified in denying defendants' motion to amend their answer. Patrick v. Ronald Williams, Professional Ass'n, 102 N.C. App. 355, 402 S.E.2d 452 (1991).

Amendment Properly Denied When Summary Judgment Granted. — The trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion to amend his answer to "elaborate on his expenses as a setoff" where at the same time it granted summary judgment rejecting defendant's setoff theory, as amendment of the complaint would have been futile. Olive v. Williams, 42 N.C. App. 380, 257 S.E.2d 90 (1979).

Denial of Amendment on Day of Hearing Upheld. — The trial court did not err in denying plaintiff's motion to amend his pleading in an action attacking an annexation ordinance to include a further section alleging failure on the part of defendant town to meet the prerequisites to annexation set forth in § 160A-47(3), where the motion to amend was not made until the day of hearing, since allowance of such amendment would have constituted unnecessary delay in an expedited hearing procedure. Moody v. Town of Carrboro, 301 N.C. 318, 271 S.E.2d 265 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 728, 274 S.E.2d 230 (1981).

Motion to amend complaint in a negligence action by adding a verification and by precisely pleading proximate cause should have been granted even though the motion was made on the same day the court signed a summary judgment order, since the defendants would have suffered no prejudice, and the amendment to correct technical pleading defects under § 1A-1, Rule 56(e) would have facilitated consideration of the action on all the evidence available to the court. Gladstein v. South Square Assocs., 39 N.C. App. 171, 249 S.E.2d 827 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 736, 254 S.E.2d 178 (1979).

Amendment Considered in Interests of Justice Despite Late Filing and Lack of Leave to File. — Although plaintiff's amended complaint was filed some 13 months after defendant's answer was served, and the trial court did not grant leave to file the amended complaint, the Court of Appeals addressed the merits of this case to prevent manifest injustice. Truesdale v. University of N.C., 91 N.C. App. 186, 371 S.E.2d 503 (1988), cert. denied, 323 N.C. 706, 377 S.E.2d 230, 493 U.S. 808, 110 S. Ct. 50, 107 L. Ed. 2d 19 (1989), overruled on other grounds, Corum v. University of N.C. ex rel. Bd. of Governors, 330 N.C. 761, 413 S.E.2d 276, reh'g denied, 331 N.C. 558, 418 S.E.2d 664, cert. denied, 506 U.S. 985, 113 S. Ct. 493, 121 L. Ed. 2d 431 (1992).

Denial of plaintiff's motion to strike amended answer is tantamount to permitting defendant to file the amended answer. Performance Motors, Inc. v. Allen, 20 N.C. App. 445, 201 S.E.2d 513 (1974).

When the complaint is amended defendant should be entitled to amend his answer to meet the contents of the new complaint. Hence, the trial court erred in allowing a motion for summary judgment on the same day that he allowed plaintiff's motion to amend the complaint, as the defendants should have been given time within which to answer before the hearing on the motion for summary judgment. Turner Halsey Co. v. Lawrence Knitting Mills, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 569, 248 S.E.2d 342 (1978).

Denial of Amendment Containing Only Surplusage. — Where the proposed amendment is no more than surplusage, denial of the plaintiff's motion to amend is not an abuse of discretion. Smith v. McRary, 306 N.C. 664, 295 S.E.2d 444 (1982).

Denial of motion to amend answer to allege compulsory counterclaim is immediately appealable. Hudspeth v. Bunzey, 35 N.C. App. 231, 241 S.E.2d 119, cert. denied, 294 N.C. 736, 244 S.E.2d 154 (1978).

Denial of Motion to Amend Is Interlocutory. — An order denying a motion to amend pleadings is an interlocutory order, and is not immediately appealable. Buchanan v. Rose, 59 N.C. App. 351, 296 S.E.2d 508 (1982).

An order allowing amendment of a pleading is interlocutory and not appealable. O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

Applicability of Rule to Motions. — The philosophy of this rule should apply not only to pleadings but also to motions where there is no material prejudice to the opposing party. Taylor v. Triangle Porsche-Audi, Inc., 27 N.C. App. 711, 220 S.E.2d 806 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 619, 223 S.E.2d 396 (1976).

If an order allowing amendment and adding a party defendant is void for lack of notice to the original defendant, it is void for all purposes. Pask v. Corbitt, 28 N.C. App. 100, 220 S.E.2d 378 (1975).

The filing of a reply is not an amendment to the pleadings. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 N.C. App. 40, 187 S.E.2d 420 (1972).

Motions to Strike Are Available to Test Amended Complaints. — Section 1A-1, Rule 12(f) allows the court to strike improper allegations from any pleading. Although the reported cases do not address application of § 1A-1, Rule 12(f) to allegations added under this rule, the latter rule clearly governs pleadings practice, and motions to strike logically are available to test amended as well as original complaints. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

Use of Allegations Not Denied Until Amendment of Answer as Evidential Admissions. — Allegations in a complaint not initially denied by answer, but subsequently denied in an amended answer, may constitute evidential admissions, reflecting something which a party has once said. However, to take advantage of evidential admissions, the opponent must introduce them into evidence. The introduction of "all the admissions of record" does not place this evidence before the jury at trial in the sense of drawing the jury's attention to the specific allegations of the complaint and the specific answers thereto. Watson v. White, 309 N.C. 498, 308 S.E.2d 268 (1983).

Once party amends pleading without leave of court as permitted by section (a) of this rule, the opposing party has 30 days in which to respond; the rule does not distinguish between minor and major amendments. Hyder v. Dergance, 76 N.C. App. 317, 332 S.E.2d 713 (1985).

Amendment Adding Plaintiff and Alleging That Defendant Was Conducting Business Under Corporate Name. — In an action brought by agents of a landowner seeking damages for the defendants' failure to construct a pond, the defendants failed to demonstrate prejudice from amendments to the pleading adding an additional plaintiff — the landowner — and inserting additional language that one of the defendants was conducting business under a corporate name. Neither of these amendments brought out any new material, changed the theory of the case, or in any way surprised the defendants. Goodrich v. Rice, 75 N.C. App. 530, 331 S.E.2d 195 (1985).

Motion Held Timely. — Where plaintiff filed his motion to amend his complaint to add a cause of action to enforce a materialman's or laborer's lien on December 8, 1983, and the last day he had furnished material or labor to defendants' property was June 15, 1983, his motion was thus filed within the 180-day period set forth in § 44A-13(a), as the date of the filing of the motion, rather than the date on which the court ruled on it, was the crucial date in measuring the period of limitations. Plaintiff's amendment was therefore not barred by the statute of limitations, and whether it would "relate back" to the filing of the original complaint was immaterial. Mauney v. Morris, 316 N.C. 67, 340 S.E.2d 397 (1986).

Failure of trial court to state specific reasons for denial of motion to amend does not preclude appellate court from examining the reasons for denial. Martin v. Hare, 78 N.C. App. 358, 337 S.E.2d 632 (1985).

The trial court did not err by denying the plaintiffs' motion to amend complaint by adding an additional cause of action one year and seven months after the original filing of the complaint and only seven days before the hearing of a motion for summary judgment, which motion was filed nine months after the extensive discovery conducted in the case was complete. Pressman v. UNC, 78 N.C. App. 296, 337 S.E.2d 644 (1985).

In civil action wherein plaintiff alleged a contract with defendants to drill a well in property owned by them, which property was conveyed by defendants to purchasers, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying motion to amend plaintiff's complaint to allege that defendants acted as agent for purchasers, which motion was made when the case came on for hearing on defendants' motions to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b), as in their answer defendants had alleged that they were acting as agents for purchasers in contracting with plaintiff to drill the well, which answer was filed on January 4, 1985, and plaintiff did not make its motion to amend until April 22, 1985.

Caldwell's Well Drilling, Inc. v. Moore, 79 N.C. App. 730, 340 S.E.2d 518 (1986).

The trial court did not err in denying plaintiff's motion to amend complaint where plaintiffs' motion to amend was filed seven months after defendant's original answer admitted that defendant owned and was operating automobile and nearly six months after defendant offered certificate of title as proof of ownership and requested plaintiffs to admit that defendant owned the automobile, and despite the fact that plaintiffs' motion was filed only six weeks after deposition of witness to the accident was taken, codefendant being the driver of the car, co-defendant's motion for summary judgment had already been filed and over three years had passed since the accident without any mention of liability based on codefendant's operation of the vehicle. Brown v. Lyons, 93 N.C. App. 453, 378 S.E.2d 243 (1989).

Where motion to amend was filed over a year after the original complaint, and the requested amendment purported to add a seventh cause of action, but the cause of action was ambiguous and no relief was requested, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the motion to amend the complaint. Outer Banks Contractors v. Daniels & Daniels Constr., Inc., 111 N.C. App. 725, 433 S.E.2d 759 (1993).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying plaintiff's Motion to Amend where the decision to deny was a reasoned one made to prevent unfair prejudice to the defendant town. Chicora Country Club, Inc. v. Town of Erwin, 128 N.C. App. 101, 493 S.E.2d 797 (1997).

Where insufficient evidence existed to support defendant's claim, allowing defendant to amend its pleadings to include such a claim would be futile, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to amend. IRT Property Co. v. Papagayo, Inc., 112 N.C. App. 318, 435 S.E.2d 565 (1993), rev'd on other grounds, 338 N.C. 293, 449 S.E.2d 459 (1994).

Motion to Amend Denied. — Superior court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendants' motion to amend their answer to interpose two new defenses where the motion to amend was filed more than five years after the compliant was filed. Isenhour v. Universal Underwriters Ins. Co., 345 N.C. 151, 478 S.E.2d 197 (1996).

II. AMENDMENTS TO CONFORM TO EVIDENCE.

The pleading with particularity required by § 1A-1, Rule 9(b) is complemented by section (b) of this rule. Benfield v. Costner, 67 N.C. App. 444, 313 S.E.2d 203 (1984).

Section (b) of this rule is essentially a verbatim copy of federal Rule 15(b), and therefore federal decisions interpreting this rule are apposite. Mangum v. Surles, 281 N.C. 91, 187 S.E.2d 697 (1972).

Section (b) of this rule was enacted to eliminate the waste, delay and injustice which sometimes resulted from belated confrontations between insufficient allegations and plenary proof. Mangum v. Surles, 281 N.C. 91, 187 S.E.2d 697 (1972).

Purpose in adopting section (b) of this rule was to alter the strict code doctrine of variance which existed under the prior law. W & H Graphics, Inc. v. Hamby, 48 N.C. App. 82, 268 S.E.2d 567 (1980).

Section (b) of this rule represents a departure from the former strict code doctrine of variance by allowing issues to be raised by liberal amendments to pleadings, and in some cases, by the evidence. Peed v. Peed, 72 N.C. App. 549, 325 S.E.2d 275, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 604, 330 S.E.2d 612 (1985).

And the Significance of the Doctrine Has Been Drastically Reduced. — Under the new Rules of Civil Procedure, the significance of the doctrine of variance has been drastically reduced. Hardison v. Williams, 21 N.C. App. 670, 205 S.E.2d 551 (1974).

Under these rules the trial must proceed within the issues raised by the broad pleadings unless the pleadings are amended. But the thrust of this rule seems to destroy the former strict code doctrine of variance by allowing issues to be raised by liberal amendments to pleadings and, in some cases, by the evidence. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972).

The enactment of the North Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure, especially this rule, virtually destroyed the former strict code doctrine of variance. Southern of Rocky Mount, Inc. v. Woodward Specialty Sales, Inc., 52 N.C. App. 549, 279 S.E.2d 32 (1981).

The purpose of an amendment to conform to proof is to bring the pleadings in line with the actual issues upon which the case was tried. Fowler v. Johnson, 18 N.C. App. 707, 198 S.E.2d 4 (1973); Eudy v. Eudy, 288 N.C. 71, 215 S.E.2d 782 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Quick v. Quick, 305 N.C. 446, 290 S.E.2d 653 (1982).

Need for amendment under section (b) of this rule does not arise unless the evidence raises issues. Southern of Rocky Mount, Inc. v. Woodward Specialty Sales, Inc., 52 N.C. App. 549, 279 S.E.2d 32 (1981).

The trial judge is allowed broad discretion in ruling on motions under section (b) of this rule. Auman v. Easter, 36 N.C. App. 551, 244 S.E.2d 728, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 548, 248 S.E.2d 725 (1978).

Conforming Amendments Should Not Be Allowed Where They Fail to Support Action or Defense. — Conforming amendments under section (b) of this rule are within the sound discretion of the court and should not be allowed where they fail to support the action or defense upon the merits. Murphy v. Murphy, 34 N.C. App. 677, 239 S.E.2d 597 (1977), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 295 N.C. 390, 245 S.E.2d 693 (1978).

An amendment which brings in some entirely extrinsic issue or changes the theory on which the case was actually tried is not permissible, even though there is evidence in the record, introduced as relevant to some other issue, which would support the amendment. Fowler v. Johnson, 18 N.C. App. 707, 198 S.E.2d 4 (1973); Eudy v. Eudy, 288 N.C. 71, 215 S.E.2d 782 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Quick v. Quick, 305 N.C. 446, 290 S.E.2d 653 (1982).

This rule does not permit judgment by ambush. Eudy v. Eudy, 288 N.C. 71, 215 S.E.2d 782 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Quick v. Quick, 305 N.C. 446, 290 S.E.2d 653 (1982).

And Court's Decision May Not Be Based on Issues Tried Inadvertently. — The implication of section (b) of this rule is that a trial court may not base its decision upon an issue that was tried inadvertently. Implied consent to the trial of an unpleaded issue is not established merely because evidence relevant to that issue was introduced without objection. At least it must appear that the parties understood the evidence to be aimed at the unpleaded issue. Munchak Corp. v. Caldwell, 37 N.C. App. 240, 246 S.E.2d 13, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 647, 248 S.E.2d 252 (1978).

An amendment to conform to the evidence is appropriate only where sufficient evidence has been presented at trial without objection to raise an issue not originally pleaded and where the parties understood, or reasonably should have understood, that the introduction of such evidence was directed to an issue not embraced by the pleadings. W & H Graphics, Inc. v. Hamby, 48 N.C. App. 82, 268 S.E.2d 567 (1980).

In order for pleadings to be amended to conform to the proof pursuant to this rule, there must be evidence of an unpleaded issue introduced without objection, and it must appear that the parties understood, or at least reasonably should have understood, that the evidence was aimed at an issue not expressly pleaded. Eudy v. Eudy, 288 N.C. 71, 215 S.E.2d 782 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Quick v. Quick, 305 N.C. 446, 290 S.E.2d 653 (1982); Evans v. Craddock, 61 N.C. App. 438, 300 S.E.2d 908 (1983).

Under section (b) of this rule, the rule of "litigation by consent" is applied when no objection is made on the specific ground that the evidence offered is not within the issues raised by the pleadings. In such case the rule amends the pleadings to conform to the evidence and allows any issue raised by the evidence to go to the jury. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972).

Where no objection is made to evidence on the ground that it is outside the issues raised by the pleadings, the issue raised by the evidence is before the trial court for determination. Mangum v. Surles, 281 N.C. 91, 187 S.E.2d 697 (1972); Harris v. Bridges, 59 N.C. App. 195, 296 S.E.2d 299 (1982).

Where no objection is raised at trial on the grounds that the proffered evidence is not within the scope of the pleadings, no formal amendment is required and the pleadings are deemed amended by implication. Wohlfahrt v. Schneider, 82 N.C. App. 69, 345 S.E.2d 448 (1986).

The effect of this rule is to allow amendment by implied consent to change the legal theory of the cause of action so long as the opposing party has not been prejudiced in presenting his case, i.e., where he had a fair opportunity to defend his case. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972).

Party who fails to object to evidence is initially presumed to have given implied consent by silence. He can avoid this only by satisfying the court that under the circumstances his consent to having certain issues considered by the trier of fact should not be implied from his failure to object to particular evidence. Mangum v. Surles, 281 N.C. 91, 187 S.E.2d 697 (1972).

Failure of a party to object to evidence offered at trial on the specific grounds that the evidence was outside the pleadings results in trial of those issues by implied consent. Lea Co. v. North Carolina Bd. of Transp., 57 N.C. App. 392, 291 S.E.2d 844, aff'd, 317 N.C. 254, 345 S.E.2d 355 (1986), aff'd, 308 N.C. 603, 304 S.E.2d 164 (1983).

To limit the scope of the issues raised by the evidence at trial, it is the duty of the opponent to object specifically to evidence offered at trial as being outside the scope of the pleadings. Absent objection, the party will be deemed to have impliedly consented to trial of the issues. Mobley v. Hill, 80 N.C. App. 79, 341 S.E.2d 46 (1986).

Where one of the "new" issues in an amended complaint was sufficiently pled in the complaint, defendant had notice and could not complain of its amendment; where evidence sustaining the other issues in the complaint did not tend to support any properly pled issue and because defendant never specifically objected to that evidence as being outside the scope of the pleadings, he impliedly consented to trial on those issues. Smith v. Childs, 112 N.C. App. 672, 437 S.E.2d 500 (1993).

Absent Objection to Variance, Pleadings Deemed Amended. — Under this rule, when the plaintiff offers evidence at trial which varies from his complaint and introduces a new issue, the defendant may object; if the defendant does not object, he is viewed as having consented to admission of the evidence, and the pleadings are deemed amended to include the new issue. Hardison v. Williams, 21 N.C. App. 670, 205 S.E.2d 551 (1974).

Implied-consent principle would not apply where omitted allegation was necessary to confer jurisdiction. Eudy v. Eudy, 24 N.C. App. 516, 211 S.E.2d 536, modified on other grounds, 288 N.C. 71, 215 S.E.2d 782 (1975).

Better Practice Is Motion for Leave to Amend. — Better practice dictates that even where pleadings are deemed amended under the theory of litigation by consent, the party receiving the benefit of the rule should move for leave of court to amend, so that the pleadings will actually reflect the theory of recovery. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972); Hartley v. Ballou, 286 N.C. 51, 209 S.E.2d 776 (1974).

Even though technically no amendment is required when issues are tried by implied consent, the better practice is to move to amend the pleadings to actually reflect the theory of recovery. Mobley v. Hill, 80 N.C. App. 79, 341 S.E.2d 46 (1986).

But failure to make the amendment will not jeopardize a verdict or judgment based upon competent evidence. If an amendment to conform the pleadings to the proof should have been made in order to support the judgment, the appellate court will presume it to have been made. Mangum v. Surles, 281 N.C. 91, 187 S.E.2d 697 (1972); Harris v. Bridges, 59 N.C. App. 195, 296 S.E.2d 299 (1982).

Where an issue not raised by the pleadings has been tried by express or implied consent, answered by the jury or the judge, and the judgment rendered on the verdict has been affirmed on appeal, the failure to amend should not, and does not, affect the results of the trial which has been had upon the merits. Mangum v. Surles, 281 N.C. 91, 187 S.E.2d 697 (1972).

While it is the better practice to amend the pleadings so that they actually reflect the theory of recovery, failure to do so may be without real import. Coley v. Eudy, 51 N.C. App. 310, 276 S.E.2d 462 (1981).

The pleadings are regarded as amended to conform to the proof, even though the defaulting pleader makes no formal motion to amend. Mangum v. Surles, 281 N.C. 91, 187 S.E.2d 697 (1972).

Amendment Should Actually Be Made Where Retrial Is Ordered. — When a retrial is ordered for failure to submit issues raised by the evidence which were not in the pleadings, or for failure of the court to allow an amendment in order to conform the pleadings to the proof, or for erroneous entry of a dismissal or directed verdict upon the ground of a fatal variance between allegation and proof, the amendment to the pleadings must actually be made, as the judge who presides is entitled to know the theory and the state of the case confronting him. Mangum v. Surles, 281 N.C. 91, 187 S.E.2d 697 (1972).

The court has authority under section (b) of this rule to permit an amendment to the pleadings at any time when there is no material prejudice to the opposing party and such amendment will serve to present the action on its merits. Clark v. Barber, 20 N.C. App. 603, 202 S.E.2d 347 (1974); Williams v. Sapp, 83 N.C. App. 116, 349 S.E.2d 304 (1986).

An amendment to conform the pleadings to the evidence may be offered even after oral argument. Mobley v. Hill, 80 N.C. App. 79, 341 S.E.2d 46 (1986).

Amendment to Conform to Evidence After Jury Argument Not Error. — The trial judge does not commit error in permitting defendants to amend their answer to conform to the evidence after the evidence on both sides is in and after the parties have argued the case to the jury. Reid v. Consolidated Bus Lines, 16 N.C. App. 186, 191 S.E.2d 247 (1972).

It is not error to allow an amendment to conform made late in the trial, even after the jury arguments. Peed v. Peed, 72 N.C. App. 549, 325 S.E.2d 275, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 604, 330 S.E.2d 612 (1985).

Burden of Party Objecting to Admission of Varying Evidence. — If the defendant objects to evidence at trial which varies the complaint and introduces a new issue, he has the burden of proving that he would be prejudiced by admission of the varying evidence. Hardison v. Williams, 21 N.C. App. 670, 205 S.E.2d 551 (1974).

Even when a timely specific objection is made, the party objecting must show some actual prejudice arising from a proposed amendment, i.e., some undue disadvantage or difficulty in presenting the merits of its case. Mobley v. Hill, 80 N.C. App. 79, 341 S.E.2d 46 (1986).

Specific Objections Required. — Under section (b) of this rule, a party attempting to limit the trial of issues by implied consent must object specifically to evidence outside the scope of the original pleadings; otherwise, allowing an amendment to conform the pleadings to the evidence will not be error, and, in fact, is not even technically necessary. Concrete Serv. Corp. v. Investors Group, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 678, 340 S.E.2d 755, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 333, 346 S.E.2d 137 (1986).

Defendant Must Have Notice of What He Is Litigating. — Although there is an exception to the rule that where a claim is not pleaded, the trial court may not place it before the jury, which arises when no objection is made to evidence on the ground that it is outside the issues raised by the pleadings, to give rise to this exception to the pleading requirement the evidence admitted without objection must be clearly irrelevant to any causes of action properly pleaded. Otherwise a defendant would not be on notice that he was litigating an issue other than those pleaded. J.M. Westall & Co. v. Windswept View of Asheville, Inc., 97 N.C. App. 71, 387 S.E.2d 67 (1990), cert. denied, 327 N.C. 139, 394 S.E.2d 175 (1990).

Where the evidence which supports an unpleaded issue also tends to support an issue properly raised by the pleadings, no objection to such evidence is necessary and the failure to object does not amount to implied consent to try the unpleaded issue. Tyson v. Ciba-Geigy Corp., 82 N.C. App. 626, 347 S.E.2d 473 (1986).

In passing upon a trial judge's ruling as to a directed verdict, the Court of Appeals cannot review the case as the parties might have tried it; rather, the court must review the case as it was tried below, as reflected in the record on appeal. Where evidence which supported a claim for fraud was also relevant to the issue of mutual mistake raised in plaintiff's complaint, its admission did not constitute "implied consent" to try the issue of fraud. Accordingly, if plaintiff was to prevail on his contention that the court erred in granting defendant's motion for a directed verdict, he was required to have done so on the pleaded ground of mutual mistake. Howell v. Waters, 82 N.C. App. 481, 347 S.E.2d 65 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 694, 351 S.E.2d 747 (1987).

Amendment of Pleadings to Conform to Evidence Admitted over Objection Permitted. — This rule permits amendment of pleadings to conform to the evidence even where the evidence is admitted over objection. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 N.C. App. 40, 187 S.E.2d 420 (1972).

Absent Prejudice to Objecting Party. — Even when the evidence is objected to on the ground that it is not within the issue raised by the pleadings, the court will freely allow amendments to present the merits of the case when the objecting party fails to satisfy the court that he would be prejudiced in the trial on its merits. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972).

Allowance of Amendment Upheld. — Where defendant did not object to any evidence as being outside the pleadings, it was not necessary to amend the pleadings, and there was thus no abuse of discretion in allowing plaintiff to amend its complaint to conform to the evidence. Lea Co. v. North Carolina Bd. of Transp., 57 N.C. App. 392, 291 S.E.2d 844, aff'd, 317 N.C. 254, 345 S.E.2d 355 (1986), aff'd, 308 N.C. 603, 304 S.E.2d 164 (1983).

When not raised by the pleadings, the issue of usury may still be tried if raised by express or implied consent of the parties at trial. Wallace Men's Wear, Inc. v. Harris, 28 N.C. App. 153, 220 S.E.2d 390 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 298, 222 S.E.2d 703 (1976).

Failure to plead an affirmative defense ordinarily results in waiver thereof. However, the parties may still try the issue by express or implied consent. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Edwards, 67 N.C. App. 1, 312 S.E.2d 656 (1984).

Where the record disclosed that the case was tried as though the statute of frauds was properly pleaded, section (b) of this rule applied, and the appeal would be treated as though the statute of frauds had been properly pleaded. Bercegeay v. Surfside Realty Co., 16 N.C. App. 718, 193 S.E.2d 356 (1972).

In an action to recover for injuries sustained when a golf cart rented from defendants rolled backwards down a hill and overturned while being operated by plaintiff, wherein plaintiff alleged that defendants were negligent in failing to warn him of defective brakes on the golf cart, the pleadings were amended by implied consent to conform to the evidence and broaden the issue of negligence so that the jury could consider whether defendants breached a duty to plaintiff by furnishing a golf cart which they knew had no brakes on it when going backwards, where defendants failed to object to plaintiff's testimony outside the pleadings that individual defendant told him at the accident scene that defendants' golf carts had no brakes on them while going backwards. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972).

In an action to set aside a deed, where plaintiff introduced evidence, not supported by the pleadings, that defendants fraudulently induced her to sign the deed by representing the instrument to be a note, and defendants failed to object to such evidence on the ground that it was outside the issues raised by the pleadings, plaintiff was entitled as a matter of law to have the issue of fraud submitted to the jury and to amend her complaint to conform her pleadings to the evidence. Mangum v. Surles, 281 N.C. 91, 187 S.E.2d 697 (1972).

Fact that defendant had announced that he would not introduce evidence when motion to amend was made, nothing more appearing, did not give rise to prejudice. Mobley v. Hill, 80 N.C. App. 79, 341 S.E.2d 46 (1986).

Ruling on Motion Under Section (b) of this Rule Not Reviewable Absent Abuse of Discretion. — While amendment of pleadings may be made, even late in the trial or after judgment, in order to conform the pleadings to the evidence and raise issues tried by the express or implied consent of the parties, the trial court's ruling upon such a motion is not reviewable absent an abuse of discretion. Mosley & Mosley Bldrs., Inc. v. Landin Ltd., 87 N.C. App. 438, 361 S.E.2d 608 (1987).

Reduction of Interest Being Sought. — Where plaintiff in complaint sought interest in excess of the 12% allowed under § 24-1.1, but presented evidence as to the amount of interest when calculated at 12% per annum, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting an amendment to the pleadings so as to reduce the interest sought to that calculated at 12% per annum. Northwestern Bank v. Barber, 79 N.C. App. 425, 339 S.E.2d 452, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 733, 345 S.E.2d 391 (1986).

Conversion of Condemnation Proceeding into Quiet Title Action. — Trial court did not err by applying section (b) of this rule in such a way as to convert condemnation proceeding brought by private condemnors, with the consent of the parties, into an action to quiet title. VEPCO v. Tillett, 316 N.C. 73, 340 S.E.2d 62 (1986).

In an action alleging medical malpractice, although the plaintiff presented evidence tending to show that the defendant-physician altered emergency room records, they were not permitted to amend their pleadings under section (b) of this rule. This was not simply an "act of negligence," but was a separate cause of action, which the defendant was not prepared to defend against and to which he did not impliedly consent to the trial of. Paris v. Kreitz, 75 N.C. App. 365, 331 S.E.2d 234, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 185, 337 S.E.2d 858 (1985).

Where there was no warning in the complaint of a punitive damages claim, and no consent by defendant to such a claim, it was within the discretion of the trial court to deny plaintiff's motion to amend to add a claim for punitive damages based upon gross negligence. Enns v. Zayre Corp., 116 N.C. App. 687, 449 S.E.2d 478 (1994), cert. denied, 339 N.C. 737, 454 S.E.2d 649, aff'd, per curiam, 342 N.C. 406, 464 S.E.2d 298 (1995).

III. RELATION BACK OF AMENDMENTS.

Section (c) Is More Liberal Than Federal Rule. — Section (c) of this rule is more liberal in allowing amendments than the comparable federal rule. In North Carolina even a new cause of action can be said to relate back for amendment purposes. Humphries v. Going, 59 F.R.D. 583 (E.D.N.C. 1973).

Federal Decisions as Aid in Construction. — Federal decisions considering the question of whether an original pleading gave notice of a claim set forth in the amended pleading should provide enlightenment in construing this rule. Stevens v. Nimocks, 82 N.C. App. 350, 346 S.E.2d 180, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 511, 349 S.E.2d 873 (1986), reconsideration denied, 318 N.C. 702, 351 S.E.2d 760 (1987).

Guidance from New York Decisions. — Since section (c) of this rule is modeled after Sec. 203(e) of the New York Civil Practice Law and Rules, New York decisions provide guidance for relation back in North Carolina. Stevens v. Nimocks, 82 N.C. App. 350, 346 S.E.2d 180, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 511, 349 S.E.2d 873 (1986), reconsideration denied, 318 N.C. 702, 351 S.E.2d 760 (1987).

Criteria for Determining Whether Amendment Relates Back. — Whether an amendment to a pleading relates back under subsection (c) of this rule does not depend on an analysis of whether it states a new cause of action; it depends, rather, on whether the original pleading gives notice of the transactions, occurrences, or series of transactions or occurrences to be proved pursuant to the amended pleading. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

The decisive test for relation back remains notice in the original pleading of the transactions or occurrences to be proved pursuant to the amended pleading. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

Under the Rules of Civil Procedure, whether an amendment will relate back does not depend upon whether it states a new cause of action, but upon whether the original pleading gave defendants sufficient notice of the proposed new claim. Mauney v. Morris, 316 N.C. 67, 340 S.E.2d 397 (1986).

Whether an amended complaint will relate back to the original complaint does not depend upon whether it states a new cause of action, but instead, upon whether the original pleading gave defendants sufficient notice of the proposed amended claim. Pyco Supply Co. v. American Centennial Ins. Co., 321 N.C. 435, 364 S.E.2d 380 (1988).

The notice requirement of this section cannot be met where an amendment has the effect of adding a new party to the action, as opposed to correcting a misnomer. Bob Killian Tire, Inc. v. Day Enters., Inc., 131 N.C. App. 330, 506 S.E.2d 752 (1998).

This rule does not apply to the naming of a new party-defendant to an action; it is not authority for the relation back of a claim against a new party. Crossman v. Moore, 341 N.C. 185, 459 S.E.2d 715 (1995).

Nature of Time Restriction Is Not Determinative. — The determination of whether a claim asserted in an amended pleading relates back does not hinge on whether a time restriction is deemed a statute of limitation or repose. Rather, the proper test is whether the original pleading gave notice of the transactions, occurrences, or series of transactions or occurrences which formed the basis of the amended pleading. If the original pleading gave such notice, the claim survives by relating back in time, without regard to whether the time restraint attempting to cut its life short is a statute of repose or limitation. Pyco Supply Co. v. American Centennial Ins. Co., 321 N.C. 435, 364 S.E.2d 380 (1988).

Treatment of Supplemental Pleadings. — For relation back purposes, supplemental pleadings filed pursuant to section (d) of this rule are treated the same as amendments filed pursuant to other sections of this rule. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

Relation Back of Supplemental Pleading Changing Capacity in Which Plaintiff Sues. — Where the original pleading gives notice of the transactions and occurrences upon which the claim is based, a supplemental pleading that merely changes the capacity in which the plaintiff sues relates back to the commencement of the action as provided in section (c) of this rule. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

Where at the time defamation suits were instituted no actionable damages existed, and the claims alleged did not become actionable within the time provided by the statute of limitations for the instituting of suits in slander actions, supplementary pleadings alleging special damages could not relate back to the filing of the original complaints. Williams v. Rutherford Freight Lines, 10 N.C. App. 384, 179 S.E.2d 319 (1971).

Complaint May Not Be Amended to Create New Relief Against Nonparty Strangers. — This rule does not allow a plaintiff to abandon one cause and its relief against one set of defendants, and amend that complaint to create a new relief against a group of nonparty strangers and their interests. Lawyers Title Ins. Corp. v. Langdon, 91 N.C. App. 382, 371 S.E.2d 727 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 335, 378 S.E.2d 793 (1989).

Amending a claim for a monetary award to include a § 44A-13 claim to enforce a lien against non-parties without allowing any type of notice does not fall within a reasonable interpretation of section (c) of this rule. Lawyers Title Ins. Corp. v. Langdon, 91 N.C. App. 382, 371 S.E.2d 727 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 335, 378 S.E.2d 793 (1989).

Medical malpractice complaint that failed to include the certification requirement of § 1A-1, Rule 9(j) could not be subsequently amended pursuant to section (a) of this rule, by adding the certification and having that amendment relate back, pursuant to section (c) of this rule. Keith v. Northern Hosp. Dist., 129 N.C. App. 402, 499 S.E.2d 200 (1998), review denied, 348 N.C. 693, 511 S.E.2d 646 (1998).

Amendment to action against a partnership which added an individual partner as defendant was tantamount to the addition of a new party, and the plaintiff's amendment would not relate back to the filing of the original action. Stevens v. Nimocks, 82 N.C. App. 350, 346 S.E.2d 180, cert. denied, 83 N.C. App. 512, 349 S.E.2d 873 (1986), reconsideration denied, 318 N.C. 702, 351 S.E.2d 760 (1987).

Amendment of Date Permitted. — Where both the original and amended complaints allege that plaintiff was injured in a collision between a vehicle driven by defendant and another vehicle in which plaintiff was a passenger, aside from the changes made by the first amended complaint, the only difference between the original and the second amended complaint is the year in which the accident occurred and that is sufficient to give the notice called for by Rule 15(c). Wooten v. Warren ex rel. Gilmer, 117 N.C. App. 350, 451 S.E.2d 342 (1994).

Plaintiff's original complaint held to have given notice of amended claim. Pyco Supply Co. v. American Centennial Ins. Co., 321 N.C. 435, 364 S.E.2d 380 (1988).

Amended Complaint Deemed to Relate Back. — Where plaintiff made no contradictory allegations, and the allegations of his amended complaint were based on the same transaction or occurrence as his original complaint, pursuant to section (c) of this rule plaintiff's amended complaint would be deemed to relate back to the filing date of his original complaint. Kwan-Sa You v. Roe, 97 N.C. App. 1, 387 S.E.2d 188 (1990).

Relation Back Denied. — Trial court did not err in refusing to allow relation back of a complaint where the proper party did not know that, but for a mistake concerning identity, the action would have brought against him within the period prescribed by law. Crossman v. Moore, 115 N.C. App. 372, 444 S.E.2d 630 (1994), aff'd, 341 N.C. 185, 459 S.E.2d 715 (1995).

Plaintiff's amended complaint did not relate back to the date of the original complaint, because the plaintiff failed to establish that the added parties received notice or should have known of the action against them within the limitation period. Stewart Enters. v. MRM Constr. Co., 116 N.C. App. 604, 449 S.E.2d 20 (1994).

Since amendment to complaint could not relate back to the original pleading, plaintiffs' claim against hospital was barred by the statute of limitations. Medford v. Haywood County Hosp. Found., 115 N.C. App. 474, 444 S.E.2d 699, cert. granted, 337 N.C. 802, 449 S.E.2d 747 (1994).

Because subsection (c) of this rule allows the addition of new claims, but not new parties, plaintiff's additional claims against city and it's officers in their official capacities did not relate back and did not take on the filing date of original complaint. Rogerson v. Fitzpatrick, 121 N.C. App. 728, 468 S.E.2d 447 (1996).

An amended complaint named a new party and did not relate back to the date of filing the original complaint, where a property owner brought an action against an individual to recover damages, and the amendment substituted a corporate defendant for the individual defendant. Bob Killian Tire, Inc. v. Day Enters., Inc., 131 N.C. App. 330, 506 S.E.2d 752 (1998).

Relation Back of Claim for Punitive Damages. — Plaintiff's claim for punitive damages would not be dismissed, even though the original action did not seek punitive but only compensatory damages, as even if the request for punitive damages were a new claim, the new cause of action related back to the time of the original complaint. Porter v. Groat, 713 F. Supp. 893 (M.D.N.C. 1989).

Amendment to Adoption Petition Held Not to Relate Back. — Where termination order, later held to be invalid for failure to use due diligence in ascertaining the putative father's address, was filed with an adoption petition in lieu of the affidavit required by § 48-13, a subsequently filed affidavit did not relate back to the original filing date of the petition so as to cut off the rights of the putative father who filed a legitimation petition to § 49-10 before the affidavit was filed. In re Adoption of Clark, 327 N.C. 61, 393 S.E.2d 791 (1990).

Venue Held Proper. — Under section (c) of this rule, when an amended complaint is filed as a matter of right before any responsive pleading is filed by the original defendant, and the original complaint gave notice of the transactions or occurrences referred to in the amended complaint, the claims asserted in the amended complaint are deemed to have been interposed at the time the claim in the original pleading was interposed. Thus, since corporate defendant was a resident of Wake County for venue purposes, because it had a place of business there, and was deemed to have been a defendant in the action at its commencement by operation of section (c) of this rule, though not added until later, venue there was not improper, and order of removal was erroneous. Oak Manor, Inc. v. Neil Realty Co., 88 N.C. App. 402, 363 S.E.2d 382, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 482, 370 S.E.2d 226 (1988).

IV. SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS.

The distinction between supplemental pleadings and amendments is that supplemental pleadings relate to occurrences, transactions and events which may have happened since the date of the pleadings sought to be supplemented, whereas amendments relate to occurrences, transactions and events that could have been, but for some reason were not, alleged in the pleadings sought to be amended. Williams v. Rutherford Freight Lines, 10 N.C. App. 384, 179 S.E.2d 319 (1971).

Supplemental Pleading Not a Matter of Right. — This rule permits but does not require a trial court to allow a supplemental pleading. In any event, it does not appear to be a matter of right, and it seems clear that a court may deny a supplemental pleading to substitute parties if the allowance of such a pleading would be unjust. Deutsch v. Fisher, 32 N.C. App. 688, 233 S.E.2d 646 (1977).

Supplemental pleadings may be allowed upon a party's motion in the trial court's discretion, not as a matter of right, upon such terms as are just. Miller v. Ruth's of N.C., Inc., 69 N.C. App. 153, 316 S.E.2d 622, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 494, 322 S.E.2d 557 (1984).

Policy with Regard to Allowing Supplemental Pleadings. — The rule that a motion to allow supplemental pleadings should ordinarily be granted is based upon the policy that a party should be protected from the harm which may occur if he is prevented from litigating certain issues merely by virtue of the court's denial of such a motion. VanDooren v. VanDooren, 37 N.C. App. 333, 246 S.E.2d 20, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 258 (1978).

Motions to allow supplemental pleadings should be freely granted unless their allowance would impose a substantial injustice upon the opposing party. Miller v. Ruth's of N.C., Inc., 69 N.C. App. 153, 316 S.E.2d 622, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 494, 322 S.E.2d 557 (1984).

When Motion to Allow Supplemental Pleading Should Be Allowed. — Although the ruling on a motion to allow supplemental pleadings is within the trial judge's discretion, that discretion is not unlimited. Generally, the motion should be allowed unless its allowance would impose a substantial injustice upon the opposing party, for it is the essence of the Rules of Civil Procedure that decisions be had on the merits and not avoided on the basis of mere technicalities. Foy v. Foy, 57 N.C. App. 128, 290 S.E.2d 748 (1982).

In ruling on a motion to allow a supplemental pleading, the trial court should focus on any resulting unfairness which might occur to the party opposing the motion. Absent any apparent or declared reason for its denial, the motion should be granted. In order to facilitate litigation of related issues in a single action, the court may impose terms or conditions upon the allowance of the motion whenever the terms appear to be required by considerations of fairness. VanDooren v. VanDooren, 37 N.C. App. 333, 246 S.E.2d 20, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 258 (1978).

Amendment to Update Amount of Arrearage Under Contract. — Where the amount of defendant's arrearage under a contract was an issue raised by the pleadings, and an amendment only served to bring the cause of action up-to-date, it was not error for the trial judge either to permit the plaintiff to introduce evidence of defendant's arrearage between the date she filed and the date of the trial or to allow the plaintiff to "amend" her complaint to include the additional amount owed to her. McKnight v. McKnight, 25 N.C. App. 246, 212 S.E.2d 902, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 466, 215 S.E.2d 624 (1975).

Supplemental Pleading to Show Change in Capacity in Which Plaintiff Sues. — Section 1A-1, Rule 17(a) expressly authorizes the substitution of one party for another. This rule, particularly section (c), when considered in light of § 1A-1, Rule 17(a), just as clearly authorizes a change in capacity in which the same plaintiff brings his claim. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

Where defendants had full notice of the transactions and occurrences upon which a wrongful death claim was based, and the claim was originally filed within the period of limitations by plaintiff in capacity as a foreign administrator, defendants could not be prejudiced by allowing plaintiff by supplemental pleading to show change in capacity to that of locally qualified ancillary administrator, even though this change occurred after the period of limitations had run. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

Where the original pleading gives sufficient notice of the transaction and occurrences upon which the claim is based, a supplemental pleading that merely changes the capacity in which the plaintiff sues relates back to the commencement of the action. Westinghouse v. Hair, 107 N.C. App. 106, 418 S.E.2d 532 (1992).

V. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-161, 1-163 and 1-167.

The judge has broad discretionary powers to permit amendments to any pleading, process or proceeding, either before or after judgment. George A. Hormel & Co. v. City of Winston-Salem, 263 N.C. 666, 140 S.E.2d 362 (1965).

The superior court possesses an inherent discretionary power to amend pleadings at any time, and amendments should be liberally allowed. Gilliam Furn., Inc. v. Bentwood, Inc., 267 N.C. 119, 147 S.E.2d 612 (1966).

The presiding judge has almost unlimited authority to permit amendments either before or after judgment. Dobias v. White, 240 N.C. 680, 83 S.E.2d 785 (1954); Casstevens v. Wilkes Tel. Membership Corp., 254 N.C. 746, 120 S.E.2d 94 (1961).

The superior courts possess an inherent discretionary power to amend pleadings or allow them to be filed at any time, unless prohibited by some statute, or unless vested rights are interfered with. Gilchrist v. Kitchen, 86 N.C. 20 (1882); Cantwell v. Herring, 127 N.C. 81, 37 S.E. 140 (1900); Wheeler v. Wheeler, 239 N.C. 646, 80 S.E.2d 755 (1954).

The lower court may allow or disallow such amendments as it may think proper in the exercise of sound discretion, bearing in mind, of course, that the nature of the cause of action as previously chartered may not be substantially changed. Goldston Bros. v. Newkirk, 234 N.C. 279, 67 S.E.2d 69 (1951).

By Inserting Material Allegations or Conforming Pleading or Proceeding to the Facts. — The court in its discretion may, before or after judgment, amend any pleading by inserting other allegations material to the case, or, when the amendment does not change the claim substantially, by conforming the pleading or proceeding to the facts. Bassinov v. Finkle, 261 N.C. 109, 134 S.E.2d 130 (1964).

And the Court's Ruling Is Not Reviewable. — Whether the trial court should allow an amendment to the pleadings rests in the court's sound discretion, and the court's ruling thereon is not reviewable on appeal. Sawyer v. Cowell, 241 N.C. 681, 86 S.E.2d 431 (1955).

Absent Manifest Abuse. — An order allowing plaintiff to file an amended complaint and defendant time thereafter to answer is made in the court's discretion, and as such is not reviewable in the absence of manifest abuse. Williams v. Denning, 260 N.C. 539, 133 S.E.2d 150 (1963).

The motion to amend is addressed to the discretion of the court and the court's decision thereon is not subject to review, there being no showing or contention that the court abused its discretion. Perfecting Serv. Co. v. Product Dev. & Sales Co., 264 N.C. 79, 140 S.E.2d 763 (1965).

Where a motion to amend is denied in the discretion of the trial judge, his ruling is not reviewable in the absence of a clear showing of abuse of discretion. Consolidated Vending Co. v. Turner, 267 N.C. 576, 148 S.E.2d 531 (1966).

The discretionary denial by the trial court of a motion to amend the pleadings and process is not reviewable in the absence of a manifest abuse of discretion. Crump v. Eckerd's, Inc., 241 N.C. 489, 85 S.E.2d 607 (1955).

When Amendment Is Permissible. — Unless its effect is to add a new cause of action or change the subject matter of the original action, no objection can successfully be urged where the amendment is germane to the original action, involving substantially the same transaction and presenting no real departure from the demand as originally stated. Lefler v. C.W. Lane & Co., 170 N.C. 181, 86 S.E. 1022 (1915); City of Wilmington v. Board of Educ., 210 N.C. 197, 185 S.E. 767 (1936); Wheeler v. Wheeler, 239 N.C. 646, 80 S.E.2d 755 (1954).

A trial court may permit a pleading to be amended at any time unless the amendment in effect modifies or changes the cause of action and deprives defendant of a fair opportunity to assemble and present his evidence relative to the matters asserted in the amendment. Thompson v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 248 N.C. 577, 104 S.E.2d 181 (1958).

An amendment is permitted, in the discretion of the court, when the amendment does not change substantially the claim or defense. Lane v. Griswold, 273 N.C. 1, 159 S.E.2d 338 (1968).

Filing of Supplemental Complaint Is Within Court's Discretion. — It is within the discretionary power of the trial court to allow the filing of a supplemental complaint. Speas v. City of Greensboro, 204 N.C. 239, 167 S.E. 807 (1933).

Court's Power Is Broader as to Amendments Proposed Before Trial. — The scope of the court's power to allow amendments is broader when dealing with amendments proposed before trial than during or after trial. Modern Elec. Co. v. Dennis, 255 N.C. 64, 120 S.E.2d 533 (1961); George A. Hormel & Co. v. City of Winston-Salem, 263 N.C. 666, 140 S.E.2d 362 (1965); Lane v. Griswold, 273 N.C. 1, 159 S.E.2d 338 (1968).

Amendment Which Only Adds to Original Cause Not Abuse of Discretion. — The allowance of an amendment which only adds to the original cause of action is not such substantial change as to amount to an abuse of discretion. Bassinov v. Finkle, 261 N.C. 109, 134 S.E.2d 130 (1964); Gilliam Furn., Inc. v. Bentwood, Inc., 267 N.C. 119, 147 S.E.2d 612 (1966).

Amendment to Conform to Evidence Permissible. — An amendment to a complaint which makes the pleading conform to the evidence, and does not change the claim of the plaintiff, is permissible. Chaffin v. Brame, 233 N.C. 377, 64 S.E.2d 276 (1951).

Right to amend pleadings does not permit the litigant to set up a wholly different cause of action or to change substantially the form of the action originally sued upon. Anderson v. Atkinson, 235 N.C. 300, 69 S.E.2d 603 (1952); Lane v. Griswold, 273 N.C. 1, 159 S.E.2d 338 (1968).

The court may not permit a litigant to set up by amendment a wholly different cause of action or an inconsistent cause. Bassinov v. Finkle, 261 N.C. 109, 134 S.E.2d 130 (1964); Lane v. Griswold, 273 N.C. 1, 159 S.E.2d 338 (1968).

When Amendment Introducing New Cause May Be Allowed. — It is permissible to allow plaintiff to introduce a new cause of action by way of amendment if the facts constituting the new cause of action arise out of or are connected with the transactions upon which the original complaint is based. Gilliam Furn.,

Inc. v. Bentwood, Inc., 267 N.C. 119, 147 S.E.2d 612 (1966).

Where no statute of limitations was involved, it was permissible to allow a plaintiff to introduce a new cause of action by way of amendment for damages for detention of property, possession of which was sought by the action as begun, if the facts constituting the new cause of action arose out of or were connected with the transactions upon which the original complaint was based. Mica Indus. v. Penland, 249 N.C. 602, 107 S.E.2d 120 (1959).

Where plaintiff, in amendments to her complaint, for the first time stated facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, the cause of action then stated embraced relevant facts connected with the transactions forming the subject of her prior pleadings. Hence, absent the bar of an applicable statute of limitations, such new cause of action could be introduced by way of amendment of plaintiff's prior pleadings. Stamey v. Rutherfordton Elec. Membership Corp., 249 N.C. 90, 105 S.E.2d 282 (1958).

After the time allowed for answering a pleading has expired, such pleading may not be amended as a matter of right, but only in the discretion of the court. Consolidated Vending Co. v. Turner, 267 N.C. 576, 148 S.E. 531 (1966).

Extension of Time for Filing Amendment. — Where an amended complaint is filed after expiration of the time allowed in the order permitting the filing of the amendment, the trial court has the discretionary power to enter an order extending the time for the filing of the amendment to the date of the hearing and to overrule defendant's motion to strike which was made on the ground that the amendment was filed after the expiration of the time allowed. Alexander v. Brown, 236 N.C. 212, 72 S.E.2d 522 (1952).

When Defective Summons May Be Amended. — When a summons bears the seal of the clerk and there is evidence it actually emanated from the clerk's office, or bears the jurat of the clerk and his signature appears below the cost bond, the paper bears internal evidence of its official character, and the defect may be cured by amendment. When it does not bear some such evidence, it is void and not subject to amendment. Boone v. Sparrow, 235 N.C. 396, 70 S.E.2d 204 (1952).

If the summons bears internal evidence of its official origin and of the purpose for which it was issued, it comes within the definition of original process and may be amended by permitting the clerk to sign nunc pro tunc. This rule is subject to the limitation that such alteration of the record must not disturb or impair any intervening rights of third parties. Boone v. Sparrow, 235 N.C. 396, 70 S.E.2d 204 (1952).

If there is nothing upon the face of the paper which stamps upon it unmistakably an official character, it is not a defective summons but no summons at all. The curative power of amendment may not be invoked when there is nothing upon the face of the paper to give assurance that it received the sanction of the clerk before it was delivered to the sheriff to be served. Boone v. Sparrow, 235 N.C. 396, 70 S.E.2d 204 (1952).

Amendment of Caption to Designate Plaintiff as Administratrix. — The court has plenary power to permit plaintiff, who in fact was duly appointed administratrix at the time a complaint was filed, to amend the caption in the complaint in order to designate herself as administratrix in conformity with the allegation in the complaint. Graves v. Welborn, 260 N.C. 688, 133 S.E.2d 761 (1963).

Bringing in Insurance Company Which Has Paid Part of Plaintiff's Loss. — An insurance company which pays the insured for a part of the loss is entitled to share to the extent of its payment in the proceeds of the judgment in the action brought by the insured against the tort-feasor to recover the total amount of the loss, and may be brought into the action by the court in the exercise of its discretionary power to make new parties, at the instance of the insured or the tort-feasor, either in the capacity of an additional plaintiff or in the capacity of an additional defendant. Burgess v. Trevathan, 236 N.C. 157, 72 S.E.2d 231 (1952), commented on in 31 N.C.L. Rev. 224 (1953).

Amendment of Complaint Under Wrongful Death Statute to Bring Action Within Federal Employers' Liability Act. — Where complaint alleged damages for wrongful death under State statute, but the evidence showed that the deceased was an employee of a railroad company and was fatally injured while engaged in the discharge of his duties in interstate commerce, the court plainly had the power to allow plaintiff to amend so as to allege that the parties were engaged in interstate commerce and that plaintiff was the sole dependent of the deceased, so as to bring the action within the Federal Employers' Liability Act, notwithstanding such amendment was allowed more than three years after the death of decedent. Graham v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 240 N.C. 338, 82 S.E.2d 346 (1954).

Amendment Alleging Failure of Defendant to Keep Proper Lookout. — Where the facts alleged in a complaint were sufficient to imply by a fair and reasonable intendment that defendant failed to keep a proper lookout, the court had the discretionary power, even after judgment, to permit plaintiff to amend to allege such failure specifically. Moreover, the court had the authority to allow such amendment even if the original complaint did not allege by necessary implication defendant's failure to keep a proper lookout. Simrel v. Meeler, 238

N.C. 668, 78 S.E.2d 766 (1953).

Amendment as to Identity of Driver of Automobile. — In an action involving negligent operation of an automobile resulting in death, it was not error to allow, upon motion made after verdict, an amendment to conform the complaint to the finding of the jury as to the identity of the driver of the automobile, where the crucial fact in respect to defendant's liability was not the identity of the driver, but that defendant, the owner of the automobile, permitted or directed its operation. Litaker v. Bost, 247 N.C. 298, 101 S.E.2d 31 (1957).

Substitution of Another Corporation for Original Plaintiff Not Permitted. — In an action for an injunction by plaintiff corporation arising out of a contract entered into between another corporation and the defendant, the trial court did not have the power to substitute the other corporation as plaintiff in lieu of the original plaintiff. Orkin Exterminating Co. v. O'Hanlon, 243 N.C. 457, 91 S.E.2d 222 (1956).

Motion Made After Verdict. — Where a motion for leave to amend a complaint to conform to the facts established by the verdict was not made until after the verdict, it was not error to grant it, since the trial below was conducted as if the amendment had been made and the amendment did not substantially change the plaintiff's claim. Litaker v. Bost, 247 N.C. 298, 101 S.E.2d 31 (1957).

Amendment Not Permitted Five Days Before Appeal to Be Heard. — A proposed amendment which set up a wholly different cause of action or substantially changed the action originally sued upon could not be permitted five days before an appeal was to be heard in the Supreme Court. George A. Hormel & Co. v. City of Winston-Salem, 263 N.C. 666, 140 S.E.2d 362 (1965).

Rule 16. Pre-trial procedure; formulating issues.

(a) In any action, the judge may in his discretion direct the attorneys for the parties to appear before him for a conference to consider

(1) The simplification and formulation of the issues;
(2) The necessity or desirability of amendments to the pleadings;
(3) The possibility of obtaining admissions of fact and of documents which will avoid unnecessary proof;
(4) The limitation of the number of expert witnesses;
(5) The advisability or necessity of a reference of the case, either in whole or in part;
(6) Matters of which the court is to be asked to take judicial notice;
(7) Such other matters as may aid in the disposition of the action.

If a conference is held, the judge may make an order which recites the action taken at the conference, the amendments allowed to the pleadings, and the agreements made by the parties as to any of the matters considered, and which limits the issues for trial to those not disposed of by admissions or agreements of counsel; and such order when entered controls the subsequent course of the action, unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice. If any issue for trial as stated in the order is not raised by the pleadings in accordance with the provisions of Rule 8, upon motion of any party, the order shall require amendment of the pleadings.

(b) In a medical malpractice action as defined in G.S. 90-21.11, at the close of the discovery period scheduled pursuant to Rule 26(f1), the judge shall schedule a final conference. After the conference, the judge shall refer any consent order calendaring the case for trial to the senior resident superior court judge or the chief district court judge, who shall approve the consent order unless he finds that:

(1) The date specified in the order is unavailable,
(2) The terms of the order unreasonably delay the trial, or
(3) The ends of justice would not be served by approving the order.

If the senior resident superior court judge or the chief district court judge does not approve the consent order, he shall calendar the case for trial.

In calendaring the case, the court shall take into consideration the nature and complexity of the case, the proximity and convenience of witnesses, the needs of counsel for both parties concerning their respective calendars, the benefits of an early disposition and such other matters as the court may deem proper. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1987, c. 859, s. 4.)

COMMENT

While the Rules of Civil Procedure do not envisage a pretrial conference in every case, they do contemplate a significant role for such conferences. The Commission knows that where former statutes have been used systematically, excellent results have been achieved. 36 N.C.L. Rev. 521 (1958).

Two significant changes are embodied in this rule. First, whether there is to be a pretrial conference is made an entirely discretionary matter with the judge. It was the Commission's view that pretrial cannot function effectively unless the judge himself is committed to the desirability of a resort to the procedure. Second, a requirement has been added that if the pretrial order contains an issue not raised by the pleadings, the court, on motion of any party, shall order an amendment.

CASE NOTES

The rules achieve their purpose of insuring a speedy trial on the merits of a case by providing for and encouraging liberal amendments to conform pleadings and evidence under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a), by pretrial order under this rule, during and after reception of evidence under § 1A-1, Rule 15(b), and after entry of judgment under § 1A-1, Rules 15(b), 59 and 60. Such amendments are made upon motion and with leave of court, by express consent, and by implied consent. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972).

The purpose of a pretrial conference is to consider specifics, among them motions to amend pleadings, issues, references, admissions, judicial notice, and other matters which may aid in the disposition of the cause. Whitaker v. Beasley, 261 N.C. 733, 136 S.E.2d 127 (1964); Smith v. City of Rockingham, 268 N.C. 697, 151 S.E.2d 568 (1966), decided under former § 1-169.1.

Admissions or Stipulations Not to Be Forced. — Although the pretrial conference is a mechanism intended to resolve those issues which are not genuinely in dispute, nothing in this rule affords a basis for forcing the parties into admissions or stipulations where there is a genuine dispute. Amick v. Shipley, 43 N.C. App. 507, 259 S.E.2d 329 (1979).

Names of Witnesses and List of Exhibits. — With the exception of expert trial witnesses, whose identities are discoverable under 1A-1, Rule 26(b)(4), a party is not entitled to find out, by discovery, which witnesses his opponent intends to call, or the documents and exhibits a party opponent intends to present at the trial; instead, the names of witnesses and lists of exhibits a party opponent intends to use at trial are obtainable through a pretrial conference. King v. Koucouliotes, 108 N.C. App. 751, 425 S.E.2d 462, cert. granted, 334 N.C. 163, 432 S.E.2d 361, discretionary review improvidently granted, 335 N.C. 164, 436 S.E.2d 132 (1993).

Signed Writing Evidencing Admissions, Agreements or Stipulations. — While this rule allows the court to enter an order reciting action taken at the conference, present custom and better practice require that admissions, agreements, or stipulations entered into by counsel at the pretrial stage be evidenced by a signed writing. Amick v. Shipley, 43 N.C. App. 507, 259 S.E.2d 329 (1979).

Matters for Judicial Notice to Be Brought to Court's Attention. — It is desirable and contemplated by subsection (a)(6) of this rule that counsel bring to the court's attention, in pretrial conference, those matters of which it will be asked to take judicial notice. State v. Dancy, 297 N.C. 40, 252 S.E.2d 514 (1979).

The trial judge is not required to make an independent search for data of which he may take judicial notice; counsel should supply him with appropriate data. State v. Dancy, 297 N.C. 40, 252 S.E.2d 514 (1979).

Discretion of Court. — Admission of evidence not delineated in the pretrial order is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Alston v. Monk, 92 N.C. App. 59, 373 S.E.2d 463 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 246, 378 S.E.2d 420 (1989).

Pretrial Order Interlocutory and Not Appealable. — A pretrial order denying plaintiffs' motion to amend and resolving issues to be submitted to the jury is interlocutory and not appealable. Lazenby v. Godwin, 49 N.C. App. 300, 271 S.E.2d 69 (1980).

A pretrial order is an interlocutory order, from which an appeal does not lie. Green v. Western & S. Life Ins. Co., 250 N.C. 730, 110 S.E.2d 321 (1959); Smith v. City of Rockingham, 268 N.C. 697, 151 S.E.2d 568 (1966), decided under former § 1-169.1.

Exclusion of Documents Not Listed in Pretrial Order. — In an action for malicious prosecution and intentional infliction of emotional distress, where plaintiff attempted to offer into evidence a copy of indictment and order quashing such indictment at the close of defendant's case without advance notice to defendant listing the documents as exhibits in the pretrial order, the trial court did not abuse its discretion by not admitting the documents into evidence. Lay v. Mangum, 87 N.C. App. 251, 360 S.E.2d 481 (1987).

Failure to Find Stipulated Facts. — Especially in light of the conclusive nature of stipulations, and the binding effect of pretrial orders, failure to find facts stipulated to in a pretrial order can hardly be prejudicial. Andrews v. Andrews, 79 N.C. App. 228, 338 S.E.2d 809, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 730, 345 S.E.2d 385 (1986).

Parties.

Rule 17. Parties plaintiff and defendant; capacity.

(a) Real party in interest. — Every claim shall be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest; but an executor, administrator, guardian, trustee of an express trust, a party with whom or in whose name a contract has been made for the benefit of another, or a party authorized by statute may sue in his own name without joining with him the party for whose benefit the action is brought; and when a statute of the State so provides, an action for the use or benefit of another shall be brought in the name of the State of North Carolina. No action shall be dismissed on the ground that it is not prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest until a reasonable time has been allowed after objection for ratification of commencement of the action by, or joinder or substitution of, the real party in interest; and such ratification, joinder, or substitution shall have the same effect as if the action had been commenced in the name of the real party in interest.

(b) Infants, incompetents, etc. —

(1) Infants, etc., Sue by Guardian or Guardian Ad Litem. — In actions or special proceedings when any of the parties plaintiff are infants or incompetent persons, whether residents or nonresidents of this State, they must appear by general or testamentary guardian, if they have any within the State or by guardian ad litem appointed as hereinafter provided; but if the action or proceeding is against such guardian, or if there is no such known guardian, then such persons may appear by guardian ad litem.

(2) Infants, etc., Defend by Guardian Ad Litem. — In actions or special proceedings when any of the defendants are infants or incompetent persons, whether residents or nonresidents of this State, they must defend by general or testamentary guardian, if they have any within this State or by guardian ad litem appointed as hereinafter provided; and if they have no known general or testamentary guardian in the State, and any of them have been summoned, the court in which said action or special proceeding is pending, upon motion of any of the parties, may appoint some discreet person to act as guardian ad litem, to defend in behalf of such infants, or incompetent persons, and fix and tax his fee as part of the costs. The guardian so appointed shall, if the cause is a civil action, file his answer to the complaint within the time required for other defendants, unless the time is extended by the court; and if the cause is a special proceeding, a copy of the complaint, with the summons, must be served on him. After 20 days' notice of the summons and complaint in the special proceeding, and after answer filed as above prescribed in the civil action, the court may proceed to final judgment as effectually and in the same manner as if there had been personal service upon the said infant or incompetent persons or defendants.

All orders or final judgments duly entered in any action or special proceeding prior to April 8, 1974, when any of the defendants were infants or incompetent persons, whether residents or nonresidents of this State, and were defended therein by a general or testamentary guardian or guardian ad litem, and summons and complaint or petition in said action or special proceeding were duly served upon the guardian or guardian ad litem and answer duly filed by said guardian or guardian ad litem, shall be good and valid notwithstanding that said order or final judgment was entered less than 20 days after notice of the summons and complaint served upon said guardian or guardian ad litem.

(3) Appointment of Guardian Ad Litem Notwithstanding the Existence of a General or Testamentary Guardian. — Notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (b)(1) and (b)(2), a guardian ad litem for an infant or incompetent person may be appointed in any case when it is deemed by the court in which the action is pending expedient to have the infant, or insane or incompetent person so represented, notwithstanding such person may have a general or testamentary guardian.

(4) Appointment of Guardian Ad Litem for Unborn Persons. — In all actions in rem and quasi in rem and in all actions and special proceedings which involve the construction of wills, trusts and contracts or any instrument in writing, or which involve the determination of the ownership of property or the distribution of property, if there is a possibility that some person may thereafter be born who, if then living, would be a necessary or proper party to such action or special proceeding, the court in which said action or special proceeding is pending, upon motion of any of the parties or upon its own motion, may appoint some discreet person guardian ad litem to defend on behalf of such unborn person. Service upon the guardian ad litem appointed for such unborn person shall have the same force and effect as service upon such unborn person would have had if such person had been living. All proceedings by and against the said guardian ad litem after appointment shall be governed by all provisions of the law applicable to guardians ad litem for living persons.

(5) Appointment of Guardian Ad Litem for Corporations, Trusts, or Other Entities Not in Existence. — In all actions which involve the construction of wills, trusts, contracts or written instruments, or the determination of the ownership of property or the disposition or distribution of property pursuant to the provisions of a will, trust, contract or written instrument, if such will, trust, contract or written instrument provides benefits for disposition or distribution of property to a corporation, a trust, or an entity thereafter to be formed for the purpose of carrying into effect some provision of the said will, trust, contract or written instrument, the court in which said action or special proceeding is pending, upon motion of any of the parties or upon its own motion, may appoint some discreet person guardian ad litem for such corporation, trust or other entity. Service upon the guardian ad litem appointed for such corporation, trust or other entity shall have the same force and effect as service upon such corporation, trust or entity would have had if such corporation, trust or other entity had been in existence. All proceedings by and against the said guardian ad litem after appointment shall be governed by all provisions of the law applicable to guardians ad litem for living persons.

(6) Repealed by Sessions Laws 1981, c. 599, s. 1.

(7) Miscellaneous Provisions. — The provisions of this rule are in addition to any other remedies or procedures authorized or permitted by law, and it shall not be construed to repeal or to limit the doctrine of virtual representation or any other law or rule of law by which unborn persons or nonexistent corporations, trusts or other entities may be represented in or bound by any judgment or order entered in any action or special proceeding. This rule shall apply to all pending actions and special proceedings to which it may be constitutionally applicable. All judgments and orders heretofore entered in any action in which a guardian or guardians ad litem have been appointed for any unborn person or persons or any nonexistent corporations, trusts or other entities, are hereby validated as of the several dates of entry thereof in the same manner and to the full extent that they would have been valid if this rule had been in effect at the time of the appointment of such guardians ad litem; provided, however, that the provisions of this sentence shall be applicable only in such cases and to the extent to which the application thereof shall not be prevented by any constitutional limitation.

(c) Guardian ad litem for infants, insane or incompetent persons; appointment procedure. — When a guardian ad litem is appointed to represent an infant or insane or incompetent person, he must be appointed as follows:

(1) When an infant or insane or incompetent person is plaintiff, the appointment shall be made at any time prior to or at the time of the commencement of the action, upon the written application of any relative or friend of said infant or insane or incompetent person or by the court on its own motion.

(2) When an infant is defendant and service under Rule 4(j)(1)a is made upon him the appointment may be made upon the written application of any relative or friend of said infant, or, if no such application is made within 10 days after service of summons, upon the written application of any other party to the action or, at any time by the court on its own motion.

(3) When an infant or insane or incompetent person is defendant and service can be made upon him only by publication, the appointment may be made upon the written application of any relative or friend of said infant, or upon the written application of any other party to the action, or by the court on its own motion, before completion of publication, whereupon service of the summons with copy of the complaint shall be made forthwith upon said guardian so appointed requiring him to make defense at the same time that the defendant is required to make defense in the notice of publication.

(4) When an insane or incompetent person is defendant and service by publication is not required, the appointment may be made upon the written application of any relative or friend of said defendant, or upon the written application of any other party to the action, or by the court on its own motion, prior to or at the time of the commencement of the action, and service upon the insane or incompetent defendant may thereupon be dispensed with by order of the court making such appointment.

(d) Guardian ad litem for persons not ascertained or for persons, trusts or corporations not in being. — When under the terms of a written instrument, or for any other reason, a person or persons who are not in being, or any corporation, trust, or other legal entity which is not in being, may be or may become legally or equitably interested in any property, real or personal, the court in which an action or proceeding of any kind relative to or affecting such property is pending, may, upon the written application of any party to such action or proceeding or of other person interested, appoint a guardian ad litem to represent such person or persons not ascertained or such persons, trusts or corporations not in being.

(e) Duty of guardian ad litem; effect of judgment or decree where party represented by guardian ad litem. — Any guardian ad litem appointed for any party pursuant to any of the provisions of this rule shall file and serve such pleadings as may be required within the times specified by these rules, unless extension of time is obtained. After the appointment of a guardian ad litem under any provision of this rule and after the service and filing of such pleadings as may be required by such guardian ad litem, the court may proceed to final judgment, order or decree against any party so represented as effectually and in the same manner as if said party had been under no legal disability, had been ascertained and in being, and had been present in court after legal notice in the action in which such final judgment, order or decree is entered. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1969, c. 895, ss. 5, 6; 1971, c. 1156, ss. 3, 4; 1973, c. 1199; 1981, c. 599, s. 1; 1987, c. 550, s. 13.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — For historical reasons, an apparently necessary component of any procedural code or bloc of rules is a statement of the real party in interest generality, i.e., that action must be prosecuted in the name of the "real party in interest," as opposed to the name of any other person who may have a technical or nominal interest in the claim. This was deemed necessary for the purpose of allowing assignees of choses in action to sue in their own names to recover on the chose, a thing forbidden at common law — and this was probably the only thing had in mind in the original code. But the basic statement in the code was not so limited; hence, it was necessary also to add some obvious qualifications to the basic directive that actions can only be brought in the name of the presently beneficially interested — the "real" — party. Thus, certain fiduciaries should be allowed to sue in their own names on claims in which only their beneficiaries have beneficial — "real" — interests. Furthermore, the third-party contract beneficiary has well established substantive rights which he should be allowed to sue for in his own name, notwithstanding the contract parties alone are "real" parties to the contract and hence, possibly, to the rights arising under it. Finally, some exception was needed to take into account the fact that specific statutes may sometimes give rights to sue in their own names to parties not technically real parties in interest. Through what appears to be sheer whimsy in codification the original code "real party in interest" draft section, which put both the generality and its exception into one section, was modified in the North Carolina code version to separate the two components. Thus § 1-57 states the generality, while the exceptions were stated in former § 1-63. The federal Rule 17(a) dealing with the same matters, returns to the original code pattern and states both the generality and its exception as a connected whole. The rule as presented here tracks the federal rule, and rejects the State code separation of the concepts. No change of central substance is made from the present directive. Consequently, there is no reason to anticipate any change in real party in interest case law arising from this form of statement.

Closely related to the real party in interest generality and its exceptions is the problem of formal representation of persons not sui generis for the purpose of prosecuting and defending actions as to which the parties formally represented have the true beneficial interest — the problem, in short, of the appointment of, the appearance by, and the prosecution and defense of actions through guardians for infants and incompetents. Here, the present State statutory law is substantially retained, with some attempt to clean up and make more comprehensive the whole pattern.

Comment to the 1969 Amendment. — (a) The 1969 amendment to Rule 17(a) eliminates another technical ground of possible dismissal. It provides that no action is to be dismissed on the ground that it is not prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest until a reasonable time has been allowed after objection for ratification of commencement of the section by, or joinder or substitution of, the real party in interest; and such ratification, joinder, or substitution shall have the same effect as if the action had been commenced in the name of the real party in interest.

Correction and substitution of parties was known both to the common law and the code practice. This amendment is merely another step in that direction and avoids needless delay and technical disposition of a meritorious action.

(b) (6) The amendment to Rule 17 designated as (6) [now repealed] merely acknowledges that an infant who is competent to marry, and who is 18 years of age or older, is also competent to prosecute or defend the listed domestic relations action without the appointment of a guardian ad litem.

The amendment also renumbered former subsection (6) of section (b) as subsection (7).

II. REAL PARTY IN INTEREST.

Section (a) of this rule is identical to federal Rule 17(a). Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971).

Section (a) of this rule deals not only with real party in interest questions, but also with questions relating to capacity to sue, which are not solely governed by § 1A-1, Rule 9. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

Necessary Joinder Rules Compared with Real Party in Interest Provisions. — While the real party in interest provisions of this rule are for the parties' benefit and may be waived if no objection is raised, the necessary joinder rules of § 1A-1, Rule 19 place a mandatory duty on the court to protect its own jurisdiction to enter valid and binding judgments. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

While a party may waive its right to be sued by a real party in interest, § 1A-1, Rule 19 requires the court to join as a necessary party any persons "united in interest" and/or any persons without whom a complete determination of the claim cannot be made. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Only Real Party in Interest May Prosecute Claim. — Under § 1-57 and section (a) of this rule, only the real party in interest may prosecute a claim. Crowell v. Chapman, 306 N.C. 540, 293 S.E.2d 767 (1982).

A real party in interest is a party who is benefited or injured by the judgment in the case. Reliance Ins. Co. v. Walker, 33 N.C. App. 15, 234 S.E.2d 206, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 159, 236 S.E.2d 704 (1977); Carolina First Nat'l Bank v. Douglas Gallery of Homes, Ltd., 68 N.C. App. 246, 314 S.E.2d 801 (1984).

And who by substantive law has the legal right to enforce the claim in question. Reliance Ins. Co. v. Walker, 33 N.C. App. 15, 234 S.E.2d 206, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 159, 236 S.E.2d 704 (1977); Carolina First Nat'l Bank v. Douglas Gallery of Homes, Ltd., 68 N.C. App. 246, 314 S.E.2d 801 (1984).

Party Must Be Interested in Subject Matter of Litigation. — An interest which warrants making a person a party is not merely an interest in the action involved, but some interest in the subject matter of the litigation. Reliance Ins. Co. v. Walker, 33 N.C. App. 15, 234 S.E.2d 206, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 159, 236 S.E.2d 704 (1977).

The real party in interest is the one who is entitled to receive the fruits of the litigation (i.e., the damages). Goodrich v. Rice, 75 N.C. App. 530, 331 S.E.2d 195 (1985).

Beneficiary as Real Party in Interest in Wrongful Death Action. — In an action to recover damages for wrongful death, the real party in interest is the beneficiary under the statute for whom recovery is sought, and not the administrator. King v. Grindstaff, 284 N.C. 348, 200 S.E.2d 799 (1973).

The mere appointment of an agent does not make him the real party in interest. Goodrich v. Rice, 75 N.C. App. 530, 331 S.E.2d 195 (1985).

In a breach of contract action, the evidence clearly established an agency relationship, as it disclosed that certain individuals, the original plaintiffs, negotiated the construction of a pond on behalf of a landowner. The real party in interest was the landowner. Goodrich v. Rice, 75 N.C. App. 530, 331 S.E.2d 195 (1985).

An assignee for purposes of collection is not a "real party in interest." Booker v. Everhart, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

Assignee of Franchisor. — In action for alleged breach of franchise agreement, plaintiff, as assignee of the franchisor, was a real party in interest, and had the right to enforce the contract against the defendant. Wiener King Sys. v. Brooks, 628 F. Supp. 843 (W.D.N.C. 1986).

Absence of the real party in interest did not constitute a "fatal defect" where the opposing party failed to show real prejudice in not having had the real party joined at the original trial. Carolina First Nat'l Bank v. Douglas Gallery of Homes, Ltd., 68 N.C. App.

246, 314 S.E.2d 801 (1984).

Absence of necessary parties does not merit a nonsuit. Instead, the court should order a continuance so as to provide a reasonable time for them to be brought in and plead. Booker v. Everhart, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

But Proceedings Should Cease Until Necessary Parties Are Brought In. — Where a fatal defect of the parties is disclosed, the court should refuse to deal with the merits of the case until the absent parties are brought into the action. Booker v. Everhart, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

Correction of Defect of Parties by Courts' Own Motion. — In the absence of a proper motion by a competent person, a defect of the parties should be corrected by ruling of the court ex mero motu. Booker v. Everhart, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

Right of Third-Party Beneficiary to Sue. — Whether a third-party beneficiary has a right of action depends upon the substantive law. If by substantive law the beneficiary has a right of action, the beneficiary may sue, and the party with whom or in whose name the contract was made may also sue and need not join the beneficiary. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971).

A third-party beneficiary to a contract is entitled to maintain an action for its breach, but this rule is not applicable where the contract is not made for the direct benefit of the third party and any benefit accruing to him is merely incidental. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971).

Substitution of Real Party in Interest After Running of Limitations. — Under this rule, the real party in interest in a case is not precluded from being made the plaintiff after the statute of limitations has run on a claim timely filed by one who lacked the capacity to sue because he was not the real party in interest. Rather, under this rule, a reasonable time must be allowed after objection for ratification of commencement of the action by, or joinder or substitution of, the real party in interest; and such ratification, joinder or substitution shall have the same effect as if the action had been commenced in the name of the real party in interest. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

Change in Capacity in Which Plaintiff Sues. — Section (a) of this rule expressly authorizes the substitution of one party for another, and § 1A-1, Rule 15, particularly section (c), when considered in light of section (a), just as clearly authorizes a change in capacity in which the same plaintiff brings his claim. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

Where defendants had full notice of the transactions and occurrences upon which a wrongful death claim was based, and the claim was originally filed within the period of limitations by plaintiff in the capacity of a foreign administrator, they could in no way be prejudiced by allowing plaintiff by supplemental pleading to show change in capacity to that of locally qualified ancillary administrator, even though this change occurred after the period of limitations had run. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

Standing of Association to Bring Suit. — An association may properly bring suit only if: (a) its members would otherwise have standing to sue in their own right; (b) the interests it seeks to protect are germane to the organization's purpose; and (c) neither the claim asserted nor the relief requested requires the participation of individual members in the lawsuit. Landfall Group Against Paid Transferability v. Landfall Club, Inc., 117 N.C. App. 270, 450 S.E.2d 513 (1994).

Dismissal of Former Owner Mandated. — Where plaintiff sued a class of defendants pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 23, but thereafter lost her status as a real party in interest by conveying the property that was the subject of the suit and filed a notice of voluntary dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 41(a), upon which the new owners were joined as plaintiffs, the trial judge should have dismissed the original plaintiff as no longer a real party in interest. Crowell v. Chapman, 306 N.C. 540, 293 S.E.2d 767 (1982).

Ratification of Commencement of Action. — Participation by counsel for employer and insurance carrier in action as counsel for plaintiff was a ratification of the commencement of the action within a reasonable time after the motion of dismissal was made. Long v. Coble, 11 N.C. App. 624, 182 S.E.2d 234, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 246 (1971).

In a bank merger, the surviving bank or its transferee has the legal right to enforce a claim because the surviving bank succeeds to the merged bank's holder status by operation of law. Carolina First Nat'l Bank v. Douglas Gallery of Homes, Ltd., 68 N.C. App. 246, 314 S.E.2d 801 (1984).

Insurer as Necessary Party. — Where whether or not insurer's legal title to plaintiff's claims was partial or complete, insurer clearly acquired some enforceable legal interest in the subject matter of the action by virtue of the assignment provided by subrogation receipt, given insurer's interest in all of plaintiff's claims, a determination of such claims would necessarily prejudice insurer's interests in them, and insurer was therefore a necessary party under § 1A-1, Rule 19. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Status of Insured Assignor — Where Insurer's Payments Exceed Loss. — Where there is no genuine dispute that insurer's payments exceeded the insured's full loss, the trial court may summarily determine an objection to the insured's real party in interest status. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Same — Where Extent of Insured's Loss Not Yet Determined. — Trial court could not enter summary judgment against plaintiff based on section (a) of this rule where plaintiff's status as a partial assignor and real party in interest could not be determined until the factual issue of the extent of plaintiff's entire loss was determined. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Same — Where Insured Retains Separable Interest. — If plaintiff assignor retained any separable legal interest in the subject matter of its claims, then both plaintiff and insurer assignee would be real parties in interest under section (a) of this rule in the subject matter of the litigation. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

III. INFANTS AND INCOMPETENTS.

Editor's Note. — The case of Rutledge v. Rutledge, 10 N.C. App. 427, 179 S.E.2d 163 (1971), and similar cases which had heretofore expanded a trial court's authority under this rule, giving it the ability to determine competency in certain circumstances, have been preempted by the enactment of § 35A-1101 et seq. See Culton v. Culton, 96 N.C. App. 620, 386 S.E.2d 592 (1989).

Chapter 35A Sets Forth Sole Procedure for Determining Incompetency. — Although this rule may have once allowed the trial court to conduct a competency hearing, that procedure was preempted on October 1, 1987, by the enactment of § 35A-1101 et seq., which sets forth the sole procedure for determining incompetency of infants and adults. Culton v. Culton, 96 N.C. App. 620, 386 S.E.2d 592 (1989), reversed on other grounds, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990).

And Adjudication of Incompetency Must Take Place Within Perimeters of Chapter 35A. — The language of § 35A-1102 requires any adjudication of incompetency to take place within the perimeters of Chapter 35A, even if the person sought to be declared incompetent does not challenge the action. However, this rule still exists as a means of appointment of a guardian ad litem where incompetency has already been determined. Culton v. Culton, 96 N.C. App. 620, 386 S.E.2d 592 (1989), reversed on other grounds, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990).

Infants and persons non compos mentis are peculiarly entitled to the protection of the court, and a principal means for extending this protection is by appointment of a guardian or, where appropriate, a guardian ad litem. Rutledge v. Rutledge, 10 N.C. App. 427, 179 S.E.2d 163 (1971). But see Culton v. Culton, 96 N.C. App. 620, 386 S.E.2d 592 (1989), reversed on other grounds, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990), and § 35A-1101 et seq.

Former Practice Changed. — The practice which formerly prevailed in this State, that an infant plaintiff appeared by his next friend, has been changed. Sadler v. Purser, 12 N.C. App. 206, 182 S.E.2d 850 (1971).

The change effected is more than a mere change in nomenclature, since substantial differences have been recognized between the powers and duties of a next friend and those of a duly appointed guardian ad litem. Sadler v. Purser, 12 N.C. App. 206, 182 S.E.2d 850 (1971).

Now Infant or Incompetent Plaintiff Must Appear by Guardian or Guardian ad Litem. — Now in actions or special proceedings when any of the parties plaintiff are infants or incompetent persons, they must appear by general or testamentary guardian, if they have any within the State, or by duly appointed guardian ad litem. Sadler v. Purser, 12 N.C. App. 206, 182 S.E.2d 850 (1971). But see Culton v. Culton, 96 N.C. App. 620, 386 S.E.2d 592 (1989), reversed on other grounds, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990), and § 35A-1101 et seq.

And Not by Next Friend. — This rule makes no reference to a "next friend," but provides for the appointment of a guardian or guardian ad litem for infants and incompetents who are parties, whether plaintiff or defendant, in any civil action. Rutledge v. Rutledge, 10 N.C. App. 427, 179 S.E.2d 163 (1971). But see Culton v. Culton, 96 N.C. App. 620, 386 S.E.2d 592 (1989), reversed on other grounds, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990), and § 35A-1101 et seq.

Whether appointment of a guardian ad litem for a minor is necessary is controlled by section (b) of this rule. In re Scearce, 81 N.C. App. 531, 345 S.E.2d 404, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 415, 349 S.E.2d 589 (1986).

Substitution as Party Plaintiff. — Where the real party in interest was a minor, and the record did not show that a guardian had been appointed, the action should not have been dismissed, but the real party must be given a reasonable opportunity to be substituted as a party plaintiff. Freeman v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield, 123 N.C. App. 260, 472 S.E.2d 595 (1996).

It is ordinarily desirable that an incompetent's litigation be conducted by a general guardian, who, being in control of his ward's affairs, can relate the effect of the litigation to the incompetent's entire estate. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969). See now § 35A-1101 et seq.

Jurisdiction of Court to Appoint Guardian ad Litem for Adult Plaintiff. — An adult plaintiff who is not an idiot or lunatic must be non compos mentis before the court has jurisdiction to appoint a guardian ad litem for him. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969). See now § 35A-1101 et seq.

Either party, or the court upon its own motion, may initiate proceedings for appointment of a guardian ad litem before any hearing on the merits. Rutledge v. Rutledge, 10 N.C. App. 427, 179 S.E.2d 163 (1971). But see Culton v. Culton, 96 N.C. App. 620, 386 S.E.2d 592 (1989), reversed on other grounds, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990), and § 35A-1101 et seq.

The statute does not require, nor does it imply that it is the respondent's responsibility to ask for appointment of the guardian ad litem. Richard v. Michna, 110 N.C. App. 810, 431 S.E.2d 485 (1993).

Appeal from Order Appointing Guardian Ad Litem. — Plaintiff gave notice of appeal from an interlocutory order, namely, one granting defendant's motions for the appointment of a guardian ad litem. As this order was not a final judgment, for plaintiff to have been entitled to appeal of right from the order, plaintiff was required to establish that the order either: (1) affected a substantial right, or (2) in effect determined the action and prevented a judgment from which appeal might be taken, or (3) discontinued the action, or (4) granted or refused a new trial. Culton v. Culton, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990).

Standing to Challenge Appointment on Appeal. — Because he was not an aggrieved party, plaintiff had no standing to challenge on appeal trial court's order appointing a guardian ad litem for defendant. Culton v. Culton, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990).

Party Asserting Competency Is Entitled to Notice and Opportunity to Be Heard. — When a party's lack of mental capacity is asserted and denied, and he has not previously been adjudicated incompetent to manage his affairs, he is entitled to notice and an opportunity to be heard before the judge can appoint a guardian ad litem for him. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969). But see Culton v. Culton, 96 N.C. App. 620, 386 S.E.2d 592 (1989), reversed on other grounds, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990), and § 35A-1101 et seq.

Normally, a litigant has a fundamental right to select the attorney who will represent him in his lawsuit, to conduct his litigation according to his own judgment and inclination, and, if the case is to be compromised, to have it settled upon terms which are satisfactory to him. If this right is taken from him upon a factual finding which he disputes, fundamental fairness and the constitutional requirements of due process require that he be given an opportunity to defend and be heard. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969). See now § 35A-1101 et seq.

If the trial judge determines after voir dire examination that a substantial question as to a party's competency is raised, notice and opportunity to be heard must then be given the party for whom appointment of a guardian is proposed, as a person for whom a guardian ad litem is proposed is entitled to notice as in case of an inquisition of lunacy under § 35-2 (now repealed). Rutledge v. Rutledge, 10 N.C. App. 427, 179 S.E.2d 163 (1971). But see Culton v. Culton, 96 N.C. App. 620, 386 S.E.2d 592 (1989), reversed on other grounds, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990), and § 35A-1101 et seq.

Appointment Made Without Notice and Opportunity to Be Heard Is Void. — Where the plaintiff had no notice that her competency to manage her affairs was challenged nor an opportunity to be heard on the issue, the order appointing a guardian ad litem for her was void, and his settlements of her actions, notwithstanding the fact that they were approved by the court, were not binding upon her. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969). See now § 35A-1101 et seq.

An inquisition is not always a condition precedent for appointment of a guardian ad litem. In an emergency, when it is necessary, pendente lite, to safeguard the property of a person non compos mentis whose incompetency has not been adjudicated, the protection of the court may be invoked in his behalf by one acting as guardian ad litem. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969). See now § 35A-1101 et seq.

A guardian ad litem must always be appointed for a minor child in a termination proceeding, regardless of whether respondent filed an answer denying material allegations of the petition. In re Barnes, 97 N.C. App. 325, 388 S.E.2d 237 (1990); In re Finnican, 104 N.C. App. 157, 408 S.E.2d 742 (1991), cert. denied, 330 N.C. 612, 413 S.E.2d 800 (1992).

Guardian ad Litem's Powers Limited. — A guardian ad litem has no authority to receive money or administer the litigant's property. His powers are coterminous with the beginning and end of the litigation in which he is appointed. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

Substitution of General Guardian for Guardian ad Litem. — Since the trial court clearly had authority under this rule to determine whether it was expedient for a guardian ad litem to bring and maintain an action for an incompetent when the incompetent had a general guardian or trustee in the State, the trial court manifestly had authority to substitute the general guardian or trustee as party plaintiff for the guardian ad litem in an action brought on behalf of the incompetent. Gaskins v. McCotter, 52 N.C. App. 322, 278 S.E.2d 302 (1981). But see Culton v. Culton, 96 N.C. App. 620, 386 S.E.2d 592 (1989), reversed on other grounds, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990), and § 35A-1101 et seq.

Defendant could not collaterally attack a competency hearing and appointment of a general guardian for plaintiff where defendant's intention obviously was to avoid substitution of the real party in interest, the general guardian, by attacking the validity of the proceeding in which the general guardian was appointed. Hearon v. Hearon, 44 N.C. App. 361, 261 S.E.2d 9 (1979).

Where an incompetent plaintiff died after institution of action by her next friend, and the court authorized and directed substitution of her administrator as the new plaintiff, failure to make such substitution required dismissal of appeal by the court against appellant's next friend. Ginn v. Smith, 20 N.C. App. 526, 201 S.E.2d 739 (1974).

Minors Who Had Vested Interest in Who Administered Estate Were under Purview of Rule. — Minor heirs had a vested interest in who administered the estate of their deceased father and were entitled under § 28A-9-1 to appeal the decision of the Clerk on the revocation issue. This was sufficient to bring the matter within the purview of § 1A-1, Rule 17 providing it was an "action or special proceeding." In re Estate of Sturman, 93 N.C. App. 473, 378 S.E.2d 204 (1989).

Fees of Guardian ad Litem Properly Taxed as Costs. — Having properly appointed guardian ad litem, the trial court was within its discretion to assess as an item of costs the fees of the guardian ad litem and to tax those fees to either party or apportion them between the parties. Van Every v. McGuire, 125 N.C. App. 578, 481 S.E.2d 377 (1997), modified, 348 N.C. 58, 497 S.E.2d 689 (1998).

IV. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-63 through 1-65.

Fiduciaries are not made real parties in interest, but are empowered to bring an action for the real beneficiaries. Lawson v. Langley, 211 N.C. 526, 191 S.E. 229 (1937).

The trustee of an express trust may sue without joining the cestui que trust. Richardson v. Richardson, 261 N.C. 521, 135 S.E.2d 532 (1964).

Or May Join the Cestui Que Trust. — A trustee may sue in his own name or may join his cestui que trust. Ingram v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 258 N.C. 632, 129 S.E.2d 222 (1963).

Beneficiary of Express Trust Not a Necessary Party. — Under former § 1-63, an executor or trustee of an express trust could sue without joining with him the party equitably interested. Biggs v. Williams, 66 N.C. 427 (1872); Davidson v. Elms, 67 N.C. 228 (1872). See Jones v. McKinnon, 87 N.C. 294 (1882).

Beneficiary Not Excluded from Suit Involving Abuse of Trustee's Authority. — Former § 1-63 did not apply so as to exclude the beneficiary as a necessary party in a suit involving the question of whether the trustee had exceeded his authority under the terms of the instrument creating the trust, where the interests of the beneficiary might be seriously affected. Barbee v. Penny, 172 N.C. 653, 90 S.E. 805 (1916).

The "trustee of an express trust" does not include the personal representative of such trustee. Alexander v. Wriston, 81 N.C. 191 (1879).

Plaintiff Assignee as Trustee of Express Trust. — An answer setting forth that another person was the real owner of a note sued upon, but that it was assigned to the plaintiff, was to be taken as meaning that the plaintiff was trustee of an express trust, and so was properly plaintiff. Rankin v. Allison, 64 N.C. 673 (1870).

When a person contracts in his own name for the benefit of another, he is to be regarded as the trustee of an express trust, whether the name of the beneficiary is disclosed or not. Winders v. Hill, 141 N.C. 694, 54 S.E. 440 (1906).

Attorney Transferee as Trustee of Express Trust. — Where a plaintiff transferred a claim, upon which an action was subsequently brought, to an attorney at law for collection, with directions to him to apply the proceeds to demands which he held for collection against the plaintiff due other parties, the effect of the transfer was to vest ownership of the claim in the attorney as a "trustee of an express trust," and the action should have been brought in his name alone, or in conjunction with the names of the cestuis que trustent. Wynne v. Heck, 92 N.C. 414 (1885).

As to suits by agents, see Martin v. Mask, 158 N.C. 436, 74 S.E. 343 (1912).

Suit upon Administration Bond. — In a suit upon an administration bond, the next of kin of the intestate are not necessary parties, and in such a suit the administrator of the principal in the bond need not be joined. Flack v. Dawson, 69 N.C. 42 (1873).

Where a judgment creditor has assigned the judgment as security, an action may be brought by him without joining the assignee. Chatham v. Mecklenburg Realty Co., 180 N.C. 500, 105 S.E. 329 (1920).

Where a judgment is assigned to a trustee for the benefit of a judgment debtor entitled to indemnity, trustee may maintain action for indemnity without joining the cestui que trust. Ingram v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 258 N.C. 632, 129 S.E.2d 222 (1963).

Where a note was made payable to "J, cashier," and collateral security was delivered to him, he being a member and cashier of the firm of "C & J," the owners of the debt, an action for the foreclosure of the mortgage security was properly brought in his name, as he was the holder of the collateral as trustee for the firm. Jenkins v. Wilkinson, 113 N.C. 532, 18 S.E. 696 (1893).

Where a consent judgment directed named persons to sell and convey land, to collect the proceeds, to pay the taxes lawfully due, and to distribute the balance as directed, the persons named were trustees of an express trust, notwithstanding the fact that the judgment denominated them as commissioners, and therefore such persons were authorized to maintain an action for recovery of taxes unlawfully paid, without joinder of the beneficial owners of the property. Rand v. Wilson County, 243 N.C. 43, 89 S.E.2d 779 (1955).

Where a widow as executrix distributed in settlement the remaining personalty to herself as life tenant in accordance with the will, and the property then inured to the benefit of the remaindermen, she became functus officio as to such property. An administrator c.t.a., appointed after her death, was likewise functus officio and was not empowered to maintain an action to recover such property from her administrators, since it was no longer part of his testator's estate and was not subject to further administration. Darden v. Boyette, 247 N.C. 26, 100 S.E.2d 359 (1957).

Rights and Interests of Infants to Be Protected by Courts. — Infants are favorites of the courts, and the courts are duty-bound to protect their rights and interests in all actions and proceedings whether they are represented by guardians or not; and the Supreme Court will scan with extra care all records affecting the interest of minors. Tart v. Register, 257 N.C. 161, 125 S.E.2d 754 (1962).

The object of the appointment of a guardian ad litem is to protect the interest of the infant defendant, to which protection he is entitled at every stage of the proceeding. Graham v. Floyd, 214 N.C. 77, 197 S.E. 873 (1938).

Power to Appoint and Remove Guardian ad Litem. — The superior court has, independently of statute, the power to appoint a guardian ad litem for an infant defendant. It may, at any time during the progress of the cause, for sufficient reason looking to the proper protection of the infant's interests, remove a guardian theretofore appointed and name some other person. Moreover, there is no good reason why the clerk who acts as and for the court may not do the same in special proceedings pending before him. Carraway v. Lassiter, 139 N.C. 145, 51 S.E. 968 (1905).

Duty of Court in Appointing Guardian ad Litem. — It is the duty of courts to have special regard for infants and their rights and interests when they come within their cognizance, since they cannot adequately take care of themselves. Hence, it is a serious mistake to suppose that a next friend or a guardian ad litem should be appointed upon simple suggestion; this should be done upon proper application in writing and due consideration by the court. The court should know who is appointed, and that such person is capable and trustworthy. Morris v. Gentry, 89 N.C. 248 (1883).

Mandatory Nature of Appointment Provisions. — Infants are, in many cases, the wards of the courts, and these forms, enacted as safeguards thrown around the helpless, who are often the victims of the crafty, are enforced as being mandatory, and not directory only. Those who venture to act in defiance of them must take the risk of their action being declared void or set aside. Moore v. Gidney, 75 N.C. 34 (1876).

Judgments Not Vitiated by Mere Irregularities in Appointing Guardians ad Litem. — The provisions in regard to the appointment of guardians ad litem should be strictly observed, but mere irregularities in observing them, not affecting a substantial right, will not vitiate judgments and decrees obtained in the action or proceeding in which such irregularities exist. Ward v. Lowndes, 96 N.C. 367, 2 S.E. 591 (1887); White v. Morris, 107 N.C. 92, 12 S.E. 80 (1890); Cox v. Cox, 221 N.C. 19, 18 S.E.2d 713 (1942).

Failure to Serve Minor Personally as Mere Irregularity. — Where the interests of the minor have been presented and an answer has been filed by his general guardian or guardian ad litem, the failure to serve on the minor personally is only an irregularity, to be corrected, if at all, by motion in the cause. Matthews v. Joyce, 85 N.C. 258 (1881); Carraway v. Lassiter, 139 N.C. 145, 51 S.E. 968 (1905); Rackley v. Roberts, 147 N.C. 201, 60 S.E. 975 (1908); Glisson v. Glisson, 153 N.C. 185, 69 S.E. 55 (1910); Harris v. Bennett, 160 N.C. 339, 76 S.E. 217 (1912); Groves v. Ware, 182 N.C. 553, 109 S.E. 568 (1921).

Presumption of Proper Appointment. — Where the lands of infants are sold under an order of the superior court upon an ex parte petition in which the infants are represented by next friends, it is presumed that the court protected their interests and was careful to see that they suffered no prejudice. Tyson v. Belcher, 102 N.C. 112, 9 S.E. 634 (1889).

Appointment Valid When Infant Accepted Service. — The appointment of a guardian ad litem was valid although the infant was not regularly served with process, but had only accepted service thereof. Cates v. Pickett, 97 N.C. 21, 1 S.E. 763 (1887).

Plaintiff is not bound to move for appointment of a guardian ad litem for an infant defendant, and his failure to do so is not such laches as will work a discontinuance of the action. Turner v. Douglass, 72 N.C. 127 (1875).

A mere colorable interest, if at all adverse, is sufficient to disqualify either a guardian ad litem or his attorney from appearing for an infant defendant. Molyneux v. Huey, 81 N.C. 106 (1879); Ellis v. Massenburg, 126 N.C. 129, 35 S.E. 240 (1900).

Person with Interest Hostile to Infants. — Any person who has an interest in an action hostile to that of the infants involved will not be allowed to conduct the action on their behalf, whether he be guardian or next friend. George v. High, 85 N.C. 113 (1881).

Nominal Plaintiff Disqualified to Represent Infant Defendants. — A plaintiff of record, though nominal and made so without his consent, was utterly disqualified to appear for any infant defendants. His most faithful performance of duty and energetic and persistent defense, in every way commendable and approved by the court, would not relieve the impropriety of his appointment as guardian ad litem, so long as his name appeared on the plaintiff side of the docket. Ellis v. Massenburg, 126 N.C. 129, 35 S.E. 240 (1900).

Appointment Where General Guardian Is Plaintiff. — In a special proceeding by an executor to sell lands, the clerk had the power to appoint a guardian ad litem for an infant defendant, where the executor was the general guardian of such infant. Carraway v. Lassiter, 139 N.C. 145, 51 S.E. 968 (1905).
